Pine Woods Bible Class in Book Form.

I have several times been solicited to have the past lessons of the Class put in Book form.

I have decided to do this, if I can secure enough subscribers to the book to warrant the expense of publishing it.

The book if printed will contain over four hundred pages. How many copies will you take at $1.25 each?

Send your pledges but no money until I can see if sufficient is subscribed for to warrant the expense.

Send your pledges right away, so that the book can be put to press as soon as possible. Address W. H. Wilson, 420 N. Willow Ave., Austin Station Chicago, Ill.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or express order. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pavlon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Work Now.

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Eccl. ix. 10.

If you've any work in view,
This is God's message, friend to you:
With all your soul now do it.

If for God you've aught to say,
Let there now be no delay,
With all your soul now say it.

If to service for the Lord
You stand pledged by your own word,
With all your soul now serve him.

Heb. iii. 12.

Take heed, brethren, lest there be any of you an evil heart of unbelief departing from the living God. If there be any such amongst us, who are doubting in their hearts and [illegible] in departing from the living God, to wander out into the world and the pleasure of sin in this life, which is but for a season, and to have their names blotted out of the book of life, and its eternal glory in the kingdom of God, I don't understand how they could do that. I doubt whether they ever believed or understood the gospel promises. I don't think they have been rooted and grounded in love of the gospel promises. They must have only had hold of a branch, thinking that would save them. We must remember Satan is always around us, trying to pull us away, for the flesh is weak. But if we would let the love of God dwell in our hearts richly and set our affections on things above and not on things on the earth we would overcome all these temptations which are coming to pass. These may be our trials that we should overcome, for we know we are tempted in all points same as our forefathers and all the holy men of God were, and yet we are not persecuted as they were. The times we are in now are peculiar times, but the people now don't think of reading anything in the Bible concerning God's kingdom which is to come. There is so much of the so-called sport at this present age having their good times now. We know we talk once or twice to any of the [illegible] about what we believe and the coming kingdom which is [illegible], they will turn away and say, [illegible] to much, it is too strong for [illegible] would have no more of [illegible] we are having now, [illegible]ment. But the believers of God's people, what [illegible] joy? They don't only enjoy themselves, but they rejoice in their joy to know that they will enjoy all things now and forever if they are faithful unto the end. O what joy there is to know that we can enjoy all things now which are given to us through the Spirit. May we take these lessons to heart and study the Scriptures which are being made known to us by the revelation of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Brethren and sisters, let us pray more to our heavenly Father for strength to keep us near to him, that we can walk with him to inherit life everlasting, knowing that that life is hid with Christ in God. May we be steadfast, immoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, that no evil will enter our heart of unbelief in departing from the living God. For we are made partakers with Christ, if we hold fast the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end. I know we want to see our Master when he comes, for that is the hope we have within us, and that is why we come here in his name to learn more about him. O let us exhort one another more and more that the way will be opened more clearly to us to see the beauty in his only begotten Son. May we say with David, "Preserve me O God, for in thee do I put my trust. Therefore my heart rejoiceth, my flesh shall also rest in hope, for thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine holy one to see corruption." Can we ask any more than what is promised to us if we only believe and hope unto the end? How can we neglect such great salvation, life eternal, without money and without price. Only to believe, to be baptized for remission of our sins and to live a godly life, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ, and while we are looking for him to come, let us occupy the time till he does come in studying the Word of God, being made wise in his work left for us to do. What work was there left for us to do? To be an example of Jesus, to follow him right on the same as he did when he was here. Trying to save sinners to repentance, teaching them how to obtain everlasting life in his kingdom on this earth, when he shall come again the second time, having power to rule and govern the world in righteousness, with all his people who have been with him since they believed, where he will be King over all the earth for ever, and unto his kingdom there shall be no end. There is where I want to be and I know we all want to be there when he comes to make up his jewels, to live with him forever. Just think of it, for ever with the Lord, the one who died for us that through him, we can also reign with him in glory.

Brethren and sisters, do we realize that great re-union that will take place when Jesus comes for those that are ready? Are we ready, or are we making ourselves ready? Remember Jesus says, Be ye ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh. O how can we neglect such great salvation? If we are aiming for that one place, let us work together in love, exhorting one another in these grand truths, and blessings and privileges we have, while it is called today. For he is our God and we are his people of his pasture and the sheep of his hand. Today, if ye will hear his voice. Psa. xc. 7. Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith and let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering for he is faithful that promised. Heb. x. 23. O how can we drift away from such promises which stand for ever? If we abide in him and he in us we can never be removed. Thank God for that. If we would be stronger in the faith of God's love, to what he has done for us and what he has promised to do, if we are faithful, and to have some of these grand truths always in our memory that would keep us from evil, O let the Word of God dwell in your hearts richly that we might not sin against him and put our trust in him, and always fear God. Continue in love which is pleasing to him. That is one way to keep in his remembrance. David says in Psa. xxiii. 1, The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want. Brethren and sisters, that whole chapter tells us of many good things why David does not want. If any evil comes in our way always remember the Lord the first thing you do, and Satan will get behind thee. Why? For thine Word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against thee. Jesus says, If a man love me he will keep my words. John xiv. 23.

Again David says, Lead me in thy truth and teach me, for thou art the God of my salvation. On thee, do I wait all the day. And Paul says, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Phil. iii. 14. O let us look on things above and not on things on the earth which fade away. Let us go to this grand storehouse and get more acquainted with it, search through it, get in it with your whole heart, rejoice in all the good things you get. There is life in it. Yes, life, everlasting life, eternal glory for those that are found seeking him when he comes to make up his jewels. Let us set an example to those around us, that they may see what a peculiar people we are and let our light shine, and distribute the good things we are getting out of this grand storehouse. For it was given to us, and it is for us to give to all them that will freely receive. Let us be strong in the work of the Lord and keep in remembrance him who died for us and prays to God daily, Thy kingdom come thy will be done, that we may be kept out of all evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God. Let us watch for the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and always keep in his remembrance and confess him, for it is with the heart man believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. For in the way of righteousness is life and in the pathway thereof there is no death. Psa. xii. 28. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need. Heb. iv. 16. Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. Rev. xxii. 14. Remember in Rev. xxi. 27 we read, and there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or maketh a lie. But they which are written in the book of life, he that overcometh the same shall be clothed in white raiment and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels. "What a blessing we have, to come in his name for help and strength to be overcomers to enter into his rest. Brethren and sisters, seeing ye know these things before, beware, lest ye also being led away with the error of the wicked fall from your own steadfastness. 2 Pet. iii. 17. But grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and forever. Watch therefore for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. May we all be ready to enter into his joy when he comes. Amen.

BRO. GRIEF, Sr.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 46.

1. And it came to pass in the ninth year of Sedekias, king of Jouda, that Nabouchodonosor, king of Babuloon, and all his host arrived against Hierousaleem, and laid siege to it;

2. And in the seventeenth year of Sedekias in the fourth month, ninth of the month the city was breached;

3. And all the leaders of Babuloon's king entered in and sat down in the middle-gateway; namely Marganasar and Samagooth and Nabousachar and Nabousareis Nagargas Nserrabamath and the rest of the leaders of Babuloon.

14. And they sent and took Hieremias out of the court-yard of the prison, and gave him unto Godolias, son of Acheikan, son of Saphan, and they led him out and he sat in the midst of the laity.

15. And there had occurred a word of the Lord unto Hieremias in the court-yard of the prison, saying,

16. Go thy way, and say unto Abdemelech the Aithioops, In this wise hath the Lord God of Israel said, Lo, I am bringing my words against this city for bad things and not for good,

17. And I shall save thee on that day and I shall not give thee into the hands of the men from before whose face thou art afraid.

18. Because I shall save thee and with sword thou shalt not fall, and thy soul will be for a thing found, because thou didst trust in me saith the Lord.

COMMENT.

The shake-up of this chapter in the versions seem to have been not so much to change the substance of the narrative as the order of it, and with the exception of the first 8 verses and the last 4 verses other matter has been interpreted out of its regular order.

Compare the names of the Babuloonian leaders which a side-note in the R. V. says were not names but "official titles." They are however given as names but not such jaw-breakers as they are in the versions. There are really but eight versions in this chapter but the numbering of the verses is given in the text as I have reproduced it for some reason that I do not understand.

CHAPTER 47TH.

1. The word that occurred from the Lord unto Hieremias after Nabouzardon the chief-magus the one from Hrama had sent and taken him bound hand and foot in the midst of the removal of the leaders of Jouda into Babuloon.

2. And the chief-magus (probably the head of the supply and transportation department) took him and said unto him; the Lord thy God talked these calamities in respect to this place;

3. And the Lord did them because ye were sinning against him and did not hearken to his voice.

4. Lo, I have loosed thee from the fetters on thy hands; if it be good in thy sight to go with me into Babuloon, I will also set mine eyes upon thee;

5. But if not, run away, return unto Godolias, son of Acheikam, son of Saphan, whom the king of Babuloon hath established in the land of Jouda, and dwell with him in the midst of the laity in the land of Jouda, in all the things that are good in thine eyes to go thy way in there and go thy way. And the chief of commasariat gave him votive-gifts and sent him away.

6. And he went unto Godolias into Masseephe, and took his seat in the midst of his laity that had been left in the land.

7. And all the leaders of the host that was in the rural district, they and their men of prominence heard that Babuloon's king had established Godolias in the land, and they committed in trust to him their men and women whom he had not taken down to dwell in Babuloon.

8. And there came unto Godolias in Masseepha Ismael, son of Nathanias and Jeonan, son of Karee and Sareias, son of Thanaemeth and sons of Joophe, the son of Netoophathi and Ezonias, son of Moochathi, they and their men of mark.

9. And Godolias administered an oath to them and to their men of mark, saying, Fear not the face of the Chaldian courtiers; take up your abode in the land and work for the king of Babuloon and it will be better for you.

10. And lo, I am seated before you in Masseepha to withstand the face of the Chaldaioi who may come against you; and do ye gather wine and autumn fruits and olive-oil, and put them in your earthen-vessels, and dwell in the cities which ye control.

11. And all the Joudaioi in Mooab and among the sons of Ammoon and those in Idoumaia, and those in all the land heard that all Babuloon's king had given a remnant to Jouda, and that he had established over them Godolias, son of Acheikam.

12. And they went unto Godolias into the land of Jouda into Masseepha, and gathered together wine and autumn fruits a very great quantity and olive-oil.

13. And Jooanan, son of Karsee and all the leaders of the host, those in the rural districts went unto Godolias into Masseepha;

14. And said unto him, Dost thou know that king Beleissa, son of Ammoon, sent unto thee Ismael to smite thy soul? And Godolias did not put faith in them.

15. And Jooanan said to Godolias privately in Masseepha, I will go my way forsooth and smite Israel, and let no one know lest he smite thy soul and all Jouda, those who have been led together unto thee be scattered and the rest of Jouda be lost.

16. And Godolias said unto Jooanan, Do not do that thing, because thou thyself art speaking lies about Ismael.

COMMENT.

The reader will find the substance of this 47th chapter given as the 40th chapter in C. V. and R. V. but very inaccurately, especially in the spelling of the proper names both of persons and places. Read and compare and notice especially "Mizpah" for "Masseepha." For "Mizpah" is a talismanic word in the ranks of the "Christian Endeavor" brethren. Masseepha as a word analized is made up of two roots Mass—root of verb Mass-oo which means to knead as one does dough and eepp—a which is derived from the root ap—of the verb aptoo and combined in one word the whole means "a kneading—handling," and the place was originally so called because of its prevailing industry of bread-making, and it had thus become an important centre and emporium of an agricultural district, and for this reason was probably chosen by Godolias and his advisers as the center of activities and rule.

This explanation ought to and I hope will puncture the famous "Mizpah" talismanic "mystery." In the 31st chapter of Genesis 48, 49 verses, the R. V. reads as follows, "And Laban said, This heap is witness between me and thee this day. Therefore was the name of it called Galeed and Mizpah. For he said, The Lord watch between me and thee when we are absent one from another. These verses should read as follows:

48 "And Laban said unto Jakoob, Lo, this hill and this votive-pillar which I have stood between me and thee; this hill and this votive-pillar witnesseth. Therefore the name was called Hill Witnesseth;

49 And the vision-way in which he said it was, May God have seen to it between me and thee that we stand away each from the other."

So instead of meaning and teaching "till we meet again" as in the talismanic Christian Endeavor "Mizpah" constitution, the emphatic teaching is "till we don't meet again" and in the providence of God the symbol seems of late to be working itself out in this way. In short the power and providence of God are invoked by this hill and this votive-pillar according to the covenant here recited to keep Jakoob and Laban apart so that they won't fight and this hill and votive-pillar marked the boundary line which neither was to cross, so that they would or could meet again.

Selections.

Friends and Foes.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy," is a maxim sanctioned by age but not by wisdom. Our hatred in a majority of instances causes more injury and more discomfort to ourselves than to any one else. Many a man has ground his teeth in envy and anger at some one, when the object of his rage and indignation was utterly unconscious of having merited or incurred his hatred and ill-will. If we would do ourselves no harm, we must not hate; for hatred is a viper that often stings itself to death.

The folly of seeking to injure others will be obvious, when we consider that all things earthly are transient, friendship and amities not excepted. The man whom we regard as our enemy to-day may prove himself to be our friend to-morrow, while he whom we trust most completely to-day as our friend, may to-morrow show himself our most treacherous and bitter foe. Hence we cannot even afford to hate our enemies, since we may soon have cause to regret it; and so, while it is wise for us to treat our friends with the caution and reserve which the uncertainty of earthly friendship might dictate, it is also in accordance with the simplest principles of self-interest to treat our enemies so as to disarm their hatred, and if possible convert them to friends; and by no means do anything which will give us sad recollections if in after times our personal relations with them should become more agreeable.

Whatever we may say or think concerning the peaceful principles of Christianity, if we disregard the precepts delivered by Christ, and choose what in our wisdom seems to be a better way we shall be most certain eventually to know and feel, that even in the affairs of this world the truest secular wisdom is found in the teachings of that unworldly and spotless One, who rebuked all anger, malice and revenge, who broke down the barriers of national indifference and national exclusiveness, and who said to those who listened for his words, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you: that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust." Matt. v. 43-45.

That which is best for one is best for all; and obedience to this simple principle would banish wars, and strifes, and bring peace and blessing and salvation to a world which is tossed and torn by contentions, storms and troubles, and which can never be healed but by the Great Physician who came to seek and to save the lost.—Safeguard.

Paul's Single Purpose.

In the first chapter of Romans Paul used the words, "as much as in me is." That was his way of pitching into any sort of work. He worked that way against Jesus, and then he was converted—that is, turned around—and worked just for him for all he was worth. His motto was, "This one thing I do." Dr. Cuyler comments on this helpfully:

There is prodigious power in his singleness of heart, this enthroning of one ruling affection in the regenerated soul. Even a man or woman of ordinary talents and endowments becomes a leading character when Jesus Christ owns and controls him. Here is the secret of the power of that heroic old missionary, John G. Paton. He is a man of one idea; but it is an idea large enough to make a king out of a poor Scotch peasant boy. We often see in our churches a plain man of moderate education and social rank who attains to a commanding influence. It is not brain-power; it is not purse-power; it is pure heart-power. The man follows Jesus Christ so thoroughly, so projectively, that he carries other people with him by the sheer momentum of his godliness. So it comes about that godliness often outstrips genius in the pulpit; and the minister whose sole purpose is to glorify his Master and to save souls, achieves a success that is denied to another man of higher culture and intellectual ability. Thoroughgoing, uncompromising, whole-souled piety is really the highest requisite in the pulpit, in the Sunday school, and in every official position of the church; having that "one thing needful," then every increment, money, culture, etc., is a positive addition to that person's usefulness.

But what was the "one thing" which Paul set before himself? He tells us that, "forgetting the things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before," he pressed on toward the shining goal. The things "behind," his past experience since the day of his conversion, did not satisfy him. He was not willing to sit down contented with his present attainments, as so many professed Christians do in our days. Upward and onward was his motto. Every achievement was only a stimulus to further progress. Paul was no "perfectionist;" that is very clear; but he had a holy ambition to reach the very highest mark possible.

Love Brings Confidence.

He who knows and loves God has confidence in God. He knows that the Father has blessings for the soul and will not withhold when they are sought in the right spirit. To love God is to know that "The Lord is rich unto all that call upon him." To love him is to be always able to say, even in face of the fact that one has sinned, "Why art thou cast down, O my soul? Hope thou in God!" It is to remember that God has said, 'Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow." God's love is the open door through which the soul may pass from sin to blessedness.

The world is so planned that a man can accomplish more in six days than in seven—if the seventh be devoted to rest and worship.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 22, 1906. NUMBER 32.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Plymouth, Indiana, Aug. 22, 1906.

As there are five Wednesdays in this month, this issue, and the one of Sept. 5, will be consecutive papers.

Word was received here last Saturday that Bro. Thomas Willey, a brother of Brother J. H. Willey of this city, had died at Mt. Ayr, Ind. He had been in poor health for some time, and has been a great sufferer. A notice more at length will be given later.

Another earthquake horror has startled the world. This time the city of Valparaiso, in Chili, South America, and several other places in the vicinity have been destroyed. The property loss counts into the millions, and some thousands of people were killed.

Russia is still having her regular daily assassinations, bomb throwing, and the like. The people seem determined to break the government, and the government is as determined that the people shall have no voice in its councils, but must submit. The contest is not decided yet.

The Little Horn. Dan. viii.

In The Restitution of June 18th there appears an article under the head of "Once More." The author, Bro. Francis, seems to be a little disheartened, saying, "It seems to me I have written enough about the Little Horn of Dan. viii." I should like to hear more, and have more written upon this most important subject, which is so little understood by many of the faith (or differently understood). We should be of "one mind"—speaking the same thing—and this question should be discussed until we find out who this Little Horn is—and the part this power is to perform in the last political Babylon. We have exhausted our energies and human wisdom to place this great Little Horn power in the past and our "traditions" have come to naught. Let us now return to the oracles of God and learn of him. Take him at his Word and all is clear!

I cannot recall to mind the article of which Bro. O. R. L. C. admonishes caution, but I gather from the article before me, that it was in regard to the 2300 days as given in the old version, which I am satisfied should read 2400 days, as Bro. Francis says, both renderings cannot be true. The reason that I hold to 2400 days is, that it better harmonizes with the rest of Daniel's and John's time table. I shall not have space in this to enter into detail. I will give only a few points, hoping thereby to more interest and searching the great truth significant in these events. To begin with the 2400 days are literal days (not years) and they begin in the middle of the last or 70th week determined on Daniel's people, and as God has not yet closed up the breach caused by the cutting off of the 70th week from the 69th week, leaving Jacob's house desolate during the gospel age.

The Little Horn will appear as the seventh head at the time the 70th week begins, this will close up the gap—Jewish time will continue, and all will be fulfilled in this generation, just as Christ says in Matt. xxiv. 34. When the Little Horn breaks the covenant in the middle of the week, then will commence the 2400 days, 6 years and 8 months to the cleansing of the sanctuary the 1290 days, Dan. xii., begin at the same time, and reach to the setting up of the Image of the Beast. The tribulation of Israel, 3 years and 2 months (shortening of of the time 4 months) ending with the fifth seal.

The 42 months allotted to the Beast or Little Horn, begins with the breaking of the sixth seal, and ends with the 2400 days. The 1260 days of the two witnesses begin also with the 2400 days and the sixth trumpet.

We now have 4 months to fill up the measure of the end, (2520 days) for the seventh trumpet, the resurrection of all the saints, caught away to stand on the sea of glass, hidden in their chamber till the indignation be accomplished in the forcing out of the 7 vials of wrath, cleansing the sanctuary by the destruction of Babylon.

We have given us 1335 days, these begin at the end of the 1290 days, and reach 2 months and 15 days beyond the full measure of time, or beyond the 7th trumpet, and mark the time of Daniel's reward, and without question the time of reward of all saints in the glorified kingdom of Christ.

I wish to notice one other important subject. Bro. O. R. L. Crozier has been asked to explain this through The Restitution. Mohammedanism is the power symbolized by the Little Horn, coming out of one of the four divisions of Alexander's empire. I can say amen to this suggestion. I should like to have this subject more fully discussed. I was not aware that Bro. Crozier or other of the age to come people held to this view, for which I have been contending a long time, being led to the truth by a careful study of Daniel and John. It is also in harmony with all the Prophets. The Book of Obediah is strong in proof of the statement I am about to make.

Please read Jer. xix. 7 to 21, note the 10th verse, "Behold he, Esau, etc. turn now to the 50th chapter, 43rd verse to the end of chapter. This seems conclusive that Esau is the king of Babylon, the earth is moved at the noise of their fall. Edom—Esau. Jer. l. 46. At the noise of the taking of Babylon the earth is moved. Note especially the 19th chapter 2nd verse, and compare with chapter 50 verse 45. This should be sufficient evidence that Edom—Esau is the king of Babylon, all that great empire of Solomon is this day in the hands of Mohammedans.

Again, two seeds, one loved, the other hated or loved less, marked the beginning of the family of Abraham, Jacob and Esau, good and evil, each was promised great dominions. Esau was to serve Jacob, and only for a short time did the yoke of Jacob gall the neck of Esau, when it was transferred to the neck of Jacob. Gen. xxxvii. 40. The time is nearly due when Jacob after wearing the yoke of bondage to all nations, will put on the yoke of iron from the hand of Esau, who is the last, and iron despot of Babylon, not Israel alone will put on this yoke but all apostate and the drunken Laodicean church, together Jacob and the worshipers of the mystery of iniquity will wear the yoke for 2400 days. "When ye, therefore, see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel, the prophet, stand in the holy place, whoso readeth, let him understand." Matt. xxiv. 15. Are we looking for this great event, which marks the beginning of the 2400 days? And is the sign to Israel at the coming of their Messiah and the end of the age? It is the sign to the waiting Bride. The signing of the covenant for one week, three and one-half years before this event—is the beginning of the time of the end.

Watchman, what of the night? Esau and Ishmael (one nation now) are whetting their swords—they are taking on that fierce countenance, they are the vilest of all nations, they are about to take the reins of the Turkish government, soon the war cry will break forth and the time of trouble such as the world has never seen, will be upon us. Brothers and sisters, watch, let us discern the signs of the times.

Submitted in love,
Laurence J. Kimball.

Obituary.

Jared Benjamin was born in Fayette Co., Ohio, Oct. 10th, 1820. Came to Jasper Co., Ind., in 1838. Residing in Newton township until 15 years ago, when he moved to Rensselaer, where he continued to reside until his death, Aug. 16th, 1906, at the age of 85 years, 10 months and 6 days. Of his brothers and sisters, only his sister Mrs. Phebe Nowels survives him.

He was married to Miss Letta Halstead in La Porte Co., Ind., Sept. 10th, 1848, who survives him. There were born to them four children, daughters two only—Mrs. Teresa Martindale and Miss Mattie Benjamin survive him. The latter remaining at home, tenderly caring for them during their feeble and declining years. He retained his mental faculties to a wonderful degree to the very last. He was of quite marked characteristics, noted for his active interest in the development and promotion of that which was for the general good.

He was an ardent worker in endeavoring to suppress the demon of traffic in the liquor business. He was not only a kind and affectionate husband and father, but noted for his hospitality and kindness toward all. He not only possessed high moral virtues, but greater still—strong devotion to the higher principles, manifested through Christ to fit men for the life eternal of promise only to the righteous. The hope of the resurrection from the dead through Christ to that life, was to him an anchor in very deed "both sure and steadfast." He was not only fully resigned and ready, but said he was anxious for that repose wherein he would be free from the pain and suffering of this mortal life. His death is not only greatly deplored by his immediate family and relatives, and by the Church of God of which he was an active member since 1880, but also by a host of friends in the community where he had so long resided.

Thomas Eldredge Willey was born in Porter County, Indiana, January 30th, 1819. He died at Mount Ayr, Newton County, Ind., August 13th, 1906, being at his death 87 years, 6 months and 19 days old. His father having died when he was a small boy, he lived during his youth and early manhood with his older brother Joseph H. Willey. October 29, 1871 he was united in marriage with Miss Martha J. Parkinson. This union was blessed by the birth of eight children: five of these children and the wife and mother preceded the husband and father to the silent tomb.

August 20th, 1902, he was united the second time in marriage with Miss Anna M. Botts, who with his three sons, Roy, Thomas and Oriel live to mourn the loss of a loving father and devoted husband.

He was converted by the preaching, and baptized into the all saving name of Jesus by Elder D. T. Halstead in about the year 1868, since which time he has been an exemplary member of the Church of God. His faith and hope of a future life, centered in the promises of a resurrection from the dead.

In his death, the Church has lost one of its faithful members, the community an honest, upright citizen, and the family a most devoted and loving father and husband.

Brother A. H. Zilmer preached at the funeral of Bro. Willey and Bro. Benjamin.

To the "Church of God:"

It becomes my duty to inform you that I am no longer in your fellowship, having recently identified myself with the Christadelphian body. I have been forced to take this step, owing to the following conditions in the "Church of God:"

1. A want of discipline, resulting in a state of things which is intolerable. Looseness in the reception of members, and admitting many who have not been legally baptized according to the standard of the "Church of God," and the Word of God as well.

2. The existance of a number of utterly un-Scriptural theories, such as universal salvation, fair chance, Jesus the Son of Joseph, yearly communion, feet washing, and Sabbath keeping—all of which is held by members of the "Church of God," and there is no way of bringing to account those who thus hold.

3. Identification with the present evil world (Gal. i. 4,) on the part of members in seeking and holding political offices, bearing or approving the bearing of arms, and membership in lodges and secret societies.

4. Un-Scriptural means employed by some of the congregations for raising church funds, such as suppers, socables, entertainments, &c., which are not in keeping with the apostolic "order" relating to the matter of church funds (1 Cor. xvi.)

5. A paid ministry which is un-Scriptural and subversive of the order apostolically established in the early church and the fraternal relations which should subsist in the household of faith.

6. I believe that all who will be brought forth at the coming of Christ will come forth mortal bodies, to appear at the judgment seat of Christ (2 Cor. v. 10,) and that the approved will obtain immortality, while the unworthy shall be consigned to the second death. This feature of Scripture teaching, although very plain and clear, not being accepted in the "Church of God," I do not wish by my continued presence as a member, to add another element of discord to the already confused state of things, and hence, for this and the preceding reasons have identified myself with the Christadelphians, who have convictions upon these questions similar to my own.

A. H. Zilmer.

Table Talk.

Proverbs xvi. 16.

How much better is it to get wisdom than gold and to get understanding rather to be chosen than silver.

Solomon loved the Lord and he asked for wisdom and understanding rather than riches and honor. His wisdom was from God. We should seek for that wisdom which is able to make us wise unto salvation. For the Lord giveth wisdom. Out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding. Happy is the man that findeth wisdom and the man that getteth understanding. Get wisdom, get understanding. Forget it not neither decline from the words of my mouth. Wisdom is the principle thing therefore get wisdom and with all thy getting get understanding. Wisdom resteth in the heart of him that hath understanding. Then said I, wisdom is better than strength nevertheless the poor man's wisdom is despised and his words are not heard. O the depth of the riches, both of wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are his judgments, and his way past finding out. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God; for it is written he taketh the wise in their own craftiness. If any man lack wisdom let him ask of God who giveth to all men liberally. For the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits.

Selections.

Badness and Beauty.

A vacant mind takes all the meaning out of the fairest face. A sensual disposition deforms the handsomest features. A cold, selfish heart shrivels and distorts the best looks. A mean grovelling spirit takes all the dignity out of the figure, and all the character out of the countenance. A cherished hatred transforms the most beautiful lineaments into an image of ugliness.

It is an impossible to preserve good looks, with a brood of bad passions feeding on the blood, a set of low loves trampling through the heart, and selfish, disdainful spirit enthroned in the will, as to preserve the beauty of an elegant mansion, with a litter of swine in the basement, a tribe of gipsies in the parlor, and owls and vultures in the upper part. Badness and beauty will no more keep company a great while, than poison will consort with health, or an elegant carving survive the furnace fire. The experiment of putting them together has been tried for thousands of years, but with unvarying result.

Stand on one of the crowded streets and note the the passer-by, and any one can see how a thoughtless, aimless mind has robbed the features of expression; how vanity has wade everything around its victim petty; how frivolity has faded the lustre of the countenance; how baby thoughts have made baby faces; how pride has cut disdain into the features, and made the face a chronic sneer; how selfishness has shrivelled and wrinkled, and withered up the personality; how hatred has deformed and demoralized those who yielded to its power; how every bad passion has turned telltale, and published its disgraceful story in the lines of the face and the look of the eye; how the old man who has given himself up to every kind of wickedness, is branded all over with deformity and repulsiveness, and he will get a new idea of what retribution is. This may not be all, but it is terrible—this transformation of a face once full of hope and loveliness into deformity and repulsiveness,—once the rose blushing on its stalk, now ashes and a brand.—Presbyterian.

The Calm Spirit.

Great indeed is the blessedness of a calm and quiet spirit; it is at once the key to unlock, and the crowning glory to adorn, all other virtues and graces of a Christian. For since God himself is ever wont to do work silently and mysteriously in the natural world, so in the spiritual world he gives his especial blessing to those souls which seek to serve him calmly and quietly. He leads them on in the way of holiness, and gives them peace now as an earnest and a pledge of more deep and perfect peace hereafter. For they who work quietly confess that they labor, not in their own strength, but as grace is given them from hour to hour; and that they toil not for themselves as though they were not their own masters and the fruits of their toil were to be their own, but they have a Master in heaven, who is both able and willing to prosper upon them their handiwork, because it is done in his name, and the honor and glory of their salvation will be his own. And thus (though outwardly they may pass through a vale of misery), those who have a calm and quiet soul go from strength to strength—from the first wet beginnings of faith and love (which are stronger than the might of the world) unto the "measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ," unto the strength of full grown men in the Lord; who not only do that which is right, but also do their right actions in the right way: men whose every thought and word and deed is one continual offering unto the Lord; who, whether they eat or drink, or speak or are silent, or awake or asleep, "do all to the glory of God the Father, through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Providence of God in Minute Events.

It is an erroneous view to think of God as governing the grand phenomena of nature, and leaving those which are minute to the operation of a set of laws which does not uphold at every moment in all the fulness of their application. "We cannot," says Chalmers, disjoin God from one particle of the universe of God." We may despise what is small as beneath the notice of our pride, but nothing is too microscopic for him who, while "he measures the waters in the hollow of his hand, and metes out heaven with a span, and comprehends the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighs the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance," yet numbers the very hairs of our head, and knows of every sparrow that falls to the ground. The minuteness with which God provides for all wants is well brought out in the sixty-fifth Psalm, where David speaks of him as attending to the very setting of the furrows of the field, and the watering of the ridges. "Thou makest the out-goings of the morning and evening to rejoice; thou visitest the earth and waterest it; thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water; thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided food; thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly; thou settest the furrows thereof; thou makest it soft with showers; thou blessest the springing thereof; thou crownest the year with thy goodness, and thy paths drop fatness."

Compelled Service.

Two ladies were talking together of a friend of whom one of them had lately been bereaved. "Well, you were with her the last day, and helped her in her work. That at least is a great comfort to you," said the first. "Well it isn't," replied the other. "Of course, I had no idea that the end was near, but the service I rendered her I did unwillingly, and she knew it." It was little wonder that there was bitter remorse in the heart of one who felt compelled to make this admission. One of the most cruel wounds which we can give to our friends is that of rendering to them manifestly unwilling service.

In the story of the tragedy of Calvary we are told that there was one who relieved the poor, fainting strength of the Christ by carrying his cross up the hill of Calvary. As we think of this we are inclined to say, "How glad he must have been in after years that he was allowed to do this service for the Savior of men." And yet as we read the story again, we must admit that it must have been forever a source of remorse to this one that it could be written of him, "Him they compelled to bear the cross."

Sometimes we take great pleasure in the fact that at some time or other we have borne the cross of service for our Lord. Perhaps for his sake we have borne reproach, or have given up worldly comforts. And yet how many times it might be said of us as of Simon, "Him they compelled to bear the cross."—Selected.

"Turn Ye."

Very few persons, even the most depraved, would be willing to admit if the question were put to them that they are permanent travelers on a road to ruin. They might acknowledge that their habits were bad and their moral purpose iniquitous; that they drank, or swore, or stole, or lied, or were ill-tempered, or idle, or impure, or even admit that they were growing worse all the time; but they would nevertheless, if really compelled to consider the question, believe or at any rate say that they believe, that, somehow or other, at some time or other, not far distant, things would take an upward turn. But just here lies one of the most fatal fallacies of sin. Things do not take a turn unless the individual makes them do so; and reform is sure to grow harder than easier as the hours and days and years hurry on. There is no slipping uphill again and no standing still when once you have begun to slip down, and yet the same hope which many a wretched woman has of escaping is the hope of slipping up hill on some lucky day which a more propitious future shall bring. The sinner one finds out deliberate sinning is not to be followed by accidental salvation the sooner will it be ready to respond to the call of the Holy Spirit.

Independence.

Independence is one thing, obstinacy is quite another thing. Independence is standing all by one's self, without being dependent on another. Obstinacy is standing out against others, resisting all attempts to be swayed or influenced by others. An independent man is ordinarily not an obstinate man. He hears readily both sides, and willingly considers them. He may even adopt the view of another, as different from his former inclinations, but he does so because he of his own mind accepts that view without being controlled by anybody else. An obstinate man is ordinarily not an independent man. He sticks to his own opinion so closely that he cannot fairly consider any other in order to see if it is better than his. An independent man is an open minded man. An obstinate man has not an open mind. Independence is consistent with positiveness of nature and manner in expressing present views, even though these views may be changed by the reasoning of the next hour. Stubborn, unreasoning, blind obstinacy is never independent, although the man who is bound by it often deludes himself by thinking that he has independence.—S. S. Times.

Is It Right?

It is a very peculiar fact that whenever there is a worldly amusement about which we are in doubt, we invariably ask the question, "Is it wrong to do that?" "Is it wrong for Christians to dance?" "Is it wrong to play cards?" "Is it wrong to go to theatre?" Always, Is it wrong?

It is very much the same in the matter of eating. When there is something that we desire, we always ask ourselves, "Will it hurt me?" If we can satisfy ourselves that it will not do any serious damage, that it will not bring on indigestion or dyspepsia, or sleeplessness, or cramps we eat it. We never ask, "Will it help me?" "Is it just what I need to build up body and brain, to make [illegible] and strengthen the tissues, increase my energy, and improve my general health?" Never. "Will it hurt me?"

Here and [illegible]

Much of a man's success [illegible] ness depends upon the de[illegible] which he studies the present moment, and so contrives that his power and and its power shall work together and in the same direction. Though the past demands our reverence, and the future our faith, we cannot live in either of them. It is here and now that we must act, if at all; therefore let us embrace the present moment, do the work that lies nearest to us, strive to understand our fellowmen, to discover their moral and intellectual atmosphere, and to supply, according to their deeds and our abilities, something which will promote their future welfare.—The Volunteer's Gazette.

Paul.

He is really a preacher who took Jewish monotheism, engrafted on it those limitless energies which he recognized in the mediation of Christ, and inculcated an intensely spiritual, as well as an exactly practical morality. He is occasionally spoken of as an egotist. But he was really a man of gentleness, of attractive manners, of immense activity,—one side of whose nature was occupied by an absorbing love of Christ; the other by a passionate longing to communicate the joys and hopes which he entertained as widely as possible throughout a suffering world.—Paul of Tarsus.

Let a sense of our mortality both mortify our pride and quicken us in our duty.

Poetry.

Jesus My King.

"Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Phil. ii 9-11.

My thoughts are winging their gladsome way
To thy presence, O Jesus my King!
Oh, fill them with purity, love, and sweet peace,
Bid holiness, judgment, and knowledge increase,
And faith with her heavenward vision ne'er cease,
That honor and glory to thee I may bring.

My heart runs over with loving speech,
In praise of thee, Jesus, my King!
O lay on my stammering lips a live coal,
That my words with a power beyond control,
May carry a message of life to each soul;
So honor and glory to thee I will bring.

My soul is filling with song; break thou
Its silence, O Jesus, my King!
Oh, give me a melody perfect and sweet,
With harmony ringing, and royally meet,
To bear up the ears of the saints to thy feet
All glory and honor to thee I would bring.

I'm rich when I'm poor, and happy in bonds,
In serving thee, Jesus, my King!
Go with me, I pray thee, wherever I go,
Dwell in me, that I, with thine image aglow,
Draw others unto thee, as quick waters flow;
Thus honor and glory to thee I can bring.

The lights of home grow nearer, more bright,
Art coming, O Jesus, my King?
O shining in strength! O Ancient of Days!
O blessed Redeemer! O Love's living rays!
Thy beautiful garments, salvation, and praise
Meet honor and glory to me thou dost bring.

Reasonable Service.

...er. That which is not reasonable, cannot command the respect and credence of thinking and intelligent people. If it can stand the test of reason, then we are not ashamed to make a presentation of it to reasonable people.

Now I wish to ask, did Bible writers claim that the hope presented in the sacred Scriptures was a reasonable proposition?

Ella. They certainly did so.

Q. To which portion would you call our attention to?

A. I would name 1 Pet. iii. 15.

Q. Please quote it?

A. I will, it reads as follows: "But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts; and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear."

Q. What are true Bible Christians required to do?

A. "Be ready," or in other words be prepared at all times, to make a reasonable presentation of your faith and hope to every honest enquirer.

Q. To give "a reason of the hope that is in you," suggests that the expectation we entertain with regard to ...gs to come, is within the ...reason, and that its rea... can be shown, or made ...hose who may ask you ...n of the hope that is in ...?

A. ...so.

Q. ...enquiry arises, is your hope ...sonable expectation? Will it stand the test of reason?

A. Yes, that is it. If a man tells me that his expectation is centered in a death that never dies, and that at death, his never-dying soul will wing his flight to a supposed spirit-land, it is my privilege to apply the test of reason and common sense, and if my informant cannot show its reasonableness, I know of a certainty that he entertains a false hope, because the one true hope will stand the severest test of reason.

Q. Dear class, are you all able to give a reason for your hope? If not, what is your duty?

A. If not, get ready. "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you," not in a boastful offensive way, but "with meekness and fear."

Q. Does not the world abound with professions of many conflicting hopes?

A. Yes, very many of them.

Q. What effect does this have upon the minds of many people who have not learned of the reasonableness of the Bible hope?

A. Confusion, uncertainty, scepticism.

Q. How many hopes does the Bible recognize?

A. The Bible recognizes but one hope. See Eph. iv. 4. "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling."

Q. This being the case, how are we to distinguish between the one Bible hope, and the many hopes entertained by many sects?

A. The one hope can be known by the enlightenment of the mind.

Q. How do you know it?

A. The Bible says so.

Q. Where?

A. See Eph. i. 18. "The eyes of your understanding being enlightened: that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory, of his inheritance in the saints." Back of all this is the "One Faith" strongly enforced by evidence. Well, an enlightened understanding, backed by evidence, ought to reveal a reason which will satisfy all reasonable people.

Q. Please show us evidence, and Scripture, that you consider sufficient, to enlighten our understanding?

A. This will gradually be shown by introducing a line of Scriptures which lead to that conclusion. First please note:

1. There is but one hope.
2. We are saved by this hope.
3. It is to be perceived by the enlightenment of the mind.
4. Be it we are brought into a condition of holiness and freedom from sin, we are saved.

Q. I would ask in what message is all this blessedness revealed?

A. "And you that were sometimes alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreprovable in his sight; if ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven; whereof I Paul am made a minister."

Q. How can we remain unreprovable and unblameable in the sight of God?

A. "Continue in the faith."

Q. What does the definite article "the" signify?

A. That there is only "one faith."

Q. In what manner are we to continue in "the faith?"

A. "Grounded and settled."

Q. Can any person be "grounded and settled," in any proposition if there is not reasonable evidence upon which it can be based?

A. They cannot.

Q. What is the next step towards approval?

A. "Be not moved away from the hope of the gospel."

Q. Here we have two definite articles, what do they signify."

A. It signifies there is but one hope, and one gospel.

Q. Why should we not be moved away from "the hope?"

A. Because we can give any one who asks us, a good, sensible reason for our hope. Therefore we can stay with it, and be not "moved away."

Q. In what message is the hope found?

A. "The hope of the gospel."

Q. Then the hope is found in the gospel message?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Does our salvation depend upon the one hope, found in the one gospel?

A. It most certainly does. The Scripture says: "We are saved by hope," hence comes the exhortation: "Be not moved away from the hope of the gospel."

Q. Are people moved away from the hope of the gospel, and to what extent?

A. Yes, the mass of the people are moved away from the hope of the gospel as presented in God's Word.

Q. In what sense does their hope differ from the Bible hope?

A. The hope of their gospel points them to a sky-kingdom for immortal souls to be entered upon at death.

Q. Does the Bible hope in any way sanction the above hope?

A. There is not the faintest allusion to such an expectation in "the hope of the gospel," as revealed in Scripture.

Q. When did the removal from the Bible hope commence?

A. They commenced very early to be "moved away from the hope of the gospel." Paul says in Gal. i. 6-9, "I marvel (wonder) that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel; which is not another; (there being but one gospel) but there be some that trouble you and would pervert the gospel of Christ." And from this early perversion has arisen a massive apostasy.

Q. Is the hope of the gospel a place of security from impending danger?

A. It is. "The hope of the gospel" is a place of refuge.

Q. What Scripture evidence have you?

A. See Heb. vi. 18, "We might have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us, which hope we have as an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast."

Q. What is this "sure and steadfast hope?

A. Read the context to this passage, and you will see it refers to the promises made unto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, sealed by God's unpregnable oath. The message then comes to us, (ver. 11-13) "We desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end; that ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises." There being but "one hope" which hope is "the hope of the gospel," and in these "promises," we have the "full assurance of hope." These promises are "the hope," and "the gospel," taught in the Scriptures.

Q. Do other portions of God's Word harmonize with the above?

A. Yes, they do.

Q. Please quote one.

A. Peter confirms this, when he says (2 Pet. i. 4) "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature."

Q. The Bible speaks of some one getting arrested for preaching the one reasonable hope of the gospel. Who was it?

A. Why Paul, who was divinely commissioned by Jesus, to preach the hope of the promises, got into trouble for doing so. They arrested him, and took him before King Aggrippa, for trial. In his defense he said: "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers. Unto which our twelve tribes instantly serving God day and night hope to come. For which hope's sake, King Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" The hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers involved the resurrection of the dead. They could not be fulfilled without it. Hence as we see, the question of the resurrection arose at his trial.

Q. Did Agrippa settle Paul's case?

A. No, he did not.

Q. What then did Paul do?

A. He took an appeal to a higher court.

Q. To what court did he appeal?

A. The Supreme Court at Rome. "Paul then appealed to Cæsar, at Rome, and thither he was taken." See Acts xxviii. 20-28.

Q. Did he stop preaching this blessed, reasonable, Bible hope because he was arrested and fettered with chains for his previous preaching of this "blessed hope?"

A. Not by any means.

Q. Well, when he arrived at Rome, what did he do?

A. On arriving there he called for the chief men of the Jews, and said unto them: "For this cause therefore have I called you, to see you, and to speak with you; because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain."

Q. Did they refuse to listen to him?

A. No, we read, "And when they appointed him a day, there came many to him in his lodging; to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening."

Q. What did they think about this reasonable hope?

A. "And some believed the things which were spoken, and some believed not."

Q. Did he get discouraged and stop preaching after his first discourse?

A. He did not.

Q. How long did he continue to preach to them?

A. Two years.

Q. Where do you find the record?

A. Acts xxviii. 30, 31.

Q. Please quote it.

A. "And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him. Preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him."

Q. Does the Bible hope, speak of the resurrection as a matter of hope?

A. It does. Paul in Acts xxiii. 6, says: "Of the hope of the resurrection of the dead I am called in question," which is intimately involved in the hope of the promises made of God unto the fathers.

Q. Does Paul draw a distinct line as to the condition of those who have the Bible hope, and those who do not?

A. Yes, Paul draws a line and shows a difference with regard to the future, as between those who have died having embraced "the hope of the gospel," and those who have not. He says in 1 Thess. iv. 13, "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them that are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope."

Q. Who are without hope?

A. Those who have not learned "the hope of the gospel," "the hope of the promises made of God unto the fathers," and rendered obedience to the same, by being baptized for the remission of sins.

Q. What Scripture clearly speaks of those who have no hope?

A. Eph. ii. 12, "Wherefore remember that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh; * * * that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world."

Q. Then the "Covenants of promise," and the restoration again of the kingdom to Israel, contain the sum and substance of a reasonable, serving Bible hope?

A. They do. Hence, "strangers from the covenants of promise" etc., have no hope that is a Bible hope.

The printing of Pine Woods Bible Class Book is progressing finely.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Report of Bible School at Torch Lake, Mich.

Success can be written for this enterprise at Torch Lake. Sister Boice need not go home discouraged now. She has passed through opposition from nearly every quarter, few showing even willingness to help push open this door to needed and deeper study of God's Word. For nearly a year she has toiled day and night printing and planning her charts on different Bible themes, studying, writing, thinking, until she has been nearly on the verge of nervous prostration; still undaunted she has toiled and planned, until now she can look back with rejoicing that her work has not been in vain in the Lord.

Meetings began Wednesday evening with a sermon by Bro. Neill, subject, The promise made to Abraham. Thursday morning the Bible school lessons were begun and each day the programme was carried out as previously announced. All that could possibly be brought out by charts, and other helps were used with the Word of God to substantiate them. Three sessions each day kept us all very busy. Each evening there was a sermon by either Bro. Neill or Sister Woodward, they being the only ministers present. Never have we spent twelve days so profitably as these in the close study of God's Word. O what spiritual feasts they were, we felt with the Apostle of old, that we were sitting together in heavenly places with Christ Jesus.

Every Bible lesson brought out some new thought, some rare lesson, every one jewelled with the joy of being among the called out ones, rejoicing that we are counted worthy to be trusted with the gospel message of the kingdom.

The attendance from abroad was not large, but the congregation steadily increased each evening until the last Sunday evening the house was full of very attentive listeners. Many expressed themselves as very sorry that the meetings were so near their close. Much good seed has been sown which we feel sure will yield its gospel fruitage.

On Friday a business meeting was called and an organization perfected, resulting as follows:

Business meeting called to order with Bro. Levi Boice in the chair. Sister Woodward chosen secretary of the business meeting. Upon motion it was voted that the Bible school originated by Harriet E. Boice of Champaigne, Ill., and held at Torch Lake from Aug. 1 to 15, 1906, be continued as an organization and known as the Bible School Association of the Church of God. By vote this association is to be under the control of general superintendent, a corresponding and recording secretary and treasurer.

The election of officers resulting in Harriet E. Boice as General Superintendent, P. Neill as Corresponding and Recording Secretary and Mary A. Woodward Treasurer.

On motion the time and place of next meeting (or school) was left to the discretion of the officers of this association. On motion the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, that the Churches of God of all the States, and isolated members be asked to contribute to this work, sending their offerings large or small to the treasurer Mary A. Woodward, Dutton, Kent County, Mich. This fund to be used for the support of the Bible School work. The meeting adjourned at call of the chairman.

Saturday August 11, 1906, the meeting called to order by the chairman. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The needs of Sunday school work were discussed, resulting in the appointment of Bro. P. Neill to prepare a weekly Sunday School lesson to be printed in The Restitution, if space can be secured.

On motion it was voted that all necessary expenses of the officers of this association for correspondence and Bible school supplies shall be paid out of the funds of association on presentation of a statement endorsed by the general superintendent and secretary.

On motion it was voted that the object of this association shall be: To promote deeper interest in Bible schools, to devise for their use the best methods and plans to prepare Bible school teachers and to extend this work to all the States, and to enthuse every member of the Church of God every where with the vast importance of thorough Bible school work. Adjourned at call of the chairman.

After all expenses had been paid there was money on hand, $62.25. This is a good start toward another year's work, but much more can be used, and should be gladly donated for such a worthy effort.

Mary A. Woodward, Sec.

We hope it will be very thoroughly understood that this work is not Michigan work, or Illinois or Ohio work, but for the Church of God every where, this to be the general gathering for all to meet and devise the best methods in all directions for Bible school study. Torch Lake, Michigan has not yet become a permanent location for this work, although there are many good reasons for desiring it, viz., first its beautiful location on the bank of Torch Lake, covering in length 18 miles, and merging into lake after lake, finally reaching Grand Traverse Bay. The bay only a few rods on the west of us, the lake directly in front, only 8 or 10 rods away, several kinds of boats in different ports that can be secured, good fishing or nearly all kinds in their season, a quiet little town with no saloons, one church, with a people as free from prejudice as you will ever find. No hay fever here, no mosquitoes to speak of, plenty of wild berries only a few rods away, produce and vegetables, butter and eggs very cheap of the farmers. Lumber interests a thing of the past, hence many good houses to rent very cheap, kind and very obliging inhabitants. Some of our party were given beds in private houses, and when we asked to pay for their use they utterly refused. The church and large hall, the latter we used for dining, cooking, etc., offered and used by us free of all charges with many other favors shown us by Mr. Cameron who owns large interests at this point. By another year he says he will have a new up to date boat which will make regular trips from Torch to Alden, making the trip much easier, shorter and cheaper. During resort season reduced fares can be had from all points in the United States, and the inexpensive living while there evens up the expense of travel. There is no mercenary motive in recommending this location, for all agree if there is another spot with as many inducements, where it will be more central, all are willing to turn their attention there. May God direct and further this work.

Yours in his name.

Mary A. Woodward.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

One good evidence of deadness to sell is that you are happy to have anybody succeed when you have failed.

Indiana Conference.

The Indiana Annual Conference of the Churches of God will be held at Argos, Indiana, beginning at 10:30, A. M. Friday, Sept. 7, and continue over the Sunday following.

Brothers and sisters, this Meeting is the time when the most important business of the year is to be transacted, and it is hoped all will make an effort to be there at the very first session, ready to take part, and do properly what is to be done.

Argos is easy to reach, being on the L. E. & W., and Nickel Plate Railways, and the friends there are amply able to care for all who will attend. So lay off the cares of this world for a few days, and let us come to Argos and listen to the sermons, enjoy the social meetings, transact the business of the Lord's cause as a duty and as a privilege—glad that he accounts us worthy to engage in his work.

Brother and Sister Woodward of Michigan have promised to be with us, which insures us the best of preaching services. Other speakers from the state are being urged to attend, and the prospect is we shall have a good, old-fashioned meeting, full of interest and harmony, with oneness of purpose. Make up your mind to come, and organize yourself into a committee to urge others to be there.

Editor Restitution:

On Sunday July 29th the Church of God at Guthrie Grove, Anderson, County, S. C., began the most successful meeting in the history of the church at this place. The preaching was done by Eld. E. M. Anderson, pastor and the writer. We expected to have some other preachers but for some reason they failed to come. Well, I have never been in such a meeting, the people were hungry for truth, and the singing led by P. A. Guthrie, was as fine as I ever heard.

We only expected to run the meeting one week, but the interest was so great we were compelled to run it for eleven days, closing Wednesday Aug. 8, 1906. The following persons put on Christ by baptism: Mr. J. S. Brewer, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Smith. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McCoy, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bowing, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Durham, Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Durham, Mr. Jos. Anderson, Mr. W. H. Anderson, Mr. N. A. McCoy, Miss Ida Guthrie, Miss Nettie Guthrie, Miss Minnie Brewer, Miss ... Pack, Miss M. L. Pack, Mr. James Guthrie, and Mrs. Lula Anderson, wife of the writer, 21 in all, and these people have investigated the truth and can give a reason for their hope. There are some to be baptized later on.

On Sunday Aug. 12 the church met to organize a Bible Sunday school. Bro. Joseph Brewer was elected superintendent, Bro. A. N. Durham, class leader. Sister Ida Guthrie was elected to assist P. A. Guthrie in the music. The church at Guthrie Grove has been laboring under great difficulty in the past, as most of its members lived so far from the church that they could not get there every Sunday, but the majority of those who were baptized during this meeting live in the neighborhood and now we can carry on a Sunday school.

The Church meets Saturday Sept. 1, to consider plans for enlarging the church house, as the present building is too small to accommodate the congregation. We want to be ready when Jesus comes to call his Bride, and we believe that event is near at hand.

J. H. Anderson.

A Useful Man.

"There is a man," said his neighbor, speaking of a village carpenter, "who has done more good, I really believe, in this community than any person who ever lived in it. He cannot talk very well in prayer-meeting, and he doesn't often try. He isn't worth $2,000, and it's very little that he can put down onsubscription papers for any object. But a new family never moves into the village that he does not find them out, to give them a neighborly welcome and offer them any little service he can render. He is usually on the look-out to give strangers a seat in his pew at church. He is usually ready to watch with a sick neighbor and look after his affairs for him, and I've sometimes thought he and his wife keep house plants in the winter just for the sake of being able to send little bouquets to invalids. He finds time for a pleasant word for every child he meets, and you'll always see them climbing into his one-horse wagon when he has no other load. He really seems to have a genius for helping folks in all sorts of common ways, and it does me good every day just to meet him on the street.

Death and Resurrection.

Says Addison, an elegant English writer of a past age:—

When I looked upon the tomb of the great, every emotion of envy dies in me; when I read the epitaphs of the beautiful, every inordinate desire goes out; when I meet with the grief of parents upon a tombstone, my heart melts with compassion; when I see the tomb of the parents themselves, I consider the vanity of grieving for those we must quickly follow. When I see kings lying by those who deposed them, when I consider rival wits placed side by side, or the holy men that divided the world with their contests and disputes, I reflect with sorrow and astonishment on the little competitions, factions and debates of mankind. When I read the several dates of the tombs, of some that died yesterday, and some six hundred years ago, I consider that great day when we shall all of us be contemporaries, and make our appearance together.

God forsaw how countless millions, saved out of the old wreck, would add to the positive wealth of the universe. And he knew how to dispose of all the rest, in harmony with the principles of love and justice.

"There must be no sham about a Christian. Christ was a good hater of sham and hypocrisy. Those who have Christ in their hearts are sincere."

Announcement.

Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference will convene in Morrill, Brown County, Kansas, Sept. 22, at 8 o'clock P. M., holding over the 30th Sept. inclusive. Morrill is situated on the Grand Island R. R. 54 miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. Preaching brethren: W. L. Crowe and S. C. Oliver, and others if they can be secured. Arrangements will be made to take care of visiting brethren before meeting commences.

PROGRAMME.

First subject, The purpose of God in creation. Perhaps several discourses on the same subject. Next, Why I believe the Bible. Again, Divine government vs. civil government. Again, Conversion. Again, In the church not in the kingdom. Again, The kingdom, What is it. Again, The object of Christ's second coming. Again, What must I do to be saved? Next the congregation will be given the privilege to name subjects. Saturday morning the Conference board will settle the finance affair and officers will be elected for the coming year and Evangelist hired. Now brethren, let us make the meeting a success. How? By coming and helping, your presence will be profitable, yourself will be rewarded. It always has and always will cost something to be a Christian.

We have arranged the meeting for the most leisure time among the farmers. A throng time cannot be excused. We are exhorted to not forget the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more as we see the day approaching.

By order of the Conference board. Trains due at Morrill from the east, 12:10 M. evening train; 10:10 P. M. From the west, morning 4:45 A. M., afternoon 2:28 P. M.

EUGENE HOWARD,
E. M. SAYLOR.

The next annual gathering of the Ohio State Conference, will convene August 28, to 26, in the vicinity of Brush Creek Church. As the church building is small the meetings will be held in a Tabernacle located on the promises of John Lehman one and one-half miles south of Kessler Station.

The Brush Creek Church is located about seven miles from Troy, Ohio.

Let every one who can possibly do so lay aside worldly cares for awhile and meet with us, to work for the blessed Master. Come, let us have our spiritual strength renewed and help to save others.

A cook has been arranged for and all will be boarded for the small sum of 35cts per day. Sleeping arrangements have also been arranged on the grounds. Come prepared to remain through the meeting. Come by the Big Four R. R. to Kessler Station where all will be met. All trains have not been stopping, but will stop during the meeting. Trains going west due at 8:39 a m and 9:18 a m. Going east one train due 5:47 p m.

The brethren at Brush Creek are enthusiastic over the conference and expect to have large meetings. They have their plans well laid and there is no reason why the conference should not be a grand success. Commence at once to arrange to attend.

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Address W. L. Skeels, Etna, Wash.

To the Brethren of the Kansas and Missouri Conference:

I have moved to the state of Oregon, so all letters in the interest of the conference work will be sent to J. P. Bitner, Severance, Kansas.

"The Baptism with the Holy Spirit" a 19-page booklet with cover, printed in large type on fine paper. This pamphlet is a reproduction of a series of articles which appeared several years ago. Price 5 cents per copy; 50 cents per dozen. Send orders to the author, A. H. Zilmer, at Plymouth, Indiana.

Notice.

I expect to be in Oklahoma, Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas this summer, and any wishing pastoral work in reach of my path, please notify me at Attica, Kan.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

T. J. DANIEL.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it forever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mothers to Be Born Again;" "Strange the Covenants of Promise;" "Worship;" "No Immortality Christ;" "Hope Begotten Resurrection of Christ;" "God Solicitude for Mankind;" "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Shining.

If any little word of mine
May make a life the brighter,
If any little song of mine
May make a heart the lighter—
God help me speak the little word,
And take my bit of singing,
And drop it in some lonely vale,
To set the echoes ringing!

If any little love of mine
May make a life the sweeter,
If any little care of mine
May take a friends the fleeter,
If any little lift may ease
The burden of another,
God give me love, and care and strength,
To help my toiling brother.

Preparation of the World for the Messiah.

READ AT TORCH LAKE BIBLE SCHOOL.

No sooner had man sinned, and death been pronounced upon the world, than God in his great love for him he had created in his own image after his own likeness, made a promise, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." Satan for the time has triumphed, the curse has been pronounced, man has shown his weakness, has become like Satan, rebellious; but some time in the far distant future some one shall be born of woman who shall bruise the serpent's head, shall destroy sin and its author, and give life to the world.

As time goes on and the race increases in numbers, there is a continuous battle between the good and evil in man, but the influence of Satan is great, and the choicest creation of God rapidly wanders away from the Father and becomes ensnared in the meshes of Satan. At the end of about 1650 years the world becomes so desperately wicked that God has to destroy it with a flood, and only one man with his family of eight souls is found worthy to be saved. What an awful lesson, and how Satan must have rejoiced. It would seem that the descendants of Noah would never again have forgotten God, but so little strength has man to resist the wiles of Satan, that almost immediately we find them building a tower that shall reach unto heaven in which they hope to escape another flood. Man becomes so selfish, so sinful, so like the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah have to be destroyed as in Jeason and not five souls are found who are worthy to be saved.

Where shall ever be a people that shall be worthy to bring forth a son who shall bruise the serpent's head, where must be selected one man, tried and true, who shall be the father of a race to be carefully, lovingly, and persistently trained, taught, and guided by the heavenly messengers sent forth from the Father. Two thousand years have passed and not a word has been said about the promise. But God is not forgetful and surely he is long-suffering.

Here begins the preparation of the world for that promised seed. Abraham, a man of marvelous faith in God, and still more marvelous because of the time in which he lived, was chosen to be the head of this great family that should bring forth the Savior of the world, the Messiah.

We are all familiar with the story of the offering of Isaac; the selling of Joseph into Egypt, that he might prepare the way for saving from famine the rest of the family; how after 400 years God prepared a deliverer from their Egyptian bondage in the person of Moses; how he came down upon Mount Sinai and gave them laws by which they should be governed and held together as one mighty people, with God as their King, that they might be a people prepared for so noble a purpose, and that they might help to prepare the world for the promised seed. We know how, after Moses, God raised up Joshua and Sampson, and Samuel; how he sent Nathan to correct good king David, and after 120 years of kingly rule, the kingdom was divided, the northern kingdom going into idolatry and Judah soon following with a mixed worship, sometimes making a great effort to go back to the worship of the true God, and then being led away after false gods.

Although the people forsook God, he would not forsake them, but sent Elijah to tell Ahab in thundering tones that this great drouth has come upon Israel because he has forsaken the living God and gone after Baal. It took more than courage to tell a king in those times that he had sinned. It took a faith in God equal to Abraham's when he offered up Isaac.

Time forbids more than naming a few of the great leaders of the chosen people. There was Elisha, the man of God upon whom the mantle of Elijah had fallen; Isaiah, the scholar, the statesman and prophet, who was the counsellor of kings; Jeremiah, the faithful, fearless, but unfortunate prophet. Then during the captivity there was the great prophet of the exile, Ezekiel, sent to tell the people that this great punishment was brought upon them because they had forsaken the true God, and there to give them words of hope and encouragement, that God would still forgive them and restore them to their own beloved land. Truly God loved his people, for when they are slaves, made so because they have rebelled against him, he is still with them, and raises up the mighty statesman and prophet Daniel; good Queen Esther and Mordecai; Zerubbabel, who led the first small company back to rebuild the temple; and Nehemiah, the great leader and man of affairs, as well as man of God. But before Nehemiah, we must not forget Ezra, who perhaps, did more than any other man to make a new Israel, Israel restored. Ezra the scholar, trained in the best schools of the Babylonian empire with its mighty libraries, which contained the best learning of the world at that time, also an earnest student and interpreter of the Book of the Law.

If the people before the captivity forgot God, now they were just as persistent in coming back to him. They knew why they had been so severely punished and were anxious to know God's will, that they might regain their former greatness, and be taught of God.

As it is probable they had but one Book of the Law, the people would gather in large companies, so large that one man could not make them hear. Ezra in the center, would read and explain the law, while others stationed at distances around him would give the interpretation to the people We might imagine this to be a great Sunday school with Ezra as superintendent and his assistants as teachers. As their fathers had perished for lack of knowledge, they were determined to know the will of God in all its details, that they might not likewise perish, and be it said to their credit, that whatever their later sins may have been, they never again went into idolatry.

As others came from the land of their captivity, and they increased in numbers, so great was their desire to be taught in the Law, that they built synagogues all over Jerusalem and the country round about, that they might meet there for study and worship each Sabbath instead of limiting their place and time of worship to Jerusalem, and but two or three times a year.

In the time of the Maccabees the number of synagogues in Jerusalem alone was 480. In about 330 years B. C. a great political change took place. Alexander has conquered the Medes and Persians and is now master of the world. While this did not disturb to any great extent the condition of the Jews, it did mean much in preparing the world for the new order of things that was to be instituted with the coming of the Messiah. There were numerous languages and dialects among the people of the world. The coming of the Grecian brought an almost universal language. I make the following quotation from Myer's school history: "The remarkable conquests of Alexander had far reaching consequences * * * The distinction between Greek and barbarian was obliterated and the sympathies of men, hitherto so narrow and local, were widened, and thus an important preparation was made for the reception of the cosmopolitan creed of Christianity. The world was given a universal language of culture, which was a farther preparation for the spread of Christian teachings."

As we send our children to the universities of the East and even to Europe, to finish their education, so the Romans sent theirs to Greece to finish theirs.

It is said that Cato, a Roman statesman, whipped his son when a man grown, for allowing his grandson to study Greek. Afterwards, when four score years old, he studied Greek himself, for he said, "One might as well be out of the world as out of the fashion."

Philo, a great Jewish writer of Alexandria just before the beginning of the Christian era, in referring to the western dispersion, meaning the Jews of that part of the world west of Palestine, speaks of the Greek as "our language."

As the Catholics use Latin in parts of their service today in order that it may seem more sacred and holy, so the Hebrew was used by the Rabbis in parts of the worship in the synagogue, although not understood by the common people, that they might preserve the sacredness of the Scriptures. Hebrew was used but little after the captivity, and in the time of Christ was almost a dead language.

Nearly all the books of the Apocrypha were written originally in Greek and the translation of the Old Testament into Greek brought it into use by the common people and had much to do with bringing the Grecian and Roman world into contact with Judaism, and the gradual giving up of the worship of many gods to that of one God.

The Greek translation of the Old Testament at the time of Christ held the same place in the estimation of the people that our Authorized Version does with us. "Nor need we wonder that it should have been the people's Bible, not merely among the Hellenists but in Galilee and even in Judea * * * Most, if not all,—at least in towns—would understand the Greek Version. It might be quoted in intercourse with the Hellenist brethren or with the Gentiles, and, what was perhaps equally, if not more important, it was the most readily procurable."

"From the extreme care and labor bestowed upon them, Hebrew manuscripts of the Bible were enormously dear * * * This would, of course, put their possession well nigh out of common reach. On the other hand we are able to form an idea of the cheapness of the Greek manuscripts from what we know of the price of books in Rome at the beginning of our era. Hundreds of slaves were engaged in copying what one dictated. The result was not only the publication of as large editions as in our days, but their production are only about double the cost of what are now known as "cheap," or people's editions. * * * "Accordingly manuscripts in Greek or Latin, although often incorrect, must have been easily attainable, and this would have considerable influence on making the Greek version of the Old Testament the 'people's Bible.'"

Myers in his school history says: "The Christian authors of the first three centuries, like the writers of the New Testament employed the Greek, that being the language of learning and culture."

The study of Greek was forbidden by the Rabbis, but like Cato, they had to yield to the inevitable, and when the apostles went every where preaching the Word instead of there being a multiplicity of languages, there was one almost universal language.

We must not forget that the Palestinian Jews comprised but a small portion of those who held Jerusalem as their capital city. There was the Eastern Dispersion, meaning those in the country of the Euphrates and the Tigris, the descendants of those who did not return from the captivity, and the Western Dispersion, meaning those west of Palestine. They were scattered everywhere as today, and were just as "separate" as they are today. Josephus says, "there was no nation in the world which had not among them part of the Jewish people," yet they had nowhere found a real home. A century and a half before our era comes from Egypt this lament of Israel:—

Crowding with thy numbers every ocean and country—yet an offense to all around thy presence and customs. Sixty years later Strabo the Greek geographer and historian says: "It is not easy to find a place in the world that has not admitted this race and is mastered by it." Philo, the Jewish writer of Alexandria speaks of his countrymen as in all the cities of Europe, in the provinces of Asia, and in the islands,' and describes them as having but one metropolis—not Alexandria, Antioch, or Rome—but the holy city with its temple, dedicated to the most high God. It is estimated that more than a million Jews lived in the countries east of Palestine, and there is a tradition that at one time Cyrus forbade them to return to Jerusalem, as it was depopulating some portions of his empire of his best subjects.

A nation, the vast majority of which was dispersed over the whole inhabited earth, had ceased to be a special and become a world nation. Yet its heart beat in Jerusalem, and thence its life-blood passed to its most distant members.

Those of the eastern dispersion clung closely to the religion of their fathers and were not much influenced by those around them. The Rabbis and all orthodox Jews of Palestine looked upon them as being far superior to those of the west. Greek philosophy prevailed throughout all the west and it was impossible for the Jews to ignore it or not be strongly influenced by it. In order to preserve the sacredness of their own religion, the Palestinian Jews did all they could to keep their people away from Greek influence from learning their language, or studying their philosophy, but all to no purpose. They could no more keep out Greek influence than they could change the course of the sun, for in this way God was preparing the Grecian and Roman world for the reception of Christianity. It was only a question of which was the stronger—Grecian philosophy—the worship of many gods, or the religion of the Jews, the worship of the only living and true God.

A young Rabbi asked his uncle whether he might not study Greek philosophy, since he had mastered the law, and received this answer, "Go and search what is the hour which is neither of the day, nor of the night, and in it thou mayest study Greek philosophy."

I quote from Edersheim. "To be sure, they were intensely Jewish, these communities of strangers. Like our scattered colonists in distant lands, they would cling with double affection to the customs of their home, and invest with the halo of tender memories the sacred traditions of their faith. The Grecian Jew might look with contempt, not mingled with pity, on the idolatrous rites practiced around, from which long ago the pitiless irony of Isaiah had torn the veil of beauty, to show the hideousness and unreality beneath. The dissoluteness of public and private life, the frivolity and aimlessness of their pursuits, political aspirations, popular assemblies, amusements—in short, the utter decay of society, in all its phases, would lie open to his gaze. It is in terms of lofty scorn, not unmingled with indignation, which only occasionally gives way to the softer mood of warning, or even invitation, that Jewish Hellenistic literature, whether in the Apocrypha or in its Apocalytic utterances, addresses heathenism."

"From that spectacle the Grecian Jew would turn with infinite satisfaction—not to say, pride—to his own community, to think of its spiritual enlightenment, and to pass in review its exclusive privileges. It was with no uncertain steps that he would go past those splendid temples to his own humbler synagogue, pleased to find himself there surrounded by those who shared his descent, his faith, his hopes, and gratified to see their number swelled by many who, heathens by birth, had learned the error of their ways, and now, so to speak, humbly stood suppliant 'strangers of the gate,' to seek admission into his sanctuary."

In comparing the inscriptions on the tombstones of the Jews with those of the Romans Edersheim says, "That civilization was doomed which could inscribe over its dead such words as: 'To eternal sleep,' 'To perpetual rest,' or more concisely express it thus, 'I was not, and I became; I was, and am no more. This much is true; who says other, lies; for I shall not be,' adding, by way of moral, 'and thou who livest, drink, play, come.' Not so did God teach his people; and as we pick our way among these broken stones, we can understand how a religion, which proclaimed a hope so different, must have spoken to the hearts of many even at Rome, and much more, how that blessed assurance of life and immorality, which Christianity afterwards brought, could win its thousands, though it were at the cost of poverty, shame, torture, and the arena."

It was impossible that the Jews, with their great numbers and influence, with their intense religious nature, and their persistent determination to cling to the religion of their fathers, should not have a powerful influence over those with whom they came in contact. They made many proselytes, king Herod himself being a proselyte, and we cannot but recall the words of Jesus when he called the Pharisees, hypocrites, and said they would search heaven and earth to make one proselyte. All this had its influence in preparing the way for the reception of the new order of things. If the Greeks gave a universal language, the Roman gave a universal law to the world.

Again I quote from Myers' history, "Although the Latin writers in all departments of literary effort which we have so far reviewed did much valuable work, yet the Roman intellect in all these directions was under Greek guidance. Its work was largely imitative. But in another department it was different. We mean, of course, the field of legal and political science. Here the Roman ceased to be pupil and became teacher. Nations, like men, have their mission. Rome's mission was to give laws to the world."

The power of Rome was felt in the remotest parts of the empire and her laws must be respected. They were enforced by the Roman centurion with his company of soldiers. Many times when the apostles and their followers went forth to proclaim the gospel they were protected by the Roman soldiers. Paul could appeal to Cæsar and to Cæsar he could go. When scourged and imprisoned without trial, he could bring to their knees the officials who had dealt so unjustly with him, by the simple question, "Is it lawful to scourge a man who is a Roman and uncondemned?" They knew they had exceeded their authority and if the matter was reported to Rome they would be punished.

It is true that the early Christians suffered greatly at the hands of the Roman during the several periods of persecution, brought about because of the bigotry of the people, yet on the other hand they were protected by the soldiers from the mobs that fancied their religion or their craft was in peril.

If the Jews helped to prepare the world for the reception of Christianity, their religious training, and political condition helped to prepare them for the rejection of the Messiah. They could look back upon Israel in its glory and power under David and Solomon; could read the promise that David's throne should endure to all generations, even as the sun in heaven; could read Isaiah's prophecy, that a son should be born, that he should reign over the house of Jacob and upon the throne of David forever; could read Jeremiah's statement to Zedekiah, that his throne should be overturned and should be no more until he should come whose right it is; and believing that God was able to make of them a mighty nation once more, and that he would keep his promise to make them a strong and free people, that should rule the world, with David's son as an all powerful and invincible king, they rested in that hope through all the years of their trial and persecution. They could look with disdain upon those to whom they were compelled to submit for the time, believing that God would yet redeem Israel. It was impossible to crush a people with such a hope and bound together with such ties. That hope pointed them all, wherever scattered, back to Palestine. To them the coming of the Messiah meant the restoration of Israel's kingdom. Indeed every devout Jew prayed every day: Proclaim by thy loud trumpet our deliverance, and raise up a banner to gather our dispersed, and gather us together from the four ends of the earth.

All the numerous writings of the Jews for the 4 centuries succeeding the captivity term with Israel's hope of deliverance, with the Son of David as king upon Mt. Zion from everlasting to everlasting. With this hope filling so completely the minds of the people, little wonder that so few accepted the preaching of John the Baptist, who was sent to prepare the way by preaching the baptism of repentance; little wonder that all but a few poor fishermen rejected the Messiah when he came preaching the gospel of peace; little wonder that Peter, after three years of careful training, even after Jesus had risen from the dead, should say, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? How hard it is for even the faithful few to understand that Jesus came,—not to rule the world with a golden sceptre and with mighty armies—not to drive out the Roman by force of arms—but rather to conquer the world by love; that his kingdom was a kingdom of peace; that it was like the grain of mustard seed, which is the smallest of all seeds, but grows until its branches reach unto heaven, or like the little stone cut out of the mountain without hands, but rolls until it fills the whole earth. That Jesus came "in the fulness of time," or, as I heard one express it not long since, "in the nick of time," when all the world was prepared for him is shown in the fact that in 325 years pagan Rome became Christian Rome with a Christian emperor on the throne.

L. A. BOICE.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I would like to say through THE RESTITUTION that I have enjoyed a season of blessings. I left home Monday August 6th for Oregon, Ill., to visit the Bible school, arriving there Tuesday morning. I met a class of about twenty-five scholars in the little home prepared by the church and commenced the study of God's Word and continued until August 15th. I must say that I never met such a lot of bright youths in all of my life and so eager to learn God's truths. Oh it gives me new life, if any one has spiritual blues that is the place to get them cured. Then I stayed through the Conference and heard the good sermons from the brethren. Then started for home, getting home Monday and there I met Sylvenes Rogers, that I was well acquainted with, who had come a distance of about 100 miles for baptism, so Tuesday we drove about 15 miles and met with a few of like precious faith on the banks of north Fork and Brother Z. E. Brant assisted him to put on Christ by baptism. Then we went to Bro. Brant's and partook of the bread and wine. Then the young brother returned home with me and we enjoyed a good time and the next day I took him to the station and he returned back to his place of work.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 5, 1906. NUMBER 33.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 5, 1906.

WE wish all who have not renewed their subscriptions for 1906 would do so at once. We just simply need the money right now.

A LETTER from Brother O. J. Allard tells us that the meeting in Iowa was the largest and best they ever held, 17 being baptized into the all-saving name. Bro. A. is to devote his whole time to evangelizing next year. This is truly encouraging, and shows that the Iowa brethren are in earnest, and full of zeal for the Lord's cause. May the good work go on, is our prayer.

SISTER Sallie Deemer who has lived in this city for a number of years, was married to Mr. Thomas Leeks of Michigan, Aug. 30, 1906. The wedding took place at the home of Bro. E. K. Barnhill, as both parties are old acquaintances of his family. They will go to his home in Michigan to live, and with them go the best wishes of all their many friends.

SISTER Dora Dickson was married to Daniel Mockel at her home in this city on Aug. 25, 1906. Mr. Mockel is a farmer living west of here, where they will make their home. Sister Dora has lived all her life in the vicinity of Plymouth, and has been a member of the Church of God, and bears a character clear of any reproach. She has been one of the most faithful attendants at our church services, always taking her part willingly and cheerfully. We can only wish her and her husband the most perfect joy in this new relation in life, and trust that the blessing of the kind heavenly Father will rest upon their household.

BROTHER Wince suggests a list of subjects for speakers at our Annual Conference in Indiana, that are so good we give them place here. God so loved the world. John iii. 16. Thessalonica the Model Church. Paul's last imprisonment and execution. Jesus' reply to the Sadducees on the resurrection. The Obedience of Faith. The Bible a sufficient rule of faith and practice. The kingdom of God—when, and where, and for what purpose to be established. Qualifications for entering the kingdom. Restoration of Judah and Israel. The Law of Pardon. The Christian. Will nations in the flesh survive the event of the Lord's coming? Our need of the present hour—faithful men to proclaim the truth.

Our Calling.

As obedient believers of the glorious gospel of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, it is important for us to carefully consider and apprehend the design that God, our heavenly Father, has in calling his church out from the world. This calling is emphasized in the Scriptures. In Phil. iii. 14, it is termed—"the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." The context, in the preceding verses, shows, that the particular prize, for which the Apostle represents himself as striving, was, that he might "attain unto the resurrection from the dead." The peculiarly eclectic character of this resurrection is forcibly shown by a term in the original that occurs nowhere else in the New Testament. This term is—exanastasis—which is defined by Young—a standing up out of—so that the phrase, literally rendered would be, "the resurrection out from among the dead ones." In verse 21, the Apostle explains the nature of this resurrection, as well as its limitations to those of a heavenly citizenship. His words, quoting the R. V. are: "For our citizenship is in heaven; from whence also we wait for a Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: who will fashion anew the body of our humiliation, that it may be conformed to the body of his glory, according to the working whereby he is able even to subject all things unto himself." The nature of this resurrection, the grand prize of "the high calling" of the Church of God, is as emphatically and as accurately stated by the Savior himself—Luke xx. 35, 36—who says: "The sons of this world—age—marry, and are given in marriage; but they that are accounted worthy to attain that world—age—and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage: for neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the sons of God, being sons of the resurrection." R. V. The resurrection in this place is made eclectic by a peculiarity of expression just as definite, though by a different arrangement of the words, as Paul makes it in the above quoted phrase. Our Lord's language is tes anastaseos ten ek nekroon—which word for word is, "of the resurrection the one out-from dead ones." This resurrection, the special one out-from the dead ones, is the resurrection of the just, Luke xiv. 14; the resurrection of those asleep in Jesus, 1 Thes. iv. 15; and the first resurrection, Rev. xx. 5. Schleusner defines this eclectic resurrection—exanastasis beatam e mortuis resurrectionem, the blessed resurrection out from dead ones. This resurrection of the body, "refashioned"—metaschematidzo—defined by Young to make of another form—"like the glorious body" of Christ, is a privilege peculiar to the sons of God, and something for which the called out followers of Christ are to strive with earnest and unfaltering energy.

Our calling is also a heavenly calling." Heb. iii. 1. This embraces a heavenly nature, heavenly honors, and a heavenly home or inheritance. Taking the first specification, a heavenly character, how plainly the Bible teaches us that it is a paramount virtue in the Christian system. "God has called us with a holy calling." 2 Tim. i. 9. This attribute of Christian character is most solemnly enjoined upon us as a sine qua non, an indispensable condition, without which none shall see the Lord. Heb. xii. 14. Macknight thus gives the full sense of this text in his paraphrase or commentary, "Earnestly cultivate peace with all men—with the Gentiles as well as with the Jews, and even with your enemies. But at the same time maintain holiness, without which no one shall see the Lord."

The same author translates the next verse—"Carefully observing, lest any one come short of the grace of God, lest some bitter root springing up trouble you, and by it many be polluted." As a warning to us all we will take another lesson from the apostle on bitterness, and its co-related vices as unholy traits of disposition, which, like poisonous infections, will utterly deprave us, and so, completely spoil us for a part in God's kingdom. We give Macknight's translation of Eph. iv. 29 32, "Let no rotten speech come out of your month; but if any speech be good for the use of edification, speak it, that it may minister pleasure to the hearers. And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God with whom ye are sealed until the day of redemption. Let all bitterness and anger and wrath and clamor and evil speaking, be taken away from among you, with all malice. But be ye to one another kind, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

We will give verses 30, 31 as paraphrased by the above named translator: "And do not—by rotten speech or wicked actions—displease the Holy Spirit of God,—so as to banish him from you—with whose gifts and graces ye are marked,—as persons to be redeemed from eternal death—until the day of redemption. In particular, let all peevishness of temper, and anger, and wrath, and reviling and evil speaking.....be taken away from among you, with every degree of ill-will towards others." The word rendered evil-speaking, in the original is blasphemia, from the verb blasphemeoo which is defined by Young—to speak injuriously; by Donnegan—to speak so as to injure another's good fame; to defame; to slander; to excite prejudice against; etc; by Schleusner the noun itself is defined—in universum laesionem existimationis ac famae alterius notat which, in English is—it universally denotes injuring the reputation and good name of any one. In Bagster's Analytical Lexicon the verb is defined as meaning to revile, to calumniate, etc. Then our counsel to all members of the Church of God would be, not to use the words "vile," or "viler" reproachfully, nor without carefully considering the truthfulness and righteous application of these defaming terms. And our further advice would be, if reviled directly, or by stinging implication, to imitate the apostles, and follow their directions. They say, 1 Cor. iv. 12, "being reviled we bless;" and, 1 Peter iii. 9, "not rendering evil for evil, or reviling for reviling; but contrariwise blessing; for hereunto were ye called, that ye should inherit a blessing." R. V. This text demonstrates that our holy calling is involved in our obedience to the command here imposed upon us. As God has pre-destined that the joint heirs of Christ shall be conformed to the image of his Son, we must be his imitators when tried in this manner. "When he was reviled, he reviled not again." 1 Pet. iii. 23.

Finally, when we advertise our dear brethren that revilers are, by name, excluded from the kingdom of God, our warning words will deepen in signification. See and read carefully 1 Cor. vi. 10.

A second element connected with our heavenly calling is the heavenly nature. To what we have said on our high calling we may add, that "we shall bear the image of the heavenly" when raised from the dead in the glorious likeness of the Son of God. 1 Cor. xv. 49. He was raised as a sample first fruits of the full harvest. God's children will be made partakers of the divine nature in its attributes of spirituality, incorruptibility, and immortality. 2 Pet. i. 4; 1 Cor. xv. 48-54. The veritable body of the Redeemer; the body prepared for him, Heb. x. 5; the body laid in the tomb, Luke xxiii. 55; was the body raised to leave an empty sepulchre, Luke xxiv. 3; and was the visible, tangible personality that challenged the incredulity of Thomas, John xx. 27; and that was seen by the apostles, and more than five hundred others during forty days, and that finally ascended into heaven to sit at God's right hand till, as the seed of David, he returns in power and great glory to take the kingdom and crown of earth. In our heavenly calling as is the firstfruits such will be the final harvest. So it was the bodies of the saints that slept, that came out of the tombs after his resurrection. Matt. xxvii. 52, 53. And our adoption into the heavenly family will be consummated by the "redemption of our body." Rom. viii. 23. Then to attain to our glorified nature, as presented in our heavenly calling, is not for the soul, as a disembodied entity, to put on immediately some sort of spiritual outer, clothing, nor is it for "some other dust to be organized and our personal consciousness flashed upon it that will do as well;" but it is to be raised from the dead in proper person, as the firstfruits, our Redeemer himself, was raised.

The third particular connected with our heavenly calling consists in its honors. The prize for which we run is, "an incorruptible crown." 1 Cor. ix. 25. To the faithful elders in the Church of God is promised "a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. v. 4. To the overcomers the promise is, "to sit with Christ in his throne." Rev. iii. 21. The gospel itself, in its main features, is "the gospel of the kingdom." To this kingdom the poor of this world, rich in faith, are heirs. Jas. ii. 5. Paul anticipated his crown of righteousness, from his gloomy prison. 2 Tim. iii. 8. And he here says, a crown awaits all who love Christ's appearing. The fourth particular in the heavenly calling is the heavenly home. This inheritance of the saints of the Most High will be the "kingdom under the whole heaven." Dan. vii. 27. Their home will be the earth. Psa. xxxvii. 9, 11, 18, 22, and Matt. v. 5. Most especially when God shall have made all things new. Rev. xxi. 1-7. If then, like Abraham, we look for a better country, that is a heavenly—Heb. xi. 16—new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness—2 Pet. iii. 13—let us be diligent that we be found of the Lord at last without spot and blameless. A practical lesson from Paul to Timothy should be conscientiously heeded in these evil days. We give Macknight's translation: "Moreover foolish and untaught questions reject, knowing that they begot fightings. And the servant of the Lord must not fight, but be gentle towards all men, fit to teach, patiently bearing evil. In meekness instructing those that set themselves in opposition; if by any means, God will give them repentance to the acknowledgement of truth." 2 Tim. ii. 23 25.

If one, like Appollos, has attained some knowledge of the truth, instead of denouncing and disfellowshiping him because he does not know more, do like Priscilla and Aquilla, "expound unto him the way of God more carefully." Acts xviii. 26, R. V.

Let us then, dear brethren of the household of faith, give all diligence to make our calling and election sure. We subjoin a short portraiture of true saints. "God's elect, did we know them, would be found even now worthy of their name, and very different from those who only perplex by their inconsistencies, or plague by their folly. Loving, trustful, and unselfish; broad in their sympathies, candid in their judgments, honorable in their lives, and humble in the estimate they form of themselves, these the true sons and daughters of the Highest, will one day issue from the obscurity in which it pleases God as yet to hide them, and they shall walk in white, for they are worthy. From deepest poverty and peasant's huts—with here and there, it may be, one from the palaces of princes; from lowly prisons, and from martyrdoms severer than those of the axe or the stake; cultured or rude of speech; great souls, of whom the world knows nothing, will then come forth—'a multitude which no man can number,' and stand confessed God's own nobility, the aristocracy of the skies."

As the children of God in an imperfect world let us be careful about judging others. "Judge not that ye be not judged." "Why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at naught thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ." Rom. xiv. 10.

Let us prize the glorious gospel in all its definiteness, and teach it with all plainness. But, dear brethren of the Church of God, may we be preserved from every temper and disposition inconsistent with our heavenly calling. Let us neither judge nor use hard, censorious, defaming epithets. For himself the writer would say—as the Lord shall judge his people,—

"Let not this weak unknowing hand
Presume thy bolts to throw,
And deal damnation round the land
On each I judge thy foe.

If I am right, thy grace impart
Still in the right to stay;
If I am wrong, O teach my heart
To find the better way."

May the Lord guide us by his counsel, and afterward bring us to glory. —S. A. Chaplin.

Youth's Column.

Saturday Night.

Placing the little hats all in a row,
Ready for church to-morrow, you know;
Washing wee faces and black little fists,
Getting them ready and fit to be kissed;
Putting them into clean garments and white;
That is what mothers are doing to-night.

Spying out holes in the little, worn hose.
Laying by shoes that are worn through the toes;
Looking o'er garments so faded and thin—
Who but a mother knows where to begin?
Changing a button to make it look right—
That is what mothers are doing tonight.

Creeping so softly to take a last peep,
After the little ones all are asleep;
Anxious to know if the children are warm,
Tucking the blankets round each little form;
Kissing each little face rosy and bright—
That is what mothers are doing tonight.

Kneeling down gently beside the white bed,
Lowly and meekly she bows down her head,
Praying as only a mother can pray,
"God guide and keep them from going astray."

Birds of the Bible.

NO. 1. DOVES.

Of all birds mentioned in God's book—the Bible—none are referred to so frequently as the dove.

After the birth of our Savior, when Mary, his mother, took him for the first time to the temple, she was not rich enough to take a lamb for sacrifice, as mothers did who were better off in worldly goods, but she took a pair of doves—gentle, loving, beautiful birds; what more fitting gift could she ever have offered for the holy Child Jesus?

At the baptism of Jesus, the Spirit of God descended upon him, in the form of a dove, and the dove became forever the symbol of holiness and love.

When the waters had covered the earth, and Noah sent out a bird, after many days, to see if the dry ground was appearing, he chose the dove, which went forth over the waters, and returned to his window with an olive branch; then the dove and the olive branch became to us the symbol of peace between God and man.

Of our Savior it is said, "His eyes are as the eyes of doves by the rivers of waters;" and to us those eyes became the emblem of tenderness and beauty.

The times of trial, when we seem to be for a season deprived of the presence of God, are compared to winter, and the return of happier seasons, to the spring, "Lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds has come, and the voice of the turtle [dove] is heard in our land." The Church is represented as being tender toward us as doves toward one another, and we all know their love and devotion to their little mates, causing them to mourn pitifully when separated from each other, with such intense grief that death often ensues.

When the Psalmist wished to describe the purity of the heart made clean by our Father's forgiveness, he refers to the purity and beauty of doves' wings: "Though ye have lain among the pots, ye shall be as the wings of a dove covered with silver and her feathers with yellow gold." The dove, then is an emblem of purity. In another place, the Psalmist, in thinking of, and longing for peace, sighs: "O, that I had wings like a dove, for then would I flee away and be at rest;" this he saith, remembering that the dove, when longing for the sweet influences of milder climes, migrates from time to time, going and returning with the inspiration of the changing seasons.

Hezekiah compares his deep sorrow to that of a dove mourning for its mate; "I did mourn as a dove," he says, in thinking of his grief; and the Prophet Isaiah, also in representing the grief of sinners, compares their sorrows to that of mourning doves. Nahum, too, alludes to this loving trait when he refers to the desolations of Nineveh and the passing of its inhabitants into captivity, and says: "As with the voice of doves tabering upon their breasts." The loving spirit of the dove has endeared its name to men in all generations, and, as God is love, we do not wonder that the dove should appear in the great Letter which he has sent. There are passages in the Prophets which seem to contradict the usual character of this gentle bird, representing it as fierce and cruel, as in the following from Jeremiah: "The land is desolate because of the fierceness of the dove;" but, to understand this passage, it is only necessary to remember that the nation at war with the Jews bore a dove on their ensigns; thus the dove, to the Jews, represented a fierce enemy. To us the tenderness of their eyes, the loveliness of their feathers, are suggestions dear not only for their own loveliness, and the thoughts to which they give rise are only those of holiness, peace, purity and love. —Georgiana Kringle.

Sermons for the Little Ones.

No. 1.

"Suffer the little ones to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

A long time ago, when Jesus was here upon earth, some mothers who loved him, brought their children to him that he might bless them.

The disciples, bade the women "take the children away, the Master would not want to be troubled with them." But the tender, loving Savior said, "Let them come. I love them. Of such is my kingdom;" and I know that my little readers would like to come to him who was so kind to children when here on earth.

Well, you cannot come if you do not know how. Would you like to know the way? That is the very first thing you must do. You must learn what God has said about Jesus in the Bible, why he came into the world the first time, and why he is coming back again, and just what God says you must believe. Just as you believe every word that your good fathers and mothers tell you, just so, you must believe every word that God tells you. You know, when they promise faithfully to give you something for being good children, you are sure to get it. You believe, what they say they will give you, you will get. So you must believe what God says he will give you, you will get, for this is faith, and you cannot please God without faith.

He does not like to have people disbelieve what he says, nor to have them say "they will never get" what he has told them he will give them if they mind him.

He will not let such people go into his beautiful kingdom at all, for to get into that kingdom, we must be righteous (doing good) and we cannot be righteous, if we do not have the faith that will make us so.

Well, away back, when man was first upon the earth, when there was only Adam and Eve to live together, God put them into a lovely garden and told them, they might have as theirs, all the beautiful fruit, except that which was upon one tree in the midst of the garden. That they must not touch. If they did, they would surely die.

All the beasts and birds minded the man. He would call them all to come to him by name, and not one of them would harm him.

There was no dark, cold, cloudy weather, no ugly storms. The beautiful sunshine always streamed down upon the garden. The earth was watered by plentiful dews, that every morning, sparkled like beads on the grass.

The man and woman never got tired like we do. They did not feel any fear. They never cried. They were never sick, and there was nothing to trouble them.

God loved them and they loved God, and sometimes his angels came down and talked with them, just as you talk with one another.

There were pretty flowers all over the garden that were always in bloom, and lovely rivers wound in and out, among the trees.

The man and woman might have staid there always, and have came to live forever if they had minded God and not touched the tree of which he had forbidden them to eat.

But one day the woman was walking alone in the garden. The naughty serpent saw her, and told her she wouldn't die, if she did eat some of the fruit that God had told her not to touch. So, instead of running away, as she ought to have done, she went to look at the beautiful tree. Its lovely, golden apples were in reach of her hand. She took one and ate it and carried another to her husband, and he, too, ate.

O, how sad they must have felt when they thought of what they had done! And how much worse, when, as they were hiding from God, his angel called them and told them they must indeed die—that they had been made from the dust of the ground, and must turn to dust again—that the beautiful garden was no longer theirs—that they must now, go out into a world of storms, where thorns and briars would grow and they would have to work ever so hard.

They could never come to the tree of life. A great angel with a flaming sword, kept them away. The chance of living forever was gone. By not minding God they had brought [illegible] upon themselves, and upon all their children. If they had believed [illegible] God told them, and had minded him all would have been well.

They could have eaten of the tree of life and have never died, and the whole earth would soon have become just like the garden where God placed them. But now, God said he would curse the ground—few of the beasts should mind the man, and many of them would become fierce and hurtful.

Yet God made one promise to the woman; it was, that her seed, or child, should sometime bruise the serpent's head. That promised child was Jesus. No one else can overcome and kill the wicked serpent, and take away death and all the sorrow that he has caused. —The Friend of the Children.

Ordered Her Admission to Heaven.

A curious custom of the Greek church was illustrated at the funeral the other day of the young Grand Duchess Paul of Russia. Before the coffin was closed the metropolitan placed a written paper in the right hand of the corpse, which read: We, by the grace of God, prelate of the holy Russian church, write this to our master and [illegible] St. Peter, the gatekeeper of the Almighty. We announce [illegible] the servant of the Lord, her highness the Grand Duchess [illegible] finished her life on earth, and we [illegible] you to admit her into the kingdom of heaven without delay, for we have absolved all her sins and granted her salvation. You will obey our order on right of this document, which we put into her hand."

The above is copied from a Paris letter to a metropolitan paper by Brother Richard Worthington, and tends to show the belief of this people. To our mind it is quite consistent with their idea of what heaven is, and the manner of obtaining entrance there. If we believed that this high official had the authority to absolve from sins, and was the judge who decided the standing of people in relation to God—whether they are fit or not—a very natural conclusion would be that he could give them a ticket to the place they were fitted for. We presume if he has power to command St. Peter, as gate keeper of heaven, he also has power to command Satan, and tell him to admit whom he sends that way. This would be a logical conclusion.

Luther.

Luther laid the ax at the root of the tree. He denied the Romish doctrine of a priesthood having in its hands the sacraments and other means of grace, keeping the door of access to its own ranks, and governing the laity by a divine commission. This is a clear intelligible position. Everybody could understand it. The cause of the reformation depended on no tenuous (small, minute) discriminations.—Scribner.

Poetry.

Complete in Him.

There is no path we tread
But leads to richer grace;
The stars are overhead,
And in the desert place
The wanderer finds the golden stairs;
God's angel's meet him unawares.

There is no cup we drink,
Of mingled myrrh and wine,
But, sweeter than we think,
It makes the life to shine;
Bethesmane itself is fair,
Soon as we find that Christ is there.

There is no heavy cross
But, borne of him, is light;
And what at noon was loss
We count as gain at night,
For he who seeks God's will alone
Behind the cross beholds the throne.

The throne of love and power—
Which never sets to him—
Will gild each passing hour;
The flaming seraphims
Have no deep joy he may not know:
For God and heaven are here below.

Communicated.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 48.

1. And it came to pass in the seventh month that Ismael son of Nathanias, son of Eleasa, of the generation of the king and ten prominent men with him, came unto Godolias into Masseepha, and they ate bread together there.

2. And Ismael arose, he and the ten men with him and they smote Godolias whom Babuloou's king had established over the land,

3. And all the Joudaioi who were with him in Masseepha and all the Chaldaioi that were found there.

4. And it came to pass on the second day after he had smitten Godolias, and no man knew it,

5. That men of mark also came from Suchem and from Saleem and from Samareia, eighty men namely with their beards shaven and with their outer-garments rent, and beating their breasts and with manna and frankincense in their hands to bring (or offer in) into the house of the Lord.

6. And Ismael came out to meet them, they were going their way and lamenting, and he said unto them, Come in unto Godolias.

7. And it came to pass when they had entered into the midst of the city he slew them (and cast them) into the well.

8. And ten men were found there, and they said unto Ismael, Do not destroy us because there are treasures of ours in a field, wheat and barley, honey and olive-oil; and he passed by and did not destroy them in the midst of their brethren.

9. And the well into which Ismael had cast all the men whom he had smitten, this was a great well which king Asa had made from before the face of Baasa, king of Israel, This Ismael filled with the wounded;

10. And Ismael turned away all the laity that had been left behind in Masspha and the daughters of the king whom the chief-magus had entrusted to Godolias, son of Achelkam and made them to dwell in the country beyond the sons of Ammoon.

11. And Joonanan son of Kares and all the leaders of the host who were with him heard all the evil things that Ismael had done;

12. And they led all their camp and went to make war with him by much water in Gabaoon;

13. And it came to pass that when all the laity that was with Ismael saw Joonanan and the leaders of the host with him,

14. And that they had returned unto Joonanan,

15. Ismael even saved himself along with eight men and went unto the sons of Ammon;

16. And Joonanan and all the leaders of the host with him took all those left of the laity whom he had turned back from Ismael men able in war and the women and the rest and the eunuchs whom he had turned back from Gabaoon,

17. And they went and seated themselves in Gabeseroochamaa adjacent to Beetbleem, that they might go their way into Alguptos,

18. Away from the face of the Chaldaioi, because they were afraid to face them, for the reason that Ismael had smitten Godolias whom the king of Babuloon had established in the land.

COMMENT.

This 48th chapter is given in the English versions as the 41st.

In the 3rd verse "even the men of war" added—not in the text.

In the 5th verse the word translated "cut themselves" like "plangere" in the Latin means in the middle voice and it is middle here "to beat one's breast or head as an outward evidence of mourning," a common use in the Levitical Scriptures, and the word translated in the versions "oblations" side-note or "meal-offerings" but rendered "manna" in the Greek means cakes of fine flour mixed up with honey and olive-oil, and is a special Levitical offering; but not "an oblation" for an oblation (more properly "a libation") was of wine and poured upon "the sacrifice."

In the 6th verse it is not Ismael "went weeping to meet them" but "went to meet them as they were going their way lamenting," also no "son of Ahikam" in the text—this added.

In the 7th verse "pit" should be "well" and we are told in the 9th verse who made it and why.

It does not say in the 8th verse that "the ten men spared" were found among them the slain—but does say that "ten men were found there."

In the 10th verse the name of the "chief-magus" is not given in the text, but added in the versions, and it does not say that "Ismael departed to go over to the sons of Ammon," but does say that "he took and made these people to dwell in the country beyond the sons of Ammoon."

In the 11th verse "captains of the forces" should be "leaders of the host" and "they led all their camp" instead of "they took all the men."

In the 12th verse it should read "by much water in Gabaoon" instead of "by the great waters that are in Gibeon."

In the 15th verse instead of "escaped with eight men" it should read "saved himself along eight men."

Observe all the proper names and compare them and particularly "Geruth-Chinchaam" in the 17th verse which is spelled "Gaberroochamaa" with the Greek letters as I have reproduced it with the equivalent English lettering.

CHAS. GARDNER.

The Little Horn, Dan. viii.

Inasmuch as L. J. Kimball requests further discussion of this subject, I am ready to accomodate any one if there appears any reason to believe that any good will come as the result of any such investigation. I hold that we should always be ready to exchange error for truth, and in order to arrive at the truth we must pay strict attention to what the Divine Spirit has caused to be written on the subject, and then reason logically in arriving at our conclusions. Foundation principles must be given due weight or our exegesis will not be correct.

In the beginning the Creator laid down the rule: "Everything after its kind." Now questions and answers was a favored way in our Lord's day of arriving at the truth. There are many questions I may ask Bro. Kimball that are suggested by his article in THE RESTITUTION of Aug. 22, but I will ask but one for the present, and in order to be perfectly understood I will say that it is on all hands admitted that the horn in question is a symbol. Now Bro. Kimball can you give us one instance in the whole of the Bible where God measures symbols by literal time? If not why say "the time is literal."

GEO. FRANCIS.

T. E. Willey Sleeps.

I notice in THE RESTITUTION that Brother T. E. Willey has fallen a victim to the enemy death. It grieves me much to hear of the death of this man of God.

Some years ago we met Brother Willey in Arkansas, and at that time we were struggling to build up the cause here, but there were but few of us and we were scattered all over the state. We wanted a medium of communication among us. So we started a little monthly paper as a means to that end, and elected Brother T. E. Willey as Editor. This position he filled for one year. The writer visited him at his home. At the time to retire at night, he called his family around the old hearth-stone, read a chapter and all knelt in prayer. We talked of our faith and hope. We had the same. We believed the promises made of God unto the fathers; that Jesus Christ was the Son of the living God, who gave himself a ransom for all, died that we might live, and that God brought him from the grave through the blood of the everlasting covenant. That through faith in his name and the things concerning the kingdom we become "heirs according to the promise," and, if faithful till death, we would not only receive a "crown of life" at the resurrection, but would be made like Christ our Head and would be permitted to "reign with him over the nations," and would inherit the earth and delight ourselves in the abundance of peace. Blessed thought! Glorious hope! How it cheers us by the way. We believed that we would be unconscious in death, till the resurrection.

Brother Willey, I am sure, sleeps in Jesus, and when Jesus comes again, he will bring Brother Willey with him, just as God brought Jesus Christ from the dead.

"Sweetly be thy silent slumber
In the lonely grave so low
Thou can't no more join our number,
Thou can't not our sorrows know."

To his wife and loved ones I send condolence. God comfort them with "these words." What words. "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

One by one do those of "like precious faith" fall, but their sleep will be short. Let us fight the good fight of faith till death, or till Jesus comes.

Obituary.

Joseph Ogilwy died at his home in Arcata, California, July 28, 1906. He was born near London, England, on March 13, 1830, and came to America in 1850. He was married to Miss Eliza J. Morris on Christmas day, 1856, and a few years later settled in Marshall County, Indiana, where he lived for about twenty-five years. He came to California in 1887 and to Arcata the following year.

He leaves beside his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Young, a son, William H. Ogilwy and two grandsons, Fred and Charles Ogilwy, all of Arcata, also an adopted daughter, Mrs. Bessie Hill of Eureka, California. All were with him during his last sickness.

He had been in ill health for many years, but was always patient, and his last words a few hours before death came were a prayer that his family might all meet him in the kingdom of God. The end came peacefully.

He was a member of the Church of God and very well known to many of the faith in Marshall Co., Ind. He was a sincere Bible student, and a firm believer in the soon coming of Christ, and the restitution of all things spoken by the prophets, and was also much interested in the writings of Prof. C. A. L. Totten.

He requested that a few remarks be made at the grave, from 1 Thes. iv. 13 to 18 verses inclusive and as there is no minister of the faith here the Presbyterian minister conducted the service, and we laid him away to wait until the resurrection.

"From land and sea there comes the wail,
Tidings of death, alarms and fears;
Sorrow lingers o'er hill and vale,
And yet he's promised—no more tears."

MARY E. YOUNG.

Elizabeth A. Updike near Browntown, Va., departed this life Aug. 13, 1906, after six short hours of suffering from acute indigestion. All was done by the inmates of the home, then called a physician, all of his skill did not alleviate her suffering and the enemy death claimed her. She leaves an aged husband, J. Jackson Updike, five daughters, one son and two daughters-in-law, to mourn her unexpected death. She was well and active the day before, looked real well, any one would have thought she might be spared for years. She was 72 years, 11 months and 15 days old. Funeral was conducted at the house, then a large congregation followed her to the burying ground at Browntown. She has been a member of the Church of God for a long time. Her husband and five of the children are members of the same church. She was a loving wife, good mother, good neighbor. She was called Aunt Bettie by many not a bit related. I never knew mother to envy any one or ever be unpleasant in her family. She has always lived a good, quiet Christian life, ready to do her duty. I do believe she had no wish only to live a constant Christian life. Man judgeth outwardly, God judgeth the heart. Many of the ministers of our faith will remember her. Bro. W. H. and Samuel Wilson, Bro. Wagoner and Bro. Ramsay and wife, Bro. Graton, also Bro. and Sister Boyer, generally they all will remember that she was good and kind to every one at her home, and all that knew mother knew her to love her, and may her virtues be a worthy example for all. We trust it will be our happy lot to meet mother again some sweet day in that age to come, where the inhabitants will no longer say, I am sick, and where the tear dimmed eye will be no more, clothed in immortality. Then and not until then can we say, Oh, death where is thy sting; oh, grave where is thy victory? And may the God and our Savior Jesus Christ be the God and Savior of the bereaved father and children, strengthen and support them in this hour of extreme trial is my prayer and though we sing,

"We shall sleep but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn,
We shall meet to part no never,
On that resurrectio morn."

Then we shall meet mother again when this old mother earth shall be redeemed from the curse and all things made new and restored to its Edenic beauty. Oh, may that time quickly come.

M. F. COOK.

Mrs. Elizabeth Updike, wife of John J. Updike died on the 13th of August, of acute indigestion, at her home near Browntown, Va., in the 73rd year of her age. She was a good dutiful wife, and a kind and loving mother, and was loved by all who knew her. She was the mother of seven children, five of whom preceeded her. She leaves a kind and devoted husband, five daughters, and one son, four sisters, and two brothers, and a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her loss; but we are thankful to say that we sorrow not as those who have no hope. The deceased was my elder sister in the flesh, and was the third one in this community to obey the gospel some forty-five years ago. She lived a quiet and peaceable life. She possessed a meek and contrite spirit. She was ever ready to express her hope, and contend for her faith with meekness and fear. She was the first one to suggest the building of our little house of worship at this place known as the Church of God, of which she was a devoted and faithful member, always filling her place even up to the last day of her life. She attended the baptism of Sister Streets who lives in Cumberland, Maryland. This baptism took place at the old baptizing waters at Mr. Amon Updike's home. He is a good man and has a kind, good family, who are always glad to lend a helping hand to those who wish to obey the gospel, hope they may be rewarded when the Master comes. We came on to the house of worship, where services were to be at held four o'clock in the evening. Bro. Boyer spake much to the satisfaction of us all, and especially to the young sister confirming her in the steps she had taken. She had been willing to be buried with Christ in baptism for quite a long time, but did not have the opportunity. May she be kept by the power of truth until the coming of the Master. Then whether we be asleep or awake we will be clothed with immortality, eternal life. Brother Boyer, Sister Streets and myself came home with Brother and Sister Updike, and spent the evening quite pleasantly in Bible conversation and music. Sister Updike had been in excellent health for the last four months, but O how true it is in the midst of life death is near, with its ice cold hand to take away our friends. The funeral service was held at her home. Bro. Boyer spoke words of comfort to quite a large crowd of people, from the 15th chapter of 1st Corinthians, showing that by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead, for as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. Then how important it is for us all to get into the Christ, and live in him and fall asleep in him, for we read, Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. Paul said in this 15th chapter of first Corinthians 6th verse that some of his brethren had fallen asleep. Now we do not look upon death as a direct, instant route to heaven. No, we as the Apostle Paul did look upon death as a profound sleep, and our Lord said, I am the resurrection and the life, and as I live ye shall live also.

'Death to the saint is not the hour,
When Christ his Lord hath come,
In all the glory of his power,
To wait him to his home.

No, 'tis a dark and cruel foe,
Which has invaded earth;
And to distress, and fear and woe,
Intense hath given birth,

But death, and he who hath its power,
Will be at last destroyed,
And saints no more, O joyful hours,
Will by them be annoyed."

My sister was my life long friend, my sister in the flesh, my sister in the church, and more than a mother to me, and I with her children can say,

Our mother dear has gone to sleep,
And left us all to weep,
Until the resurrection day,
When God will wipe all tears away.
Her faithful hands no more can toil,
Her lovely voice no more be heard.

No more we see her pleasant smiles,
How can we all be reconciled?
Her works of labor and of love
Are treasured in the Master's mind.

From early youth to ripe old age,
Her life presents a clean, white page;
Then let us sorrow not for her,
As those who have no hope in God.

Cheer up, dear children, dry your tears,
Although we feel the chastening rod,
Good bye, dear mother, till we meet,
To walk anew the golden streets,
And hear the alleluias ring,
And shout hosanna to our King.

SARAH F. MORGAN.

Mary Elizabeth Booth was born at Salt Lake, Iowa, July 13, 1882, and died in Duluth, Minn., Aug. 22, 1906. The deceased was a daughter of Brother and Sister W. W. Booth and passed most of her life with her parents in Lake City. She united with the Church in January of '97. Since that time her occupation has taken her from home and church most of the time. She leaves to mourn her loss her parents, three brothers, three sisters, many near relatives and a host of friends.

The writer was called upon to speak the words of comfort and hope contained in the promises of God and the resurrection of Jesus Christ. We expressed the thought that our loving Father had not taken from their midst their loved one, but rather the arch enemy of mankind had brought about this evil, that she had not left them, but had simply fallen asleep to be awakened by the Master's voice, when "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

MARRIED.

On Sunday, July 29, 1906 at high noon occurred a pretty wedding, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Chappell, at Tipton, Ind. The contracting parties being Miss Lela Chappell and Mr. Frank Chambers, C. M. Bragg of the Baptist church at Windfall officiated.

A few friends and relatives were present, and after the ceremony a sumptuous dinner was served. Many elegant presents were received.

The bride has been a member of the Church of God for some time. Their many friends wish them a prosperous and happy life.

The Bible.

No fragment of an army ever survived so many battles; no citadel ever withstood so many sieges; no rock was ever battered by so many hurricanes and so swept by storms; and yet it stands. It has seen the rise and downfall of Daniel's four empires. Assyria bequeaths a few mutilated figures to the riches of our national museum. Media and Persia, like Babylon which they conquered, have been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Greece faintly survives in its historic fame; and iron Rome of the Cæsars has long since ceased to boast. And yet the book that foretells all this still survives. While nations, kings, philosophers, systems, institutions, have died away, the Bible engages now men's deepest thoughts, is examined by the keenest intellects, stands revered before the highest tribunals, is more read and sifted and debated, more devoutly loved and more vehemently assailed, more defended and more denied, more industriously translated and freely given to the world, more honored and more abused, than any other book the world ever saw. It survives all changes, itself unchanged; it moves all minds, yet is moved none; it sees all things decay, itself incorruptible; it sees myriads of other books ingulphed in the stream of time, yet is borne along till the mystic angel shall plant his foot upon the sea and swear by him that liveth forever and ever that time shall be no longer.—H. L. Lane.

The Flight of Time.

In reference to the flight of time, Dr. Spring once closed a discourse in the following graphic language:

"I shall never address this audience again. I shall never again meet them but at the bar of God. That interview seems far distant. But it will be as soon as time, with his eagle wings, shall have finished the little remnant of his short career.

"'After death the judgment.' We die; but intervening ages pass rapidly over those who sleep in the dust. There is no plate there on which to count the hours of time. No longer is it told by days, or months, or years; for the planets which mark these periods are hidden from their sight. Its flight is no longer noticed by the event perceived by the senses, for the ear is deaf and the eye is closed. The busy world of life, which wakes at each morning and ceases every night, goes on above them, but to them all is silent and unseen. The greetings of joy and the voice of grief, the revolution of empires and the lapse of ages, send no sound within the narrow cell. Generation after generation are brought and laid by their side; the inscription upon their monumental marble tells the centuries that have passed away; but to the sleeping dead, the long interval is unobserved. Like a dream of the night, with the quickness of thought, the mind ranges time and space almost without limit. There is but a moment between the hour when the eye is closed in the grave and when it wakes to the judgment."

Wonderful, solemn, all-changing time, that which creates and destroys, ripens and devours, blights and embellishes! Time is a flowing river, wide as a sea; from it arises bubbles that burst, huge misty spectres that dissolve, structures that shape themselves upon the dark waters, and grow as they float. The eras are as garments clothing the eternal thoughts as they develop themselves, and grow up in the world; in a succession of such enlarging vestures each growing thought is apparelled. And the whole time of the earth is as an ocean, a fathomless but limited portion of the great deep of eternity.

Thanking God for Thorns.

My God, I have never thanked thee for my thorn. I have thanked thee a thousand times for my roses, but not once for my thorn. I have been looking forward to a world where I shall get compensation for my cross, but I have never thought of my cross as itself a present glory. Thou divine Love, whose human path has been perfected through sufferings, teach me the glory of my cross, teach me the value of my thorn. Show me that I have climbed to thee the path of pain. Show me that my tears have made my rainbow. Reveal to me that my strength was the product of that hour when I wrestled until the breaking of the day. Then shall I know that my thorn was blessed by thee, then shall I know that my cross was a gift from thee, and I shall raise a monument to the hour of my sorrow, and the words which I shall write upon it will be these: "It was good for me to have been afflicted."—Geo. Matheson.

Abideth Forever.

When the great traveller, Baron Humbolt, was journeying in South America, there came a sudden stillness in the air, which seemed like a hush over all nature. But that was followed by a fearful convulsion of the earth, which made all hearts quake. And Humbolt tells us that the earthquake within his soul was as great as that in the world without. All his old ideas of the stability of the earth were destroyed in a moment. Should he fly to the hills for help? The mountains were reeling like drunken men. The houses were no refuge, for they were crumbling and falling. The trees were overthrown; and then his thoughts turned to the sea, but lo! it had fled. Ships which just before were floating securely on its surface, were now left rocking on the sands. Being thus at his wit's end, he tells us he "looked up, and observed that the heavens alone were calm and unshaken."

There are times in one's life when all earthly help seems to fail us. Beloved friends, though so near and willing, cannot take away pain and sickness, which seems to overwhelm us. Often, too, the very friends we leaned upon are taken away, and all human help is absent. Whatever the trouble, we may always look up and find help that never changes. Your kind and loving Savior can more than make up for all your present losses and troubles. If you can see him looking down with love upon you, even pain and death will lose their terrors.

A momentary shock of an earthquake can make the strongest tremble; but in that day when "the earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard and shall be removed," how will those rejoice who can look to heaven and exclaim, "Hosanna to him that cometh."

WE wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

The Religion of the Age.

The age also boasts of its religion as part of its progress. With many, religion is mere philosophic speculation upon truth connected with man's soul. With others, it consists in admiration for the Bible, as a book of literary excellences. With others, it is the adoption of a creed, or connection with a church. With others, it consists in bustle and outward zeal. In all, it lacks life, that deep, intense, glowing life, which so marked it in earlier time. Its root is not in the conscience, but in some outer-region of the soul, which does not bring us into close and living contact with Jehovah himself. It is a thing of the imagination, or the intellect, or even of the affections, but not of the conscience. There can be no religion which has not its seat there. The hindrance to living religion is the want of a "purged conscience;" and till the conscience has been purged from dead works, there can be no real religion, no true service of God. How little is there of conscience in the religion of the day? Hence, the lack of simplicity, of freshness, of serenity, which we should expect. Hence, its hollowness, and noisy shallowness.

The religion of the day is (as we have seen) an easy-minded religion, without conflict and wrestling, without self-denial and sacrifice; a religion which knows nothing of the pangs of the new birth as its commencement, of the desperate struggle with the flesh and with the devil, day by day, make us long for resurrection-deliverance, for the binding of the adversary, and for the Lord's arrival. It is a second-rate religion; a religion in which there is no largeness, no grandeur, no potency, no noble-mindedness, no elevation, no self-devotedness, no all-constraining love. It is a hollow religion, with a fair exterior, but an aching heart, a heart unsatisfied, a soul not at rest, a conscience not at peace with God; a religion, marked, it may be, by activity and excitement, but betraying all the while the consciousness of a wound hidden and unhealed within, and, hence, unable to animate to lofty doings, or supply the strength needed for such doings. It is a feeble religion, lacking the sinews and bones of hardier times; very different from the indomitable, much-enduring, storm-braving religion, not merely of apostolic days, but even of the reformation. It is an uncertain religion, that is to say, it is not rooted on certainty; it is not the out-flowing of a soul assured of pardon, and rejoicing in the filial relationship between itself and God. Hence, there is no liberty of service, for the question of personal acceptance is still an unsettled thing; there is a working for pardon, but not from pardon. All is thus bondage, heaviness, irksomeness. There is a speaking for God, but it is with a faltering tongue; there is a laboring for God, but it is with fettered hands; there is a moving in the way of his commandments, but it is with a heavy drag upon our limbs. Hence, the inefficient, uninfluential character of our religion. It does not tell on others, for it has not yet fully told upon ourselves. It falls short of its mark, for the arm that drew the bow is paralyzed.—H. Bonar.

Light and Darkness.

A word of cheer for the saint. Ye are sons of light. Recall now how much light means. It means all that is most bright and clean and direct and open and unselfish and spotless and lovely and healthful and true and divine. How exceedingly great, then, your wealth! Oh, live worthily of your rich estate. Walk in the light, even as he is in the light, and is himself the light. Let every sunrise summon you, not only to the true light, but also to a closer, brighter walk with him. The nearer him, the more luminous. May the life of each one of us be in very truth a helianthus, evermore keeping our petals turned toward the Sun of Righteousness! Yea, O Lord, evermore lift thou upon us the light of thy countenance, evermore cause thy face to shine upon us. So shall we, with all thy ransomed ones of every land and age, be made meet to enter into the exceeding rich patrimony, even the inheritance of the saints in light. Ay, in that day of noontide splendor, when the Lord shall have bound up the breach of his people and healed the wound of their stroke, the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the sun shall be seven-fold, as the light of seven days. Nay, more; in that day of eternal noontide, the sun shall no more be thy light neither for thy brightness shall the moon give light to thee; for the Lord shall be to thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory.

Jefferson's Ten Rules.

Never put off until to-morrow what you can do to-day.

Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.

Never spend your money before you have earned it.

Never buy what you don't want because it is cheap.

Pride costs more than hunger, thirst and cold.

We seldom repent of having eaten too little.

Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.

How much pain the evils have cost us that never happened.

Take things always by the smooth handle.

When angry, count ten before you speak; if angry count a hundred.

Be Practical.

No nobler purpose can be conceived than that which helps to cultivate the mind for the practical side of life. It fits one for every duty, and ennobles every pursuit. Three-fourths of the people of this country live merely by supplying each other's material wants, and most of us have to spend our lives dealing with commonplace things. It is a good thing at the very outset for youth to cultivate widespread and vital interest in things that grow and things that sell for solid cash. It educates the practical faculties.—Success,

Indiana Conference.

The Indiana Annual Conference of the Churches of God will be held at Argos, Indiana, beginning at 10:30, A. M. Friday, Sept. 7, and continue over the Sunday following.

Brothers and sisters, this Meeting is the time when the most important business of the year is to be transacted, and it is hoped all will make an effort to be there at the very first session, ready to take part, and do properly what is to be done.

Argos is easy to reach, being on the L. E. & W., and Nickel Plate Railways, and the friends there are amply able to care for all who will attend. So lay off the cares of this world for a few days, and let us come to Argos and listen to the sermons, enjoy the social meetings, transact the business of the Lord's cause as a duty and as a privilege—glad that he accounts us worthy to engage in his work.

Brother and Sister Woodward of Michigan have promised to be with us, which insures us the best of preaching services. Other speakers from the state are being urged to attend, and the prospect is we shall have a good, old-fashioned meeting, full of interest and harmony, with oneness of purpose. Make up your mind to come, and organize yourself into a committee to urge others to be there.

BY ORDER OF COMMITTEE.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

Announcement.

Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference will convene in Morrill, Brown County, Kansas, Sept. 22, at 8 o'clock P. M., holding over the 30th Sept. inclusive. Morrill is situated on the Grand Island R. R. 54 miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. Preaching brethren: W. L. Crowe and S. C. Oliver, and others if they can be secured. Arrangements will be made to take care of visiting brethren before meeting commences.

PROGRAMME.

First subject, The purpose of God in creation. Perhaps several discourses on the same subject. Next, Why I believe the Bible. Again, Divine government vs. civil government. Again, Conversion. Again, Is the church not in the kingdom. Again, The kingdom, What is it. Again, The object of Christ's second coming. Again, What must I do to be saved? Next the congregation will be given the privilege to name subjects. Saturday morning the Conference board will settle the finance affair and officers will be elected for the coming year and Evangelist hired. Now brethren, let us make the meeting a success. How? By coming and helping, your presence will be profitable, yourself will be rewarded. It always has and always will cost something to be a Christian.

We have arranged the meeting for the most leisure time among the farmers. A throng time cannot be excused. We are exhorted to not forget the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more as we see the day approaching.

By order of the Conference board. Trains due at Morrill from the east, 12:10 M. evening train; 10:10 P. M. From the west, morning 4:15 A. M., afternoon 2:23 P. M.

J. B. BITNER,
EUGENE HOWARD,
E. M. SAYLOR.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Nebraska will convene at St. Paul Oct. 25-29 inclusive. Meetings will be held in the Court House Hall. Invitation to participate is extended to all. A reception committee will be appointed to meet visitors and find accommodations.

FANNIE D. WELSH, Sec'y.

To the Brethren of the Kansas and Missouri Conference:

I have moved to the state of Oregon, so all letters in the interest of the conference work will be sent to J. P. Bitner, Severance, Kansas.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

T. J. DANIEL.

"Perfection in the Hebrew means strained honey—where all the comb, young bees, and bee bread have been taken out and there is nothing left but the pure love of God. In Christian perfection, it means that all that is carnal has been abstracted and there is nothing left but the pure love of God."—Way of Life.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Worship;" "No Immortality Christ;" "Hope Begotten by urrection of Christ;" "God's Solicitude for Mankind;" and Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 1 post free; or an assortment of whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland,

God's Way.

God lets us go our way alone,
Till we are homesick and distressed
And humbly, then, come back to own
His way is best.

He lets us thirst by Horeb rock,
And hunger in the wilderness,
Yet, at our sorest, faintest knock,
He waits to bless.

He lets us feast in far off lands,
And feed on husks, and feel the smart,
Till we come home with empty hands,
And swelling heart.

But then for us the robe and ring,
The Father's welcome and the feast,
While over us the angels sing,
Though last, not least.

An Incentive to Watchfulness.

Teacher. If I were asked what incentive a believer has for watchfulness? I would reply his personal interest. There is no incentive which is calculated to move a person to action in anything quicker than the personal interest which he has in that which attracts his attention. Such an one will be watchful that he may guard and protect his interest.

The true Christian has no interest which is so valuable to him, as the inheritance which he expects to receive when our Lord shall come. Hence his eyes are ever watchful for every indication that that happy event is near at hand.

Q. What advice did our Redeemer leave us, with regard to being watchful?

A. "Watch therefore, for ye know not at what hour your Lord doth come." Matt. xxiv. 42.

Q. What is the specific reason given as to why a constant attitude of watchfulness should be maintained?

A. It is the statement, "Ye know not at what hour your Lord doth come."

Q. Not having exact information as to just the time when the Lord will come, what does it necessitate?

A. It necessitates a constant watchfulness as to personal conduct in life.

Q. Why?

A. Lest that event should happen at a time, when our walk in life may be contrary to the standard to ensure transformation into the personal likeness of our Savior.

Q. Then I should understand from that reason, that a fixed standard of faith and character are requisite?

A. Yes. That change cannot happen unless we are personally prepared for that longed for event.

Q. Procrastination, then, would be somewhat unsafe, would it not?

A. Yes. Not knowing the time, procrastination would be unwise.

Q. To solve the problem of daily life in relation to eternity is important then?

A. Yes, very. A correct personal walk in life cannot safely be postponed to some future time, but it must be an ever present experience hour by hour. The gospel is glad tidings or good news to only those who are zealously careful about their Christian experience.

Q. What other Scripture strongly enforces the lesson of watchfulness?

A. This lesson is also strongly enforced in the teaching of the parable of the ten virgins.

Q. Who do these virgins represent?

A. These ten virgins represent the whole company of those who are looking for the second coming of Jesus.

Q. How many of this company had been watchful enough to be prepared for the Lord's coming?

A. When such announcement is made, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh," one half of those who were looking for his coming were found to be unprepared.

Q. What caused them to be unprepared?

A. They may perhaps have thought that the time for his coming had not arrived yet, on account of having made an erroneous guess about the prophetic dates, as so many in the past have already done.

Q. They had no oil. What does that signify?

A. Lack of oil, signifies that they were not ready to go out and meet him.

Q. What was lacking in the preparation?

A. First this lack of preparation may have been two-fold. Light was needed, and the lamps would not give out light without oil. The lamps may symbolize an empty profession.

Q. Why did they need light?

A. Because it was the hour of midnight. "Gross darkness covered the people." They need the light symbolized by the oil. Lamps (empty profession) alone will not give light.

Q. How many of these virgins had oil enough (gospel light) to guide them through the midnight darkness, until the Day Star should appear?

A. Half of these people who were looking for the second coming of Jesus, did not have the requisite light necessary to pursue their journey through the darkness to the point where they should meet the coming Bridegroom. Many people profess belief in the second coming of Jesus, (like half of the virgins) who walk in darkness.

Q. Can you give a sample?

A. Yes. Take for example the great body of Second Adventists.

Q. What light do they need?

A. They lack light concerning the essential features which go to make up the gospel of the kingdom.

Q. What light do they need?

A. They need light as to the Scripture teaching concerning the age to come, the pre-millennial reign of Christ upon the throne of his father David over restored Israel.

Q. Not having this light, you consider that they are walking in darkness?

A. Yes. Such people are in gross darkness as relate to the purpose of the second coming of Jesus. They lack light as to its real object, and the work that Jesus will accomplish when he comes. They perceive not the good news as revealed in the gospel of the kingdom. They have no gospel oil to put in their lamps, and hence they lack the gospel light so necessary to guide them through mid-night darkness unto the rising of the Bright and Morning Star. Nothing but gospel oil will give that light.

Q. Then you regard an enlightened understanding as the essential light necessary to enable one to journey through the present midnight darkness until the glorious dawn of the Day Star?

A. Why, yes. Eph. iv. 18, gives the information as to who it is who lacks light enough to give the life of God.

Q. Please quote it?

A. "Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them."

Q. Ignorance of what?

A. If we can definitely ascertain from Holy Scripture the essential knowledge requisite to enlighten the understanding sufficient to give the life of God, then an ignorance of that knowledge of which we should know, will alienate from "the life of God."

Q. How can this life be secured?

A. "The life of God" can only be secured through a proper alliance with Christ. A person who is without Christ can have no claim upon God as regards the life to come. This must be admitted by all right thinking people.

Q. Well, what teaching will alienate from the life of God?

A. Let me direct your special attention to a passage of Scripture which enumerates doctrines, which if not believed, will alienate such a disbeliever from Christ, and as far as the future is concerned, such an one is in the sad and lamentable condition of being without hope. See Eph. ii. 11, 12: "Wherefore remember that ye being in times past Gentiles in the flesh, * * * that at that time ye were without Christ, (on account of) being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise having no hope, and without God in the world"

Q. Don't all believers in the second coming of the Christ have the light concerning the restoration again of the commonwealth of Israel?

A. I have above called attention to the fact that all the ten virgins were believers in the second coming of Christ, but half of them lacked the necessary light to guide them through their journey to meet the coming Bridegroom, and as I have before stated, that the sect of Second Adventists while they look for the second coming of Christ, yet they are in midnight darkness concerning the teaching of God's Word as it relates to the "commonwealth of Israel;" they affirm that as a commonwealth, Israel will never again lift up her head as a nation; but as a nation they are now disorganized, and they will always remain a hopeless ruin, as far as their future national return to the covenant land, and their existence as an organized nation.

Q. Well, how are they about the covenants of promise?

A. Well, as far as the "covenants of promise" are concerned, where they relate to the covenants made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and their Seed, the Christ, and as regards the everlasting possession of the land, they completely render such covenant of the land null and void, by affirming its destruction by fire before they can ever possess one foot of it. To teach the destruction by fire of the covenant land before they have had an opportunity to enter upon the promised possession, is to render the promise of no effect.

Q. What interest can any people have in a commonwealth they would condemn to a hopeless ruin? Or of the covenants of promise either, when they affirm contrary teaching, which would render them null and void?

A. They can have none. Darkness cannot lead any one through darkness.

Q. Are the Scriptures clear in their statements about the future restoration of the commonwealth of Israel?

A. They are very clear. The declarations of Holy Scripture are very explicit in regard to the future of the commonwealth of Israel, with regard to their future national existence. Listen: "Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, (nations) whither they be gone, and I will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land; and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one King (not two) shall be King to them all; and they shall be no more two nations; neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." Ezek. xxxvii. 21, 22.

Q. Did not God suspend this commonwealth?

A. Yes. The "commonwealth of Israel" was suspended but not forever, for Ezekiel (xxi. 25-27) says: "It shall be no more, until he come, whose right it is; and I will give it to him." Now whenever we truly preach "the cross of Christ," we emphatically preach the revival of that commonwealth, and point out him also whose right it is to reign by the declaration, "This is Jesus the King of the Jews." Matt. xxvii. 37.

Q. Does it require much searching and reasoning to find out the truth concerning the Bible teaching with regard to the restoration again of the kingdom to Israel?

A. It requires no depths of reasoning to know that Jesus could never reign as "King of the Jews," should the Jews forever remain a dispersed people, and disorganized as a commonwealth. Now, these Adventist people boldly affirm that God will not do as Ezekiel says: "I will bring them into their own land: and I will make them one nation in the land." Hence, they (the Adventists) must of necessity be classed as "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel," seeing they declare against the future existence of the said commonwealth, and also do not believe in the "preaching of the cross," because they boldly affirm that Jesus will never reign over restored Israel as "King of the Jews," no matter how the decree, and also in the declaration to Mary: "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Lu i. 32, 33.

Q. In our watching should we not watch the national movements of Israel?

A. Yes.

Q. What for?

A. Because Israel is the great sign nation of the world.

Q. Do you regard watchfulness along this line needful?

A. I do. These things the class should pay close attention to, and "watch," because if we do not properly perceive them they may disqualify us from being ready to meet the coming Bridegroom, equally with an inconsistent walk in life. They both go hand in hand together. The virgins found that they must have light, to guide them through the midnight darkness. An empty profession of religion will not be sufficient.

Q. Watchfulness along practical lines is also needful, is it not?

A. Yes. "Not every one who saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." The phrase "doeth the will," covers both to believe what he teaches, and do what he says. "Many (religious teachers) will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied (taught) in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name have done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you."

Q. Will the virgins who lacked oil, ever gain admission also into the kingdom?

A. Yes. We read: "Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, I know you not." They were professed followers of Jesus, and they were looking for his coming again, but there was something wrong, and the solemn words will sting them to the heart, "I know you not." Their trouble was that they lacked the necessary oil to give light.

Q. Should not the above be a lesson of warning to us?

A. It should. Now, while we may profess to be virgins let us be warned by the lesson, and provide the requisite oil, before the cry rings out upon the air, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." Now is the time, then it will be too late.

Be warned, do not procrastinate; for there is no time to spare, because that auspicious event may happen at any moment. "Watch therefore, for ye know not at what hour your Lord doth come."

Q. Do the signs indicate a great crisis at hand?

A. They do. A tremendous crisis is impending, people in general perceive it, politicians, statesmen, financiers, and men of the world, who know not the prophetic Word, say things are all heading up for that tremendous change, and what it is they know not, but they say a crisis of some kind is rapidly approaching.

Teacher. In conclusion, I would say: Beloved, we are not in darkness, we know what is coming. We know that the ominous storm cloud will shortly burst, and shake terribly both heaven and earth. And after the storm will come the "King of Jews," the revival of the commonwealth of Israel, the new age, and the new life, and the blessing of the nations in Abraham and his seed.

The great concern of all virgins should be, how about my "oil"? Have I a sufficient supply for my lamp? We all received a sufficient warning that it will be everlastingly too late to lay in a supply after the word comes, "Go ye out to meet him." The supply must be laid in now or never. A plea of religious profession will count for nothing. Remember the words, "I know you not." I entreat you as one who seeks only your own best interest, to consider well, and meditate seriously over the statements made in Eph. ii. 11, 12, they mean much, and they harmonize beautifully with the general teaching of both the Old and New Testaments.

The type setting of Pine Woods Bible Class is nearly completed. If you want to secure a book, send in your name. Only one thousand are being printed, when they are all sold no more can be had. Those whose names are on my book will be served first.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

The Great Salvation. No 3.

There is much that can be said under the above subject. In this article I shall discuss faith. In Mark xi. 22, we have this language, "Have faith in God." The marginal rendering makes it a little plainer and reads thus: "Have the faith of God." To have faith in God is to believe that he is the Creator of all things. To have the faith of God implies that this faith is what God possesses, and that we are required to possess the same.

Now since there is but one true God and this faith is a property of his how can we consistently say there is more than one faith. This faith is concerning his only begotten Son, and is for the purpose of making many adopted sons.

With these thoughts before us let us see what his Word says about this faith. Paul says Rom. x. 8, The Word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth and in thy heart; that is, the Word of faith, which we preach, that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. This Scripture tells us that it is the Word of faith we preached and it includes the Lord Jesus and his resurrection. If we believe in the Lord Jesus we shall be saved. This does not mean that we shall merely believe that there was such a person, but we must believe that he is the Lord Jesus Christ.

In gleaning from God's Word we learn that his purpose was to give Adam dominion, that is the power to rule every living creature. In order to do this he was put on trial but failed. After which God promised this power to the seed of the woman. In tracing this seed through the Scriptures we find him to be the Son of the Highest, whose name was called Jesus, and he was promised the throne of his father David and the power to rule over the house of Jacob for ever. This is the "Word of faith" which Paul says he preached. And the faith that gives us salvation. This is the seed that will (not is now) bless all nations. The question naturally comes to us. How does this faith come? We will let Paul settle the question. Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. That is, this faith that saves comes by hearing the Word of God. Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, and he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved but he that believeth that not shall be condemned. To believe this "Word of faith," the gospel of the kingdom of God, will place us in a justified position before God.

May we enquire of the same apostle what this faith is and what it fully includes? In Heb. xi. 1, we read, "Now faith is the substance (ground or confidence) of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." In this text we see that faith is to be hoped for. The evidences are about things not seen. By this faith the elders (or ancients) obtained a good report. Through faith we learn that the worlds (ages) were framed (or adjusted) by the Word of God. The worlds in this text can have no reference to this earth and the numerous planets, but to the age spoken of in which Christ and his saints will rule and restore all things. It is true that all who believe in God believe that he is the Creator of all things visible and invisible. This has nothing to do with the faith of God. We cannot hope for things that already exist or that we have in possession. Paul in Eph. says, "That in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel, the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 12, 1906. NUMBER 34.

Jesus promised his disciples the right to rule in the times of the regeneration when each should sit on thrones ruling over the twelve tribes of Israel. Peter in Acts iii. 21, calls it the times of the restitution of all things. And he send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you: whom the heavens must receive (or retain) until the times of the restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. The ages to come and the times of the restitution and the times of regeneration are used interchangeably and refer to the same period of time. Thus it is seen that in the future Jesus and his saints will have something to do. The nations are to be ruled and judged. When the Son of Man shall come with all his holy saints with him then shall he be seated on the throne of his glory, then shall be gathered before him all nations and he shall separate them (Judge them) one from another as a shepherd divideth his sheep from his goats. This will not be done in a day. It means that the nations must be adjusted to God's plan and be blessed through his ruling power. Read carefully the 72nd Psalm, also Isaiah ii. Micah iv.

The above Scriptures speak very pointedly of what will be accomplished in the future. These are the things in which Abraham rejoiced. The ancient worthies all looked for something more substantial than the things surrounding them. By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts. By faith Moses when he was come to years refused to be called the son of Pharoah's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward. These were all striving for the excellency that God has promised through Christ who is promised the first dominion which embraces the ruling of this earth in the age to come.

May we be one of Christ's associate rulers, is my prayer.

Editor Restitution:

In my report of Aug. 22, I stated that the Church of God at Guthrie Grove, S. C., would meet September 1st, to consider plans for enlarging the Church house. The Church met on the day appointed and elected Bros. W. W. Moore; A. N. Durham and A. F. Smith, as a building committee, and instructed them to enlarge the house, ceil it and paint it both on the inside and outside. The members responded very liberally with their money and we think the committee will have money enough to build a nice house.

Brother W. W. Moore was elected clerk of the church and Brother A. F. Smith a deacon to assist the deacons already elected. After the meeting adjourned Brother P. A. Guthrie who has been studying the Word of God for over ten years requested Elder E. M. Anderson to baptize him, which was done that same afternoon. The church met that night and the writer spoke on the words, "Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." Mark ix. 44. The church met the next day, Sunday, Sept. 2, and Elder E. M. Anderson preached on the words "Behold your King." John xix. 14. After the sermon Brother A. H. Elrod and Brother R. M. Williamson, two men who had investigated the truth, requested baptism which was administered that afternoon. Twenty-four persons have been added to the church at this place by baptism this summer. We feel greatly encouraged and hope we may all prove faithful unto the end of our pilgrimage.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 12, 1906.

WE wish all who have not renewed their subscriptions for 1906 would do so at once. We just simply need the money right now.

THE Indiana Conference at Argos will be fully reported by the Secretary, but we want to say that we never attended a meeting where the feeling was better or more cordial, and the determination to press on more manifest. The business was all done in an orderly manner, and the programme was carried out to the satisfaction of all. Many regrets were expressed that sickness prevented Brother and Sister Woodward being at the meeting, but we hope to have them come some other time.

ALL will see by the reports of the Ohio, Illinois and Iowa Conferences that most successful meetings were held by them. An increased attendance, increasing interest in all departments of the work. This is encouraging, and leads us to hope for an awakening in other parts. With activity in the line of Bible Schools—Bible Study—we will be led to take a lively interest in other lines of the Lord's work. Let all push forward with all their vigor, because the time to work is short. Don't be engrossed by the spirit of the times that detracts from the prize. Be not deceived. Stick to the simple gospel plan. Don't waste time "investigating" to a hair-splitting degree those non-essential questions that only tend to rack and disrupt. God's "plan of salvation" contains some plain truths that must be believed, and obedience to the principles taught willingly given, and then lived out. Be careful, brethren. The truths of the gospel do not cease to be truths. No amount of "investigation" can make truth into error. Investigation on a subject may cause a man to change his opinion, but truth stays truth all the time. So in your study be warned in time. Do not set up your opinions and call them truths. Investigate to establish truth—so that you can prove it is truth—but never with the view of getting an opinion that will undermine truth.

Selected.

Influence of Man Over Man.

The world is filled with the countless and interlacing filaments of influence that spreads from each individual over the whole surface and framework of society. The infant that lies wailing and helpless in the arms of its mother, is already yielding an influence through the whole household, by his fretfulness, disturbing, or by its serene smiles, gladdening that entire home; and as with added years his faculties are expanded, and the sphere of his activity widens itself, his influence increases; and every man whom he meets, much more whom he moulds and governs, becomes the more happy or the more wretched, the better or the worse, according to the character of his spirit and example. Nor can he strip from himself this influence. If he flee away from the society of his fellows to dwell alone in the wilderness, he leaves behind him the example of neglected duty, and the memory of disregarded love, to curse the family he has abandoned. Even in the pathless desert he finds his own feet caught in the thorns and entangled web of influence that bound him to society, and his cords remain wherever he was once known, sending home to the hearts that twined around him sorrow and pain. Nor can the possessor expect it to go down into the grave with him. The sepulchre may have closed in silence over him, and his name may have perished from among men, yet his influence, nameless as it is, and untraceable by the human eye, is flonting over the society. As in the external and visible world, the fall of a pebble agitates, not perceptibly indeed, yet really, the whole mass of the, thus in the world of morals every act of every spirit is telling upon the whole system of moral beings to which God has bound him. No man leaves the world in all things such as he found it. The habits which he was instrumental in forming, may go on from century to century an heir loom for good or evil, doing their work of misery or happiness, blasting or blessing the country that has now lost all his memory. In the case of some, this influence is not sensible. Every age beholds and owns their power. Such men have lived. The church yet feels throughout all lands the influence of the thoughts that passed, perhaps, in the solitude of midnight through the bosom of Paul, as he sat in the shadows of his prison, an old and unbefriended man—thoughts which, lifting his manacled hands, he spread in his epistles before the eyes of men, there to remain forever. They feel the effect of the pious meditations of David while roaming on the hillside, an humble shepherd lad: of the family piety of Abraham, and of religious nurture that trained up the infancy of Moses. Every nation is affected at this moment by the moral power that emanated from the despised Noah, as that preacher of righteousness sat among his family, perhaps dejected and faint with unsuccessful toil, teaching them to call upon God, when all the families of the earth besides had forgotten him. And if the mind, taking its flight from the narrow precincts of these walls, were to wander abroad along peopled highways, and the farthest hamlets of our own land, and passing the seas, to traverse distant realms and barbarous coasts, every man whom its travels met may, every being of human mould that has trodden this earth in earlier ages, or that is now to be found among its moving myriads, has felt, or is feeling, the influence of the thoughts of a solitary woman, who, centuries since, stood debating the claims of conscience and sin amid the verdant glories of the yet unforfeited paradise.

Home Happiness.

Probably nineteen-twentieths of the happiness you will ever have you will get at home. The independence that comes to a man when his work is over, and he feels that he has run out of the storm into the quiet harbor of home, where he can rest in peace with his family is something real. It does not make much difference whether you own your house or have one little room in that house, you can make that little room a true home to you. You can people it with such moods, you can turn to it with such sweet fancies, that it will be fairly luminous with their presence and will be to you the very perfection of a home. Against this home none of you should ever transgress. You should always treat each other with courtesy.

Courtesy is of greater value and a more royal grace than some people seem to think. If you will but be courteous to each other you will soon learn to love each other more wisely, profoundly, not to say lastingly, than you ever did before.

Triumph.

"Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept."

The irrefutable fact stands forth in all its glorious majesty and infinite sweep of meaning.

The gospel records must be torn to tatters, and scattered with the rent sybilline leaves, never more to be regathered. The whole colossal fabric of Christianity must have been built upon an abyss. The head and founder of the church must have been created by the church. A man must have been the father of his own ancestors, before this fact can be successfully denied.

Christ has risen from the dead. His own words have been justified. Christ is risen from the dead, and God has given the seal and sign manual to the Messianic mission. He has declared him to be the Son of God, with power. Christ has risen from the dead, and an unsetting sun—the new and unfailing center of attraction—has burst in glory from the darkness of the tomb.

Christ is risen, and we, too, shall rise. Every charnel house is robbed of its terrors. The sting has been plucked from death, and the grave been robbed of its victory. The darkness has forever passed. It is morning!—Bishop Pallows.

"Honor thy father and thy mother' is an unqualified command; there are no ifs, no whens, no exceptions. So when a child fails to obey this injunction, even though his parents may be old-fashioned, or unreasonable, or weak, or peevish—yes, or sinful—how can such a one expect to receive the reward of the faithful?"

We shall never be just right till God takes us, breaks us, and makes us what he wants us to be. For this purpose, we must come to the end of self and give God a fair chance.

The Bright Side.

Look on the bright side. The times may be hard, but it will make them no easier to wear a gloomy and sad countenance. It is the sunshine and not the cloud that gives beauty to the flower. There is always before or around us that which should cheer and fill the heart with warmth and gladness. The sky is blue tho' there it is black once. You have troubles, it may be. So have others. None are free from them; and perhaps it is as well that none should be. They give sinew and tone to life; fortitude and courage to man. That would be a dull sea, and the sailor would never acquire skill, where there is nothing to disturb its surface. It is the duty of every one to extract all the happiness and enjoyment he can within and without himself; and above all he should look on the bright side. What though things do look a little dark? The tide will turn, and the night will end in a broad day. In the long run the great balance rights itself. What appears ill becomes well—that which appears wrong, right. Men are not made to hang down their heads or lips, and those who do, only show that they are departing from the path of true common sense and right. There is more virtue in one sunbeam than in a whole hemisphere of clouds and gloom. Therefore, we repent, look on the bright side. Cultivate all that is warm and genial—not the cold and repulsive, the dark and morose.

The First Evils.

Beware of the first evils, for as sure as you are living the first step taken will make the second seem to become necessary. The first drop will be followed by a bigger second, and the second, at a shorter interval, by a more copious third, until the drops become a shower, and the shower becomes a deluge. The course of evil is ever wider and deeper and more tumultuous. The little sins get in at the window and open the front door for the big house-breakers. One smooths the path for the other. All sin has an awful power of perpetuating and increasing itself. As the prophet says in his awful vision of the doleful creatures that make their sport in a desolate city, "none of them shall want her mate. The wild beasts of the desert shall meet with the wild beasts of the islands." Every sin tells upon character, and makes the repetition of itself more and more easy. "None is barren among them." And all sin is linked together in a slimy tangle, like a field of seaweed, so that the man once caught in its oozy fingers is sure to drown.—Maclaren.

Faith's Best.

It is sometimes taught that if one had faith enough he would have power to bring to himself at once whatever seems good for anyone to have. But this is too narrow a view for the true Christian. The ability to do without things, at least until God is ready to bestow them—worldly success, friends, high culture, easy conquests of sin—is a faith-product also. Faith rests not only on God's power, but on his wisdom and goodness as well. True faith is able to meet hardships and denials, distress, loss, if need be; it sees the real bests in whatever God gives. It is in this way that faith does bring best things. It brings not what self sees as good, but what God sees as such.

What the World Demands.

The world does not demand that you become a great lawyer, a great merchant; but it does require that you shall so carry yourself through life as to uplift and not blight your fellow man, so as to help and not hinder, so as to elevate and not degrade them. It does ask that you shall not gain riches by impoverishing those who help you to become wealthy, that your dollars may be clean and not smirched with the guilt of trying to get ahead of your competitor by sharp practice; it demands that your wealth shall not be stained with the blood of widows and orphans, that you shall not lift yourself up by tearing others down.

Nothing is easier than fault-finding. No talent, no self-denial, no brains, no character are required to set up in the grumbling business. But those who are moved by a genuine desire to do good have little time for murmuring or complaint.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor

Youth's Column.

"Mother's Lap."

"And he said to a lad: Carry him to his mother.' And when he had taken him and brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon." 2 Kings iv. 19-20.

Your mother's lap! Did childhood have a better place than that?
A place to snuggle sleepily at twilight for a chat;
A tender arm about you, and a hand to stroke your hair
And tell you into dreamland while your head was pillowed there.

The wealth of childish stories, and the Bible stories too,
She told, and told, and told again, as mothers love to do,
Till eyes all wide with interest and bright with joyous gleams
Went shut to see the fairies in your little land of dreams.

Your mother's lap! A haven and a heaven, too, almost—
When little griefs of childhood all your heart and mind engrossed:
A place where you might tell her of the little sorry whiles
Until your tears had gone away, and she coaxed back the smiles.

No bed so rich in comfort, were you sick or were you well,
No song so sweet in melody as that which softly fell
From lips whose kisses banished every shadow or mishap—
Did childhood have a better place for you than "mother's lap?"

Birds of the Bible. No. 2.

SWALLOWS.

The swallows, I believe, are favorites with every one, and it is not difficult to understand why they should be so. They are interesting to us not only as friendly, innocent little birds, but are endeared to us by the mention to be of them in the Bible—for everything mentioned there must be of interest, just as those things referred to in all letters of very dear friends become objects of interest or affection. The swallows are mentioned several times in this precious Book, and always favorably, as when they are referred to as being wise little birds, and knowing the times of coming and going, that they may escape the cold blasts of the north, or the intense heat of the south. Jeremiah says: "The turtle and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming, but my people know not the judgments of the Lord,"—meaning to rebuke those who live in sin and neglect seeking pardon of God while they have time. It seems unreasonable, and very sad, that while tiny birds are careful of their own safety, we, who know the dangers awaiting the unforgiven soul, should, in so many cases, take no care for it all, and forget that we may put off seeking safety until it is too late.

The swallows are never too late. They never perish by putting off. At a certain season, with one accord, they all rise in the air and turn toward a safer country, never, however, forgetting to return when a proper season invites them back to their old haunts, and even to their old nests. The passage in Proverbs referring to the migratory habits of the swallow would teach us that the judgments of God are just, and never come without a cause, so that, if we would escape his chastisement, we must live lovingly near him. The verse reads: "As the bird by wandering, as the swallow by flying, so the curse causeless shall not come." Let us obey him in love, that we may not grieve him and compel him to chastise us.

The Psalmist alludes to the swallow, when afar from the Holy City, and envies the little bird, which, with greater privilege than his own, may live under the shadow of God's sanctuary: "Yea, the sparrow hath found a house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young; even thine altars, oh Lord of Hosts, my King and my God." Hezekiah, when in deep grief says: "As a crane, or a swallow, so did I chatter." These words may refer to the flutterings and moanings of the chimney swallow, with which we are all familiar, as we know of no other variety of these birds to which the words of the prophet would apply. We feel, then, attached to the swallow, because it is a bird mentioned in God's Letter, but also because they are such innocent, domestic little things, building under our roofs, swinging up under our gables with food for the row of mouths open to receive it, darting through the air to feed the little ones, chattering so early and winging so late; always so busy, always harmless, always in time—doing the work God gives them to do with quick, cheerful wings, and setting us all lessons of innocence and obedience, as one of the nearest and dearest of the Bible birds. —Georgiana Kringle.

Sermons for the Little Ones. No. 2.

God did not mean to forsake Adam's children. He showed them how by doing well, they could win his favor and have the life that would endure forever. Cain did not mind, but Abel was glad to serve him. He believed just what God told him and did just the things that God said he must do. If you will read the 11th chapter of Hebrews you will find him named first, among a great many good people to whom God has promised this earth, in the life to come.

God made the earth for good and obedient people and he wants such to have it. So, away back there, we find him trying to see who would believe him and who would mind him. He told a good old man by the name of Noah, that before many years, he was going to drown the earth with a flood, and that he must go and build a great ark, and tell everybody what was coming.

Noah believed God—he built the ark and told the people, what God had said he must tell them. But they only laughed at him, and would not believe a word of his story. So God sent him with his wife, his sons, and their wives, and a great many animals into the ark, and shut the door.

All the wicked people who would not believe God, nor do anything toward saving themselves were drowned. Paul says that Noah, by minding God, became an heir of righteousness that is by faith; meaning that by believing and minding God, he was a righteous man—one that did right, and being such a man, he too, had become an heir to what God had promised.

By and by, God told another man, that he must leave his own country, and go far away to a land he would show him. This man's name was Abram.

He knew it was right to mind God, so he started on his journey, though he did not know where he was going. At last he came to the place. It was Canaan. God told him to look all over it—to walk through it every way, because he was going to give it to him, not for just a little while, but forever, that it was to be his inheritance—that his children were to be as many as the stars and as many as the sands on the sea-shore, and that they too, should have the land and have it forever—that one of his seed, or children, should possess the gates of his enemies—have the power and the crowns of all the kings of the earth, and that when the time should come for this Son and all his other children to have the earth, they should make all nations happy. Abram believed all that was told him, because God made a solemn agreement, by which the land of Canaan was deeded to him and his children forever.

The men of old when they made a deed of land, killed some animal, and dividing it, both passed between the pieces.

Abraham could give God no pay for the great land that he was deeding to him, yet God showed him in the same way, that his deed was good. He told Abram to kill the animals, and when it was dark a bright furnace and a smoking lamp, passed between the pieces, showing that God by his presence was going through, because he could give nothing to God. God was giving all to him.

Not only Abram, but all his children, who should believe what God said and do just as he told them, were named as heirs, in this will, covenant or deed. And that Abram might be the more certain that God meant him and his children to have the land, our heavenly Father confirmed it by an oath, as men now confirm their wills or deeds by an oath, that all may be strong and sure.

Abram had no children when this will was made, nor was the child that had been promised, yet born, when the Lord changed his name to Abraham—the father of many nations.

He was an old man when Isaac came to him. He loved the boy. It was God's gift. Yet when the child had come to be twelve or thirteen years of age, the Lord told him he must take him and offer him up as a sacrifice upon his altar.

Will Abraham believe and mind now? Yes. He does not forget what God has promised him, for he knows that God will do just as he said; if Isaac must be offered, he will make him alive again.

He went where God told him to go, built an altar, laid the wood on and his son on the wood, but just as he was going to kill the child, God's angel touched him on the arm and told him to stop, that another offering was ready in Isaac's place. Looking where the angel pointed, Abraham saw a large sheep caught by its horns in the bushes, that he took and offerd instead of Isaac.

God did this to show us Abraham's faith. He knew that Abraham loved him well enough to give him his only son, but he wanted us to know it. He knew that Abraham believed every word that he said, but he wanted us to know that Abraham believed him, so that it would help us to believe him too.—The Friend of the Children.

The Man of Sin.

When the Man of Sin "opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God or worshipped—showing himself that he is God," at that very time "he sitteth in the temple of God," not that he arose in the temple or came from it, but sitteth there.

Now if the pope is the Man of Sin, in what "temple of God" is he sitting? He sitteth in his own palace, and in the Roman Catholic Church. He sitteth not in the Greek, or any eastern church, neither in any protestant church, and never did, and far less in "the temple of the living God." 2 Cor. vi. 16.

Is he sitting in the building fitly framed together? Eph. ii. 20-22; 1 Peter ii. 1-5. The Roman Catholic Church is the only church in which the pope sitteth or ever did. We read of a bad woman and we are told where she sitteth, Rev. xvii. 1, but she is not a man, and I think not the Man of Sin. Error blinds and binds. Truth enlightens and frees.

A. S. CLOUGH.

Dear Brother Underwood:

It is a little late to send in my renewal, but praise the Lord, you will find enclosed the amount. I would also like to send a few words through the columns of THE RESTITUTION.

How careful, dear brothers and sisters, we should live, that we give no offence in anything that the gospel be not blamed. I have been satisfied for a long time that we have neglected the vital part of the teachings of God's Word. If we will heed his teachings it will regulate our business one with another, as well as with the world. You find Peter speaking of that in his first epistle, second chapter and eleventh and twelfth verses, also the third chapter, sixteenth and seventeenth verses.

Oh! how often the accusation that comes from the world is true. How will we, brothers and sisters, appear in the presence of him who will judge the secret of men's hearts by the gospel which Paul preached. How often the Master said to beware of covetousness. Man's life does not consist in the abundance that he possesses. God likeness is profitable. It has the promise of the life that now is and that which is to come. Let us not be overcharged with the cares of this life.

I remain yours in the Blessed Hope.

M. T. ASLAKSEN.

Waiting for Blessings.

I stood one evening last summer watching the pure white flowers on a vine encircling the veranda. I had been told that the buds that hung with closed petals all day, every evening near sunset unfolded and sent out a peculiar fragrance. The miracle was more than I had anticipated. A feeling of silent awe possessed me as I saw bud after bud, as if under the touch of invisible hands fold slowly back its leaves until the vine was filled with perfect blossoms, most beautiful and sweet. And I said, "If the finger of God laid upon these, his flowers, can do this in a way beyond the power of human study to explain, cannot the same divine touch, in ways we know not of, do as much for human hearts? Shall the flowers teach us a lesson of patient waiting and holy trust for the coming blessing? There are hearts for whom we have prayed seemingly closed as yet to every influence of the blessed Spirit; but let us be patient; we have sown the good seed; God's rain and sunshine through his own providences are nourishing the vine; the breath of prayer always surrounds it; surely by and by the divine touch will in a way we can least understand bring forth the perfected flowers of his grace.

It is a great and a noble thing to cover the blemishes and to excuse the failings of a friend; to draw a curtain before his stains, and to display his perfections; to bury his weakness in silence, but to proclaim his virtues upon the housetop.

Poetry.

The Love of God.

My lips can never voiceless be,
For "the love of God constraineth me."
The love of God, that wondrous love
That stirred all heights of world's above;
All heights—all depths to bring release
From sin to us and give us peace.

Oh, wondrous love that bore to see
The dearest drops in agony,
In contumely, death and pain
For such ungrateful hearts to gain
The gift we know not how to prize!
We daily, hourly sacrifice
Anew the Lord who for us died,
And s'en his gracious gift deride.

Oh, Father, touch my heart with fire,
And every utterance inspire,
That I may better speak thy name
But with the love, the grief, the shame
That fill me now, and may it be
That thy salvation I may see;
And never, never, to thee draw
Thy smile, thy light, thy love, thy law,
Till passing from this life I be Wholly submerged and one in thee.

Ohio Conference Report.

The fourth annual Conference of the Church of God in Ohio convened Aug. 23 to 26 inclusive according to announcement. We had a good Conference and much credit is due the brethren at Brush Creek, especially those who took part in the erecting of the Tabernacle where the meetings were held and in the preparations made for the caring of the visitors.

The Conference opened Thursday evening. The President of the Conference Bro. P. Neill was introduced by Bro. John Lehman of Brush Creek. Bro. Neill took charge and presided over the meetings. Bro. Rufus Curtis gave an address of welcome to the visitors and in his remarks spoke feelingly of two members of the household who had attended the last Conference, held at Cleveland, and since passed away. Sister Greenbrier who met with an accident shortly after the Conference. She was totally blind but had promised to write a letter to the household of faith at Brush Creek. The letter never came. And Bro. William Pate who was Vice President of the Conference and who died suddenly last spring while on a visit to England. His beaming smile and words of encouragement were missed. Bro. W. S. Tomlinson and J. F. Wagoner followed Bro. Curtis in excellent addresses and exhorted the brethren to remain steadfast in the faith, to be diligent and in earnest and contend for the truth.

The speakers for the Conference were J. F. Wagoner, W. H. Wilson, D. C. Robison, Nancy Barber Robison, W. S. Tomlinson and Geo. Neill. All gave good addresses which were very much appreciated by the brethren, and we hope by some who are not. The truth as it is in Jesus was clearly outlined by the speakers and we trust the seed was sown into some good and honest hearts and will bear fruit to the honor and glory of God.

The social meetings were lead by Bro. P. Neill, Sister P. Neill, Bro. Rufus Curtis and Bro. Wm. Heacock. We desired Bro. Armitage of Bowling Green to speak for us, but he and sister Armitage left for home on Saturday morning as he was feeling ill.

The Sisters' Meeting was held on Friday morning. Sister B. H. Lang presided. The 12th chapter of Romans was read and commented upon by Sister Lang. Many excellent papers were read by the sisters.

On Sunday morning we met to commemorate the Lord's death. Bro. J. F. Wagoner presided and was followed by many exhortations by the brethren who urged the members not to neglect the assembling of themselves together, but to meet every first day for the breaking of bread and prayers.

On Sunday afternoon the young people had their meeting. It was presided over by Sister Hattie Sanford. Bro. Geo. Neill gave a history of the Young People's society in Cleveland. The papers read at the meeting by the young people will be published.

On Monday morning three took on the all saving name of Jesus by baptism. Susan Noisley, Ethel Venable and B. F. Smith. The last named had considered himself a brother, but upon investigation he found that his former baptism was not valid.

Thus ended a very successful Conference. Visitors came from many parts of the State and we had three from Argos, Ind., Mary E. Boyce, Lura Boyce and Emma Boyce.

Report of business meeting held Saturday morning: Bro. P. Neill presided. The report of the business meeting of the previous Conference was read by the Secretary and approved as read. The report of the Treasurer was as follows: Receipts since Aug. 3, 1905, $740.33; expenditures $694.98. Balance on hand, $45.35. Report was accepted. The Treasurer reported S. Groves had auditted the accounts and found them correct. Bro. Neill called attention to THE RESTITUTION of July 11 for report of work of the Evangelists. Bro. Neill displayed charts which he had used in his lectures and read notes on the Bible school which had been held at Torch Lake, Mich., which he had attended. He stated that he had a spiritual feast from first to last, and advised attending the Bible school. Bro. D. C. Robison advocated a Bible school, but instead of the students going to one place, advised instructors to go from place to place. No definite action was taken, but it is expected something will be done to establish Bible schools in Ohio.

Ministerial certificates were renewed to P. Neill, Mattie Neill, D. C. Robison, and Nancy Barber Robison.

The election of officers resulted as follows, P. Neill, President; D. C. Robison, Vice President; J. C. Thompson, Secretary and Treasurer; Geo. Neill, Assistant Secretary. It was moved by Bro. D. C. Robison that two from each church compose the Conference Committee, and the following were elected: Brush Creek, John Lehman and George Antonides; Cleveland, W. S. Tomlinson and Sister B. H. Lang; Springfield, Daniel Beck and Aldin Overholser; Salem, Mary Knowles and Nancy Barber Robison.

The following compose the finance committee: Hattie Sanford, Cleveland; Sister Pearson, Fidelity; Sister Lehman, Troy; R. L. Holman and Sister David Beck, Springfield; Samuel Elton, Delta; and Bro. and Sister D. C. Robison, Salem. Bro. D. C. Robison was elected the Evangelist for one year. A vote of thanks was given to Bro. P. Neill, the retiring evangelist. Bros. D. C. Robison and Geo. Neill were appointed auditting committee to audit the accounts.

The next Conference will probably be held in Salem, sometime in August, 1907.

Report of Illinois Conference.

Another Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus has been held at the old stone church at Oregon, Illinois, and from the first meeting on Wednesday Aug. 15th to the last service on Sunday Aug. 19th, it was a success in every sense of the word. A warm enthusiasm for the work of the gospel, in our own State, and in all other fields, together with that oneness of heart and soul in loyal Christian fellowship, which is known at its best only in the household of faith, made it indeed good to be there.

There were present rather more than the usual number of ministerial brethren, this year. We had with us, Bros. Samuel Wilson, of New Jersey; Jas. W. Wilson, of Chicago; L. E. Conner, now of Cleveland, Ohio; R. G. Huggins, formerly of Eldorado, Ill., but who as our Assistant State Evangelist will now live at Oregon; D. M. Rudler, of Muscatine, Iowa; J. W. Williams from Kansas; and G. Eldred Marsh of Manchester, Iowa; these, with our worthy State Evangelist Bro. S. J. Lindsay, made our Conference very interesting indeed.

The general topic under discussion during the Conference was, "Christian Life, and Christian Faith;" chief emphasis being given to the thought of symetrical development in Christian faith and character—that the great doctrines of our faith, as taught in the Scriptures, and the teaching of Christ concerning love to God, which love is expressed in love to our neighbor, must necessarily go hand in hand. That we should cultivate neither a cold belief, and passive acceptance of the gospel facts only; nor, on the other hand, an empyreal "idealism," which spends itself in emotion, but rather, a sane, living faith, which not only believes, but also works and loves.

At the business session on Saturday morning as the reports of the various churches were given, our hearts were cheered with the news of the progress of the work, and the faithfulness shown by the workers, and especially as the reports of our Evangelists were read, we rejoiced to note the advancement in the work over previous years, under the labors of brethren, who have pressed on through the year, in the face of many difficulties. The total number of baptisms under the jurisdiction of the Conference during the year, was 11, and the assurance was given of more to follow soon. The finances of the Conference are in a better condition than ever before, and we begin another year, planning for still better things in all lines of effort. Under the direction of their State President, Sister Anna Drew, the Bereans have been doing excellent work, as has our Bible School also, a report of which will appear later.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were: J. W. Wilson, President; Lyman Booth, Vice President; Sister L. Smith, Secretary; and Lyman Booth, Treasurer.

On the closing evening resolutions of thanks were offered to those who had contributed to the success of the Conference, especially the ministerial brethren from distant States; also, a parting resolution of loving fellowship, commendation, and God-speed to Bro. L. E. Conner, who was leaving our Conference for his new home and new field of labor in Cleveland, Ohio, was unanimously adopted. Then, after the closing sermon by Bro. Samuel Wilson, short addresses of farewell and of admonition were given by each minister present, and the time of parting had come. The hearts of many were too full of tears, to sing that grand old hymn, "God be with you till we meet again;" a hymn which has sent so many of God's workers on their way from such gatherings, with its holy benediction; sometimes to labor and struggle, and sometimes to the last sweet rest before the year is ended, but always with the great hope shining, that ere long they may "meet at Jesus' feet," all precious ones who love his appearing.

The Committee on Resolutions beg to submit the following:—That the blessings of God be with and his tender care over the entire body, that we may be living in bright anticipation of his glorious coming when his broken body will be complete.

Resolved:—That this Conference extend their heartfelt thanks to the officers and to all who have assisted in the work:

Resolved:—That we thank the visiting ministers for their timely discourses and remarks, and to all for their presence.

Whereas, We acknowledge our gratitude to God for the visible fruits of the seed sown as shown by the baptisms at the Conference, and during the year

Whereas, We greatly deplore the absence of our beloved brethren, Eychaner and Crowe, who in time past have done so much to make the Conference what it is now.

Whereas, Death has removed from us certain ones of the household of faith—Be it

Resolved:—That we commend them to God in the hope of the resurrection

Resolved:—That the care of God be with and over you all in your work and labor of love for the coming year.

Dear Restitution.

Just a few words about the Ohio State Conference held at Brush Creek, Aug. 23 to 26, 1906. I arrived at Kessler about noon Wednesday, Aug. 22, was kindly welcomed and entertained by Bro. and Sister George Knife. Next morning was conveyed by their young daughter Pearl to the place of meeting on the premises of Bro. John Lehman, where I found some of the brethren hard at work. The brethren, including the sisters, had given their time, means, labor and material to make the Conference a success, and it was a success.

They had erected, what I will call, a large wooden tent to hold services in, excellent for the purpose. Also rented a canvas tent as dining hall, they were but a few steps apart. In short every thing had been done for the comfort and convenience of those who would attend. The meetings were well attended and full of interest from first to last, and all present seemed to enjoy the gathering. Thunder storms disturbed but did not spoil the enjoyment. We have every reason to believe the Conference did and will redound to the glory of God, and the honor of Jesus Christ, and the great benefit of all those who sought such benefit.

It gives me pleasure to state that I baptized three before leaving on Monday morning, Susan Neisley, Ethel Venable and B. F. Smith. Sister Neisley is the youngest daughter of our late Sister Neisly of Pleasant Hill, Ohio; Ethel Venable only daughter of Bro. and Sister John Venable of Bellefountain, Ohio; B. F. Smith for years a brother, but for some time back, not satisfied with his baptism, has now set his mind fully at rest and gone his way rejoicing.

Our Bro. D. C. Robison was elected State Evangelist, he needs no introduction from me, but as I know, from experience, what the Evangelist needs and ought to have, I bespeak for him, as he moves among you, my brethren, your kindly and cordial welcome. From experience and observation, as Evangelist for three years, I know the Church throughout Ohio is in great need of an evangelist, and for this reason my heart goes out in anxious and prayerful solicitude for both the church and evangelist. My earnest prayer is that every Church of God in Ohio, and every member of the church may so arouse to a due sense of the great favor that God through Jesus Christ has bestowed upon each, that they will heartily invite and welcome Bro. Robison, and not only so but I entreat you to seek his advice, and his help to bind the Church in Ohio as never before, in the full unity of the Spirit, and the bond of peace. May such effort be made, and we are sure that God will grant his blessing.

Your brother praying "Thy kingdom come."

P. NEILL, Pres.

Dear ones assembled in Conference at Argos, Ind:

How much we regret not being able to gather with you at this meeting. We have hoped against hope that we could come; but yesterday the Elder had another chill, followed with fever and greater debility. He has been quite painfully and seriously ill for two weeks; but began to mend last Monday, and said, "I think we can go to the Conference yet;" but last evening he had to give it up. I think you will all give us credit for being prompt if we promised to come to your assistance but with age and infirmities it cannot be otherwise, and we are no more to be depended upon, in that respect; but, brethren, we are true to the blessed gospel, and God granting will remain so to the end. I know you will do your best to make this meeting redown to God's glory. Do not get discouraged brethren, the battle is waging hard and the enemy is strongly armed, and knows how to use every weapon of warfare, but a brave soldier only grows stronger and firmer amid the heavy cannonading, and if necessary falls in the forefront of the battle. Many things come to us all to discourage and perplex. We hardly know which way to go, these are among the things promised. It is through much tribulation we enter the kingdom; but, side by side with the promise of trials comes the other and better promise, "He that endureth to the end shall be saved," so let us be strong and true, looking above and beyond the smoke of battle to the golden crowned Olivet where the saints shall all meet in that glad reunion, when all things have been worked out to the glory of God.

Yours in his sheltering care.

B. W. & M. A. WOODWARD.

[Received too late to be read at Argos, Conference, so given here that all may read it.—ED.]

To the Churches and isolated brothers and sisters of the State of Ohio:

At our last Conference held at Brush Creek, Miami Co., we were elected State Evangelist. The success of the year's work depends largely upon you. The Evangelist can do but little without your hearty co-operation. We shall be pleased to visit you and hold meetings as you shall direct. The Conference has provided that our expenses shall be met. It is our wish that you write to us that we may know your wishes.

Remember that the time for evangelizing is short. We should begin our work early. We have the whole State as our field. Our work should begin the last of September or early in October. We have no hobbies to present to those of "like precious faith." It shall be our purpose to preach the "gospel of the kingdom of God." What at the first was spoken by the Lord and confirmed unto us by them who heard him, we will preach. Hoping to be able to serve you all is our wish. Your brother in the Anointed. Address 3, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

D. C. ROBISON.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor

Dear Restitution:

"Study the Scriptures," by J. C. Thompson, for Aug. 8, is now before me, and referring to Matt. iv. 4, it carries me back to a time long to be remembered, when the Word of God had more stimulating power in it to the inner man, or mind, 2 Cor. iv. 6; Col. iii. 10 than any earthly food, coffee, whiskey and tobacco not excepted, and our breathing was made more refreshing after feasting on the Words of Jesus, John vi. 63. We were thus carried forward in our dreams to the promised land. See Jer. xxiii. 5 28; Luke xiii. 11-28. Wherefore, as the Scripture sayeth, "Let us take heed to the injunction given in Heb. x. 25, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is: but exhorting one another; and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." And as often as we do it let us strive to show our love for, and faith in the things pertaining to the suffering body of the Christ. Amen! See 1 Cor. iv.

A short time since we were visited by Brother J. R. Ham and one of his nephews from Bartlett, Tenn., also Brother J. W. Lewis from Bismark, Ark., and the latter went for Brother J. L. Muncriel, who gave us a good talk from John xviii. 3, So—stirring us up. See 2 Peter i. 9-13.

On the 26th it was my privilege to meet with the brethren in conference at Roberson's Grove, near Morrilton, Ark., where they came from the east, west, north and south, so to speak, to a great feast of good things, both temporal and spiritual. While there we were made to realize morefully the import of Eph. iii. 10, and to see the workings of the enemy, as it were in the days of Job, Job i. 6, and this time in the form of a preacher of righteousness, 2 Cor. xi. 25, 16.

On Saturday night several of us bid them good bye. Five had been baptized, and we left the meeting in progress.

Now brethren, for Aug. 8, we have "The New Creation" by Brother Joblin, and "The Root of Christianity," by Brother Wilson, which are more than worthy of a second reading.

Yours in hope of life when Jesus comes.

R. A. HUMPHREYS.

Dear Restitution:

We cannot get along without the RESTITUTION, and Bible. The paper has come to us free for forty years. It gives us great pleasure in our declining years. We are strong in the faith and are still looking to see Jesus coming in the clouds the second time to reward his saints. We may never see you in this age, but hope to meet you in the kingdom of God where we will never any good by. The Lord is coming soon to gather the overcomers. Brothers and sisters pray for us.

C. W. & A. J. HERRON.

Russellism Exposed.

There has been an increased demand for a sharp expose of the cunningly devised fables of Russellism, showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of the Christian faith.

I am now engaged in writing such an expose; showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of Christianity. It will be printed as a booklet of about thirty pages at ten cents each.

This will follow right along after the printing of Pine Woods Bible Class, the type-setting of which is now nearly completed. The booklet will be ready for distribution about the same time that Pine Woods Bible Class is ready to send out.

Those who wish Russellism Exposed may send in orders right away so that I may know how many to print.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 49.

1. And all the leaders of the host and Goosmah and Azarias, son of Mansmias, and all the laity from small to great even went

2. Unto Hieremias the prophet and said unto him, Let mercy for us forsooth fall down before thy face, and do thou offer votive-prayer unto the Lord thy God for those who have been left; because from many we a few in number have been left, even as thine eyes behold.

3. And let the Lord thy God tell us the way in which we shall go and a word that we shall do.

4. And Hieremias said unto them, I have heard; Lo, I will offer votive-prayer for you unto the Lord our God according to your words; and it will be that the word whatever the Lord God shall have answered, I will tell you; I may (can or a not) not hide from you an oracular-word.

5. And they said unto Hieremias, Let the Lord be with us for a just and faithful witness, if we do not do even according to all the word which the Lord shall have sent unto us.

6. And if it be good and if it be bad, the voice of the Lord our God for which we are sending thee unto him, will we obey, that it may become better for us, because we will obey the voice of the Lord our God.

7. And it came to pass ten days afterward, that a word of the Lord occurred unto Hieremias.

8. And he summoned Joosmah and the leaders of the host and all the laity from small to great even,

9. And said unto them, In this wise hath the Lord said:

10. If ye shall stay seated in this land I will build you up and not tear you down, and I will plant you and not pluck you up, because I have given an interval-rest to the evil things which I have authorized (or caused) for you.

11. Be not afraid of the face of Babuloon's king from before whose face ye are afraid. Fear not, saith the Lord, because I am with you to deliver and save you out of his hand.

12. And I will give you mercy and will be merciful to you, and I will return you into your land.

13. And if ye shall say, We will not stay seated in this land as not obeying the voice of the Lord,

14. Because we are going to go into a land of Aiguptos and not see war and not hear a trumpet's voice and not hunger for bread, and dwell there,

15. In that case may ye have heard a word of the Lord; In this wise hath the Lord said, If ye give your face to Aiguptos and go in there to dwell,

16. The sword man before the face of which ye are afraid will overtake you from the rear in Aiguptos and there will ye die.

17. And all the men and all the alien-born who have set their face toward Aiguptos to dwell there will leave off with the sword and with famine and there will be not one of them saved from the calamities which I am leading upon them.

18. Because in this wise hath the Lord said, Even as my anger distilled upon those inhabiting Hierousaleem, just so will my anger distil upon you; when ye have gone into Aiguptos; and ye will be a trackless waste and made subject and a curse and a reproach, and ye shall never again see this place.

19. Things which the Lord had talked in respect to you the remnant of Jouda, Go not into Aiguptos. And comprehending will ye know

20. That ye have done wickedly to your souls in having sent me saying, Offer votive-prayer unto the Lord, and according to all that the Lord may say unto thee will we do.

21. And ye have not hearkened to the voice of the Lord with which he sent me unto you.

22. And now with sword and with famine will ye leave off in the place wherein ye desire to enter and dwell.

COMMENT.

This 49th chapter is given as the 42nd in the versions with the usual bungling botching of all the names of persons and places. The substance of the narrative in a measure is preserved, but the accuracy not at all and many fine distinctions ignored like the one in "giving them mercy and being merciful to them" in the 12th verse.

In the 10th verse there is nothing said like, "For I repent me of the evil that I have done unto thee." The clause so translated in "the versions" reads "because I have given an interval-rest to the evil things which I have authorized (or caused) for you."

In the 18th verse "As my anger and my fury hath been poured, etc." should read "even as my anger distilled" no word for "fury" nor "poured" in the text.

In the 20th verse "Ye have dealt deceitfully against your souls" should read "Ye have done wickedly to your souls."

Obituary.

John Hannibal McClary died at his home near Kirbyville, Mo., on July 6, after an illness of several months.

Judge McClary was a man well known, and admired for his noble traits of character by all who knew him. He had been a useful and honored citizen of Taney county for thirty-six years. He was born in Piqua, Ohio, November 13, 1832; married at the age of 25 years to Miss Emma Stinchcomb, at the home of her parents at Grandville, Indiana. They moved to the southern part of Indiana, where they resided until 1868, when they moved to Taney Co., Mo., where he resided until his decease.

Judge and Mrs. McClary raised a highly respected family of eleven children, three having died in infancy.

Deceased served his county ably and faithfully, as presiding judge for two terms; and as county surveyor for three terms; he also made a plat of the county after the destruction of the court house and records by fire.

He was never idle. When not serving the public he was busy improving his farm; yet he could always find time for reading the Bible and the exercise of his religious duties. He first united with the Christian Church, but afterwards changed his belief, and accepted the truth as taught by the Church of God.

His last hours will never fade from the memory of those he left behind. He called the members of his family who were present around him, told them he was ready to go, and had them good-bye—words of comfort indeed to his sorrowing relatives.

The funeral services were conducted by Elder Speers, in the presence of a concourse of sympathizing friends, and he was laid to rest in the cemetery at Kirbyville.

A Golden Thread.

A golden thread of unity ties together all the experiences and possessions of a redeemed man from the first moment of the change that delivers him from the kingdom of darkness right away on through the endless pulsations of an unbroken eternity. Grace is glory in the bud, glory is grace in the flower; and all which we hope for in the future is but the evolving of that which is planted in our hearts today, if we love him; it may have to fight with much antagonism to itself both without and within. The tender green is prophet of the full ear. We do not get one gift here on earth, and another perfectly different there in heaven. It is the measure, not the kind, which varies. That which here, as a spark of grace, lies often almost hid among green and smoky wood, there flames out triumphant as all-brightening glory. The inheritance is a hope, but the earnest of the inheritance, which is of the same stuff as the inheritance, is a present possession.—Alexander McLaren, D. D.

Notice.

Brothers T. H. Owens and Killough of Beaver County, Okla., preach at Cline, Lavern and Zelma each Sunday. Any one visiting here enquire for C. A. Starkey, M. A. Starkey or Mrs. Gabriel Rohrback.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" After getting the opinion of one who understands this language, we have no hesitation in recommending it as simply all right. Get some for your German friends. Send to M. Joblin, 626 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O. Price 40 cts per 100.

Announcement.

Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference will convene in Morrill, Brown County, Kansas, Sept. 22, at 8 o'clock P. M., holding over the 30th Sept. inclusive. Morrill is situated on the Grand Island R. R. 54 miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. Preaching brethren: W. L. Crowe and S. C. Oliver, and others if they can be secured. Arrangements will be made to take care of visiting brethren before meeting commences.

PROGRAMME.

First subject, The purpose of God in creation. Perhaps several discourses on the same subject. Next, Why I believe the Bible. Again, Divine government vs. civil government. Again, Conversion. Again, Is the church not in the kingdom. Again, The kingdom, What is it. Again, The object of Christ's second coming. Again, What must I do to be saved? Next the congregation will be given the privilege to name subjects. Saturday morning the Conference board will settle the finance affair and officers will be elected for the coming year and Evangelist hired. Now brethren, let us make the meeting a success. How? By coming and helping, your presence will be profitable, yourself will be rewarded. It always has and always will cost something to be a Christian.

We have arranged the meeting for the most leisure time among the farmers. A throng time cannot be excused. We are exhorted to not forget the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more as we see the day approaching.

By order of the Conference board. Trains due at Morrill from the east, 12:40 M. evening train; 10:10 P. M. From the west, morning 4:45 A. M., afternoon 2:23 P. M.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

T. J. DANIEL.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your postmaster gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

A Jew.

It was a Jew, whose father walked with those
Who saw the parted waters of the sea
Sweep back on either hand to set them free,—
Who dashed amid the cohorts of their foes,
While prayer from Moses on Mount Sinai rose,
With King Solomon sat near the knee
Of Jacob Elliott saw the Syrians flee,
And heard speech of comfort in
The blows of hate, the bitter wealth of rage,
The kiss of scorn, the gift of scourge and flame,
These have been dealt them for a heritage
Through the long centuries where in they trod
Outcasts of men, yet faithful to their God,
There sole derision this undying name

Read at Sisters' Meeting, Ohio Conference.

The following papers and reports were read at the Sister's meeting at the Brush Creek, Ohio Conference. Sister Lang read Romans xii, in opening the meeting.

In this chapter we see what Godliness is, and what our duty toward the divine Being is. After having laid a good foundation, based upon the Prophets and Apostles, we must surrender ourselves, and here we are besought by the greatest of all Apostles to give ourselves wholly unto him who has bought us. By our presenting ourselves, it shows a voluntary act on our part, springing from the motive of love, and such service will be accepted by our Father.

There has been a saving change wrought in us, because we have been converted and set apart for a new purpose, our dispositions and inclinations are now turned toward the things of God, we are now no more entangled with the works of darkness. So being a new creature in Christ Jesus, we must prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. His perfect will, I understand here is his plans and purposes toward man and man's duty toward him. Jesus said if any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine whether it is of God. It is only by constant application to the Word that we know whether we are following the truth or cunningly devised fables.

The next thing taught in this chapter is humility, this same Apostle tells us in Galatians, if we think we are something when we are nothing, we deceive ourselves. So it is very important that we keep ourselves in a humble frame of mind, and whatever gifts the good God has seen fit to bestow upon us, let us thank him heartily for it, and strive earnestly to use it for his glory. When I think of the unreserved power that Jesus had while he was among men, and think how wonderfully he controled himself under it, in always being anxious to serve his brethren, I think it certainly becomes us, who have so little in comparison, to be always clothed with humility. Each of the following gifts the Apostle refers to, explains itself and are something we can all make practical application of—all may not be able to be ministers, or exhorters or teachers, but "Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good. Be kindly affectioned one to another; with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another; not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord; rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer; distributing to the necessity of saints; given to hospitality. Bless them which persecute you; bless, and curse not. Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep. Be of the same mind one toward another. Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceits." Let us be of the same mind working in unity and love, keeping the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace—condescend, as our Savior did to men of low estate. When our Lord washed the disciples' feet, it was an act of brotherly love and to be an example of humility to us. Though David was a king upon a throne, yet he was a companion of the lowly who feared God and kept his precepts. And so must we be always found in the company of saints, whenever we have the choice of companions. Then as much as it is possible for us, we are to live in peace with all men, but notice, this peaceable living is not imperative—it is not possible to preserve peace when we cannot do so without offending God. The wisdom from above is first pure, then peaceable. And oh, let us take special notice of the 19th verse, Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves. It is so easy for the flesh to be hurt and immediately take upon himself to give back just as good as was sent. But Jesus has told us instead of thinking how to revenge one wrong, prepare to receive another. Oh, if we could only live in this sphere, what a peculiar people, what a chosen generation and a royal priesthood we would be—he that cannot quietly bear an evil is overcome by it and we must not be overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.

Brothers and sisters, let us try to make these points of some value to us in our daily lives, so that we may be accounted worthy of an abundant entrance into that glorious kingdom of our Lord, which we all look and long for. This is my earnest prayer for all. Amen.

MRS. B. H. LANG.

THE LORD'S RETURN.

The return of the Master is the most important event in the history of the world and especially to his brethren who are looking and praying for his return to establish the kingdom of God on the earth, with all the blessings that will come to the inhabitants of the earth by that much to be desired event. This precious doctrine of the return of the Master is as clearly taught in the New Testament as any other doctrine in it. Yet it is rarely taught. If the Master comes not to speak peace to the nations wars will continue as long as man is selfish. If the Master does not return from the far country the dead will never be raised, and consequently the righteous will get no reward, but are perished forever. But this is impossible, because we have the Word of him who cannot lie, that Christ shall not fail nor be discouraged till he hath set justice and judgment in the earth. We are told to watch and wait for the return of our Lord from heaven.

Look at that account of the last hours of Christ with his disciples. What does he say to them? "If I go away I will come again and receive you unto myself." It is perfectly safe to take the Word of God just as we find it. If he tells us to watch, then watch. If he tells us to pray, then pray. If he tells us he will come again, then wait for him.

The better part of the human race sees the evils of the conditions that exist at the present times, but are powerless to apply the much needed reform. The Master will return. He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass, as the showers that water the earth. In his day shall the righteous flourish and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth. Psa. lxxii. 6-7. But when will the Lord come? The day nor the hour knoweth no man. But it is written, There is a set time to favor Zion. It is such a momentous event, the coming of the Son of Man in the clouds of heaven and the contemplation does so overpower the imagination. We easily understand why in this age which is so averse to the supernatural attempts to explain away its literalness. But how is he going to come? We are told how he is going to come. When those disciples stood looking up into heaven at the time of his ascension, there appeared two angels, who said unto them, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as you have seen him go into heaven. Acts i. 11. How did he go away? Bodily. After he had arisen from the grave he said to his disciples, Look at me, handle me, a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have. He was the identical one whom they crucified and laid in the grave. Now he had risen from the dead and was going to the Father. "He is going," said the angel, "but he will come again just as ye have seen him go." "Behold I come quickly," said Christ to John, and the last prayer in the Bible is, "Even so Lord Jesus, come quickly."

Were the early Christians disappointed then? No, no person who obeys the voice of God will be disappointed when he comes. The world waited for his coming 4000 years and then he came. He was here on earth about thirty-three years, was put to death on Calvary's cruel cross, was laid in Joseph's new tomb, wherein no man ever laid, arose in three days and ascended to the Father, but he left us a promise that he would come again. The world watched and waited for his first coming and did not watch in vain. So now to them who wait for his appearing shall he appear the second time unto salvation.

SISTER LEHMAN.

Dear brethren and friends:

We read in the ninth verse of Rom. xii., Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good. Love, the one thing that binds us together should help us to overlook the faults of one another, for none of us are faultless. And when among those of like precious faith, we notice some word or action that looks wrong to us, we abhor that which is evil. But we love the sister or brother, and cleave to that which is good in them, and pray that the evil may be overcome by the good. Human nature is weak, and prone to err, however much we strive for the mastery, yet if we do strive, David answers us that our Father is merciful. For he knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are dust. Let us then be kindly affectioned one to another, with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another. Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep. And let us each try above all things to make our calling and election sure, so that when Jesus comes, we may hear him say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

ABIDE IN ME.

Brothers and sisters, another year has passed and we are among the living to thank and praise God for the many mercies he has so freely extended to us. We have been called out of the world of darkness to share the glories which God shall, in due time, bestow upon all the faithful ones. I have chosen for a few remarks, the words of Jesus in John xv. 4. "Abide in me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine; no more can ye except ye abide in me." This verse shows the mutual love between Christ and his members. He is the true vine and we, as branches, have been grafted into the vine and so we are expected to bear the same fruit. Our life is hid with Christ in God, and as Christ is our life, so we must live in him and by him, as the branch lives in and by the vine. Without Christ we can do nothing and this parable shows us very plainly our dependence upon him. He says in verse 16 of this same chapter, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you that ye should go and bring forth fruit and that your fruit should remain." So we see, brethren, how necessary it is for us to bear fruit for we are known by our fruits. This can only be done by walking daily with Christ and abiding in him. He tells us in his sermon on the Mount to beware of false prophets who come in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire. Matt. vii. 15, 18, 19. When we bear the fruits of the Spirit which are love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance we are glorifying God, for he is pleased with every effort we make to abide in Christ. Let us then, one and all, ever set before us the example of him who said "I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day, that we may keep up every moment in his work and thus be found in him when he comes."

SARAH NEILL.

"Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God." The Lord who loves righteousness and hateth iniquity; the Lord who made heaven and earth, the sea and all that therein is; which executeth judgment for the oppressed; which giveth food to the hungry; that looseth prisoners; openeth the eyes of the blind; raiseth them that are bowed down; preserveth strangers; relieveth the fatherless and widows; this is the God of Jacob, the God in whom we trust. The Prophet Jeremiah says, "Cursed be the man that trusted in man and maketh flesh his arm and whose heart departeth from the Lord—for he shall be like the heath in the desert and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness in a salt land and not inhabited." But "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord and whose hope the Lord is—for he shall be as a tree planted by the waters and that spreadeth out her roots by the river and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green and shall not be careful in the year of drought neither shall cease from yielding fruit."

There is nothing lacking in good things for those who have the God of Jacob for his help; he is long-suffering and of great goodness; he is an ever present help in trouble; he bringeth the counsel of the heathen to nought; he maketh the devices of the people to none effect; his Word is sure and his judgments are true and righteous.

Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heaven, for though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,) but to us there is one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him. O the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God; how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out; for of him and through him and to him are all things; to whom be glory for ever. Amen.

MRS. ROBERT PATE.

SINCERITY.

Brothers and sisters, there are so many people that believe if we are good and do what we think is right and be sincere in it, that we will be saved, but according to the wise man Solomon we cannot go by our thoughts. He says there is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death. And again if we go by our thoughts, why was it that in every instance when the people in olden times wanted to know what they must do to be saved that they were told that they must repent and be baptized for the remission of their sins. God has laid a plan which he expects you and me to obey. He does not say to one of us, Go, repent and be baptized, and to another do what you think is right and be sincere in it. If we want to be God's children and enter into the kingdom we must obey his command. Jesus says, Search the Scriptures for they are they which testify of me. If it doesn't make any difference what we believe, why is it he wants us to search the Scriptures? Is it not so that we can be of the same mind and believe the same thing? Brothers and sisters, let us be sincere in God's Word and not in our thoughts. We make God a respecter of persons when we try to believe that all doctrines are true, there is but one true gospel. No difference how sincere we are in something else, we may be honest and kind to all around us, but if we have not put on Christ by baptism we cannot expect to be saved.

SISTER PIERSON.

LOVE.

In the 13th chapter of Corinthians Paul gives a masterly discourse on the subject of love or charity. The word charity throughout this chapter is a mistranslation, being in the Greek in which the New Testament was written simply the word meaning love. The word charity is misleading as we generally associate that word with almsgiving. Paul says, Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not love, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal, and though I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and though I have all faith so that I could remove mountains, and have not love I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned and have not love it profiteth me nothing. Paul here enumerates some of the most desirable things of life. First, eloquence, think what a gift it is to be able to hold an audience spell bound by means of a silvery tongue, what a charm, what a power to sway the multitudes and make them weep or laugh at will. But Paul says though I speak with the tongues of men or of angels and have not love, eloquence is nothing. Though I have the gift of prophecy, in Paul's day the prophet was greater than the king, and though I understand all mysteries and all knowledge to be all wise, and though I have all faith so that I could remove mountains. Here we have all knowledge coupled with all faith, what a powerful combination, what more need one desire? But Paul says even if I have all these and have not love I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned and have not love it profiteth me nothing.

The most exacting person would suppose that these great sacrifices would be satisfactory, but without love they are worthless. Did you ever realize how important love is? God himself is love, from him love radiates as heat from the sun. We love him because he first loved us. God commendeth his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. He says also, Yea I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee. Some people cannot understand why Christ needs must die for our salvation. In no other way could he show his deep and boundless love for fallen man. It was the extreme sacrifice, and we realize that he poured out his soul unto death for our guilty sins, the innocent for the guilty, the shame and agony of his sufferings, it melts the stoutest hearts. Nothing else could do this, we might be indifferent and pass every thing else by, but we cannot pass this by. O what wonderful love for you and me, unworthy though we are. And when we have realized the greatness of his sacrifice, when his love is shed abroad in our hearts it translorms us and makes us gentle and loving to every creature with which we come in contact; we not only love those who are kind to us, but we pity and love those who despitefully use us. Hatred has no place in a Christian's heart, love should usurp all there, not all in a day perhaps, but little by little if we exercise the great attribute of love, it will finally fill the heart to the exclusion of all else. That was what made Christ so lovable, he loved everybody. No one ever sank so low but his hand was stretched out to help, and his loving voice said, Go and sin no more. It was one of the charges against him, that he ate with publicans and sinners. He came to seek and save those that are lost. He says the whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. The greater the sinner, the more need of salvation.

The Salvation Army is doing a good work by going among the most neglected and fallen class of people and teaching them a better way. Dare any Christian look with coldness or contempt on even the vilest sinner? Christ has taught us both by precept and example to love one another as he loved us. How much is that, brethren, and to love not just to like our enemies. It was said of Christ that he went about doing good, just little things many times to make others happier and better, and as we are workers together with him, let us follow his example. Christ never did a selfish act because of his great love for others. You cannot be selfish with those you love. Paul says, Love seeketh not her own, is unselfish, love suffereth long, is patient, love envieth not, is generous, love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, is humble, doth not behave itself unseemly, is courteous, is not easily provoked, is good tempered. Thinketh no evil—is guileless, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoices in the truth—is sincere, beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. You could take the most imperfect character and let love operate upon it fully and it would develop into one of the beautiful and symetrical Christian characters.

I read a beautiful illustration on the subject of love. It was this, you have all probably seen a beam of light pass through a crystal prism and noted that while the single beam passed through it came out on the other side broken up into the seven primary colors—violet, indigo, blue, green, orange, yellow and red, the rainbow colors, each beam of light is divisible into. So Paul passes love through the great prism of his inspired mind and it comes out broken into its different elements, patience, kindness, generosity, humility, courtesy, unselfishness, good temper, guilelessness and sincerity. It is our work to fit these elements into our lives gradually but continually, and we can become what Christ has commanded when he said, Be ye perfect. We must grow in these graces till we all come into a perfect man unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. We cannot do this if we are selfish, or if we indulge in fits of ill temper that so often mar an otherwise beautiful character; or if we are envious and spiteful. Brethren, let us lay aside these weights and the sins that so easily beset us. There will be no place for them in Eden, and we cannot enter there laden with them, we must drop them here. We cannot grow spiritually if we indulge in them, and if we do not grow we are dead branches and the great husbandman will lop off all such. Peter says, Above all things love each other. Fervently love, is the watchword, love is the fulfilling of the law, love is stronger than death. Many waters cannot quench love. Love never faileth. Whether there be prophecies they shall fail, that is they shall be fulfilled, whether there be tongues they shall cease. The Hebrew and Greek languages the Scriptures were written in have both ceased to be spoken and are classed as dead languages, as has also Latin. Whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away. The knowledge that was put in many of the first inventors has passed away and been superseded by some thing better. How fleeting all things earthly are—even faith, that beautiful Christian grace, shall some time be fulfilled by sight and hope be crowned with fruition and cease to be hope. But love shall pass into that better age and live through eternity. Now abideth faith, hope and love, but the greatest of these is love.

THE BLESSED HOPE.

Sisters, brothers and friends, the above subject for my lesson is found in the 2nd chapter of Titus 13th verse. In this and the preceding chapter, Paul's timely exhortation to Titus to hold fast to the faithful word—to shun ungodliness, to live righteously, closes with the following earnest text. "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and Savior Jesus Christ." The Diaglott version is, waiting for the

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 19, 1906. NUMBER 35.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

WE wish all who have not renewed their subscriptions for 1906 would do so at once. We just simply need the money right now.

MUCH of our paper the last two weeks has been taken up with reports, etc., which has been very encouraging. They show that all over the land the work has been well done, and the results are most gratifying. We will give articles as fast as we have space.

THE Plymouth Church, on last Sunday had the pleasure of listening to two able discourses by Brother J. L. Wince. The evening discourse was on the coming of Christ. Not an array of texts to prove the fact of his coming, but showing the importance of the event. The audiences were good at both services, and all who heard were benefitted.

"Glory! Glory!"

The meeting was going on at Argos, I had been praying that the Lord might manifest his presence at that meeting as in the days of old, and that, though no smoke from cloudy pillar should arise, nor fire burst forth to consume offerings on an altar, his glory might be manifested visibly and as solemnly apparent to the people who should gather there. I asked of him that the hearts of the brethren and sisters who were to make up that conference should be especially prepared for the service, though at that time they were passing through an unexpected and most painful trial.

Busied at home about my work I was still looking upward, while the assembled congregation was engaged in song and prayer, or listening in rapt attention to God's consecrated Levites.

The very first day of the meeting—both forenoon and evening—the wireless message came that the Lord was indeed in that meeting, and each time I shouted "glory! glory!" in my heart, —something I had never done before, when our conference meetings were going on. I was satisfied. All was going on well. God was being glorified in accordance with my prayer. The bitter trial was being used to throw his helpless people back upon him. It was being used to make them trust in his strength, and not in an arm of flesh. O thank him for coming to our help.

"Swifter than the lightning flashes
In God's swifter wing of love."

Trust him, for his marvellous kindness is great. He heareth the cry of the humble, let our petitions arise daily and unitedly to him. Draw nearer to him day by day. We need to pray. There is no help for us save in God.

Dear Restitution:

It is not surprising that persons, and also the Church of God, are misrepresented. The Apostle Paul even is misrepresented when in writing to the Corinthian brethren, (1 Cor. xv. 51, 52,) he says, "We shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump..... the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

The brethren in Michigan will not hesitate to believe the New Testament rather than the "opinion" of any man. Fraternally,

Notes on the Bible School at Torch Lake, Mich.

Other pressing duties have delayed me in presenting a few remarks on the very successful, profitable and pleasurable Bible School at Torch Lake, Aug. 1 to 15, 1906. On Aug. 1 I arrived at Central Lake about 11 A. M. was met by Bro. H. H. Chamberlain of Eastport, a pleasant drive of about seven miles brought us to his home. The pleasure of the ride was that I found Bro. Chamberlain "sound in the faith." I was kindly welcomed by Sister Chamberlain and daughter Sister Carrie. After dinner we went to Torch Lake, 2½ miles south, where I was introduced to Sisters Boice and Richardson, a little later to Bro. Boice. I found them fixing affairs in the town hall for a living room. Shortly after Sisters Woodward and Shay arrived. It was the intention to live in a vacant house close by the hall, and hold the school and meetings in the hall, but we were kindly asked to use the meeting house where they have Sunday school, but no regular preaching. This offer was readily and cheerfully accepted, and at 7:30 P. M. we held our first services. There was a fair audience, and the best attention given. Next day at 10:00 A. M. Bible study began. The programme was so rich and varied that it was simply impossible to do full justice to the subjects. Nevertheless much was done, the interest was absorbing. Sister Boice had prepared several large charts, which showed not only great labor, but great pains had been taken by Biblical quotations, and diagrams to illustrate the simple truth of God's great plan of salvation. These charts were freely used, from them much, very much valuable detail of instruction was given, what these charts did not embrace or contain, were drawn on sheets of paper by those who had the subject. Outlines of subjects were made with the references, questions were asked freely, answers kindly given, profound truths were spoken, expressions and opinions given and exchanged without a single jangle of words or the least ill feeling. It was a great feast of Biblical knowledge from first to last, for those present, as each one so expressed. What a grand education for any sincere believer entering, or having entered upon the study of the Bible.

Having no previous experience, I went with a vague idea of what was meant by a Bible school. I had an idea that it was not necessary, and another thought that it would not suit any real purpose, and still another thought that there might be such difference of opinion among those who presented the topics, that no practical good would result. It is with pleasure, and satisfaction that I now record, that my ideas and thoughts found no foundation in fact. The Torch Lake Bible school, was a Bible School and nothing else, and while I am free to say that it is not necessary to salvation, I am also free to advise every one, babes desiring the sincere milk of the Word, as well as those in need of strong meat, to attend the Bible School. While it is true that "There is no royal road to knowledge," it is just as true that a Bible school conducted as the one at Torch Lake is a short cut to much valuable Bible knowledge. In ten days or two weeks the diligent student can gather a fund of information on Bible topics, that alone he might not acquire in years. The truth to salvation, and much to illustrate and impress that great truth was brought out in the Bible study and indelibly stamped on the receptive mind, through both ear and eye.

The Bible school is entirely different from the ordinary Bible class, or from a Conference, or series of meetings. It does not take the place of such, but it certainly does come in as a fourth occasion of great value to the honest hearted, truth loving student of "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ."

Referring to the report of Sister M. A. Woodward in THE RESTITUTION of Aug. 22, I desire to emphasize the statements she makes, and ask all the faithful to give the report earnest consideration, and what support you can to the Bible School. Sister Boice has proved herself worthy as general superintendent. Sister Woodward is in the right place as treasurer, as she has also proved. As corresponding and recording secretary I have not yet proved, but am willing to do my best, as far as time will permit. Concerning my appointment to prepare a weekly Sunday school lesson to be printed in THE RESTITUTION, if space can be secured, the matter has not yet taken definite shape. Since the close of the school so many things that had to be attended to have claimed my attention that no effort has been made about the lesson subject, but all may come in time. It will be of considerable interest and profitable for our Sunday schools to have lessons unmixed with errors. For the present I close repeating the prayer of Sister Woodward that "God may direct and further this work."

I wish to add that with regard to the evening meetings, we had increased attendance until there was standing room only, the best of attention, and interest manifested. Some earnest inquiries, and many kindly invitations to return, not even an evidence of prejudice, more work should be done there.

Conference Report.

The Indiana Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana assembled in Argos, Sept. 7, 1906. The meeting opened Friday morning at 10:30 with appropriate exercises, after which Brother Wince gave the opening address in behalf of the Conference which was fittingly replied to by Brother Wm. Railsback of the Argos church. At 11:00 o'clock Brother Wagoner read the 4th chapter of Ephesians and based his sermon on the whole chapter.

At 2:00 P. M. Brother Wince read the 136th Psalm, then took for his text, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto salvation." Brother Halstead followed with a few pointed remarks on the same subject.

At 7:00, the social meeting was led by Brother Richard Railsback. And at 7:30 Brother Wagoner spoke on, "Will Jesus ever come back to this earth?" Thirty passages on the coming of Christ were read in quite rapid succession. And it was stated that there are two hundred declarations, directly or indirectly made concerning the coming of Christ.

The business meeting convened Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock. Roll call of churches showed the following represented, viz: Argos, Antioch, Burr Oak, Bracken, Plymouth, Rensselaer, South Bend and Hillsburg.

The Secretary's and Treasurer's reports showed that $447.80 had been paid into the hands of the Treasurer and that $162.11 had been paid out, leaving a balance of $285.19 still in the hands of the Treasurer.

The report of the Literature Committee showed a balance on hand of $29.25.

Officers for ensuing year elected as follows: President, J. H. Willey, Plymouth; 1st Vice President, J. L. Wince, Pierceton; 2nd Vice President, J. A. Barnhart, Rensselaer; Secretary, Mrs. Lydia Railsback, South Bend; Treasurer, T. O. Taber, Argos.

Evangelist Committee appointed by chair: Marion McCrory, Plymouth; Mrs. Etta Fry, Huntington; T. O. Taber, Argos.

Literature Committee elected: A. R. Underwood, E. K. Barnhill, S. Roxana Wince.

Historical Committee retained with Brother Wince substituted for A. H. Zilmer. Said committee was instructed to obtain the material already gathered and see to its publication, first in THE RESTITUTION, then in book form.

Ministerial certificates were granted the following persons on their applications: D. T. Halstead, S. T. Hook, J. F. Wagoner, J. L. Wince, J. H. Willey, W. H. Wilson.

Resolved, that the Executive Board be empowered to grant certificates to applicants as their judgment directs when Conference is not in session. Carried. Moved and carried that the words "be granted for one year" be inserted in section seven. Adjourned to meet in November.

Saturday afternoon at 2:00, Bro. Halstead spoke on "Some Peculiarities of a Peculiar People." Titus ii. 13-14. At 7:00 the Social meeting was led by Brother Wm. Railsback, Matt. vii. being the lesson read. At 7:30 Brother Hook gave as a basis for his sermon the last three verses of Galatians iii.

SUNDAY.

Brother Hook led the social meeting at 9:30. Lesson 2 Pet. i. At 10:30 sermon, Brother Wagoner followed by Brother Halstead. At 2:00 came the Communion service. Prior to the Communion the following programme was rendered, All pertaining to the Lord's Supper. Brother Wince's short talk. Sister Wince's paper read by Sister Underwood. Short talks were then given by Brethren D. T. Halstead, S. T. Hook, J. A. Burnham, W. D. Thompson, R. C. Railsback, Brother P. Neill's paper was read by Brother Underwood. Sister Flora Harris' paper read by Lydia Railsback. Brother E. K. Barnhill's paper by Brother Underwood. Brother Wagoner then gave a short talk. Communion conducted by Brother Wince.

At 7:00 the social meeting was led by R. C. Railsback, lesson Col. iii. 1-17. 7:40 Sermonettes: J. F. Wagoner, "The Sprinkling of the Blood on the Lintel posts," or "The Necessity of the Blood of Christ applied to the individual." S. T. Hook, "The Resurrection;" D. T. Halstead, "How is the Blood of Christ applied to us?"

The Bible School will be held in Plymouth in connection with the November Conference. Notice will be given in due time as to the exact date. Let as many as possibly can attend this school so that we may be the more able to spread the good news of the coming kingdom.

"We are laborers together with God."—Paul.

"My beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."—Paul.

The above utterances of the apostle Paul gives stability and dignity to the position of a laborer in the church of God.

"We then as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain."

God's favor rests upon the workers and Paul assures those that their labor is not in vain.

Co-operation is what is needed to make our work successful. We must not only co-operate, but we must seek that we may excel in all our work. If we did well last year, let us try to do a little better the coming year.

I wish to call particular attention to the work of Brother S. J. Lindsay, in the Bible Institute, at Oregon, Ill. Having received a letter giving so favorable a report, I take the liberty of giving some items of interest to all.

"We had nine baptisms during the School Session and Conference, all but one, young people."

"Brother Lindsay also has a correspondence class, a large one."

Does Bible School work pay?

Do you know that the great commission of Christ requires that teaching be made the essential feature of Evangelical work?

The Bible makes distinction between preaching and teaching and the latter is required as much as the former. Please turn to 2 Tim. ii. 2.

The more formal way of presenting truth is oratorical and is called preaching. There are very few among the masses who have this talent. Many are attempted to become preachers and have failed. The teacher is more the product of education although not all are successful teachers. Teaching indicates study; it implies education; its method is that of question and answer. Trained teachers are needed, trained for this work. This must be met by special effort to develop a suitable teaching force. It cannot be questioned that the religious education of the young was carefully sought in Old Testament times. It prevailed among the Jews in apostolic times.

The ancient Jewish synagogue on Sabbath afternoons was a "Beth-ha-Midrash" a House of search or study. The early Christian church modeled its services of worship largely on those of the synagogue. The practice of teaching was general and the associated study of the Bible was recognized as a duty.

The Bible School is an essential feature of church work and must be given on prominence to make the work successful. Let the work be maintained. Establish Bible Schools and see that competent teachers are provided. The co-operation of the Berean society is needed and we earnestly and prayerfully place this matter before you, for your consideration. The attention of the State Conference is asked for, and each State Evangelist is solicited to push the matter to the front. To aid in the work let each Superintendent of the Bible Schools send to my address, 1009 S. Wright St., Champaign, Ill., a report of the schools for Aug. 1906. These reports will bring us in touch with your work and be of benefit to all. Let all the states enter heartily in a general work.

Please state what literature is used and any other information that will be suggestive. Be prompt and if any know of any school that will not be reached by this notice report.

Editor Restitution:

On Saturday, August 25, 1906, the brethren of the Church of God, at Blush, Mo., began one of the most interesting meetings I ever attended. We had good interest both day and night.

The preaching was done by the writer and S. A. Cooper, a young schoolteacher, a son of W. A. Cooper, who was baptized Oct. 29, 1901. He was one of the five of the same family that were baptized that day. I have had the pleasure of baptizing seven of that family, and right counting S. A. Cooper's wife.

Sister Morse, wife of our beloved John Morse, and their daughter Sadie were at the meeting. Brother Morse could not be there as his business was in shape so that he could not leave home. Brother and Sister Critser, and Sister Mayberry were also there.

The Gospel was discussed pro and con from beginning to end.

On Sunday Sept. 2, six put on Christ by being baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus Christ, and in the act of baptism formed a union with the true vine, John xv. 1, and thereby became heirs—heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.

A strange thing happened at the baptizing. The Baptists were holding a meeting a little over a mile away, and both churches met at the water. The Baptist baptized first. There were three of them, then we were ready to begin with ours. We had five on the roll, but here, an old man, formerly a Lutheran, stepped up to me and said, "I want to be baptized first," which made six for us.

With a little talk at the water we brought out all the young converts, and many of the old of the Baptist church that night with the best of interest.

On Sunday evening we broke bread, and I think the young people will never forget that night. It was a time of rejoicing for all. After this I gave my farewell address, Acts xx. "For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God. And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more." And when I had thus spoken we knelt and prayed one with another, the last hymn was sung, and then I started home. Several of the dear ones accompanied me to the train.

The church at Blush is a model church. The Josephites or Sabbath-keepers have tried to get to Blush to make divisions as they have been doing wherever they go; but the brethren are satisfied with the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God. Brother P. J. Graham has the brethren at that place well trained in singing, and Brother Cooper preaches for them, and they are studying the Word, having a Bible class. My prayer is that God's blessing go with them and go with all the brethren everywhere they are studying God's Word, to find out the way of life more perfect. Amen.

JOHN FOORE.

In the Work.

To the Churches of God in Christ Jesus:

At the close of the Conference at Waterloo, we immediately shipped the tent to Whitten, Iowa, for a 10 days meeting. Bro. Adams going there with the tent and starting the meeting Thursday evening Aug. 30th. I joined him Friday Sept. 1. Whitten is a small town on the C. & N. W. Ry, in Hardin Co. Bro. Eychaner went there with the tent some 10 or 12 years ago and held a two weeks meeting. After having a great deal of trouble to get a place to pitch the tent, finally a man who was not fenced in by sectarianism gave him permission to place it upon two vacant lots belonging to his son. And incurred the displeasure of the Methodists to an extent that from that day to this they have never given him a day's work. As he runs a dray line and the town is not very large, it has been quite a loss to him financially. Then came the memorable debate of Braden of the Christian church with Bro. Eychaner, in which his own members declared, they wished he (Braden) had never come to Whitten, and this of course left prejudice in the minds of a few, but our meeting was well attended until Tuesday of the week following our start when the County fair began at Eldora, and on Tuesday and Wednesday our attendance was small, but Thursday a few more dropped in and we had a fair attendance through the meeting, which we continued until over Sunday Sept. 16th, when we folded our tent and shipped it to Cole, Iowa, preparatory to making an effort at Hickory Grove, the home of Bro. Sam White and Bro. J. Fisk. Our meetings at Whitten were interrupted two nights on account of storm and on the last Sunday we had to change on account of the funeral of a prominent young lady, 19 years of age. We proclaimed the gospel faithfully and while a large number showed the best of interest, it was impossible to get but a few to come every night so they could get an unbroken chain, and realize what God has in store for man, in other words their attendance was like most religion spasmodic. How characteristic of Paul's description of the last days is the condition of things at Whitten. The people are in the throes of the erection of a $7000 church. They had a very good church and a very good old man for pastor, but both ch[illegible] and pastor were behind the [illegible] The old man was turned out to shift for himself, the old church disposed of for a very small sum for a store building, and a large modern church, large enough for a city, erected on the site. The new church has every modern convenience, and as one of the painters who showed me around the building remarked to me, "This building is fitted up more for fun than for church work." And as I looked at their large dining room, kitchen ranges, etc., the thought came to me, here is just the reason there is so much irreverence among young people who belong to church, as there are one or two entertainments of worldly nature each week in the church parlors. Young people look upon the church as no better than a hall and have no more reverence than young people who attend dances, and I have noticed to my sorrow that worldly young people as a rule show as much and more reverence in church, than the young people who are Leaguers and Endeavorists. Verily Paul's words are true, have the form of godliness but denying the power thereof. Oh, how I long for the coming Master.

At Whitten the last Sunday we were there 7 or 8 young men sat in the shade of a large tree within 200 feet of our tent and played cards all the time (for money too) while we were holding meeting. Do you wonder that the citizens of this place would not allow us to place our tent on their ground ten years ago? These were their crops. I guess they will need a $7000 church and an up to date preacher to save their young men. Oh how ignorant people are of the gospel and two weak men in the State of Iowa to proclaim it. Pray for us that we may be able to reach some who are honest and also awaken our brethren to the important fact that only "The pure in heart shall see God." How can a man be pure in heart without a pure doctrine? And how can a man with a pure doctrine be truly a Christian without a pure life.

O. J. ADAMS.

Youth's Column.

The Boydays.

"As I was in the days of my youth."—Job xxix. 1.

The boydays—the boydays— they were the best of all!
Although all the lushes of the years the boydays ever call;
Out of the darkness of the night resplendently they shine;
And what a wreath of memories for one and all they twine!
No matter what of baser stuff the later years may hold
We may look up and back and see the boydays all were gold.

The boydays—the boydays—when come the threads of gray,
You may live in Tomorrow, but you dream of Yesterday;
You may look in the mirror, but the only one you see
Is one that has the sunshine of the boy you used to be;
And, musing, you may stumble on a broken bit of song
Of wonders from the boydays in a cadence sweet and strong.

The boydays—a picture with not a hue to fade;
The glamour of the grasses where the summer sunshine played;
The sparkle of the ripple in some jolly little stream
Whose song was built of jewels on a never dying gleam;
The nodding of the roses and the whiteness of the snow—
They blend across the picture of the long and long ago.

The boydays—the boydays—we never lose them all:
The best of all the memories, they come at fancy's call,
Some how they are made perfect by the alchemy of years,
Which keeps alive the smiles they held and never finds the tears.
The heart is but a treasure chest our precious things to hold,
And chiefest of the goodly store is all the boydays' gold.

Birds of the Bible. No. 3.

THE OSTRICH.

The ostrich is frequently referred to in ancient heathen writings, and also in the Bible. Though forbidden the Jews as food, it is very much used by other nations, who, from their fondness for ostrich flesh, acquired the name of "ostrich-eaters."

The Romans regarded their flesh with much favor. The Emperor Heliogabulus, at a certain feast, had in one dish the brains of six hundred ostriches. The savages of Africa at the present day eat their flesh.

The Arabs call this largest of all birds the "Father of the Desert;" the ancient Hebrews gave it the title of "Daughter of the Desert;" throughout the east it is known as the camel-bird, from its shape, which from a distance, somewhat resembles the camel.

It is said to subsist without water, and its food is of the coarsest kind; leather, wood, stones, hair, rags, lizards, serpents, are swallowed by it with eagerness.

It has prodigious strength, and is occasionally used in carrying burdens, and is the swiftest running of all birds, if not of animals. It is seven feet from end of beak to tip of tail, and from seven to eight feet in height, and with wings each about three feet long.

Ostriches are black, white, or gray. The head is covered with shining hairs, with occasional tufts here and there; its feathers are soft and downy. The bill is short, in shape resembling that of the duck; the eye somewhat resembles the human eye, being furnished on the upper lid with lashes. The legs and feet are covered with scales, and each foot is divided almost in halves, forming two great toes, which are also scaly. The skin is very tough and is often used as leather; a kind of vest is also made from it by some of the Arabs.

Five or six birds lay in one nest, sitting on the eggs by turns. During the sitting the male never leaves the vicinity of the nest, but watches from the nearest sand-hill, day after day, until he is reduced almost to starvation. Strange it is that though so faithful to their eggs and young when undisturbed, if once frightened away they abandon them, and consequently young ostriches in sad straits of starvation are frequently found straggling devotedly over the sands.

Jeremiah refers to this cruelty: "The daughter of my people is become cruel, like ostriches in the wilderness."

The ostrich is capable of such speed that it would probably never be captured were it not for its foolish habit of moving in circles, which, however extended, gives its pursuers advantage over it and enables them, after persistent pursuit, lasting sometimes for several days, to tire it out.

When fatigued and famished, finding further effort of no avail, it will frequently turn and attack its pursuers with its feet and wings in a manner almost overpowering; but its usual habit is to cover its poor, silly, weary head in the first thicket or in the sand thinking to hide from view.

The speed of the ostrich is its chief characteristic—a speed which mocks its pursuers—while the huge outspread wings, like sails, bear it onward in a flight which almost spurns the sands.

This rapidity of motion is beautifully mentioned in the sacred poem: "What time she lifteth up herself on high, she scorneth the horse and his rider."

To each created thing God gives its own gifts, whether it be that of gorgeous plumage, or sweet song, or fleet wing—whether it be among cultivated fields or barren sands; on every one is a distinctive mark given by the great Creative Hand.—Georgiana Kringle.

Sermons for the Little Ones. No. 3.

Because Abraham was willing to mind God in everything—willing to give him all the child he had, his heavenly Father again promised him the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession—and that he would be his God.

When Isaac had grown to be a man, the Lord appeared to him, through his angel, and told him he must not go down to Egypt to live, but must sojourn—stay as a stranger—in the land that had been promised by oath to his father—that God would be with and bless him, and give unto him and unto his seed, all these countries—that his seed should become as numerous as the stars of heaven, and that in his seed, or son, all nations should be blessed, because Abraham had obeyed God's voice.

When Isaac's son Jacob was going to his uncle Laban's at Padan-Aram as he went toward Haran, the sun went down and he stopped to rest and sleep until morning.

It was a lonely place. He had only stones for a pillow, but while he slept, he dreamed that a wonderful ladder was set up on earth, the top of which reached unto heaven.

The angels of God were going up and coming down upon the ladder, the Lord stood above it and said, "I am the Lord God of Abraham, thy father, and the God of Isaac. I am going to give to you and your children, the very land on which you are sleeping. Your children shall be as the dust of the earth, and in your seed, or son, all nations of the earth shall be blessed."

Now, can you remember all that has been promised to these good men, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob? Was it heaven, that God deeded to Abraham, or did he say anything about giving heaven to Isaac and to Jacob? No, you say; "it was the land of Canaan, that was promised to Abraham, for he walked through it and looked at it 'northward and southward and eastward and westward, and had a will, or deed of it given to him, mapping it out from the river of Egypt, to the great river, the river Euphrates.'"

"Nor was it heaven," you will say, that was promised to Isaac, because he told him he would give him all the countries, that had been promised by oath, to his father, and Jacob was to have the very land on which he was lying, for his everlasting inheritance.

1. Then you have learned that it was not heaven, but the land of Canaan, that was promised to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. That is one thing.

2. That they were to have the land forever. That is two things.

3. That God was going to bless them. That is three things.

4. That he was going to make their seed or children as numerous as the stars of heaven and as the dust of the earth. That is four things.

5. That some son of Abraham is going to have the power and dominion of the whole earth, or possess the gates of his enemies. That is five things.

6. That their children should have the same countries for an everlasting inheritance. That is six things.

7. That in that one wonderful son and in their other children, all the people of the earth would be made happy. That is seven things.

8. And that God was going to be their God. That is eight things.

But you don't know what God meant when he said he would be their God, do you?

Abraham, Isaac and Jacob had to die, like everybody else, because Adam did not mind God, so they could not have the land of Canaan forever in this present life.

A good man in the Acts of the Apostles says Abraham never had enough of the land of Canaan for his own to set his foot on, yet God had promised that he would give it to him; and Paul, of whom you have so often heard, says Abraham lived in the land of promise, just like a stranger—that he, with Isaac and Jacob, dwelt in tents, in the land which they was after to receive as an inheritance—in the very land, that by and by they were to have forever.

God had willed that land to them; it was his land, but they had made themselves his children, by minding him, so that he could be their father and they could get the land.

It is only children you know, who get what belongs to their fathers.

So people who do what God says, become his children and get his land.

But Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are dead. They have long ago turned to dust. They have never received the promise.

We will tell you the next time how they are to get it.—The Friend of the Children.

blessed hope; even the appearing of the glory, which is best.

There are three fundamental principles in this text. First, a glory to appear upon which hope is based that Paul calls blessed. Second, that of a supreme being, separate and apart as two persons. Third, An at-one-ment between the two persons.

As Jehovah defined is the great God and Creator of all things. The name Jesus, given by Jehovah of the promised Son, defined Immanuel is God with us, and fully explains the above. Messiah defined is the Anointed Christ and King. Thus the unity between Father and Son as used by Christ is perfect. Without the first cause there could be no second; and God's plan of salvation void of effect. But as it was Jehovah's plan to redeem fallen man through his Son, Paul exhorts in this text to be waiting for the appearing of the glory of Jehovah Jesus. And the hope of seeing this manifestation the apostle calls a blessed hope. And further more it is written, that according to the faith of God's elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness, in hope of eternal life, which God who cannot lie, promised before the world began, hath in due time manifested his Word through preaching, according to the command of God our Savior, (the first cause). Thus my text is plainly defined by Paul to Titus in chapter i. 1, 2, 3.

My sisters and brothers of like precious faith, I feel within me that we have come together in love for the truth; and with our hearts brim full of this blessed hope. Yes, I am fully persuaded that we love to think and talk about it. That we love to hear from each other concerning it, and what the hope pertains to. The apostles asked Jesus at one of their gatherings, Acts i. 6, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?

Paul said he was judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers, unto which hope our twelve tribes instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. Acts xxvi. 6, 7. Hope was thus based on something to be restored. And as it was a lost kingdom Israel hoped for, the blessed hope is based on the glory of the restoring of the kingdom. Peter in one of his earnest discourses said in Acts iii. 21, That the heaven must receive (or retain) Jesus until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." "Now faith," writes Paul in Heb. xi. 1, "is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Then clearly restitution or restoration is the substance of things hoped for. And the coming of Jesus culminates both faith and hope, in the actual possession of a vast and rich inheritance of which the children of God are not only heirs with God, but joint heirs with his Anointed Christ. This inheritance is under the whole heavens; and will increase in vastness until all governments are subdued into one universal kingdom.

Likened by Jesus unto a mustard seed—the least of all seeds, but when it is grown, the birds of the air lodge in the branches thereof. Matt. xiii. 31, 32. And the time will come when the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever even forever. Dan. vii. 18, 27.

Faith being based on the hope. "Whereby is given unto us exceeding great and precious promises." "Which is the earnest of our inheritance." "Until the redemption of our purchased possession." Then the glory of the Father in the appearing and presence of the Restorer will redound unto the praise of his glory. Eph. i. 14; 2 Pet. i. 4. That glory in restoration will have raised to immortal life the sleeping dead—it will have changed the found worthy, waiting ones. Beyond this restitution will "removal the curse." Rev. xxii. 3. So that instead of the thorn will come up the fir tree. Isa. lv. 13. "It will cause the desert to rejoice, and blossom as the rose abundantly." Isa. xxxv. 1, 2.

Swords and implements of war will no longer devastate in cruel wars; but are used as ploughshares and pruning hooks, so that the ploughman will overtake the reaper and the earth thereby yield her increase. Isa. ii. 4; Ezek. xxxiv. 27; Amos ix. 13. "Then will the Lord turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord to serve him with one consent."

The remnant of Israel shall not do iniquity nor speak lies—they shall bed and lie down and none shall make them afraid. Zeph. iii. 9, 13.

"Jerusalem shall be a rejoicing and her people a joy." "For behold I create new heavens and a new earth." Isa. lxv. 17, 18, "And it shall come to pass that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the mountain, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it."

"Out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem." And the inhabitants shall not say I am sick. The people that dwell there shall be forgiven their iniquity.

The city hath no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. The saved of the nations shall walk in the light of it, and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it. And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day for there shall be no night there, no more sorrow nor crying, no more death, no more tears, for God will wipe away all tears from their eyes. Rev. xxi. 23-25. Rom. vii. 17. Blessed restitution age; when he who will restore, shall have come. And blessed be those who are waiting for that blessed hope and the glory of the great God, and of his Anointed, who is coming with power and great glory to reward with aionian life to all those who shall be accounted worthy. I have pictured some of the good things to come which we, sisters and brothers, as sons and daughters by adoption into the family of God believe will come; and all buoyed by the hope that is within us that the coming of the Lord is nigh at hand even at the door. And how we would that all should know the Lord and love his appearing. But they will not come, and we can only take heed to ourselves that we do not fall back to the weak and beggarly elements of the world. But I do not wonder at the careless lethargy in these latter days, from the mad rush for wealth and the various ways for money getting, both by honest and dishonest methods. Together with the many allurements of pleasures that are rife on the right hand and on the left, is it any wonder so few grasp the "Way of Life," so hopeful and promising of age lasting life that is of itself priceless? But Christ foreseeing what would be in the latter days, pictured to those about him while on the Mount, two ways that lay before them in which they would do well to take heed.

For one way was broad with a wide gate; and many were going in there at. Passing by the narrow way, because the gate was strait, and beyond its confines no pleasure was visible and few attracted to enter therein. How surely are we living in the latter days, for this prophetic saying of Jesus is virtually verified.

Pastors of churches are puzzled how to amuse their parishioners in order to hold and draw them in that time of life. Subjects rather more trending of politists, higher criticism and things of every day life, than to the gospel of the kingdom, are announced on bulletin boards. Even then pleasure over rules—Sunday excursions and base games allure the people from home and the church. Ball games often draw even professing church going people to witness them rather than enjoy the scenic beauty of our lovely parks of God's handiwork in stately trees, beautiful native flowers and shrubs, and the various hues of the green verdure that God has given us so much of, and of which we never tire.

Such are things that not only our young people can enjoy, but ourselves also, sisters and brothers that are older, for in this there is no sin. "Be ye not conformed to the things of this world," Rom. xii. 2, means sacrifice in much to the one who would be a true follower of Jesus; and the sacrifice falls heavily on the young people. But for this sacrifice, dear young people present, a loving voice said some 1900 years ago, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." "And he that overcometh shall inherit all things." Why then so few enter the strait gate where self-denial and sacrifice of worldly amusements are required is quickly understood, because a loved voice rings out in words, "I am the Way—and the strait gate," "I am also the truth and the life," "I am the resurrection and the life," "I am the door of the sheep." "My sheep hear my voice and I know them, and they follow me." Thus on down either side the narrow way, these sayings of Jesus are on his bulletin board—which is the Book of books. And Jesus defines himself to be the narrow way. And we, sisters and brothers, who have been begotten by the Word of truth have entered the narrow way from choice. We have passed through the strait gate by obedience of the Word. And now we see far out on the crest of the waves as it were, the precious life boat. On its pendant reads "eternal life." It is a prize—purchased with an exceeding great price. And if we win it we must run a race, and surmount every obstacle that tends to thwart us in this life. The invitation is broad and to all. And O we would that others would come with us, and with us run the race for the mark for the prize of our high calling which is in Christ Jesus. In patience looking, waiting for the full fruition of things hoped for, that is promised not only to the redeemed of the Lord, but to all the families of the earth, who will then learn righteousness, and be blessed through Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the faithful believing servants of God, to whom the promises were made.

MATILDA WOODBERY.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Dear Sisters:

Since meeting at the Conference last year at Cleveland, Ohio, at which some of you were present, we have continued holding our meetings every two weeks, missing one. Having an average attendance of fourteen members, and in all eighteen visitors.

We have endeavored to do good when and where we could, visiting the sick and helping any one in need. About seventy calls were made during the year, and we also had the pleasure of adding four names to our membership.

After finishing the study of the Acts we took up the study of the book of Romans and are now at the fourteenth chapter. The meetings are certainly a help to us in many ways, and certainly show how much good can be accomplished with a little, when many work together in a systematic way. We certainly hope to continue the work. It is also a little time of rest much needed by most of us.

Our hearts were saddened very soon after the Conference last year by the sudden death of dear Sister Greenbriar, who so much enjoyed our meetings when she was able to attend. Being blind she was unable to attend very often.

Our desire is that we may be spared to do more for the Lord, as the time is short, that we may be ready when he comes.

SISTER GOSS, Sec.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

I have made a report of our treasury fund from the last Conference held in Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 16, 1905. During the year we have held 29 meetings, two of which have been held in the parks. In the period of time stated we have collected a total amount of $62.00, $12.50 honorary, and $2.70 in donations, making a total amount of $78.20 collected. We have disbursed $72.80 leaving at the present time a balance of $5.40 in our treasury. We are all anxious for this good work to go on, and thus we are combining all our energies and ask an interest in your prayers.

MATTIE FANKBONER.

WE wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Obituary.

Harriett Alberta Lindsay born Feb. 8, 1874. Baptized into the body of Christ when about eighteen years of age, and has ever since been faithful and consistent as a follower of her Master. Though her illness was of long standing and her suffering intense, yet she bore it all with unusual patience. She passed from life into death, Sept. 10, 1906, age 32 years, 7 months and 2 days. We sorrow not as others who have no hope, but patiently wait for him who doeth all things well. She was buried at Adaline, Ill., Sept. the 12th, when the writer spoke to a large concourse of relatives and friends, regarding the sad reality of death, and the God-appointed means of rescue from its power—resurrection. God bless the bereaved family, and bind up their broken hearts.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. I refer the brethren to W. H. Wilson, who has been at my house and who knows my standing at home. Now brethren, this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

T. J. DANIEL.

Annual Meeting.

The Churches of God of Southern Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, who believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God, and all who believe that whom Christ has made free are free indeed, will convene in Neosho County, Kansas, October 12, 1906, and continue over Sunday, and if necessary longer. We have some important business to come before this meeting. We read in Acts xv. that in the days of the Apostles there rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses, and the apostles and elders came together for to consider of this matter, or to confer together about this matter.

This was the first conference meeting that we read of in the Bible, and that was to settle a difficulty among the brethren. We want all the brethren that can to come. Our program is always ready. It is the Gospel that Paul preached, Rom. i. 16. The ones who will do this preaching are not as yet selected, but I hope that we may have able men who will preach what is in the Bible and nothing else. How much I wish that Brothers Daniel, Snowden and W. H. Wilson could be with us. We expect Brother Oliver and Brother Joseph Williams to be with us. Rollin is on the Santa Fe R. R. We will see that you get something to eat and a place to sleep, and will raise as much as we can to cover your expenses. Come and help us in Macedonia.

By order of the Church.

JOHN FOONS.

Dear Restitution:

I arrived at Hobgood, N. C. Sept. 6, and began meetings. I expect to remain here until the 24th. As I shall remain in the south this winter, if any desire my labors they will please let me hear from them. A brother in Tennessee wrote to me at Muscatine, Iowa, asking me to come to his place, but I have lost his name and address, so I ask him to write me again and I will visit him before going home.

Your brother in hope of eternal life.

Immortality in Christ.

The belief in the dogma of the natural immortality of the soul, and its natural, I may say its almost necessary corollary, the eternal torment of the wicked, has given rise to much strange and inconsistent reasoning on the part of religious teachers and preachers in their efforts to harmonize this belief with the principles of justice and mercy. The result has been that many men of logical minds have failed to be convinced, and have turned from the subject if not with disgust, at least with a conviction that the subject was too deep for them, and they therefore prefer to let it alone. In the past so almost universal has been the belief in this dogma that it does not occur to them to question its soundness, or to endeavor to discover on what its claims to consideration are based. Oh! if they would only do as did the noble Bereans—search the Scriptures "whether" so strange a doctrine could be found there.

As having a bearing in this subject I give below, an extract from the author's preface to a book, entitled "The Durative Nature of Future Punishment," by the learned Henry Constable, once Prebendary of the city of Cork, Ireland.

J. T. SMITH.

The doctrine of life in Christ is the key to the interpretation of the Scriptures. Read in its light, the Bible is a new book. The perplexities, the doubts, the surmisings of God that would force their way, the dark, gloomy future, are all dispersed. This doctrine has made the Bible ten thousand times more precious to me than it was before; has made Christ more honored, and the great Father more loved.

I no longer wonder that there should be fierce and inveterate opposition to the propagation of this grand doctrine. It was the first truth which Satan sought to obscure and obliterate by the introduction into the Christian church of a specious and false philosophy borrowed from Greece and Egypt, and first taught by himself to Eve in Eden. He will not easily part with a philosophy which has enabled him to do his work so well. Views that cover God with the aspect with injustice, or alienate men's minds from him, or lead tens of thousands to infidelity, or enable men to get rid altogether of the idea that sin is a fatal and destructive thing, will not be easily given up. The doctrine that the soul is the true man, and that the soul is gifted with an inalienable immortality, brought in a mutilated shape into theology from the philosophy of Plato, has led to all this. It has led to Augustine's exhibition of God as a being of revolting cruelty, and to the future of much of his world as displaying only the most intense and harrowing misery; it has led to Origin's excision of vengeance from among the divine attributes thereby opening the way to unbridled sin; it hastened to the Roman purgatory, with all its attendant errors, as a refuge from what was felt to be too great a punishment to be inflicted by God upon ordinary offenders; it has raised against Scripture and the God of the Bible the derisive taunt and outcry of infidelity; it has caused the hearts of believers to mourn over a conduct on the part of God which they could not justify. Altogether no dogma whatever can be named which has been productive of one-half the evil consequences that the dogma of man's inalienable immortality has produced * * *

The triumph of the doctrine of life in Christ (only) will produce a revolution in theology. The standard works alike of the reformed and Roman churches are in a great measure based upon the idea of the inalienable immortality of man * * * When this comes to be acknowledged as a mere human conceit, many, many admired commentaries, treatises, sermons, confessions of faith, will be seen to have been based in a great measure upon a foundation of sand.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Sententious Paragraphs.

The greatest enemies of Christianity are those who make a blazing profession without a steady shining conduct

Whoever looks for a friend without imperfections will never find what he seeks. We love ourselves with all our faults, and we ought to love our friends in like manner.

Love implores, but cannot coerce; it influences, but cannot compel; it knocks for admission at the door of every heart, but it cannot force an entrance.

The Spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ comes into a man's heart as the sunlight comes over the face of the world. There is nothing hidden from the heat thereof. The Lord himself tells us that our inner man should be full of the light, "having no part dark." His Holy Spirit undertakes to guide us into all truth.

Only those who have sympathized with others in the hour of need have the right, in their hour of trouble, to expect comfort and help.

By nothing do we dishonor God more than by limiting him. By nothing do we limit him more than by allowing our human ideas of what he purposes to be the measure of our expectations.

Many Christians are like the Leaning Tower of Pisa—as far gone from uprightness as it is possible to go without toppling over. The world is much more likely to pull over the Campanile at Pisa than the Campanile to lift the world.

To the Churches and isolated brethren and sisters of the State of Ohio:

At our last Conference held at Brush Creek, Miami Co., we were elected State Evangelist. The success of the year's work depends largely upon you. The Evangelist can do but little without your hearty co-operation. We shall be pleased to visit you and hold meetings as you shall direct. The Conference has provided that our expenses shall be met. It is our wish that you write to us that we may know your wishes.

Remember that the time for evangelizing is short. We should begin our work early. We have the whole State as our field. Our work should begin the last of September or early in October. We have no hobbies to present to those of "like precious faith." It shall be our purpose to preach the "gospel of the kingdom of God." What at the first was spoken by the Lord and confirmed unto us by them who heard him, we will preach. Hoping to be able to serve you all is our wish. Your brother in the Anointed. Address Rt 3, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Russellism Exposed.

There has been an increased demand for a sharp expose of the cunningly devised fables of Russellism, showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of the Christian faith.

I am now engaged in writing such an expose; showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of Christianity. It will be printed as a booklet of about thirty pages at ten cents each.

This will follow right along after the printing of Pine Woods Bible Class, the type-setting of which is now nearly completed. The booklet will be ready for distribution about the same time that Pine Woods Bible Class is ready to send out.

Those who wish Russellism Exposed may send in orders right away so that I may know how many to print.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Notice.

Brothers T. H. Owens and Killough of Beaver County, Okla., preach at Cline, Lavern and Zelma each Sunday. Any one visiting here enquire for C. A. Starkey, M. A. Starkey or Mrs. Gabriel Rohrback.

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" After getting the opinion of one who understands this language, we have no hesitation in recommending it as simply all right. Get some for your German friends. Send to M. Announcement.

Northern Kansas and Missouri Conference will convene in Morrill, Brown County, Kansas, Sept. 22, at 8 o'clock P. M., holding over the 30th Sept. inclusive. Morrill is situated on the Grand Island R. R. 54 miles west of St. Joseph, Mo. Preaching brethren: W. L. Crowe and S. C. Oliver, and others if they can be secured. Arrangements will be made to take care of visiting brethren before meeting commences.

PROGRAMME.

First subject, The purpose of God in creation. Perhaps several discourses on the same subject. Next, Why I believe the Bible. Again, Divine government vs. civil government. Again, Conversion. Again, In the church not in the kingdom. Again, The kingdom. What is it. Again, The object of Christ's second coming. Again, What must I do to be saved? Next the congregation will be given the privilege to name subjects. Saturday morning the Conference board will settle the finance affair and officers will be elected for the coming year and Evangelist hired. Now brethren, let us make the meeting a success. How? By coming and helping, your presence will be profitable, yourself will be rewarded. It always has and always will cost something to be a Christian.

We have arranged the meeting for the most leisure time among the farmers. A throng time cannot be excused. We are exhorted to not forget the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more as we see the day approaching.

By order of the Conference board. Trains due at Morrill from the east, 12:10 M. evening train; 10:10 P. M. From the west, morning 4:45 A. M., afternoon 2:23 P. M.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. Therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they got stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brothren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 26, 1906. NUMBER 36.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

September Goes.

September goes,
Now the mill
She wastes her time to turn in vain,
The day grows strange and cold
As when one leaves a passing inn,
But still a glow is in the wood
In varied reminiscence
Where but an hour ago she stood,
Her wide spent days to see.

September goes,
All wild with color,
Her rains heaped high with leaves and gold,
And frosts pranked with scarlet berries,
And blue asters in each meadow told
When she came singing down the way.
Soft Colonel, let us now withdraw
Make room for us in the day
Seem like the calm withdrawn moon.

September goes,
The sunset glow
Marks how her time is turned to ice;
And ripened corn in pen on row
Shakes out its banners to the sun,
Its purpled tassels silly droop
Above the tawny, crisping husk—
Thus her battalions troop on troop
Salute her in the weeping dusk.

September goes,
Her empty land
Finds in the last long flight of light,
And she is limpidest command
To blend into the brooding night,
But, throbbing from the distant down
Rise bugle call and thrum of drums
To mark how, now that she has gone,
All proudly proud October comes.

Have Faith in God. No. 1.

The above text is found in Mark xi. 22. The marginal rendering to my mind is an improvement. To merely believe in God as a being is not enough. "Have the faith of God," expresses a clearer thought. In the beginning man was required to have the faith of God. It was the lack of this that led to disobedience and introduced sin into the world. When the two sons of Adam offered sacrifice, the faith offering was accepted, the other rejected. The one, Abel offered what God required, a blood offering. The other offered of the fruits of the land. God said to Cain, "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? (Marginal, have the excellency)? And if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door. This incident proves that we must have the faith of God. No doubt these two brothers had been instructed when and what to offer. It is stated that in process of time (marg. at the end of days) they offered sacrifice, as the time (at the end of days) had been appointed the kind of a sacrifice had been made plain. To have the faith of God is to do his will. Paul says Heb. xi. 4, By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts. During all the past ages salvation has been by faith. These two brothers were striving for the "excellency" and the one who had the faith of God obtained it.

This brief history should be a warning to those who attempt to worship God in their own way. God's way should be our way. Paul says, "Faith is the substance (ground or confidence) of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. The unseen things of God are only made plain when we have the faith of God as it relates to definite things which our heavenly Father has caused to be recorded in his Word. We are admonished to study to show ourselves approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. The things that we are to know are the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Through faith we understand that the worlds (ages) were framed or adjusted by the Word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear. Heb. xi. 3. It is no part of God's faith to believe that he created the planets, including this earth. We should believe this in believing in God, but the framing or adjusting of the ages has reference to God's plans to redeem the earth and man. It is the plan that he has in which his Son Jesus the Christ shall sit on David's throne and with his redeemed saints restore all things lost in or through the first Adam.

This promise began when God said, The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head. It was more fully developed in the promise made to Abraham, "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." This promise points to the time when all sin will be removed from the earth. When the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the earth as the waters cover the deep. The faith of God relates to the framing or adjusting of the future ages and not to the creation of the worlds or planets.

Those who reject this gospel of the restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began reject God's plan of salvation. It is written that by or through faith the elders or ancients obtained a good report. The ancients were those from Abel to the time of Christ. Each succeeding age has more fully developed the plan of the ages. Noah's faith caused him to prepare an ark by which he saved himself and family. By this act he condemned the world and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith. Faith caused Abraham to go out to a place which he should afterward receive as an inheritance not knowing whither he went. He became a sojourner in the land of promise. By faith Moses when he was some years refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter. Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward. By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king; for he endured as seeing him who is invisible. These are incidents of a sublime faith. Noah being warned of God of things not seen as yet moved with fear (marg. being wary). Abraham obeyed, not asking God as to his plan of the ages. Moses refused worldly honors without knowing what God had for him in the future. For he endured as seeing him who is invisible. By the record we can see what God has in store for us.

The Apostle John says, Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. What a promise we have in Jesus, that we shall be like him as we shall see him as he is in his glorified state. Let us so labor that when our elder Brother shall come that we shall be found worthy of the trust imposed in us.

Your brother in the faith of the gospel.

Are You Discouraged?

Lift up your head desponding pilgrim; think of the time when Christ shall come. The clouds may lower dark and forbidding, but the Master is at the helm and will bring the grand old ship safely to land.

The Church of God has passed through many storms, but God was watching all the time. The Master himself did not take the throne of his father David while passing his short earth life, though his followers supposed that to be the consummation of the events of that age. Instead he went to the cross, wherein his greatest hour of need, all forsook him and fled, and were ready to cry, "All is lost, let us go back to our fishing, for we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel." And Peter was ready to swear he never knew him. All hope had fled from the few faithful followers, but God's eye was on the beloved Son, who was passing through trial [illegible] clouds broke and light shone through the darkness with its glad words, He is not here, he is risen.

Rome had done her work, the Jews had accomplished their object in slaying the supposed impostor, but the triumphant Christ spoiled all their plans with this cry of victory, I am he that was dead, but am alive forever more, and still while he came out a victor, Satan was marshalling his hosts for further work, and under the powers of pagan and papal Rome, set about the task of wearing out the saints of the Most High, and Papal Rome for twelve hundred and sixty years lost no time in carrying on her terrible work of destruction.

Thousands were starved to death in loathsome prison cells. Who did this horrible work? Rome and the inquisition. The river Loire was choked with the bodies of God's faithful martyrs, Rogers, Ridley, Cranmer, Hooker and Lady Jane Gray, with hosts of others felt the extent of those horrors, Rome was not willing to give up her most cherished purpose. The reformation had secured a foothold in Britton, and a mighty effort must be made to wipe it out, and off the face of the earth. Who shall make the trial? Rome's most favored tool, Spain. They set about the task by organizing an immense fleet called the Invincible Armada, whose object was to crush the Church of God and all Protestantism forever, to strike a decisive blow to the Protestant faith of which England was then the bulwark (Encly. Brittanica). O what a day of gloom and darkness to God's people, but he was looking after his cause, and he triumphed over man and all human power, using his own means to accomplish this, and as Queen Elizabeth well said, God blew and with his breath the foe was scattered, and the Invincible Armada of 150 vessels, was no more than straws before the hurricane, they reached Spain at last, a few broken, storm-beaten vessels, and a few half-starved, discouraged seamen. Who was responsible for this suffering and devastation? Rome and no one else. Daniel's little horn power and no other, that power that thought to change times and laws, and wear out the saints of the Most High. Paul's man of sin, the anti-christ. In confirmation of these stubborn facts we have the united verdict of the best men who ever lived, who gave their lives for the cause of truth, and philosophying, arguing or trying to excuse Rome will never change the facts in the case.

Mahomedanism had no part in the matter. Do not be discouraged, brethren, the cause of truth still has its noble, earnest defenders. Like Luther when told that if he went to Worms, Rome would kill him, replied, I'll go to Worms and defend the truth if the devils are as thick as the tiles on their houses. He did go and God went with him and staid close by, with his protecting care. That same care is ours. It's same love for us if we patiently stand by the truth. We do not have to give up our lives as the early Christians did, but the night of suffering for all will soon be past. The gospel ship will sail into port, in God's good time. Let our watchword be faithfulness. Yours,

B. W. WOODWARD.

Dear Restitution:

The Lord still moves the hearts of honest seekers for truth. The Church at Raisin Center will be made to rejoice, and will give a hearty welcome to the two very intelligent sisters who so gladly put on Christ by baptism on Sunday, Sept. 16th.

These sisters have been making a very clear study of the Bible for a year and anxiously awaited our coming, to put on the all saving name. May they be the means of impressing the truth upon their families by their zealous, godly life.

The Elder was not able to go so far, but feeling the importance of the work, we both went. He has been quite sick since returning, but is somewhat improved at this writing.

Children of the Light.

"Ye are children of the light"
Earth is all in sunny places;
E'en the flowers seem more bright
With the sun upon their faces.

"Ye are children," well we know
Children love the sunny places;
And life's flowers fairer grow
With the sun upon their faces.

"Children of the light!" How fair
Seem to us the heavenly places;
Where, beyond our sight, they wear
Light immortal on their brows!

"Ye are children of the light!"
Earth is full of sunny places;
Let us seek them ere death's night
Shut the sunlight from our faces.

We may win a smile of love,
Even in earth's darkest places,
If we only look above
With the sunlight on our faces.

Birds of the Bible. No. 4.

THE OWL.

God has so created the world that even the desert has its living forms to give interest to its dead sands; the frozen zone its creatures, who exist among its mountains and seas of ice; the night has its creatures, rejoicing in the darkness. The bird most associated in our minds with night is the owl, which, though unable to see well in utter darkness, finds its chief pleasure in moonlight or in the dusky early evening. Occasionally an owl belated in its thievish expeditions, is caught by the light of day, and is unable to find its way home; then it becomes an object of ridicule for the whole neighborhood, and the birds both great and small, hasten to annoy it, all of which it bears with stoical indifference, while its head turns absurdly from side to side and its eyes roll uneasily, but with no sign of any annoyance, until darkness approaches; then suddenly the nearest of the unlucky offenders pays for its frolic with its life. Doleful associations hang about the owl, founded on old-time superstitions, and many a heart, even at this day, trembles with fear when the innocent owl happens to hoot in the neighborhood. Its cry is anything but enlivening, and it can scarcely be wondered at that the ignorant should be alarmed at what appears to our ears such mournful cries.

The Bible frequently refers to this distressing habit of the owl. Micah, grieving over the idolatry of Israel, says: "I will make a wailing like the dragons, and mourning like as the owls." Jeremiah and Isaiah, in predicting the desolations to come upon Chaldea, Babylon and Idumea, predicted also that owls should inhabit their ruins: "The screech-owl also shall rest there: there shall the great owl make its nest." The Psalmist, in speaking of his afflictions, says: "I am like a pelican in the wilderness; I am like an owl of the desert." The fondness of these birds for ruinous places is familiar to all travelers in the East, and one may imagine that they delight in the desolation beneath them, as they sit upon some broken shaft, making the night hideous with their voices, or else, entering into the spirit of ruin, they are mourning for the dead past.

There are many varieties of owls, but the most familiar are the horned owl—so named because of its odd feathered formation resembling horns, on the top of its head—and the screech-owl, with whose notes all dwellers in rural districts are familiar. All the species bear a close resemblance to each other, being thick-set in body, with a round, thickly-feathered head, a hooked bill, and a face at once dull and philosophic, calm and impenetrable. They voraciously swallow the animals they feed upon, whole, and after the flesh is digested, eject the bones and feathers or hair through the mouth. They are treacherous and thievish, so that both by their manner of living and their diet—which consists principally of rabbits, rats and mice,—they are deservedly pronounced unclean. In classifying the birds as clean and unclean, we may see the regard in which God holds the pure and holy; being pure and undefiled, he looks upon evil with loathing. Let us then purify our hearts by God's Spirit, that we may stand before him pure indeed.—Georgiana Kringle.

Sermons for the Little Ones. No. 4.

In our last, we said Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were dead, and that they had never had the land that God promised to give them for their own.

How are they to get it? You remember that we were trying to find out what God meant when he said to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, that he would be their God. Turn to Ex. iii. 6, and you will find Moses calling the Lord, "the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob;" and in the New Testament you will find—Luke xx. 36—Jesus saying, "now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he called the Lord, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob." When God said to these old fathers, "I will be your God," they knew he meant the same as if he had said, "I will raise you from the dead," for Jesus says that is what he meant. They knew they could not have the land forever, until they were made to live forever.

In the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, you will find how much God's people have suffered that they might be waked up in the better resurrection. They all died without getting the land, but they were sure of getting it when they should awake from the dead. God had promised to give them the land forever; and they died, believing what he said—certain that they would live again, and have it as God had told them.

Abraham looked for the same beautiful city, that we are looking for. He expected to see the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem—to come to the time when the tabernacle of God should be with men—when Jesus is Ruler of those who overcome, and who are to inherit all things.

He looked for a country just as beautiful as heaven—for a heavenly, or heaven-like country, where there should be no more tears, neither sorrow nor crying.

But, you will wonder what all this has to do with your coming to Jesus and learning of him! It has everything to do with it. You cannot come to Jesus as you should come, unless you understand all this.

It was necessary, in order that the people who had believed and minded God, should be waked from death to live forever—that the keys of the grave should be given to some one able to open it, and able to give eternal life to all God's children who are sleeping in the dust.

If no such person ever had, or ever would come, good people, and bad ones too, would stay in the ground—they would always be dead.

But God never tells a lie, and when he said to Abraham that he should have the land forever—that he would be his God, and that in his seed, all nations should be blessed, he meant to teach him that just such a person would sometime come.

Abraham saw Jesus by faith, when it was told him that "his seed should possess the gates of his enemies."

Isaac and Jacob looked to the Savior as the Son, who was to give them all that God had promised.

All of Abraham's people were taught to look for a Savior who should redeem them from death. We know this from what David said in the sixteenth Psalm. He was glad because the God had taught him that his "flesh should rest in hope"—that he would not be left in the grave, because God would not suffer his Holy One (Jesus) to decay and turn to dust. That Holy One would show him the path of life. In his presence would be fullness of joy—at his right hand, pleasures evermore.

By reading Acts xxvi., you will find that all the tribes of Israel, looked upon the promise of God to the fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, as a promise to raise them from the dead. The hope of being made alive at the coming again, was their hope. They hoped to come to that promise of land by being waked up to live forever.

But they did not seem to understand that some one must come and die for them, before this could be brought about. They knew that the Savior was coming to bring up the dead people, but they thought he would be great and powerful, and glorious—would open the graves at once, and taking his place on the throne, make everybody, all over the earth, mind him.

They knew that God did not forgive people unless there was bloodshed. They were taught in all their sacrifices, to look to a sacrifice to come. The lamb that they offered to God, pictured a suffering and dying Savior, but somehow, they overlooked the meaning of the lamb, and saw only the King in his glory.

David did not do this. He knew Jesus must go into the grave, before he could bring other people out of it, and so did all God's prophets, and those who studied hard to know what God taught.—The Friend of the Children.

Obituary.

Viteriah Ammerman was born March 11, 1817. She was united in marriage, Oct. 11, 1838, with Samuel M. Frame, to which union were born nine children, seven of whom are still living. The husband died Sept. 14, 1892, since which time she resided at her home in West Lebanon, Indiana, where she died Aug. 12, 1906, at the advanced age of 89 years, 5 months and 11 days.

Grandma Frame, as she was familiarly known, became an obedient believer of the gospel many years ago, and for more than half a century it was her great pleasure to follow devotedly, our Lord and Master, ever keeping her character above reproach.

Although during the past few years she was weak and enfeebled in body from age, yet her mind was clear and it was a pleasure to talk with her of things past and the good things of the future.

In her declining years she was tenderly cared for by her devoted children, two of her daughters living with her and giving her the special care which only a devoted child can give to a faithful parent.

Memorial services, conducted by the writer, were held by a large congregation of her neighbors and friends who had loved her in life, and whose tears were mingled together in sorrow at her death. She sleeps beside her companion in life, both of whom fell asleep looking for the coming King.

Dear Restitution:

I am pleased to tell you of another interesting meeting held by Brother Maurer and myself on the 16th. We were cordially invited to come again, and they would have dinner on the ground to give us more time to tell the best of all news.

Please say that Brother Manorlet's text was "And this is life eternal, that they should know thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

Yours in hope of life.

R. A. HUMPHREY.

"The apostle Paul represents the time of Christ's second coming as 'the time of the restitution of all things,' that is, when everything should be restored to its pristine condition..... It is precisely on the same object a redeemed and glorified earth, that the apostle Paul, in the eighth of the Romans, fixes the mind of the believers as the terminating points of their hopes of glory. An incomparable glory is to be revealed in them, and in connection with that, the deliverance of a suffering creation from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God."—Fairbairn's Typology.

It doesn't take a very smart person to find fault; but to suggest the proper course to be pursued requires a person with sanctified judgment, ridden by the Spirit of God.

At the Breaking of Bread.

"BUT AS MANY AS RECEIVED HIM."
JOHN I. 12.

"But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."

How did they receive him?

John the Baptizer said, "A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven." John iii. 27.

The Apostle Peter wrote that "The prophecy—or testimony—came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." 2 Peter i. 21. This proves to us that the prophecy—or testimony—came from heaven.

John the Baptist speaking of the Christ, said, "He whom God hath sent speaketh the Words of God." John iii. 34. And "What he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth." Verse 32. "He that hath received his testimony hath set to his seal that God is true." Verse 33. Then follows the blessed assurance that "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life." Verse 36.

So when we put the foregoing quotations in more common or familiar form of words, we might read. "To as many as received the words of God,—the testimony of Jesus Christ—to them he gave power to become the sons of God."

What were the words of God, the testimony of Jesus Christ?

The record of Matthew is, "From that time Jesus began to preach, and say, Repent; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Matt. iv. 17.

Mark's record is, "Now after that John was put in prison Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe the gospel." Mark i. 14, 15. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Mark xvi. 16.

Luke's testimony is, that, at Capernaum Jesus Christ was entreated to stay, but he said, "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent." Luke iv. 43.

From these few quotations we learn that the words of God—the testimony of Jesus Christ—was "the glad tidings of the kingdom of God." Luke viii. 1.

So, then again, we conclude that those who received the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, received "the Light," John i. 7, "that Light" verse 8, "the true Light," verse 9. "And to as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."

In these last days we hear much about the gospel, the faith, the Holy Ghost; but never do we hear about the glad tidings of the kingdom, except among those who have received him—Jesus Christ—to such he has given power to become the sons of God.

In Acts viii. we read that Philip went down to Samaria and preached Christ, verse 5. Also in verse 12, it is more fully explained that he preached "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." Verse 6 informs us that the people with one accord gave heed to the things which Philip spoke, verse 12 states, that they believed the things, and were baptized, both men and women. And there was great joy in that city. Verse 8.

Why this great joy? because by receiving the testimony of Philip, they had received the testimony of Jesus, and there had received him, and to as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God. No wonder that there was great joy in that city.

Dearly beloved, the signs are many that we who have received him, and are now the sons of God by the spirit of adoption will soon be made like him, and see him as he is, therefore, let the same great joy that was in the hearts of the people of Samaria, fill our hearts, and enable us to hold fast till he comes.

Christianity Versus the Lodge.

Can I be a Christian and belong to the lodge?

This is a very important question, a subject that so many of us pay too little or no attention to; but in these times of gross darkness I think we ought to stand more firmly with our face to the foe, and not compromise with the enemy on any line lest they break through where we least expect.

For myself, I cannot think that a Christian can belong to a secret society.

In the first place what is it to be a Christian, or to be Christ-like? Sifting the question down we find that Christians are those who have heard, repented, believed and obeyed the gospel of our Lord Jesus the Christ, and have taken up their cross, bearing his name and gone forth to follow in his footsteps. Jesus says, Follow me, and if we are Christians we will follow where he leads, and if he leads us into the lodge room it will be all right; but if he does not lead there it will be all wrong.

Let us see what he has to say in John xviii. 20. "I spake openly to the world—and in secret have I said nothing."

Eph. v. 11, 12, tells us to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them; "for it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret."

Members of these societies are oath-bound (and such a horrible pagan oath) to protect each other, and instead of protecting the innocent and punishing the guilty, it is more often they protect the guilty and the innocent suffer.

The Word of God tells us in James v. 12, "Above all things my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath," yet there are preachers who are supposed to teach the Word of God, who belong to one or more of these secret works of darkness. I am very much afraid they will be found in the class mentioned in Jer. xxiii. 11-14, also 2 Peter ii. 18-10.

The lodge is a worldly institution composed of people belonging to the different grades of social life; there you will find the man who thinks he is a Christian; the good moral man; the infidel; the agnostic; and men who only wait the opportunity to commit the blackest crime, men whose hands are already stained with crime, and who belong to the lodge for protection. Now a Christian has an interest in such men as these, interest enough to try to win them to Christ, but one cannot fellowship with them and be Christians, for the Word tells us to come out from among them and be ye separte, again we are told in 1 Peter iii. 8, Be ye all of one mind.

Could I be a Christian, and be of the same mind as the one who denies the very existence of God or Christ? I think not. Again the Word tells us in 2 Cor. vi. 14, 15, Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers, for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness, and what concord hath Christ with Belial, or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? as I have said the lodge is a worldly institution, and we are told in 1 John ii. 15, Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him.

So many men might have been Christians but after they joined the lodge they lost interest in Christ and his work, so, instead of the lodge making or keeping them Christians, it has unchristianized them, love of the world has drowned out their love of God.

We are commanded by the Word of God in Col. iii 17, whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him. How could we do anything to the glory of God in an organization where his name is denied and his holy law trampled under foot? Let them not try to deceive us by telling us that the lodge is a Christian institution, although they may carry the Holy Bible into their lodge room, for their secrets originated in mystery, see Rev. xvii. 5, and their secret ambition is found in Rev. xiii. 16, 17.

Another thought is their idea of life insurance. I can not see why they should want to have their lives insured when they claim they are immortal. Let us not receive the mark, have nothing to do with the secret work of darkness. Let us make sure our names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life, and all will be well. God is one Great, Eternal King, he is the Author of life, and he is fully able to take care of us. Let us not hide our light in secret but let it shine to the glory of God, and when we have done all we could do, let us still stand the household of faith, a peculiar people.

O Christian, arouse thee, for the storm is at hand,
With helmet and shield and a sword in thy hand
To meet the bold tempter, go fearlessly go,
And stand like the brave with the face to the foe.

Submitted in love.
ELLA DEFFENBAUGH.

A Few Thoughts.

In Exodus xix. we find God made a covenant with the children of Israel. This covenant is spoken of interchangeably throughout the Scriptures as "the law" or, as "the first covenant" or, as the ten commandments or, simply as the commandments.

Concerning this law, covenant or commandments, Paul says in Rom. vii. 10, "The law was ordained to life." In 14th verse of same chapter he says the law is spiritual. In x. 5 he says, "Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law." That the man which doeth those things shall live by them. And in answer to a man's question, "What must I do that I may have eternal life, Christ said, Keep the commandments."

These commandments which Christ told the man to keep (in order that he might have eternal life) are what are known as the law, or first covenant or the ten commandments. And these testimonies concerning this law, covenant or commandments, teach, that if an Israelite had kept this law, or commandments perfectly, he would have earned a right to eternal life according to God's own terms, and therefore he would have been entitled to a resurrection from the dead and to eternal life. This is just the position Jesus was in. He kept this law perfectly and therefore he had earned eternal life before he laid down his life on the cross. He said to the Jews "which of you convinceth me of sin, and John said in him is no sin."

Why did he die on the cross? Jesus had something more to do than just to save himself. He was born to be the Savior of sinners. The angel said to Joseph, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins."

The Old Testament Scriptures teach us by type and by allegory, the truth, which is made plain in the New Testament, that Christ died a sacrifice or sin-offering for sinners and not for a righteous person. And here is where sacrifice comes in; and where the just (One) suffers for the unjust (ones) and where so many texts fit in so beautifully; as for instance: "Messiah shall be cut off but not for himself." Or as Isaiah says in 53rd chapter, "He was bruised for our iniquities," or as Paul says in Cor. "Christ died for our sins" according to the Scriptures. Christ had no sins nor iniquities. Therefore these texts do not apply to him.

That same law that promised eternal life to those who would keep it perfectly, brought a curse on those who transgressed it. Paul says, "Cursed is every one who continueth in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them." To quote from a late writer, "Apart from Christ, no Jew ever kept this law. All have sinned, therefore the need for the shedding of blood." And again from the same writer, "If it had been possible to have rendered a spotless and perfect obedience, justice would not have required a violent death in that case." Every one but Christ broke this law and therefore came under its curse. And if they were all under its curse, the only way to save any of them would be to take the law out of the way and give them a covenant that would forgive their sins. And Paul tells us that is just what God had promised to do.

Paul's argument all through his epistles is that, because of the weakness of the flesh, the first covenant could not give them life and therefore it was necessary to make a second covenant with them; even a new covenant. In Heb. viii. 7, Paul says, "If that first covenant had been faultless, then no place should have been sought for a second. Paul also teaches us that God had promised to make a new covenant with them, one that would forgive sins, and that God had required the death of Christ as a sacrifice and offering to him for sins. In Rom. viii. 3, Paul says, "What the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and (marginal rendering) by a sacrifice for sin condemned sin in the flesh." And we find Christ was obedient unto death; even the death on the cross, and for the joy that was set before him, he endured the cross, despising the shame.

What was the joy that was set before him? Was it the prospect of getting eternal life for himself? No. He had already earned eternal life for himself by obedience to God's law. Christ said, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone; but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit." and Paul says, "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor that ye through his poverty might be rich."

If Christ had to die a sacrifice to save himself how could he say, "The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." Did he have to give his life for the shepherd also? Tell me what it cost him to save others, if he had to submit to such an ignominious death to save himself. And what did he do to take away sins if it took that ignominious death for the sin nature?

Suppose a friend of yours would risk his life to save you from a situation that would prove fatal without his intervention. Could you ever love him enough? But suppose his own life was in danger and he had to take the risk to save himself. How much love for you could you see there? Can we not ascribe much more honor to Christ for having endured such an ignominious death that we might be saved, than if he had to do it in order to save himself? Heb. ix. 7 is sometimes quoted to prove that because the high priest under the Mosaic system had to offer first for himself therefore the text teaches that Christ also had to offer first for himself. But the fact that Christ only made one offering is against this view. And there is a reason why the high priest under the Mosaic system had to offer first for himself which is not true in Christ's case.

The high priest in the Mosaic system had sins of his own, and the text tells us that he first offered for his errors, and then for the errors of the people. Christ had no sins or errors, therefore this text does not apply to him.

The new covenant was devised for the purpose of forgiving sins. Christ having no sins it was not made for his benefit; but for the benefit of sinners. And so Paul tells us in Heb. ix. 26, "Once in the end of the world hath Christ appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." In x. 12, he says, "This man after he had offered one sacrifice for sins," and ix. 28, "Was once offered to bear the sins of many." In Gal. iii. 13 he says, "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law." In Romans he says, "Christ died for the ungodly." In another place he says, "God commendeth his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Peter says, "Who his own self bare our sins in his own body to the tree." And ii. 21, "Christ also suffered for us." And John says, "Ye know he was manifested to take away our sins."

Not one of these texts can be applied to Jesus, therefore he did not die on the cross for himself. But he died as an offering and as a sacrifice to God for sinners in order to become the Savior of sinners and to make a new covenant whereby sinners can be saved. And we find Christ on the night of the betrayal at the last supper saying, "This is the blood of the new covenant which is shed for the remission of the sins of many." Thereafter the new covenant is preached for the salvation of sinners. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

By embracing the new covenant we become heirs of the Abrahamic covenant. As Paul says, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put him on; and if ye be Christ's (belong to Christ because he bought you with his own precious blood), then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."

What Must I do to be Saved?

Since Jesus never proposed to save you in your sins, nor yet with your sins, but from them, it is evident that something very radical must be done. A salvation like this is much more than a change of theory, it brings a change of heart. God says you must do three things.

1. You must repent. "God commandeth all men everywhere to repent." You can do this on the spot as you read these words. Repentance is not a luxury for a few, God commands all men to do this. You will find that repentance is a serious business. It means that you take radically different way of considering sin, God, heaven, hades, yourself, etc. You have been too charitable to sin, and to self, and far too uncharitable to God. When you see sin in its true light it will seem so intensely dishonoring to God, that you will not have words dark enough to describe it with. You will not merely see that it must land you in hades unless you are utterly delivered from it, but you will think this a small matter compared to the thought that it dishonors God. You may dread eternity as much as any man ever did, and yet not repent. When you truly repent you would rather die than sin, and you will renounce it with your whole soul. The repentant soul may be enslaved by sin, but wholly against his own will. His whole soul cries out for deliverance. He wills to be free, though he may not have power to free himself. A repentant soul always says, "What must I do to be saved?" He does not want to shirk doing. An unrepentant soul says, "Tell me how to be saved without doing anything." The unrepentant soul may wish to avoid the consequences of sin, but the repentant soul wants to avoid sin itself. The Bible never says that though you continue in sin, provided you only believe, you will be saved.

2. You must believe. You can never do this till you repent. Trace out in your Bible wherever people were told to believe, and you will find that they were repentant souls already. Trace out all men addressed who were not repentant, and you will find that they were told—not to believe—but to repent first. In one sense to believe is the very opposite of doing. So when a man is told to believe he is in that sense told to do nothing. He is supposed to have done the repenting. You would not tell a drowning man to swim to shore if the lifeboat were at his side. You tell him to do nothing—just to grasp the rope. Yet in one sense to grasp the rope is "something," but yet it is "nothing" compared to swimming to shore.

You must believe. But what must you believe? Not a creed. Not a theory. I have heard people say, "Believe that those who believe are saved and you will be saved." This is not in the Bible. You have to believe a Person. To trust a Person. To believe is to accept, or receive. "To as many as received him to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to those that believe on his name." So believing is the same thing as receiving Christ. To receive Christ is the same thing as to submit to him, and to confide or trust in him, to commit your case into his hands. When you repent you change your idea of the possibility of ever saving yourself by your own good works. When you believe, you commit your soul to Jesus and rest assured that he can save you. You can commit yourself to Jesus on the spot and thank him for accepting you.

3. You must confess. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness (mark that blessed fact—to righteousness) and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." But can I not be saved without confession? "Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, in this wicked and adulterous generation, of him shall the Son of Man be ashamed when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels." Is not that sufficient answer? If you have the second step you will never ask if you must testify to the fact that you are saved. You will not be be able to help doing it. It would be enough for you to know that your Savior wished it. But you will also wish to do it too, that others may be saved. Like the old Scotch woman who was saved you will say, "Jesus has saved me and you will never hear the end of it."

Will you take these steps? You have asked, "What must I do to be saved?" and you now have the simple answer; but will you take these steps? The question of your sin has been settled between God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ long, long ago. God waits to save. Will you let him do so? Would you rather be saved from sin, or keep it and yield to it? "He that finds his heaven must lose his sins," said Cowper, very truly. Will you have sin or Christ? You cannot have both. You must choose. Which shall it be?—Dudley Kidd in South African Pioneer.

The Bible.

The question of the inspiration of the Word of God, and of what constitutes the Word of God, is not left to be determined by German critics. The book stood just as it is before the came into the world. It will stand just as it is after they, like sheep, are laid in their graves. Our common people, with their English Bibles in their hands, will settle for themselves these issues which critics offer to settle for them. They will do it, though, on very different lines of investigation and on different kinds of evidence. The critics will endeavor to penetrate the mind of God by means of grammars and dictionaries. Common Christians will do it by means of the Holy Spirit searching the deep things of God—things too deep for an unsanctified nature to fathom, even though it be master of all the Hebrew that ever was written. "We have the mind of Christ." They have received "the spirit of the world." We have received "the spirit which is of God" that we might know the things that are freely given us of God.

In all this there is nothing at variance with the common laws which preside over the discovery of truth. In a common letter from one friend to another, there is a certain intangible something which is not discoverable from the mere text of the letter. A grammarian, but a stranger to the writer, may take that letter and parse it from beginning to end, and conclude that he knows the exact for all. And yet he may be mistaken. He may know the grammatical construction of different sentences, yet know but a small part of the truth intended to be conveyed by the sentences. An intimate friend of the writer, "who knows him," will follow right after and discover facts about the mind, and spirit, the feelings and the purposes of that writer which had eluded the grammarians entirely.

And so in Bible matters. The "mind of Christ" is not ascertained simply by parsing. But then, in order to know the mind of Christ, Christians must be deeply and profoundly taught in the Word of God. Our common people must be profoundly taught in the English Bible. They can learn to handle that can fight with it and can conquer with it. They can even confound the higher criticism with it. —Wm. Ashmore, D. D.

Christ's Glory.

Until he comes, he is the rejected one. His coming is to end the day of his long rejection, and to introduce the day of his acceptance; the day when he shall be owned by Israel and the world, as he is now by his saints; the day when he shall be owned on earth, as now he is owned in heaven. As the great Judge of all, his glory is yet to come; as the last Adam, his glory is yet to come; as the head of the church, his glory is yet to come; as Israel's monarch, his glory is yet to come; as anti christ's destroyer and Satan's dethroner, his glory is yet to come.—H. Bonar.

The Flowers of the Fall Time.

The flowers of the fall time are the best;
Above the fading grass-stems they blaze,
Rare jewels left in nature's bounty chest,
Poured scattering along the autumn ways.
The hollyhocks are braver, redder, now—
Their banners flashing bold before they fall,
They are resolved to die before they bow
In homage to the distant winter's call.

The morning glories show a deeper hue
And riot into blossom as they wane;
They drink a gayer wine in morning dew
And flaunt the rent defiance from each vine;
The cosmos flower sparkle in the dawn—
All tints like the ironite shapes appear,
As echoes of the flowers that are gone,
As stars that stud the twilight of the year.

The dahlias swagger, merchantmen and rude,
And crowd the meeker blossoms from the way;
The asters make a picture many-hued,
Framed in the drifting haze of autumn gray;
White clematis all snowlike silly clings
Where leaves already turn to brown and gold,
And hosts persuasive that each zephyr flings
Above the page where summer's tale is told.

Across the fields and by the country roads
Are scarlet blooms that mock the setting sun,
And goldenrod lifts up its treasure heads
To show what eldorado it has won.
And so with bloom ablaze, with change afoot,
The patient year hems slowly to its rest
With flower laughter that makes sight of grief—
The flowers of the fall time are the best.

The Bereans Column.

Secretary's Report o' the Bereans of the Illinois Conference of the Church of God of the faith of Abraham.

The work of the Bereans at the Illinois Conference held at Oregon, Ill., in August, 1906, showed enthusiasm and growth that was most satisfactory to all, who have watched the development of this auxillary of the church. They were given charge of the social meetings held before each evening and had one hour's service on Sunday afternoon. On Thursday evening the subject presented was, The Nature of Man, and Sister Lily Filson of Dixon ably led the discussion, bringing out the points with Bible testimony that man is mortal; that the soul of man dies, is unconscious in death, enters the grave; that the soul of Christ was sacrificed in death, and the souls of all in Christ enter the death state.

On Friday evening Sister Daisy Seymour of Tampico led the meeting and the subject was, Repentance and Baptism. The nature of, cause of, reason of and result of repentance were dwelt on and the character of and importance of baptism.

The Kingdom of God was the glorious topic Saturday evening, and Sister Ruth Aslakson of Chicago did full justice to the subject. After we had talked of the Ruler and his helpers, the character of and duration of God's kingdom we were more than ready for Sister Elizabeth Eaton to show us that only to the overcomers were these things to be. On Sunday afternoon we discussed our Bereau work, past, present and future.

On Saturday afternoon August 18 at four o'clock we held our annual business meeting. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Pres. Anna E. Drew, 620 N. Galena Ave., Dixon, Ill.; Vice Pres. Almeda Mitchell, Lanark, Ill.; Secretary Leila E. Whitehead, 5428 Ontario St., Austin Station, Chicago; Treasurer Fred Knodle, Oregon, Ill.

The following committees were appointed: Literary committee, Elizabeth Eaton, Savanna, Ill.; Edna Anderson, 436 Concord St., Aurora, Ill.; Ruth Aslaksen, 364 Dickens Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Tract Committee: Viola Eaton, Stockton, Ill.

Program committee: Daisy Seymour, Tampico, Ill.; Mabel Eaton, Savanna, Ill.; Charles Anderson, Aurora, Ill.

Committee on new leaflets: Leila E. Whitehead, Chicago, Ill.; Almeda Mitchel, Lanark, Ill.; Mrs. Julia Dean, Chicago.

The report this year is very encouraging. Two new societies have been formed at Ripley, Ill. and Fairdealing, Mo., Miss Jessie Watt of Buffalo, Texas, Mrs. Howard of Chico, Cal. and Babara Leeman of Boise, Okla. have been received as isolated members. The meetings at Moriah have been discontinued for a time, but the society has not disbanded. Adeline society has come to life again chiefly through the efforts of Sister Mary Gesin. There have been 309 letters written during the year and about 2,000 tracts distributed.

The treasurer reported about fifty dollars in the treasury. We shall need a great deal of money this year, so those who have never given a dollar to the work see if you cannot send one to the treasurer and soon. We need new leaflets this year and we have planned to send our president to new points and places that feel to need her and of course this means outlay. The tract committee would also appreciate a stray dime to meet the expense of postage.

On the whole we feel that there has been a great gain during the year and would urge the Bereans everywhere to a greater earnestness in the work and a greater willingness to do whatever is asked of them. "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much."

LEILA E. WHITEHEAD. Sec.

History of the Illinois Bereau Society given at Conference by the President Anna Drew.

Our organization, the Bereans, was formed at our annual Conference, in 1899. For sometime we had felt the need of some special work whereby our young people might become more interested in Bible study, more active in Christian work, and through their influence, other young people become interested in the truths which God's Word teaches. As the years go on, one by one those who hold aloft the cause of truth, fall asleep, and if the light of the glorious gospel is kept shining, the younger ones must carry on the work. The better we understand God's Word, the better able are we to impart it to others, the more often we open our lips to speak of the precious truths it contains, the easier it is for us to do so, and with this object in view, our young people were called together and our society organized.

At the meeting held at Lanark, the year previous, work of this kind had been proposed, and Sister Greenbaum of Chicago, called a meeting, appointed officers, further proceedings were to await orders from her. Four or five months passed, receiving no word, the officers who had been appointed, met together, worked up an outline for Bible study, had it printed, and when organized as a society, we had a line of study, to enter upon. Chicago and Dixon had previous to this, local societies, were finding them so helpful they were anxious for a State organization, that all might be united in one work. Though more especially for the young people, our membership was not limited to such, many of the older people felt the need of the help gained from such an organization, and were gladly admitted. Following our meeting, the young people at Adeline, organized, working up a large and interesting class. Many of our people were isolated, they became state members, carrying on the Bible study in their homes.

In our first year's work, an effort was made to locate as many as possible, and secure them as state members, urging organization wherever there were several at any one point. The first two years our membership did not increase very rapidly, but our annual meetings were much better attended by our young people, than before, and we found them taking a more active part in the services. This was encouraging, for it showed results which we had honed for, from such a work. In 1901, Bro. W. H. Wilson, who had taken much interest in the work, suggested we ask for a column in THE RESTITUTION, to be filled once a month with articles, reports, letters from the Bereans. This Brother Underwood kindly granted, and it has proved helpful to our members, and in interesting others in our work. Soon after our first column appeared, letters were received from distant states, asking for more information regarding our work, and for admittance as members into our society, and through their efforts some work has been accomplished in their own states.

In the fall of 1902, a Conference was held in Southern Ill. It was proposed that the president of our society be sent to that Conference to interest the young people there. This was done, and through this effort a society was formed at Moriah, one at Marshall, and isolated ones at Hazel, Longootee and Ingraham, were secured as state members. The report of this trip in our column in THE RESTITUTION, interested a sister in Carnegie, Okla., and resulted in a class of nine being formed at that point. Bro. Wilson in his trips throughout the states encouraged the work, and with his help, societies were formed at Omro, Wis., and Iota, La., affiliating themselves with the Illinois state work.

In the fall of 1903 another visit was made to the southern Illinois Conference. Found the work encouraging, some new members were secured from surrounding points. A visit was also made at Lebanon, where we now have a family of faithful Bereans.

Through Bro. Lindsay's efforts a society was organized at Keltner in January, 1904, and one at Ripley, November, 1905.

Though all societies formed since our work began, have not been successful in continuing the work, at every point we have some faithful ones who keep up their Bible study. We have received new members recently from Texas and California. Our members are scattered over many states, in Oklahoma, Missouri, Colorado, California, Louisiana, Texas, New York, Wisconsin, and at twenty-four points in our own state. We started our work with about fifty members, we now have several hundred.

This last winter that we might get in closer communication with our isolated members, and be able to help them in their Bible study, we proposed that such report at stated times, the lessons outlined in our Bereau booklets. This met with favor, and quite a number are following this plan.

But what has been accomplished through our organization, for the cause of Christ? The Scriptures must be carefully studied if we would grow in the knowledge of the Lord. The reports we receive show careful study and the many questions asked, a desire for a thorough understanding of God's Word, and we have had the assurance that they have been helped greatly through their study, and with the Bible daily before them, their effort is greater to more closely follow its precepts.

Many from our number, have taken upon them the name of Christ, and we are sure the closer study of the Word and the influence of the society meetings, have had their part in bringing them to obedience. At Omro, Wis., at their organization, of 20 or 25 members, but three were members of the household of faith, in another year, half became such. Many of our isolated ones, meeting with none of like faith for many years, had grown somewhat neglectful of Bible study, and consequently less zealous in the cause, but through regular study and encouraging letters from the Bereans are now loyal and active in Christ's work. The social letters written have done much to cheer and encourage those deprived of hearing the truth preached. Many letters are received filled with grateful words for bringing them, through our work, to a better understanding of God's plan of salvation, a fuller sense of their responsibility to their Savior and to a closer walk with him. Many now take an active part in our local societies and in the services at our annual meetings, whom several years ago we could not prevail upon to do so. We have had discouragements, many of them, but God has surely blessed our work, and if we could only realize it, many of the discouragements and obstructions that come in our way, are caused by neglect on our part to do the duty or improve the opportunity that lies before us. How careful we should be, that we become no stumbling block in the way of the Master's work. When all do their duty the work must prosper.

Dear Bereans, we are to be "workers together with him." What a blessed privilege, no pleasure so great, none so satisfying as that, that we have helped some one onward in the way of life eternal. Let us make Christ, his will and his work, first in our heart, doing the things pleasing in his sight, and when he comes to gather his faithful, may we be found worthy to hear from his lips, "Well done."

To the Bereans greeting:

I cannot be with you but I can speak to you in silence. I have no report to make as I am the only Berean here. I have the privilege of visiting with our church people as I find it convenient, and I have been to church all but one Sunday in July, and hope to continue through August. I always make it a point to be at church first before going elsewhere on a Sunday. I do not approve of Sunday outings. Our meetings are small as many of our people are on their vacations, but we always have good edifying meetings. Our lesson for next Sunday is 2 Thes. iii I have enjoyed the Bible lessons very much and sincerely trust Bro. Lindsay will continue them longer. I am sorry my report is late but the heat has been so intense in the evenings with a light that it seemed that I could not grasp anything. I tried several evenings last week, but this morning is a nice morning and I had the privilege of having the morning alone in quiet. I trust it is not too late. May God give you the spirit of knowledge that you may grasp all that is imparted to you that you may grow in grace and knowledge of him whose image we are to bear, is the sincere wish of your sister in Christ.

SELMA SAMUELS.

To the Bereans and all interested in the work:

Not having the opportunity of attending Conference myself, I send a short letter hoping it may be of interest or encouragement to some. I am not often near enough one of the societies to attend the meetings, so I have since the first of the year adopted the plan of sending in written reports. I suppose quite a number of others follow the same plan of writing out the lessons every month or every two months. I find this method of Bible study very helpful to me. I know I study the lessons more carefully when I am to write something about them. I think the lessons in the booklets are nicely arranged and that we cannot fail to be benefitted by studying them. The topics of the lessons are all subjects we need to understand if we wish to be diligent and useful in the Master's service. I have often thought of this counsel given by Peter. "Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear." We need to know more of his Word. Let us try to be noble as the Bereans of old and search the Scriptures daily as they did. In Jas. i. 20 we are told to "receive the engrafted Word which is able to save our souls." But we must be doers of the Word and not hearers only. I hope we may all find Bible study of such value that we can realize all that the Psalmist felt when he said, "Through thy precepts I get understanding; therefore I hate every false way. Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path."

With best wishes for the welfare of the Bereans from one of its members.

MABEL KENDRICK.

FAIRDEALING, MO.

In the fall a Berean society was formed at Fairdealing, Mo., by two isolated families, children and parents studying together. This is food for thought for other isolated families.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 50.

1. And it came to pass when Hieremias had stopped speaking to the laity all the words of the Lord which the Lord had sent him to speak unto them, all these words namely,

2. That Azarias son of Maasaias and Jooanan son of Kareer and all the prominent men who had spoken to Hieremias spoke up saying, It is a lie, The Lord did not send thee unto us saying, Enter ye not into Aiguptos to dwell there;

3. But rather Barouch, son of Neeroes is conspiring with thee against us, that he may give us into the hands of the Chaldaioi to put us to death and remove us into Babuloon,

4. And Jooanan and all the leaders of the host and all the laity did not hearken unto the voice of the Lord to continue to dwell in the land of Jouda.

5. And Jooanan and all the leaders of the host took the remnant of Jouda who had been turned back to dwell in the land,

6. The men of ability and the women and children and the daughters of the king, and the souls which Nabouzardan had left behind with Godolias as son of Akhikam and Hieremias, the prophet, and Barouch, son of Neerias,

7. And went into Aiguptos, because they did not hearken to the voice of the Lord and they entered into Taphnas.

8. And there occurred a word of the Lord unto Hieremias in Taphnas saying;

9. Take for thyself great stones and hide them within the front-doors in a gateway of the house of Pharaoo in Taphnas before the eyes of leading men of Jouda.

10. And thou shalt say, In this wise hath the Lord said, Lo, I am sending and I shall lead Nabouchodonosor, king of Babuloon, and he will place his throne over and above these stones which thou hast hid, and he will lift up his weapons over them;

11. And he will enter in and smite the land of Aiguptos, some to death to death, and some to removal to removal and some to sword to sword.

12. And fire will burn in houses of their gods, and it will burn them, and it will remove those who inhabit them and it will destroy by corruption the land of Aiguptos even as a shepherd destroyeth by corruption his outergarment, and he will go out with peace.

13. And he will crush the votive-pillars of Heeliopolis those in Oon and their houses will be burn down with fire.

COMMENT.

This 50th chapter is given in the versions as the 43rd or what purports to be the same—with many variations a few only of which I will note in passing. Read and compare for yourselves.

In the 5th verse there is no such statement in the text as "that were returned from all the nations whither they had been driven"—but does read "who had been turned back" meaning the portion of that Babulonish captivity not transported by Nabouchodonosor into Babuloonia.

In the 9th verse instead of saying "take in thy hand and hide them in mortar in the brickwork which is at the entry to Pharaoh's house in Thahpanhes" the text reads "take for thyself and hide them within the front-doors in a gateway of the house of Pharaoo in Taphnas."

In the 10th verse instead of saying, "I will send and take" the text reads, "I am sending and I shall lead," etc. and instead of "he shall spread his royal pavillion over them" the text reads "and he will lift up his weapons over them."

In the 12th verse instead of "I will kindle a fire in the houses of the gods of Egypt" the text reads "and fire will burn in houses of their gods" and the balance of this verse is entirely different. Read and compare.

In the 13th verse "pillars of Beth-Shemesh" reads in the text "votive-pillars of "Heeliopolis those in Oon," the latter name being the name of the then famous Baal temple in the city of Heeliopolis or Heeloupolis as sometimes written. The reader will observe the importance of the omission of the descriptive adjective "votive," not merely "pillars" but "votive-pillars."

HEB. X. 25.

Glancing out over the recent defections in supposedly high spiritual places and people, I am moved to some serious reflections concerning our church as a "peculiar" and emphatic expression of the Christian faith. While we may not (and, indeed, cannot) often stand back of large schemes of money-making and financial treachery and hypocrisy, we can lend ourselves to many small (?) last-day loop-holes of spiritual peril, which invariably pave the route of these more flagrant issues.

If ever there was a "day" when the true faith and calling of the saints of God needed undoubted accenting, it is in this great and evil day in which we live, under the shadow of "the great and notable day of the Lord."

That shadow is so dense and visible it can almost be felt. He or she is in a most deplorable spiritual condition who must needs demand "a sign," with so many indubitable evidences massing about us at all points.

We cannot do anything to stop the world's and apostate churches' heedless course into trouble, but we can obey the Word, by coming out strong in numbers and zeal wherever and whenever there is a meeting of our faith; permitting no excuse to hinder us in this great duty, and so doing more, probably, in the line of churchly duty than in any other way of individual earnestness. Flood the meetings! Hold up the hands of the preachers of our way! Agree! Sink all points of mere "difference" in one grand, irrepressible, burning expression of the great hope! The coming of the King! To give "Life"! Life to the "dead"—the real "dead"—"who are in the graves," not in the churches. "The dead in Christ"—not "in trespasses and sins." For these let us tremble. God pity them.

For the unbaptized, the deliberate time-server, the death-lover, the terrorist and substitutionist, we mass our prayers and lift our voices as never before. With results we have nothing to do. We will do our part as commanded, and do it to the uttermost. This is the gist of Christian effort.

Just a word for another duty: THE RESTITUTION—are we taking it? Paying for it? Digesting it? Working for it? A certain farm paper states that it is forging on to a million paid subscribers! What a matter for thought for "our" people!

To good friends and the brethren everywhere: "Greeting!" and God's loving blessing with the divine strength "to stand." There is no Scriptural standing or stand except by "having done all!"

ANTHONY BUSCH.

Editor Restitution:

We left Stillwater, Okla. May 17th, after a stay of four months. After we had seated the store building, we invited Brother J. B. Holliday, who gave us Sunday evening sermons. Some fifty or sixty persons came to our hall. One Presbyterian lady said, Why, it is the very thing we want. Brother Holliday has stood aloof from all the sects for three years after being a Baptist 28 years. He openly denounced in the pulpit his early impressions, that they were fables, and that he would rather suffer persecution with God's people than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. He is a regular Bible student and has made Bible Charts of the Coming Age. His lecture on The Restoration of Israel was grand and he told his congregation that in God's own good time it would be brought about, and this he was able to do, and cited his congregation to the San Francisco disaster to prove that God ruleth in the kingdom of men.

We feel that our effort has not been in vain and ere long we will hear of more from this city.

After returning to Beaver Co., coming by Attica, Kansas, we learned of Brother Owens and taking my field glasses I could view his home six miles away. He and Brother Killough preaches for us here at Zelma. Brother Owens uses his own means and preaches every Sunday at Cline and different places. Oh how I long to organize according to Sister Harriett E. Boice's plan, and have a fund to pay our traveling ministers.

Your Sister, waiting for the King.

MRS. GABRIEL ROHRBACK.

Reaping as We Have Sown.

God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap. Every man will get just what he deserves, just what he has worked for. This truth must be proclaimed with earnestness, emphasis and reiteration from our pulpits. We are living in a time when it is popularly said that "hell is burned out." But the equivalents of the old-time fire and brimstone are here yet and will be forever. No one can offend the great laws of the universe and get off scot-free. God is not so "easy." Every one that in virtue is on his side shall, without fail, receive the reward of virtue in its consequences in holiness. There is nothing local or temporary about the theology of the 1st Psalm. Forever shall it be well with the righteous. Forever shall it be ill with the wicked. And no man can dodge results.

Men must be warned and warned again and again and with solemnity of these awful truths. He that sinneth wrongeth his own soul. The soul that sinneth it shall die. The mind of the flesh is death. The mind of the spirit is life and peace. Men living in carelessness and recklessness, scoffing, going heedlessly on in a fancied but insane sense of security, must be arrested by the stern voice of the prophets of God, and made to pause and reflect on the inescapable issues of such courses.

And, every day, we Christians must likewise ponder these laws well. They are universal and apply to us, as to all. Every minutest act—every "idle word"—must have its equivalent, its consequence. There can be no cause without an effect. Every planting means a reaping. We live in a solemn and very real world which brooks no jesting or fooling.

Whatever our place allotted to us by Providence, that, for us, is the post of honor and duty. God estimates us not by the position we are in, but by the way in which we fill it. —T. Edwards.

I have lived to thank God that all my prayers have not been answered. —Jean Ingelow.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Signs of the Advent.

"Never did the church witness such a constellation of signs of the near coming of Christ, as now. 'The branches of the fig-tree are full of sap; and the summer is at hand.' Assuredly, I am not ignorant that a portion of the church has become gradually weary of the long-tarrying, and has fallen into doubt. You also shake your head, and are of opinion, that we have long talked of 'the last time.' Well, use this language, and increase the number of the existing signs by the addition of this new one. Add that of the foolish virgins, who shortly before the midnight hour maintained 'the Lord would not come for a long time.' They ate, they drank, they wooed and were wooed, and inscribed over the festivity-decorated gate of their dwelling, 'Peace! peace! There is no danger!' But then, however, the depths suddenly burst open, and the floods rushed forth at the command of the eternal wrath. Only Noah and those with him watched, and were preserved; upon every one else destruction came with the swiftness of a whirlwind. 'The Lord cometh!' O, were he already here! How do we long for his revelation in these dark times!"—Krummacher.

"We are nearer the troublous times of the end of the world, and there are signs and tokens of a shaking and convulsion, which I trust I do not err when I compare and even identify with the predicted indication of the second and glorious coming of the Son of Man in his kingdom."—Dr. Candlish.

"Do you really believe that an ass ever spoke to Balaam?" queried a man who prided himself on his intellect. Coleridge, to whom the question was put, reflected: "My friend, I have no doubt whatever that the story is true. I have been spoken to in the same manner myself." The man of the inquiring mind retired for meditation.

Where science speaks of improvement Christianity speaks of renovation; where science speaks of development Christianity speaks of sanctification; where science speaks of progress Christianity speaks of perfection.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. I refer the brethren to W. H. Wilson, who has been at my house and who knows my standing at home. Now brethren, this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

Programme Committee.

The following persons are appointed a committee to prepare a programme and make other arrangements for the Conference of the Church of God to be held at Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 15-18, 1906. Committee, Brother A. R. Underwood; Sister F. M. McCrory; Sister T. O. Tabor.

J. H. WILLEY, Pres. Ind. Con.

To the Brethren of the Kansas and Missouri Conference:

I have moved to the state of Oregon, so all letters in the interest of the conference work will be sent to J. P. Bitner, Severance, Kansas.

A. W. DARBY.

WE wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

To the Churches and isolated brethren and sisters of the State of Ohio:

At our last Conference held at Brush Creek, Miami Co., we were elected State Evangelist. The success of the year's work depends largely upon you. The Evangelist can do but little without your hearty co operation. We shall be pleased to visit you and hold meetings as you shall direct. The Conference has provided that our expenses shall be met. It is our wish that you write to us that we may know your wishes.

Remember that the time for evangelizing is short. We should begin our work early. We have the whole State as our field. Our work should begin the last of September or early in October. We have no hobbies to present to those of "like precious faith." It shall be our purpose to preach the "gospel of the kingdom of God." What at the first was spoken by the Lord and confirmed unto us by them who heard him, we will preach. Hoping to be able to serve you all is our wish. Your brother in the Anointed. Address Rt 3, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Annual Meeting.

The Churches of God of Southern Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, who believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God, and all who believe that whom Christ has made free are free indeed, will convene in Neosho County, Kansas, October 12, 1906, and continue over Sunday, and if necessary longer. We have some important business to come before this meeting. We read in Acts xv, that in the days of the Apostles there rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses, and the apostles and elders came together for to consider of this matter, or to confer together about this matter.

This was the first conference meeting that we read of in the Bible, and that was to settle a difficulty among the brethren. We want all the brethren that can to come. Our program is always ready. It is the Gospel that Paul preached, Rom. i. 16. The ones who will do this preaching are not as yet selected, but I hope that we may have able men who will preach what is in the Bible and nothing else. How much I wish that Brothers Daniel, Snowden and W. H. Wilson could be with us. We expect Brother Oliver and Brother Joseph Williams to be with us. Rollin is on the Santa Fe R. R. We will see that you get something to eat and a place to sleep, and will raise as much as we can to cover your expenses. Come and help us in Macedonia.

By order of the Church.

Russellism Exposed.

There has been an increased demand for a sharp expose of the cunningly devised fables of Russellism, showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of the Christian faith.

I am now engaged in writing such an expose; showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of Christianity. It will be printed as a booklet of about thirty pages at ten cents each.

This will follow right along after the printing of Pine Woods Bible Class, the type-setting of which is now nearly completed. The booklet will be ready for distribution about the same time that Pine Woods Bible Class is ready to send out.

Those who wish Russellism Exposed may send in orders right away so that I may know how many to print.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

MISS CORA PARTLOW, Sec'y.

The Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God, in Michigan, will be held at Millbrook, Mecosta Co., Mich. Thursday evening, Oct. 25, 1906, and continue over the following Sunday.

The brethren of that place earnestly requested that the meeting be held at Millbrook, feeling that by our united effort, much good might be done.

All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

Ample provision will be made for all visiting brethren.

Those coming from Grand Rapids will take the Pere Marquette R. R., at 7:00 A. M., change at Edmore on the Big Rapids Division of Pere Marquette reaching Blanchard about 10:00 A. M. Those coming from the north will get off at Millbrook, and those coming from the south will get off at Blanchard, changing cars at Edmore for Blanchard.

EMMA JACKMAN, Sec'y.

The Central Washington Conference of the Churches of God will convene at Wenatchee, Oct. 5, 6, 7, 1906. All the household of faith are earnestly requested to be present at all of these meetings. Enjoyable and profitable meetings are anticipated.

A. L. CORRALEN, Pres.

MYRTLE TITCHENAL, Sec'y.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

T. J. DANIEL.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Notice.

Brothers T. H. Owens and Killough of Beaver County, Okla., preach at Cline, Lavern and Zelma each Sunday. Any one visiting here enquire for C. A. Starkey, M. A. Starkey or Mrs. Gabriel Rohrbach.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attends

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 3, 1906 NUMBER 37.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Our Work.

O what are my single hearing words
Or the work of my helpless hand,
No more to the whole is a single note
In the chorus grand,
No more than the hum suggests to
To the whole in the carolling band.
Yet without that single note the song
Is not as the master willed,
And the circle is not full—a single part
Is lost by the one unskilled;
So without my doing I know as well
God's plan is not fulfilled.

UNITY.

To the Indiana Conference of the Church of God at Argos, dearly beloved in the Lord. Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in UNITY! It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments. As the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore. Psa. cxxxiii. Behold, to see, look attentively, give earnest heed. Mark how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. Behold how good, fine, kindly, loving, sweet, precious, fitting, satisfactory, enjoyable, agreeable, excellent, valuable, admirable, beneficial, profitable, and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. Behold how good and how pleasant, attractive, delightful, gratifying, cheering it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

After Jesus had ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach, and heal, and cast out devils, he went into a house. There came such a multitude to him, and such confusion, that his friends said, He is beside himself, and they wanted to take care of him. Then his mother and brethren sent to call him. Those sitting about him said, Behold thy mother, and thy brethren without seek for thee. He said, Who is my mother, or my brethren? This question, on his part, must have confirmed the opinion that he was really beside himself. He looked on them that sat about him, and said, Behold my mother, and my brethren. For whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother. Mark iii.

Those, therefore, who do the will of God are brethren, and they do, and will present the good, and pleasant spectacle of dwelling together in unity. Yes, such will dwell. Abide, continue, endure, keep, remain together in unity, combined, joined, mutually, inseparably in unity, in harmony, in accord, in concord. They will subordinate all parts to one general effect for good. They will bring all personal objects, and all personal objections into unified harmony. They will subjugate—put down their own will, and will do the will of God, and prove to all concerned, that it is good and pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity. The unity of the brethren, doing the will of God, is so good and pleasant that it is likened to the precious ointment poured out upon the head of Aaron, and sprinkled upon his sons, consecrating them as one, in unity, holy for the service of the Lord. Like the dew on Hermon and Mount Zion. When the sun in his splendor floods Mt. Hermon, bringing forth the fruits of the ground, swelling the grain, ripening the luscious grape, yet drying the earth, and wilting the verdure. But "When the sun sinks in the west,

And nature all is prone to rest,"

When the abundant dew falls gently on the parched earth, drenching the grass, the foliage and vines that clothe the mountain slopes, it is good. When nature has drank her fill, and waits the coming morn, it is good. And when the rising sun gilds with dashing glory, the verdant pomp of Hermon, the glittering dews of heaven are flashed into myriad gems, it is pleasant. To this magnificent scene is compared the unity among brethren. And as the dew that descended on the mountains of Zion was good and pleasant, refreshing and reviving, so upon brethren dwelling together in unity, doing the will of God, the Lord will command the blessing, life evermore, and they will enter into that rest, which they will have with the Lord, and enjoy on Mount Zion. Psa. cxxxii. Beloved, let us dwell together in unity.

Crumbs.

A lot and a church were purchased by the Disciples in our county town in an early day at a cost of 400 and 500 dollars respectively. I rehearsed the fact in an article on the religious side of pioneer life, and the type-setter added a cipher to each of the numbers—only a little cipher, and yet how changed was their value! The hundreds had become thousands, counting ten times as much as they had before. It was a provoking mistake, but it set me to thinking. Standing alone in the world as an individual, I am but a cipher, I am nothing, I can do nothing. I have no power, no strength. To have any power for good I must be placed beside the great Digital Figure of the universe—God; I must be added to him as his tenth, his tithe of the human beings he has placed on this beautiful earth. I must become related to him through the blood of Christ, in whose precious memory we gather around this table today. Then his power, the power of the gospel, which is "the power of God unto salvation," becomes my power, weak and humble vessel though I be; I have strength, because God is beside me. I can be the living exponent of his truth, because he is my Helper.

I can do his work with no fear that my efforts will fail. I can fight his battles with no thought but that the enemy will be beaten. Our towering Sauls may be rejected; the young men of whose good looks and talents and business ability, we have been so proud, may not have been the ones chosen by the Lord to be the overseers of his Israel in this part of the vineyard, yet somewhere, he has a David fitted for the place, and anyway, we can go on in his strength, who has given the dear Savior to suffer and die on our behalf that we might live. Give up? Never!

God helping us, we will endure to the end! We love God, because he first loved us. We rejoice in his love.

"He has taken our sins away,
He has taken them all away, away."

In this memorial supper we commemorate the fact "that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scripture;" and in remembering this, we also commemorate with holy awe, the date when we poor mortal ciphers were added to God, through obedience to the law of life, and became a part of his working force in the world. It is well to remember. We so often forget that it is through us that God is preparing the way for the coming of his Son; that is through us the coming of the kingdom is to be hastened.

Others may be petulant and fretful and impatient over things in the church that they cannot adjust to their liking, and may secede from our fellowship, but we, at this table, still holding fast to the faith, remember the presence of One in the room, who will be with us to the end, and pledge ourselves to go forward, as Moses pledged himself to go forward from Sinai. We are not bound "To make the wrong go right,

But only to discover and to do
With clearest heart the thing
That God appoints."

"If he giveth quietness, who then can make trouble?" He who has elected to the place where the sinless plane grows on the cliff beside the sea, safe the tide cannot reach him. So he whose heart is fixed, anchored in Christ, cannot be shaken from his post by the storms around him. He can endure trials; he can stand the testing fires. He cannot, he will not go back to the flesh pots of Egypt; he cannot, he will not sell himself as a cipher to another Digital Figure in the universe, whose working force is all for evil, and whose end will be death, for "The wicked shall not stand in the judgment nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous. The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, but the way of the ungodly shall perish." God is with us; let us pray. Let us feel his nearness, let us claim his blessing. Let us never forget, that though but ciphers when standing alone, we have, when set beside God, a value that none can estimate. We are his sapphires, his emeralds and his rubies set upon his breast plate, to be his forever. "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be upon you all. Amen."

S. Roxana Wisch.

"This do in remembrance of me."

Once again has this little band of faithful believers met together to commemorate the Lord's death till he come; to obey this loving command in remembrance of him, who lived among men and taught us the way to live, by his example, and who, through his suffering and death, has made it possible for us to obtain eternal life. And now we commemorate his suffering in the garden of Gethsemane and death upon the cross by partaking of the bread and wine, emblematic of his broken body and spilled blood—in remembrance of him, till he come. I think this form or act of communion has a deeper significance for us than simply a reminder of Christ's death and suffering, for how could one forget that fact? It means that and much more. Our mind first turns, perhaps, to this one thought, but it cannot dwell there long without drifting into a chain of thoughts—from one link to another, and the complete chain means the great plan of salvation. Then we consider ourselves as having a part in this great salvation and of our worthiness or unworthiness. We search ourselves to know whether or not we are eating of the bread and drinking of the cup worthily. No wonder Jesus tells us to examine ourselves that we may do this worthily.

One of the links in this chain of thought is about the kingdom, for Christ said, "I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God" and "I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come." This brings us to the next link—the second coming of Christ and all connected with that grand event. The command "do this in remembrance of me" is a simple one and should be considered by each of us a privilege as well as duty, and as often as we do it we bring afresh to our minds this all important theme, and the oftener we do it the more are our thoughts stayed and fixed on the things pertaining to godliness and righteousness. So may we be privileged to meet together often to commemorate "till he come," and may we be found worthy and ready to meet him when he comes.

Flora Harris.

To the Church of God in Conference assembled, dear brothers and sisters in Christ. While not able to be with you in person, I am with you in spirit. In mind I hear your excellent sermons, your sweet songs of Zion and exhortations, and at this hour you are assembled to participate in the most solemn and sacred memorial that it is our privilege to observe. "This do in remembrance of me," was the instruction of him who was far and above the peer of any potentate of earth.

The lives of great men are celebrated for deeds of valor and statesmanship; but Jesus gave his life a ransom for the world. By his holy and pure life, and by his death and resurrection a way is opened by which we may be redeemed from death and corruption, and have a hope of an inheritance, that is incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away.

Again, the Savior says "As oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show forth the Lord's death till he come." By this our minds are carried back nearly nineteen centuries to Calvary's scene, and forward to the time when, "The Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch angel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first, then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, so shall we ever be with the Lord." I Thes. iv. 16-17.

Again, "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. I Cor. xv. 51-52. Praise the Lord, no mortal resurrection here. There is no event more frequently mentioned in the Bible than the second coming of Christ; and it is repeatedly stated, and plainly taught, that at his coming is the time when the saints of this age shall receive their reward; and it is for this event that the Savior warned his disciples to be ready, for they knew not the time when he would come.

Of how much there is in the admonition, "Be ready." It not only requires preparation, but a constant, careful and prayful living. The soldier in carnal warfare, although ever so well equipped and drilled, must be constant guard in face of the enemy, to prevent surprise. So the soldiers of the cross must be constantly on guard against the wiles of the wicked one. He comes, not as the dash of cavalry, or the columns of infantry, but he comes as a tempter, first in things seemingly innocent, and growing bolder gradually. Have we a weakness for sports of various kinds, he encourages this. Are we inclined to carelessness in assembling ourselves together for divine worship and spiritual strength, he encourages this carelessness, and ere we are aware, we have fallen into the "Laodicean state."

We have our trials in various forms. Some departing from the faith, and by their influence leading others astray; but let us take the "Word of God as the man of our council." We have afflictions, so had brother Paul, ours may be equal to his "Thorn in the flesh," but the Savior says, "my grace is sufficient for thee." And Paul adds, "By weakness am I made strong." The Psalmist says, "Weeping may endure for the night, but joy cometh in the morning." In this life we are in the night of weeping; but when Jesus shall come and gather his saints, will be the morning of unending joy. May it be ours to be there.

Have Faith in God No. 2.

There is no subject that should interest the human family as that of faith. In these days of numerous faiths it is important that we should know that there is but one true faith as there is but one God. The faith of God relates to his plan of salvation and it comes to us in the belief of the gospel of the kingdom of God. This plan as to the kingdom of God has been revealed to us through the Word. It embraces the one truth that Jesus, the Son of God, will in the age to come occupy his father David's throne. Through the promise to David we have this plan more fully developed. Holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. This gave God's plan of the ages through the prophets. Later on his Son preached the gospel of the kingdom and required men to believe it in order to salvation. This same gospel of the kingdom was confirmed to us by those who heard him. God witnessing with signs and wonders and with divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Spirit. Thus has this faith been revealed to those chosen of God.

Paul writes that in ages to come he (Christ) might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus. By this we see that there are some things that we do not fully know but will when we shall see Christ as he is. The character of this faith is peculiar in as much as it is the Word of faith, which we (the apostles) preach. That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God raised him from the dead thou shalt be saved. For the Scripture saith, Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed. Whosoever shall call upon (him) the name of the Lord shall be saved. This Word of faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. God has caused this faith to be written in his Word and we are to accept it and reform our lives and obey it that we may enter the new life and in the end receive eternal life.

Paul further says, That we should be to the praise of his glory, who first trusted in Christ. In whom ye also trusted after that ye heard the Word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also after that ye believed ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise. Eph. i. 13, 13. Note the order given in this text. Ye trusted in Christ after that ye had heard the gospel of your salvation. In whom also after that ye believed ye were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise. The Ephesians were sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise. Not however until they heard and believed. In Rom. iv. Paul says that Abraham received the sign of circumcision as a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised. For what saith the Scriptures? Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him for righteousness. To Abraham circumcision was the seal placed on the covenant which God made with him.

In Colossians ii. this same apostle plainly teaches what the seal of our faith is. Ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power. In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ. Buried with him in baptism wherein ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God who hath raised the dead. And you being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all your trepasses. Now if the circumcision made with hands was the seal of the righteousness of Abraham's faith, why cannot the circumcision made without hands, which is baptism be the sign of our righteousness. Providing we have confessed with our mouth and believed in our heart that Jesus is both Lord and Christ? This seems to me to be a very reasonable conclusion. The apostles were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise. We are sealed when we are obedient to that form of doctrine spoken of in Rom. vi. know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection, knowing this that our old man is crucified (put to death) with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that we should not serve sin. We are alive in the new creation if we have obeyed from the heart that form or mold of doctrine which was delivered to us. Our old man was buried, put to death, in the watery grave no more to arise. We are admonished to "walk ye in him." If we have been baptized into Christ we have put on Christ.

In closing this article let me give you a very solemn admonition. While the children of Israel were traveling from Egypt to Canaan God said, Behold, I send an angel before to keep you in the way, and to bring you into the place which I have prepared. Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions; for my name is in him. Now if the Word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great a salvation." God is now speaking by or through his Son in whom is his name. If it were necessary to hear his angel in whom was his name is it not more needful that we hear his Son? Take heed what you hear and take heed how you hear.

Your brother waiting for the Anointed from heaven.

D. C. Robison.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to write you a short letter. I have been a reader of The Restitution for many years, it came to our family address to my father C. H. Watkins. His name appeared on your subscription list for many years, nearly as long as I can remember, but he has now passed away, free from the cares of this life, and has been laid to sleep until the resurrection morning when we expect to see him again standing on this earth with all the redeemed with a firm step and smiling face when all of our tears will be wiped away and our sad countenances will be changed to smiles and we can realize that our sorrows are all passed and that we are alive forevermore, realize that sorrow and death are things of the past, and that we will never have to again walk away from the grave of a friend with a sorrowful heart. Pray for us that we may be found faithful. As ever a brother in Christ.

E. C. Watkins.

Died at Arcola, Canada, on Friday, the 7th of September, 1906, Charles Henry Watkins; aged 74 years and 6 months. Charles Henry Watkins was born Feb. 18, 1832, in Steuben Co., New York State, at about 14 years of age he moved with his parents George Edmund and Catherine Watkins to the State of Illinois, near the town of Roscoe, where they resided for a few years, then moved to Whiterock, Ogle Co., Ill., where they lived for some years. During their stay there they all were baptized into the all-saving name of Christ by Elder Chapman of the Millerite faith. In 1857, July 26, he was united in marriage with Miss Emily Jane Ellis of Roscoe, Ill., and to this union were born three children, two sons and a daughter, Edwin Charles and Philip Leander and Nancy Jane Watkins. In April, 1864, he moved with his family from Illinois to Story Co., Iowa, near Story city, where he lived for twenty-five years, during which time his wife and daughter accepted the all-saving name of Christ. His wife was immersed on the 25th of Dec., 1873, by Elder J. T. Prime of Nevada, Iowa, his daughter in June, 1887, by Elder A. J. Eychaner. In March 1889 he moved with his family to Sheridan Co., Neb., where they lived for 12 years, during which time he was a faithful worker in the cause of Christ his work being partly rewarded by seeing his whole family united with the church. Through his efforts and that of Almus Adams and the help of Christ they succeeded in building up a lively little church of over thirty members. In the year 1901, he with his wife moved to Arcola, Canada, where he was soon after joined by his sons and their families, but Miss Nancy after her union with F. M. Godfrey of Rushville, Neb., moved to Holton, Kansas, where she still resides. Brother Watkins was a faithful worker in the cause until the last. He leaves a wife, two sons, a daughter, and their families, five grandchildren, to mourn their loss.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Plymouth, Indiana, Oct. 3, 1906.

The fall Conferences in various parts of the country are announced, and an urgent call is made by the officers in each place, for increased attendance and renewed interest. This is urged because of a coldness, an indifference, in the attitude of some—a seeming willingness to let a few do the work and bear all the burden. A desire to shirk responsibility. In most places this condition is due largely to carelessness. Some trivial amusement, business cares, weariness from excessive toil—small things, of little weight at first, are made a pretext for staying away from services. A part had been assigned you, but some one else filled the place—some how they got along, and it does not matter much, just me. But Brother, Sister, stop a moment. You are free, you say, and can do as you please. No one has a right to dictate to you. Look carefully at this and see if you do really believe this. You loudly proclaim your freedom. You are willing to grant like liberty to others. Others take such a privilege. Soon no one is attending the services—things drag, the young make quick note, no one is responsible for carrying on the work. My Brother and my Sister, you may be able to show that you are not responsible for carrying forward the work of the Lord's house, but remember there is a future, and the person who is responsible for STOPPING the services at the Lord's house will have to give account then. Let each individual take a good look into his own heart—not his brother's—and then ask himself if he is responsible for having clogged any of the machinery in the Lord's service. When the business session was called my counsel was needed, but if I had gone MY business would have suffered. You set your own affairs above the Lord's. I was expected there to play the organ, and I know they looked anxiously through the window for me, but I was tired and did not feel well. Be honest with yourself, and own up that you just shirked. When the collection was taken up I could have put in a fifty cent piece, but only threw in ten cents. I saw the officers count and recount the money. I presume they had to go into their own pockets, and then cut some creditor short in his pay, but I am not responsible—they made it some way. Brother, Sister, you are not your own. You were bought by the precious blood of Christ. You are answerable and responsible to God, and you cannot always shirk giving account of your stewardship. A demand will be made, and you will have to give account of what you have done with the Lord's money. The Lord bought you, paid a good high price for you—gave what he held precious. What for? Just to benefit you? To do you good was only a part of his purpose. He saw you as a business man, you as a preacher, you as an expounder of his Word, you as an exhorter, you as a Sunday School teacher, you as a singer, you as a musician, you as a visitor of the sick and distressed, and you as one to whom it is given to occupy a seat in the assembly of his saints. When he bought you he had in view carrying on his work for THIS age, and he paid the necessary price to get you. Dare you face God and ask a reward unless you have cheerfully, willingly, gladly rendered him a full service? Can you make an excuse that your own heart will accept? In view of what God paid for you, let me ask, Dare you shirk another time? Can you make satisfactory excuse for deserting the ranks? Dare you for a moment longer bury your talent? Will a fancied sleight by a brother, that you neglect to take to him for reconciliation, satisfy you as an excuse when you are asked for an accounting? Do you really think any of your excuses will stand God's searching? This is a serious and solemn matter, and each should give due consideration to it. This is not written to offend or to censure any one, but rather in love to exhort to steadfastness, a renewed zeal, a prayerful consideration of MY duty, and to urge redoubled diligence in all departments of the Lord's work.

We wish all who have not renewed their subscriptions for 1906 would do so at once. We just simply need the money right now.

The following item is from the Salem, Ohio, News, of Sept. 24, and sent by Brother P. Neill. We are informed that the victim of the accident is the only son of Brother and Sister Glen Asher, of Lewisburg, Ohio, and we assure the bereaved ones of the sympathy of the entire brotherhood in this sad hour.

"John Asher, 11-year-old son of Glen Asher, was shot and instantly killed by a revolver in the hands of Hale Seaman. The boys were playing at the Seaman home and found a revolver upon the stairs. Seaman shot his playmate while he was looking into the loaded weapon. David Sharp, aged 10, was at the house and he and Seaman dragged the body down stairs and hid it along the roadside. The body was found by Mary Blackwell, who was passing along the road. She notified the authorities, who are investigating the affair."

Death and Resurrection.

Between the doctrine of the inherent immortality of the soul and that of the unconsciousness of man in death, or that man is a mortal being, there is no middle ground. Either man dies and ceases to live entirely or he survives death, in which case he has no need of any resurrection whatever.

There may be some one who reads this who is trying to solve the problem of man's identity in death and of his resurrection in the last day, and if these lines should reach any such I will try to help you with that which helped me and set me entirely at rest on the subject. The light broke in on me last winter (1905) while I was engaged in the study and presentation of another and entirely different matter—the existence of God.

Around every human being you may draw a circle which represents the limit of his comprehension. This circle may be larger with some than with others, but there is a limit to every man's comprehension. Let the anxious reader fix this fact in his mind clearly. Be sure and get started right.

The second fact is that the comprehension of the existence of God is beyond or outside this circle; no man being able to fully comprehend the nature of Deity. But immediately compare this second fact with a third one, namely, that no man can comprehend his own existence. Here you want to think slowly but surely. It is a fact you and I cannot comprehend our own existence. But does this fact disprove our own personal existence? Not Then neither does the fact that I cannot comprehend the existence of God disprove his existence. God, and you, and I, all exist, in spite of the fact that you and I cannot comprehend the existence of God, neither our own existence.

It was just here that the light broke in on me with reference to the resurrection of the dead; for if it is a fact that I cannot comprehend my present existence (and it is a fact) how should I be able to comprehend my future existence? I cannot. Here then let me safely observe, that not a man living ever did, or can, or will be able to comprehend the resurrection of the dead. But that does not disprove the doctrine of the resurrection, any more than the fact that I cannot comprehend my present existence proves that I do not exist. God has said there shall be a resurrection of his dead men, and all I have to do is to believe it, which is just as easy as eating ice cream on a summer day.

You never ate a dish of ice cream that you comprehended. Do not confound familiarity with a certain thing with comprehension of it. They are vastly different. I am perfectly familiar with corn growing, but I do not comprehend it. We live in a world of miracles with which we become familiar, but we never comprehend them. If you could comprehend the growing of seeds you could make seeds that when planted would grow, and so if you could comprehend the resurrection of the dead you could raise the dead.

I was very glad of this light that came to me, for it has forever settled my mind on that tremendous question of a future existence. The statements above will bear inspection now and forever, because they are true; and the truth makes free. Do not expect to comprehend the resurrection of the dead so long as you cannot comprehend your present life, neither the roses that bloom at your door, neither the weeds and thistles of the field, the fish that swim in the seas, the movement of your fingers and toes; but be very sure that you believe it. Heb. xi. 6.—Virgil E. Hunt, in Messiah's Advocate.

Dear Restitution:

We desire to have it made known through THE RESTITUTION, that the Church at Burr Oak, Indiana, have reasons for rejoicing. We feel that our labor has not all been in vain. On Sept. 23, after listening to a very interesting talk given by Brother Vanvactor, from the 6th of Romans, and singing of the wonderful peace of the Father above, we drove to the water, where Brother Dominicus Hatton was buried in baptism. He is the third member of that family that has accepted Christ by baptism. A Sister, Mrs. Pearl Zechiel, was baptized by Brother Vanvactor, April 10, 1905, and his mother, Sister Hatten, being baptized by Brother Austin, April 29, 1901. Our prayer is that our young brother may be an earnest worker in the cause of Christ, and that he may receive strength from the unseen power on high to help him to overcome all the trials and temptations that are sure to surround him in this rough pathway of time, and may other members of that family soon decide to lay hold on the promises of God.

Brothers and Sisters, let us never be discouraged. We have fought some hard battles, and have almost felt at times that we were sinking, but praise God, he is able to deliver us, and oh, may he increase our faith, and help us to fully trust in his strength, and all will be well, when trials surround us, may we look up and say, Father, what need we fear when thou art near.

May God be our Helper.

LIZZIE WILHELM.

Dear Restitution:

Brother J. S. Lindsay, our State Evangelist, has just concluded a series of meetings at Union Chapel, Gallatin Co., Ill. The Church there was formerly Second Adventists, and under the careful teaching and pastorate of Bro. H. C. Gregg. It has been my pleasant lot to preach for this church during the past year alternately with Bro. H. C. Gregg. We both spake "as the oracles of God," with the result that Adventism was dethroned, and now we all believe, fundamentally, the doctrines of the Church of God. The writer is now identified with you denominationally, and has grounds to believe that ere long Union Chapel Church will belong to our Conference.

During last year, after hearing them make an intelligent confession of faith, I baptized seven penitent sinners there. It makes me rejoice exceedingly to know that they are holding on to the faith. And then, last Sunday, Sept. 30, there was great rejoicing among the angels in heaven and among the "little flock" of believers at Union Chapel, over Miss Maggie McCaleb, whom we baptized in the likeness of Christ's death. God bless you, dear brethren, and keep you faithful to the Word of his grace. I am absent from you in flesh but present in Spirit.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.

Aloofness from Evil.

To keep aloof from evil is one of the needs of the Christian. Much as "the evil that men do" is pressed on our notice in various ways, the duty still remains not to dwell on the details of human sins. The mind and the soul are highly impressionable, are made to be so, and, if they are to be clean and pure, they must be kept from willing contact with evil, lest the soul "first endure, then pity, then embrace," in some measure at least. He who wants good in his life cannot afford to contemplate evil even with idle curiosity. It is wasteful and dangerous. One needs to let goodness, purity, high thinking, make all possible impressions on the heart and mind.

Solomon says: "He that would have friends must show himself friendly." Emerson pithily condensed the well known proverb thus: "If you would have a friend be one." So may we say, If you would win friends for Jesus, you yourself must first be his loyal friend. How enthusiastic party zealots are in winning friends for the favorite candidate during a campaign! They cannot say enough in their favor. There is nothing too hard to do for them. Oh, that all were so loyal and enthusiastic in their friendship for Jesus! Enthusiasm of that kind always tells. And truly he is worthy of all the enthusiasm we can display. He loved us when there was nothing loving or lovable in us. Should it not be our greatest pleasure to recommend his friendship to others?—Christian Union Herald.

Conference Report.

The Missouri-Kansas Conference of the Church of God convened at Morrill, Kansas, Sept. 22nd till Oct. 1st. The speakers present were J. F. Wilcox, G. M. Myers, W. L. Crowe, Jos. Williams, T. H. Owens and T. A. Killough. The meetings were held in the Christian church.

Business meeting was held on Sept. 29th. Treasurer's report showed in the treasury $133.47. Thesix preaching brethren present were allowed on time and expenses at the Conference $90.30. Balance left in the treasury $13.17. Received from Wm. Burton $1.50.

No evangelistic work was done the past year under the Conference, but G. M. Moyers reported work done independently, and Bro. W. L. Crowe reported work done at Stark, Kan., under the South Kansas Conference, assisted by Joseph Williams, where he baptized eight and into the Bible class four others on their previous baptism and organized a Bible class there. Also independent work done at Hybrid, Mo., where two were baptized, and at Morse Mills, Mo., where he baptized five, and one baptized in Neo. in a meeting under the Nebraska Conference.

It was recommended that in conference meetings and in general public meetings, before those outside the faith, that our preaching brethren should hold up the points of faith on which we are united, and discuss our differences mainly among ourselves.

The following officers were appointed for the coming year:—

President, J. P. Bitner, Severance, Kansas.

Vice President, Joseph Williams, Atlen, Kansas.

Secretary, W. L. Crowe, Route 3, Chanute, Kansas.

Treasurer, E. M. Saylor, Morrill, Kansas.

It was moved and seconded that a delegate be appointed to go to the Nebraska Conference to discuss the uniting of Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska, into one Conference, and to find a suitable place for the general Annual Conference. Carried. E. M. Saylor was appointed a delegate and Eugene Howard if possible to go to the St. Paul, Nebraska, Conference.

Motion to adjourn carried.

At our last meeting Roy Howard, wife and daughter came forward for baptism. May the Lord help them to be faithful till the end, and by the favor of God at last obtain an inheritance among all those who are sanctified by the truth.

And now, dear reader, as we desire to push the evangelistic work in these parts, and our numbers are few and the harvest great, please send in pledges or help for the work to either the secretary or treasurer. Let our brethren in Kansas and Missouri, who want a meeting write the secretary at Chanute, Kansas.

W. L. CROWE, Sec'y.

Editor Restitution:

Glad to note improvement in THE RESTITUTION. Am at Hickory Grove, Iowa, at present, former home of Bro. Sam White. Have had a fine attendance, with best of interest. Hope the Lord will give us wisdom to so present his Word as to yield a big increase. We need the prayers of the righteous for wisdom and knowledge to be given us to rightly divide the Word of Truth.

Yours, in the One Hope.

O. J. ALLARD.

Arrangements have been made and it is expected that Brother L. E. Conner, of Cleveland, Ohio, will be at the Conference at Millbrook, Michigan, Oct. 25th, 1906, also it is expected that Brother and Sister B. W. Woodward, of Dutton, Michigan, will be there.

Notice.

All Brethren in Iowa wishing Evangelistic Meetings during the fall or winter will please make their requests to the Conference Board at once.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Humility.

A little bird with feathers brown,
Sat singing on a tree;
The song was very soft and low,
But sweet as it could be.

And all the people, passing by
Looked up to see the bird
That made the sweetest melody
That ever they had heard.

But all the bright eyes looked in vain,
For birdie was so small,
And with a modest, dark brown coat,
He made no show at all.

"Papa, dear," little Gracie said,
"Where can this birdie be?
If I could sing a song like that,
I'd sit where folks could see."

"I hope my little girl will learn
A lesson from that bird,
And try to do what good she can—
Not to be seen, but heard.

"This birdie is content to sit
Unnoticed by the way,
And sweetly sing his Maker's praise
From dawn to close of day.

"So live, my child. If through your life,
That, be it short or long,
Though others may forget your looks,
They'll not forget your song."

Seed, means child, children or son in Bible language. You know a seed or son, was promised to Abraham, "who should possess the gates of his enemies," and when we came down through the long years of Bible history, and find a child who can go back from grandfather to great grandfather and from great grandfather on up to great great grandfather, and still on, till he comes to Abraham, and can say, "that he is Abraham's son,"—hear him when he is grown up, preaching everywhere of a kingdom that is to be in the field, or world, where wicked people and good people are growing together now,—hear him saying "that he will sit upon a throne of glory in that kingdom,"—telling people "that they must believe and mind him, to get into "it," and that if they do believe and mind, he will wake them up at the last day and give them eternal life—we are pretty sure we have found the seed or son in whom that promise is to be fulfilled, and who is to wake Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the good people up, to give them the land.

We know we have found him, when we hear what Paul says about it,—"Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not to seeds as of many, but to thy seed which is Christ."

There was to be but one, of all Abraham's children, who could do these things. God was looking at him, when he said what he did to Abraham, and he showed Abraham how to hope for the life and land through that Son.

So you see, that to learn about Jesus, you must learn about Abraham. You must know how man came to die—what God has promised him for believing and minding, and how he is going to save him from death, so that he will die no more.

You have found now that Jesus is the one child of Abraham, to whom, through Abraham, God promised the land. It was promised to him, because through him alone, could the rest of Abraham's children get the land.

But we must go back now to Abraham's people.

After Abraham was dead one of his great grandsons, named Joseph, was sold by his wicked brothers into Egypt. There, from being a servant, he became a great ruler, and sent for his father's family to come down to Egypt to live.

After Joseph was dead, the great king, who had been so kind to him, also died. His people had increased so that there had grown to be a great multitude of them, and they had taken the name of Israelites, after the name that God had given to Jacob, his father.

A wicked king had taken the throne, who knew nothing about Joseph. He was afraid of the Israelites, lest they should take part with his enemies, in battle. He treated them very cruelly and tried to have all their little sons put to death. He thought if he did this, after awhile there would be no men among them to fight or make him trouble.

But God made King Pharaoh's own daughter, the instrument for saving the child who was afterward to lead his people out of the land of Egypt. Moses was hidden in a little boat by the river. Thermuthis went down to bathe—saw the boat and sent one of her companions to bring it to her. She knew that the babe was one of the children that her father wanted to have put to death, but it had a lovely face, and its pretty, pleading, tearful eyes, touched her heart.

Her father had no sons—she would adopt this beautiful Hebrew child—bring him up as her own, and then he would inherit the crown and the throne of the Pharaohs.

The education and the rank of a prince were given him. He lived in the king's palace.

But having learned about his own people, he went to visit them, to see how they were faring. He found them treated very cruelly and to deliver one of them, he killed an Egyptian overseer. Pharaoh threatened him with death and he fled into the land of Midian.

There he married and became a shepherd. While leading his flocks about, the Lord appeared to him and told him he was chosen to take God's people out of Egypt and back to the land of Canaan.

Returning to Egypt, he with his brother Aaron went to Pharaoh many times—and the Lord sent many grievous punishments upon the Egyptians, and wrought a great many signs by their hands, before the king would consent to let them go.

After they were gone, he followed them. They crossed the Red Sea through a road the Lord had made for them, but when the Egytians tried to go over by the same road they were drowned.—The Friend of the Children.

THE PARTRIDGE.

The partridge is found in almost all parts of the world. It is exceedingly pretty, being beautifully shaded in brown and ash, with delicate markings, streaks and spots of saffron, buff, and dark chestnut colors. There are usually about ten or fifteen in a covey or brood. Very shy, indeed, are all partridges, and they have need to be, for hawks and dogs are always on the alert to find them. They build their nests in May, amid dry grass and leaves, and lay from fifteen to twenty-four eggs. In warm countries they are said to breed twice a year. The partridge is select in the choice of its food, subsisting entirely upon grain, seeds, insects and berries; to this delicate taste we owe the flavor of its flesh, which is always in high favor. Their sagacity in saving their young is one of their chief characteristics, and so effectually do they manage that the sportsman is frequently misled. Upon the approach of an enemy, the mother bird utters certain notes of warning understood by the young, who dart under leaves, or places of shelter, while the mother flutters and struggles along the ground, as though wounded, going further and further away, until the pursuers are led completely away from the young, when she darts under the foliage, and, when the danger is over, makes her way back to the frightened little ones. Traps are also a fruitful source of danger to the partridges. I have heard of a lad who, long ago, set a trap for the partridges and watched it unsuccessfully for many days. At length a whole covey in the trap greeted his eyes. He was overjoyed with his success, and sat down to view his prize. The shy, pleading looks of the pretty birds disconcerted him. He took out one, hoping to disarm sympathy, and let it go. Still the innocent frightened eyes pleaded with him. He opened the trap and let them all go, casting the trap away.

The partridge is mentioned twice in the Bible. The first passage reads: "The King of Israel is come out to seek a flea, as when one doth hunt a partridge." To understand this passage, it is necessary to recollect that in the Holy Land not only our familiar variety is found, but a species abounds in the mountains, which, though unable to fly well, having long legs, runs rapidly. This species is still hunted over the mountains by the Arabs, who run them down and take them alive or kill them with sticks. The second passage reads: "As the partridge sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool." The meaning of this passage has been disputed, but it is supposed to refer to the habit of the partridge, which leads it to take possession of and set upon deserted nests which come in their way, and so can be compared to the man who wears himself out trying to hatch pleasure from ill-gotten gains; but though he wear himself away, the reward fails, for his riches are like the inanimate eggs which the partridge tries to warm into life. The partridge, late at night, after other birds are at rest, runs up and down, with the restless cry, "Churr, churr," taking pains when none are needed, like the miser who takes no rest, but rises early and lies down late, seeking happiness and finding none.—Georgiana Kringle.

Poetry.

October.

The months have had wings, not feet, this year,
The beautiful summer has sped away,
And brown October has hurried here:
Oh, things were fair if they would but stay,
And if life were long
It were full of song.

Yet 'tis far to look back to the primrose spring,
To the nightingale's lay and the cuckoo's call;
The promise is now a forgotten thing,
For the gifts foretold are bestowed on us all,
And the blossoms of May
Are the fruit of today.

We have had our summer of light and song,
And our fields and orchards were filled with food,
If the days are shortened they have been long,
And God has covered the land with good.
O, give him praise
For the summer days!

And the beautiful things are not wholly gone!
Some roses there are on the generous trees,
The sun in its splendor still shines on,
Though some flowers are kissed to death by the breeze,
And the leaves in the town
Are faded and brown.

My life is like the October time!
The prodigal season is past and gone,
And over forever the wealth and prime
Of the long, glad day when high deeds were done,
And quiet and rest
Are for me the best,

And I cannot afford to lose an hour
Of the shorter day that is left to me,
Nor ceaselessly fritter away the power
Of head or of hand, since there soon shall be
No moments here
Of my life's short year.

But I thank my God for that which has been,
Of strength and sunshine, of flower and song;
And I will not shrink from the wintry scene,
Though the days are short and the nights are long.
Let the shadows fall,
For this life is not all!

Teacher. According to a previous agreement, we will now study the subject, entitled:

THE FUTURE JUDGMENT.

The Scriptures are explicit in teaching, that there is surely a Great Day of Judgment coming, when that which is wrong, will be corrected.

Especially is God going to bring the nations to judgment, "And he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats."

"Let the heathen be awakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat: for there will I sit to judge all the heathen round about. Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe: come, get you down; for the press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision: for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision." Joel iii. 12-14.

But would it not be so much better to be placed in a position where we will not be required to come into the judgment?

Ella. It certainly would, if that can be done. Do the Scriptures make any provision for that?

A. They do.

Q. Where can it be found?

A. In John v. 24: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my Word, and believed on him that sent me, hath—aionion zoen—everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation — judgment — but is passed from death unto life."

Q. What is the Greek word for condemnation, in this text, and what does it mean?

A. It is "krisin"—judgment.

Q. Please read the Diaglott translation?

A. "Indeed, I truly say to you, he who hears my Word, and believes him who sent me, has aionian life; and comes not into the judgment, but has passed out of death into life."

This is a plain unvarnished statement that all who believe as required, and maintain the standard, "Comes not into the judgment."

Q. What is the judgment about?

A. It is clear upon the face of the text, that it is a judgment made, or a decision already rendered, as to who shall or shall not receive everlasting life.

Q. What reason does the text assign for not coming into a future judgment?

A. Because as far as the judgment is concerned, you have already "passed out of death unto life." If that has already been "passed" upon in the case of those complying with the requirements named in the text, it would be useless to revise the matter in the future.

Q. Do other Scriptures confirm this text?

A. Yes, sir; in abundance. I will call your attention to John iii. 36: "He that believeth on the Son hath—aionian zoen—everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life."

Here we have judgment already rendered, in the cases of both believer and unbeliever. The believer, as far as the judgment is concerned, is already awarded everlasting life, and consequently "shall not come into judgment," as saith the Word of the Lord; but as far as the unbeliever is concerned, the judgment already rendered, is, "shall not see life."

Bessie. I notice so many texts that speak of believers already having everlasting life, in what way is it true?

A. That is made very plain in 1 John v. 10-12: "He that believeth not God hath made him a liar: because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; he that hath not the Son of God hath not life."

Q. Yes, I see that believers have everlasting life assigned to them, in the custody of the Son, but what I want to know is, when will it become a fact in our own organisms?

A. See Col. iii. 3, 4: "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

Q. Now I will quote John iii. 36: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."

Now, some very serious questions come to me: if believers at this time have attained to a position spoken of as having—judicially, but not as a physical fact—"Passed from death unto life," and on account of having thus judicially passed, "Comes not into—future—judgment," on the question of determining his fitness or not, to receive everlasting life, because "he that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life," "hid with Christ, in God," and if it be true, that "he that hath the Son, hath life," is it not a strange thing if they are in ignorance of the possession of such a priceless treasure?

A. It certainly would be a very strange piece of ignorance?

Q. Well, then, how about those believers who expect to come forth from their dusty beds in mortal flesh, for the purpose of undergoing a judicial investigation as to their fitness to receive everlasting life.

A. They certainly have but a very limited conception of the Savior's clear and emphatic declaration when he said: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my Word and believeth on him that sent me hath (by judicial decision) everlasting life, and (for this reason you) shall not come into judgment; but is (judicially) passed from death unto life."

Q. Is it really possible to attain a position in life, in which we can absolutely be free from "condemnation?"

A. Paul said it could be done.

Q. Where?

A. In Rom. viii. 1, 2: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." There are two things here, that place a person beyond all possible danger of future condemnation, and these are the two things:

1. We must be "In Christ Jesus."

2. We must not "walk after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

Q. Then, if any person can have knowledge that they really are "in Christ Jesus," and are not "walking after the flesh," they also know that "no condemnation," awaits them in the future. Is that not so?

A. That is the case.

Q. Then what would be the sense of citing such people, over whom there is no condemnation, before a tribunal for trial as to whether they ought to be condemned, or not?

A. Why such a procedure would be as inconsistent as a human farce.

Q. Did Paul know whether he was accepted, or not, before he died?

A. He did. See 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness," etc.

The words, "There, is," indicates positive assurance, not even a question of doubt is left open; whence comes this assurance in advance of an investigation at the judgment seat? It is found in the words, "I have kept the faith," etc.

Q. Do mortal resurrectionists teach that no one can know how it is going to fare with them until after the inquisition?

A. They do. I will quote from Mr. Roberts: "They will all be gathered together into one Great Presence, for the one great dread purpose of inquisition. Not until they hear the spoken words of the King will they know how it is going to fare with them."

Q. Well, Paul said he knew in advance of the inquisition. Are there any others who also knew in advance of the inquisition?

A. Yes, sir; David said he knew. See Psa. xvii. 15: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied, when I awake with thy likeness." I think I hear some mortal resurrectionist say: "David, you haven't got that straight at all, we don't awake in the Lord's likeness, at all; we awake in sin's flesh, and then go before the inquisition, for examination, and if we pass that, then we can have the Lord's likeness flashed upon us."

Q. Are there still others?

A. Oh, Yes; we have Job. See Job xiv. 14, 15: "O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time, and remember me! If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come."

I can imagine the correction, about as follows: "David didn't get this resurrection and judgment matter straight, neither have you, you ought to know that we don't wait in the grave until the change come. We wake from the grave in mortal flesh, and if we successfully pass the inquisition, then the change will come."

Q. What other Bible character has got the resurrection and judgment matter crooked according to the mortal resurrectionist teaching?

A. Jesus is the next. See Luke xx. 35: "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage: neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the angels; and are children of God, being the children of the resurrection."

Q. Now in this Scripture in what particular points does Jesus differ from mortal resurrectionists?

A. In the first place, they differ materially as to the time when the accounting occurs. They teach a resurrection of a mixed multitude in mortal flesh, who will be cited before an inquisition, which tribunal will determine who shall be accounted worthy or otherwise.

Q. Now, please show where Jesus differs from the teachings of this sect?

A. Examine carefully this Scripture, and you will find that only one class are raised at that time, and it is composed of those who had previously been "accounted worthy." The Lord don't need a board of inquisition, to find out who is worthy.

Q. Why not?

A. Simply because "The Lord knoweth them that are his." "He discerneth the thoughts and intents of the heart," and "needeth not that any man should tell him what is in man."

Having knowledge as to who were his, he accounted them worthy not only to obtain that world—age, but also "the resurrection from the dead." Now, if they were accounted worthy to be raised, then the accounting worthy must take place prior to the resurrection, it could not be otherwise.

Q. What will be the nature of the resurrection they are accounted worthy to obtain?

A. "Neither can they die any more for they are equal unto the angels."

Q. What two things has Jesus taught in this Scripture?

A. The accounting worthy takes place prior to the resurrection.

2. It cannot be a mortal resurrection, because Jesus says, "Neither can they die any more."

Q. Then who is right, Jesus, or mortal resurrectionists?

A. Jesus, every time.

Q. Does Jesus, The Faithful Witness, bear further testimony that only one class is raised at the first resurrection?

A. Why certainly he does.

Q. Where?

A. In Rev. xx. 6: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."

Q. If they are raised proof against death, they must have been previously accounted worthy. Is not that the case?

A. Certainly. A selection out from among the dead, could not have been made without it.

Q. What became of the remainder of the dead?

A. "The rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished."

Q. Then if a thousand years intervenes between the resurrection of those accounted worthy of eternal life, and "the rest of the dead," who were not, then the two classes could not have been raised simultaneously, and taken before an inquisitorial tribunal, to settle the matter of being "accounted worthy?"

A. That would be simply impossible.

Q. Have we any other Bible character, who is at variance with the sect of mortal resurrectionists?

A. Yes, we have the grand Apostle Paul, the champion reasoner, and student of the doctrine of the resurrection. He says, 1 Cor. xv. 42-44:

"It is sown in corruption: it is raised in incorruption."

"It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory."

"It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power."

"It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body."

Q. Do you find it stated anywhere in the Scriptures, that it is sown an animal body; and raised a mortal body?

A. Never. When speaking of those in Christ, who are "accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead," they are always spoken of as being raised in exactly the opposite condition from that in which they were sown.

Q. In this plain and unambiguous language of Paul, can any one detect the least hint that a mortal resurrection and a citation before an inquisitorial tribunal has come in between being sown a natural body, and raised a spiritual body?

A. No, sir; such teaching is purely of human devising.

Q. But how do they get along with such unequivocal language?

A. They don't get along with it at all; they twist it out of all recognizable shape, in their efforts to make it fit in with their man-made theory of mortal resurrection and judgment.

Q. Paul teaches the change from the corruptible to the incorruptible, under the figure of the sowing and germination of seed. How do they handle that?

A. In their efforts to harmonize their theory, they completely destroy the figure.

Q. How?

A. The body is recognized as being the seed. Before it reaches a point where it becomes incorruptible, it must pass through two stages: the sowing and the raising. When a farmer sows seed how does he perform the act? He casts the seed into the ground. Mortal resurrectionists say the body, the seed, is sown, when it is cast forth out of the ground. Did you ever hear in all your life, of seed being sown after that fashion? Farmers would never have a crop if in place of casting their seed "into" the ground, they cast it forth "out" of the ground. Such reasoning destroys the figure, which all intelligent people must admit.

Q. Well, when does their "raising" take place?

A. The "cast forth seed" is taken before an inquisitorial tribunal, and if it passes a favorable examination, it is then raised or exalted to the incorruptible life.

Q. Is that a resurrection of the dead?

A. No, sir; it is simply an exaltation of the living.

Q. Well, coming back to the figure of seed sowing, what becomes of the seed before it germinates?

A. "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die.

Q. Well, if the sowing consists of the casting forth of a live body out of the ground, then it must "die," before it can be "quickened," what would that be?

A. A second death.

Q. We read "Thou sowest not that body which shall be;" how about mortal resurrectionists?

A. They have the very same corruptible mortal body sown, cast forth out of the ground, that went into it.

Q. When do mortal resurrectionists have the dead judged?

A. Why, not at any time. They have all the dead liable to judgment, made quick, before the judgment takes place.

Q. But don't the Bible teach a judgment of both the quick and the dead?

A. It most surely does. See Acts x. 42: "And he commanded us to preach to the people, and to testify that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of the quick and the dead." The "quick" and the "dead," are the two opposite extremes, and they are judged while they are still in those conditions.

Q. When will they be thus judged?

A. See 2 Tim. iv. 1: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." See also Rev. xi. 18: "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged," etc.

Q. Why can't mortal resurrectionists believe the Bible, when it so plainly says the dead are judged?

A. Because they have a theory that the people are judged according to a verbal account, which they expect them to render. They know that the dead cannot render verbal accounts.

Q. Will they be judged by a verbal or a written account?

A. "The dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books.

Q. Will every one who is liable to the judgment be judged by a written account?

A. "Whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." "This is the second death."

The word "whosoever," is of wide application, and covers every one who is liable to the judgment.

Q. Does not the Bible indicate a personal appearance at the judgment seat of Christ, and if so, what for?

A. See 2 Cor. v. 10: "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things in body, according to that he hath done, whether good or bad."

This is a judgment where rewards are received according to work done whether good or bad. Accounts of increase of talents are received. The other judgment is of life, where the book of life is consulted.

See also 1 Cor. iii. 13-15: "Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it; because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If a man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If a man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire." If he shall have done bad work, he receives "according to that he hath done, whether good or bad." "He himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire." That matter is settled out of the book of life.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

BIBLE SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

The object of the Bible School Association shall be: To promote deeper interest in Bible Schools, to devise for their use the best methods and plans, to prepare Bible School teachers, to extend this work to all the states, and to enthuse every member of the Church of God with the vast importance of Bible School work.

Helps and suggestions for Bible Schools will appear in this Department, also such matter as pertains to Bible study. Historical notes, notes from Biblical Lectures, and items of interest to Bible students.

A letter from Brother Neill states that he is now ready to take up the work of preparing a lesson for Sunday Schools. These lessons will appear in this Department.

Please remember, this work is only in the formative stage and will progress as the interest increases.

The duties of caring for our families and providing for the necessary things make it impossible for the most of us to give the time and means that we would like to the work, but we will do the best we can under the circumstances.

We have a living, loving Master who waits to bless every faithful effort put forth, and to give us wisdom in the carrying forward of his work. Time, strength, service, love, money, all belong to him.

The idea of the Bible School is not modern, it is ingrained in the life of God's people. Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came unto him, preaching and teaching.

The Sunday School movement began in an effort to reach those outside the church. Robert Raikes, in 1780, in organizing his Mission Sunday School in Gloucester, England, was developing ideas of religious study accepted by the church from its earliest days. He was a busy man. A business errand in a neglected part of the city revealed to him the terrible condition of the children. He hired four women to teach the boys and girls from six to fourteen years old, on Sunday afternoons, paying them a shilling a day. In a few weeks three hundred children had been collected. After 1811 Sunday School teachers ceased to receive pecuniary reward.

Thus, in taking a glance at the history of great movements their beginning seems but a dot on the map of progress.

The Sunday School as we see it today is managed with a view to promoting the life of the local church. As a nursery of the church its aim first of all is to provide for the children of the church members, but in addition to this it is invaluable as an evangelizing agency. Every school should cultivate a missionary spirit. There is nothing that will kindle a gospel fire and to fan the flame till its influence is felt outside the local community, like a band of Bible School workers. Giving is developed by awakening a missionary spirit, and a missionary spirit is awakened by special effort. This may be accomplished in two ways: by setting aside a small portion of the income for specific purposes, or by fixing upon a certain day for specific purposes and arranging a special program for that day. Remember November 25 is "The World's Temperance Sunday." These special days should be announced in the school and an effort made to arouse interest outside the school by invitation sent out by the children to those not members of the school to attend upon a special day.

Suggestions for this day. Thanksgiving and Patriotic exercises will combine to make this Temperance Sunday impressive. Decorate with flags, sing national anthems. Choosing a Wife.

"Can two walk together, except they be agreed?"

Some Christian young men make a frightful mistake in marrying a giddy, frivolous girl simply because she is pretty, lively, and perhaps a ready conversationalist. When home duties are thrust upon such a creature, her butterfly training is utterly incapable of meeting the pressing needs. Domestic duties are irksome, and as to assuming the duties of a wife and mother, she is clearly incompetent. She has no taste for religious devotion, and that which would be a pleasure to her husband is foreign to her nature. There is nothing solid about her. Yet young men with sound judgment in business affairs and with a religious disposition, plight their faith and future happiness to this doll dressed up in woman's clothes. Young man, if you should be tempted to make such a life choice, your doom is sealed. The chances are that your gay companion will lead you away from the Christ you now love, cause you to lose faith in Christianity that has been such a source of comfort in the dark hours of trial, and thrust upon you domestic unhappiness that will bring many a heartache. Choose your life companion with thought and prayer. Demand sense, judgment, health and piety.

Jacob's Well.

The site of Jacob's Well is, doubtless, well known to the majority of your readers, even to those who have not themselves visited the Holy Land. It has again and again been described by the many writers on Palestine, and all have mentioned their disappointment that instead of finding any semblance to a well or anything which could recall the interview of our Lord with the woman of Samaria, they have merely found a dark, irregular hole amid a mass of ruins, in a vaulted chamber beneath the surface of the ground. I have shared this disappointment on many previous visits to Nablous, and again as, a fortnight ago, we stood beside the spot, it was with great regret that we were so utterly unable to picture before us the scene so graphically described by the evangelist. We had clambered down into the vault and were vainly attempting to peer into the dark hole amid the heaps of stones and rubbish, when we chanced to notice, a few feet from the opening, a dark crack between the stones. Fancying that possibly it might be another opening of the well, we removed some stones and earth, and soon were able to trace part of a carved aperture in a large slab of stone. Deeply interested at finding this, we cleared away more earth and stone, and soon distinguished the circular mouth of the well, though it was blocked by an immense mass of stone. Calling to aid two men who were looking on, with considerable labor we at length managed to remove it, and the opening of the well was clear. It is impossible to describe our feelings as we gazed down the open well, and sat on that ledge on which doubtless, the Savior rested, and felt with our fingers the grooves in the stone caused by ropes by which the water pots were drawn up.—C. W. Barclay, in Bible Banner.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

Programme Committee.

The following persons are appointed a committee to prepare a programme and make other arrangements for the Conference of the Church of God to be held at Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 15-18, 1906. Committee, Brother A. R. Underwood; Sister F. M. McCrory; Sister T. O. Taber.

J. H. WILLEY, Pres. Ind. Con.

Notice.

Brothers T. H. Owens and Killough of Beaver County, Okla., preach at Cline, Lavern and Zelma each Sunday. Any one visiting here enquire for C. A. Starkey, M. A. Starkey or Mrs. Gabriel Rohrback.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

To the Churches and isolated brothers and sisters of the State of Ohio:

At our last Conference held at Brush Creek, Miami Co., we were elected State Evangelist. The success of the year's work depends largely upon you. The Evangelist can do but little without your hearty co-operation. We shall be pleased to visit you and hold meetings as you shall direct. The Conference has provided that our expenses shall be met. It is our wish that you write to us that we may know your wishes.

Remember that the time for evangelizing is short. We should begin our work early. We have the whole State as our field. Our work should begin the last of September or early in October. We have no hobbies to present to those of "like precious faith." It shall be our purpose to preach the "gospel of the kingdom of God." What at the first was spoken by the Lord and confirmed unto us by them who heard him, we will preach. Hoping to be able to serve you all is our wish. Your brother in the Anointed. Address R. 3, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Annual Meeting.

The Churches of God of Southern Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, who believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God, and all who believe that whom Christ has made free are free indeed, will convene in Neosho County, Kansas, October 12, 1906, and continue over Sunday, and if necessary longer. We have some important business to come before this meeting. We read in Acts xv. that in the days of the Apostles there rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of MOSES, and the apostles and elders came together for to consider of this matter, or to confer together about this matter.

This was the first conference meeting that we read of in the Bible, and that was to settle a difficulty among the brethren. We want all the brethren that can to come. Our program is always ready. It is the Gospel that Paul preached, Rom. i. 16. The ones who will do this preaching are not as yet selected, but I hope that we may have able men who will preach what is in the Bible and nothing else. How much I wish that Brothers Daniel, Snowden and W. H. Wilson could be with us. We expect Brother Oliver and Brother Joseph Williams to be with us. Rollin is on the Santa Fe R. R. We will see that you get something to eat and a place to sleep, and will raise as much as we can to cover your expenses. Come and help us in Macedonia.

By order of the Church.

Russellism Exposed.

There has been an increased demand for a sharp expose of the cunningly devised fables of Russellism, showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of the Christian faith.

I am now engaged in writing such an expose; showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of Christianity. It will be printed as a booklet of about thirty pages at ten cents each.

This will follow right along after the printing of Pine Woods Bible Class, the type-setting of which is now nearly completed. The booklet will be ready for distribution about the same time that Pine Woods Bible Class is ready to send out.

Those who wish Russellism Exposed may send in orders right away so that I may know how many to print.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

T. J. DANIEL.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the latter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Faithful Promiser.

Master, I set my seal that thou art true:
Of thy good promises not one hath failed:
And I would send a ringing challenge forth
To all who know thy name, to tell it out,
Thy faithfulness to every written word,
Thy loving-kindness crowning all the days,
To say and sing with me "The Lord is good,
His mercy is forever, and his truth
Is written on each page of all my life!
Yea! there is tribulation, but thy power
Has blessed it with rejoicing. There are thorns,
But they have kept us in the narrow way.
The King's highway of holiness and love;
And there is chastening, but the Father's love
Flows through it; and would any trusting heart
Forego the chastening and forego the love?
And every step leads on to "more and more;"
From strength to strength thy pilgrims pass and sing
The praise of him who leads them on and on,
From glory unto glory, even here.

...ave Faith in God. No. 3.

...ese last days of the apostasy ... of God is lightly spoken of. ...pel of Christ which the apos... ...es to be the power of God ...vation to every one who be... ...regarded by the sects as an ...ruth. Going to heaven at death ...substituted for an inheritance in the ...ingdom of God which will in time fill the whole earth with the glory of God. James says, Have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory with respect to persons. Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him." If we have our faith with respect to persons it is vain, as our heavenly Father has chosen from the poor of this world for the rulers in his kingdom. One of God's elect though poor in this world's goods is counted by James rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom.

Again we read that we should let our conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ; that when I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit with one mind, striving together for the faith of the gospel. If our conversation is concerning the affairs of the world and not concerning our inheritance it becometh not the gospel of Christ. If our minds are ...led with vain things we crowd out ...good news or glad tidings of the ...om of God.

...postle Paul declared himself ...le of Jesus Christ, according ...th of God's elect and the ac... ...ing of the truth which is ...ness. In hope of eternal life, ...God that cannot lie, promised ...e the world began. But in due time ... manifested his Word through preaching, which he committed unto me according to the commandment of God our Savior. Do not these texts teach the unity of the faith of God? It certainly does. When we multiply faiths we multiply gods, and therefore destroy the faith of God. Let us be wary in our searching the Word of God. The faith of God is a cause and produces an effect. We wish to notice the effect. In Rom. v. we read, Being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. By whom we have access into his grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in the hope of the glory of God. In this text we learn that we are justified by faith. To be justified is to stand acquitted before our heavenly Father. Being justified we have peace with God through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The effect of the Adamic death has been removed and we have the promise of a resurrection from among the dead. When Christ shall come our vile bodies shall be fashioned like unto his glorious body. This is the result of the faith of God. Further we find that this faith purifies. God who knoweth the hearts bare them witness, giving them the Holy Spirit even as he did us; and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith. Acts xv. 9. Again, "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently. Without another testimony we find that this faith purified the heart, changing our conversation and desires. Our souls are purified by obeying the truth which we understand to be the gospel of the kingdom of God. When Jesus went everywhere preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, he preached the faith of God, which is so effective. It justifies us and purifies our hearts and souls. How necessary then it is that we search to find out what this faith is and the message it bears.

Philip preached the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ and when they believed these things they were baptized both men and women. After his resurrection Christ spoke of the things concerning the kingdom of God. These things are mentioned in Luke i. His name shall be called Jesus and he shall be great and be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

This faith of which we have been writing sanctifies as well as purifies and justifies. In Acts xx. 32, we read thus, "And now, brethren, I commend you to God and to the Word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among them which are sanctified. The Word of God's grace is faith in his plan for the ages. This Word sanctifies those who believe it. The work of the church in this age is to take out of the Gentiles a people for his name. When we take upon ourselves his name we are justified. If we are diligent in adding to our faith the Christian graces named by the apostle Peter we shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Thus we have our carnal mind changed to one after the Spirit. Paul says in Acts xxvi. 18, that he was sent to open their (Gentiles) eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light and from the power of Satan unto God, that they might receive forgiveness of sins and an inheritance among them who are sanctified by faith that is in me. How plain this message is that we are justified—purified and sanctified by the faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Again, But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ and by the Spirit of our God.

In these articles on the faith of God we have tried to show how important it is to know and have faith in God's plan. Jesus said to his hearers, "My doctrine is not mine but his that sent me. If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself," John vii. 19, 17. How important it is that we do God's will that we may know the doctrine. My prayer is that we may all search diligently that his plan may be unfolded to our minds and that we may let our light shine.

Your brother in the faith of God.

D. C. ROBISON.

Who is My Brother?

Inasmuch as I have made up my mind to evangelize in this part of the country, provided the household of faith would each help a little, and inasmuch as some have responded to the call made recently through THE RESTITUTION, I feel it my duty to state plainly to the brethren, who I consider my brother.

Now it is a fact that there is "One body, and one spirit even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all." This being true, only those who have the "one faith," "one hope," serve the "one Lord," obey the "one Father" and are members of the "one body," and have the "one spirit," are brethren in Christ. The question then arises, how can we have all of these? In the first place we must have the "one faith," from the fact "without faith it is impossible to please God." Heb. xi. 3. This one faith "cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God." What is the Word? "All flesh is as grass and the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away. But the Word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you." 1 Pet. i. 24. We hear the "Word" through the gospel. Then we ask what is the gospel? The gospel consists of facts to be believed, commandments to be obeyed, and promises to be obtained. Faith begat hope, and is the substance of things hoped for.

Paul says, wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, etc." Heb. vi. 17-19. Here is something promised by God to the children of men, and this promise confirmed by God's oath, to give us strong consolation who have layed hold upon it. Whatever was here promised is one object of "the one hope." And here permit me to say, that while there is but one hope, there are many objects. Faith is the substance of things hoped for. More than one. But what was promised here? Go back to where the promise was made, and the oath given, and see.

Turning back to Genesis we there find the Lord talking to Abraham. He said unto him, after having him to come out of his country and from his kindreds, "Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward and westward. For all the land that thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." Gen. xiii. 14, 15. Again, "I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it." Gen. xv. 7. Abraham asked the question, "Whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it? God told him to bring a heifer of three years old, a she goat of three years old, and a turtle dove and a young pigeon. Abraham brought them, divided the beast, and when he could swear by no greater he swore by himself, confirming the promises he had made with Abraham. As space forbids my quoting them, please read. Gen. xii. 4 to 8; xv. 18 to 21; xvii. 1 to 21; xxii. 15 to 18. The objects of hope set before Abraham was that Abraham and his seed should have the land of Canaan, and all the land so far as that is concerned, for an everlasting inheritance, and that in him and his seed, should all families of the earth be blessed. After Abram's death, the promise was renewed to Isaac. Gen. xxvi. 1 to 3. And to Jacob. Gen. xxviii. 10 to 14. Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness. The gospel contains the promises, for all who have the one faith, have the faith of Abraham. "Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. And the Scriptures, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed. So then they that be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham. * * * That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ. Gal. iii. 7 to 20. How can one preach the gospel, without preaching the promises made to Abraham? Again, Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end that the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is father of us all." Rom. iv. 13 to 18. This being true, the Abrahamic faith, is the "one faith" of the Bible. These are facts to be believed. But there are other promises in the gospel. God promised David, that Christ should have his throne, and should reign over the "house of Jacob forever." As we cannot quote them we refer you to Psa. lxxxix. 3 to 36; cxxxii. 10, 11; Luke i. 31-33; Acts ii. 29 to 32. This being true, the throne of David is to be rebuilt, and the "kingdom restored to Israel," which facts the Scriptures abundantly teach. So much so the gospel is often called the "gospel of the kingdom." Other facts of the gospel are, "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures. That he was buried and rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures." 1 Cor. xv. 1, 2, 3. That in his name is salvation, "neither is there salvation in any other." Hence to believe the gospel, is to believe the "things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." When one hears and believes them with all his heart, then, and not till then, should he be baptized in his name. But when they do, they become members of the one body and have the one spirit. Then they are "fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." But if they lack these things, they are "without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and are without God in the world." Eph. ii. 12. Yes, they must understand the "covenants of promise," or they are aliens. None, therefore, but those who believe the "things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ," and have repented of their sins, and carried this faith with them into the waters of baptism, where they were buried with Christ, are brothers in the Lord. In time past, I thought if one lived up to all the light he had, they were all right, but it is a grand mistake, brethren. Honesty does not make any one right, unless he believes the truth. I would like to say much more, and point out more fully the gospel but space forbids. I have only given an outline of what I understand men have to believe to be brothers in the Lord.

Now, if the brethren who have means feel disposed to help the small amount asked, one dollar each, I will lay aside my practice of medicine and devote my time to evangelizing. I have a wife and six children, and cannot therefore go alone. It is much needed, brethren, and much good can be done. I shall begin a meeting near Arkansas City, Kansas the 20th of this month, if the Lord wills, and if means come in I shall continue. If not, Sister Daniel will return all that has been sent in, which is only $3.00 to date.

Yours in the one hope.

T. J. DANIEL.

Sanctuary.

"And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." Dan. viii. 14.

Question: Has this sanctuary spoken of by Daniel, any relation whatever to the modern professed Christian churches, as many now affirm?

1st, What was the sanctuary? A sacred place, particularly among the Israelites, the most retired part of the temple at Jerusalem, called the Holy of Holies, in which was kept the ark of the covenant, and in which no person was permitted to enter except the high priest, and that only once a year, to intercede for the people.—Webster. Read Cruden on sanctuary, also Heb. ix. 7; sanctuary: refuge, defense, protection. 2 Chron. xx. 8, And they dwelt therein, and have built thee a sanctuary therein for thy name saying, If when evil cometh upon us .....we stand before this house, and in thy presence,.....and cry unto thee in our affliction, then thou wilt hear and help. O sacred place, with a high and holy refuge. But what sanctuary is to be cleansed, why, the one that has been defiled, corrupted, trodden under foot of Gentiles.

When? In the year 70 A. D. Titus besieged Jerusalem, reduced the city, destroyed the sanctuary, putting an end to divine service. Eleven hundred thousand Jews perished in that awful siege, and the abomination which maketh desolate was inaugurated on its ruins, and God's chosen people scattered to the ends of the earth as predicted by the prophets, and from that day to this the sanctuary has been trodden under foot by Gentile powers.

The important question asked was, "How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot." "And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." Let us keep in mind it was the sanctuary at Jerusalem that was trodden under foot by Gentiles. When then will it be cleansed? When the twenty-three hundred days are fulfilled. When will that time be? When the Lord comes.

What will be the condition of God's sanctuary until that grand event? Let God's Word answer, Ezek. xxi. 27, I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more, until he comes whose right it is, and I will give it to him. The sanctuary was to be trodden under foot by three great dominant Gentile powers. Luke says, xxi. 24. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled, implying that when these Gentile times are fulfilled Jerusalem will be restored. Proof, Acts xv. 13, 14, 15 16, And after they had held their peace, James answered saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me, Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name.....After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up. How plain; how can any one fail to understand these Scriptures?

The disciples in questioning their Lord did not question the thought of the establishing of the kingdom but, Lord wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? Only a question of time with them, not of place. Please read Ezek. xxxvii. 10 to end of chapter. Let me quote in part: Moreover, thou Son of Man, take thee one stick, and write upon it for Judah and for the children of Israel his companions; then take another stick, and write upon it, for Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions; and join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand. What is the meaning of the figure? verses 21-22 explains it all. The gathered Israelites from among the heathen, united, no more to be divided. One King to rule then, one nation forever; one kingdom, no more idol worship, cleansed from transgression, God dwelling with them and they with their God. Verse 25, And my servant David shall be their prince for ever. Moreover, I will make a covenant of peace with them. It shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them forevermore. My tabernacle also shall be with them. Yea, I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And the heathen shall know that I the Lord do sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them forever more. Forever is a long time, but forevermore comprehends eternity.

Bro. Woodward, are you sure you are right in your location of the sanctuary? Let the Word of the Lord answer this important question. If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy. Psa. cxxxvii. 5-6. For the Lord hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest forever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it. Psa. cxxxii. 13-14. Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love thee. Psalm cxxii. 6. When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory. Psa. cii. 16. When the Lord appears in his glory, then he will build Zion, and there restore his sanctuary. What will be the grand result of this glorious reign? And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. Isa. ii. 4. This all agrees with the angel's testimony to Mary that she should bear a son, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever. Reign over who? The house of Jacob, and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Who in the face of all this array of evidence, given upon God's oath and promise to Israel, will presume to apply them to Gentiles or Gentile churches.

Yours in defense of the truth.

B. W. WOODWARD.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 10, 1906. NUMBER 38.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Fallen Asleep in Jesus.

Sister Julia Dean fell asleep at the Old Ladies' Home, Chicago, Illinois, September 29, 1906, in her 73rd year.

Her maiden name was Julia Wikoff, she married early, had two sons, both of whom preceded her to the silent tomb. Her husband died when she was 21 years old, and she has remained a widow ever since.

She was highly esteemed by the congregation, and was the President of the Ladies Aid Society, at the time of her death.

Her brother removed her to Lacon, Illinois for burial. She had been an inmate of the Ladies' Home for over five years. The Superintendent told me that she was well thought of in the home. Funeral services were conducted by the writer in the chapel of the Home. We had quite a large congregation of old ladies, besides church members. She now rests in hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Obituary.

Wm. H. Garton was born in Waukesha Co., Wis., June 28, 1841, and died at his home near Varina, Iowa, September 25, 1906. He was united in marriage to Sarah Josephine Latten Dec. 3, 1865. To this union were born one son and five daughters, all of whom with his devoted wife survive him. Besides his wife and children he leaves several brothers and sisters and many friends to weep with those that weep. The writer was called upon to speak words of comfort to the bereaved ones, and it was not a difficult task, for brother Garton had for many years been a hearty believer and earnest advocate of the "things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ," so we could repeat the words of Paul "concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him .....For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, and with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first.....Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep!
From which none ever wakes to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes.

"Asleep in Jesus! Peaceful rest,
Whose waking is supremely blest;
No fear, no woe, shall dim that hour
That manifests the Savior's power."

G. ELDRED MARSH.

To the Churches of God in Iowa, greeting:

My appointments for the month of October will be as follows: Marathon on the 4th and 21st; Eagle Grove on the 7th and 18th; Gladbrook on the 14th and 25th. During September the interest and attendance at all four points was excellent, and it leads me to believe that the present Conference year is destined to be a fruitful one. Let us pray that such will be the case.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
J. H. WILLEY,
W. D. THOMPSON,
A. R. UNDERWOOD.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCT. 10, 1906.

WE wish all who have not renewed their subscriptions for 1906 would do so at once. We just simply need the money right now.

WILL all concerned take note, the address of Brother D. C. and Sister N. B. Robinson will in future be 596 South Limestone St. Springfield, O.

THE programme committee of the Indiana Conference have arranged to have Brother S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist for Illinois, attend our November Meeting. This is the first visit Brother Lindsay has made to our State, and it is hoped that a good attendance will welcome him to our midst. He will have some good things to tell us, so let all come who can and enjoy the feast spread for us. Arrangements will be made to care for all who wish to attend. The Plymouth brethren want you to come.

MRS. Melissa Kipler died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. R. Ocker, in this city on Oct. 4. She was at the dinner table when stricken by apoplexy, and died in a few hours. Sister Kipler was immersed some twenty-five years ago, and has been a faithful member of our church ever since, always attending services when possible for her to do so. She had expressed the desire to have Brother or Sister Woodward preach at her funeral, and as Brother Woodward was unable to come Sister Woodward attended. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon, the house being filled with relatives and friends, who came to show the high esteem in which she was held. One daughter, Mrs. J. W. Renner of Columbus, Ohio, came to the funeral. A daughter in South Bend and one in Oklahoma, could not come. The daughters will miss the kind ministrations of their mother, and the church loses a faithful member. She sleeps, but there is a hope of life to come in the future, and if faithful we will meet our Sister again where partings will never come. Our prayer is, Lord come quickly.

Communicated.

Grandma Pate's Funeral.

Brother Underwood:

By request I send the funeral address of our Sister Pate, mother of the late Brother Wm. Pate, of Cleveland. She had been in the truth about thirty-five years. Died Sept. 8, 1906, at the age of 88 years.

W. L. TOMLINSON.

Brethren and Friends:

We have assembled to pay our tributes of love and esteem, for one now silent in death, and to lay her away in the ground to await the trumpet sound that shall call forth all God's sleeping saints, and to speak a few words of comfort to the bereaved ones, and direct the attention of all to the shortness and uncertainty of this life, and urge them to secure an interest in him who has overcome death, and is coming to release those who have believed in him, from the bondage of death.

Although death is an enemy that saddens our hearts, it is blessed to know from the Word of the living God, that he will not always reign. His triumph will be short. Christ our living head has already vanquished him in his own person; and pledges himself to raise up all who will accept him as the way to future glorious and everlasting life.

We know, too, that although death survive all other enemies he will finally succumb, he too shall be destroyed and with him will disappear from God's universe the last vestige of sin, and everything that hath breath shall praise the Lord. Nothing is so well calculated to lighten the load and mitigate the sorrow of the bereaved as the great promises of God that relate to the future. It is the night of death, as it were, now, but the day will soon dawn, "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning," and what a morning it will be to the saints of God. It will be a morning without clouds; a morning that will be ushered in by the arising of the Sun of Righteousness; who with healing in his wings shall bless this benighted earth. All this is in accord with the Words of our Savior, who said to his disciples, "If I go away, I will come again," and the prophet Isaiah says, "His work is before him." His first work will be the raising of his brethren and conferring on them the inestimable boon of endless life, and make them kings and priests unto God, that they may reign with him in the kingdom of God which shall be established under the whole heavens.

It was some thirty-five years ago that the dear deceased first heard these grand and glorious truths, and became an heir to the same by being immersed into the saving name of Jesus, in the Ohio river. She ever after held fast to this hope which is set before us in the gospel, with full confidence. Whenever she heard and thought of the glories to be revealed at the appearing and kingdom of our Lord and Savior, Jesus the Christ, and her emotions were stirred, she frequently expressed to me her inability to give expression to her thoughts. Before health and strength failed her she was always at her place in the assembly of the saints, and desired the company of those who cherished the blessed hope of seeing Jesus and being made like him, and when bodily strength gave place to the feeble and tottering limbs, she did not forget the people of God, but almost invariably sent Christian greeting to those whom she loved.

She had reached the advanced age of eighty-eight years. In her was fulfilled the Scripture which says, "The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow." She felt the labor and sorrow of old age very heavily at times and desired to be at rest, thinking that her work was done. But by her quiet demeanor and patience in tribulation she has left us an example which we may all follow with profit.

As she neared the close of this life the powers of her mind reverted to their former activity, and she expressed her love and gratitude to the dear one who had so faithfully waited upon her, and the words were heard upon her lips, "Thy Kingdom Come." Would to God that that prayer may so be answered. How those words have cheered the waiting servants of God as the centuries have dragged wearily on. O what changes will then be inaugurated. The Lord Jesus will then have descended from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ will have been raised. The cruel enemy that enters our homes and takes from us our loved ones, will be made a captive. Broken hearts will then be made whole and beat strong with the pulsation of joy and gladness. The pulse of immortal life will throb in the frame once racked with pain. The tear-stained faces will be wiped by the hand of God. The Lord Jesus will gather his servants about him and make them strong after the power of an undissolvable life which will constitute the general assembly of the church of the first-born, and when that grand galaxy of deathless benefactors shall stand revealed from death, shining resplendently in the glory of God, the Father, a shout shall ascend to God which will make the arches of heaven ring, "Salvation be unto the Lord our God." And the prophet says when they live they shall sing. They have triumphed over death and will say, "O death where is thy sting, O grave where is thy victory."

Dear friends, there are a few of the glorious things that cluster around the gospel our Sister believed and obeyed in the prime and vigor of life when she could rejoice in them, and I would urge those out of Christ to follow her example in this, that they too may receive the comfort and have the same full assurance that she had. It is the only hope that gives enduring and abiding satisfaction. It lightens the dark valley of death. It makes known to us the way to future life by a resurrection from the dead through Jesus the Christ. It speaks to us in words of comfort and consolation and bids us sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

Oh while mercy lingers may we all accept the divine overtures of the great salvation.

The king on the throne may render himself insignificant by performing no service for mankind.

If we are sufficiently watchful over our own conduct, we shall have no time to find fault with the conduct of others.

Youth's Column.

Redeem the Time.

Redeem the time, for fast life's sands are flowing,
And while the cool, sweet breeze of youth is blowing,
And wisdom's voice beyond the mountains call,
The golden grains, unheeded fall.

Unheeded fall—and we with staff are bending
Our faltering footsteps, to the graveyard tending,
And weary eyes turned backward o'er the way,
See, some beyond recall, life's little day!

Birds of the Bible. No. 6.

THE PELICAN.

The pelican is mentioned five times in the Bible—in Leviticus and Deuteronomy, where it is named among the unclean birds; in Psalms, when David compares his sorrow over the condition of his country and her altars to the pelican, which sits in mournful attitude in the most desolate places, as though overwhelmed with grief; and in Isaiah and Zephaniah, the last two translated cormorant.

David says: "My heart is smitten, and withered like grass, so that I forget to eat my bread, by reason of the voice of my groaning, my bones cleave to my skin; I am like a pelican in the wilderness."

The pelican is a native of Africa, though it is known in Asia and America. It has been recently seen upon the lakes of Gennesaret and Merom in Galilee. It is something like the goose in color and the shape of its body and neck. Its bill is from fifteen to eighteen inches long, is of a greenish color, varying toward the end to a reddish blue, and hooked downward. To the lower part is attached a bag, said to be capable of containing fifteen quarts of water. In this bag water is carried to a distance and placed in some rocky basin, for its own use or that of its young, but it often meets the needs of thirsty camels and of men. The pelican also uses this bag as a means of carrying the fish caught in the seas, and it is said to be capable of holding sufficient fish to feed sixteen hungry men. This bag wrinkles up when it is not filled, but by thrusting the hand into it its true capacity may be discovered. The bag is covered with a downy substance soft as satin.

The thick plumage of the body is ash-colored; the eyes are small in proportion to the head; its flight is slow, except when excited by hunger. When in pursuit of food, the pelican flies about thirty feet above the water, with the head on one side, so that it looks down with one eye, until it perceives a fish, when it darts upon it with unerring aim, and, storing it for future use within the deep pouch, it rises in the air to watch for another fish.

The pelican can be domesticated, and is said to enjoy music and the society of man. I heard of a pelican that lived forty years at the court of the Duke of Bavaria, where it was considered quite intelligent.

It is said that the Emperor Maximilian had a tame pelican, which always attended the army in its progress and lived in its domesticated state for about eighty years.—Georgiana Kringle.

THE JOURNEY OF THE ISRAELITES.

It took a long time to reach the land of Canaan, not because it was so far, but because the Israelites had to be taught in a great many ways, how great and strong their heavenly Father was, and that they must mind him and him alone.

They often forgot that he could give them at once, whatever they needed. Then they fretted at Moses and wished they had staid in Egypt, where there was onions and garlics and plenty of good things to eat. They were sure that they should starve, out in the great wilderness where no bread could be bought and no fruit grew.

But God sent them quails, or birds, something like quails; and of these they ate so many, that thousands of them sickened and died.

Then he gave them manna—a little, round, seed-like looking bread, that covered the ground in the morning, as thickly as the frost does here, when it is very cold. Upon this they lived for forty years. This bread is in one place in the Bible called angel's food.

At one time they could find only bitter water to drink, and instead of remembering what God had done for them, and asking him to give them sweet water they got angry at Moses, and scolded him.

Then the Lord told him to take a branch from a certain tree and throw that into the water, when lo! it became as pleasant to the taste as any water could be.

At another time, they could find no water—they were very thirsty, but they did not ask God for water. They only got angry again.

Yet instead of punishing them for not believing, after he had so often told them that he would give them what they needed if they would only ask for it, he told Moses to take his rod, and before all the people, speak to a rock near by and water would gush out.

But Moses was so tried with the people, for being so naughty, that he forgot that it was God who was going to make the water come out, and that he must show the people this, by doing just as God had told him. Instead of just speaking to the rock, so that the people would know that God had sent them the water, he smote it with his rod twice, saying, "hear now, ye rebels, must we fetch you water out of this rock?"

The heavenly Father was very sorry that Moses did not believe him, and had forgotten to give him the honor of giving the water to the people, so to punish him for his sin, he said he should not take the people into the land of Canaan.

While they were on their journey, God showed the Israelites just how they must live, to please him. He gave them good laws, that would make them happy, if they would only mind them.

When they had got almost ready to go into the land, they sent over some men to look at it. These men all came back and told naughty stories about it, except Caleb and Joshua. Then the people became afraid. They never could fight the great giants over there, and they would go back to Egypt.

The Lord punished them by causing many of them to sicken and die. The rest were sent back to travel around in the wilderness for forty years longer.

When all the men were dead who would not believe, the Lord was able to drive out the people that were in the land. Then Moses died and the Lord buried him, and Joshua and Caleb went over on dry land through the river Jordan, with all the people into the land of Canaan, just as they had gone on dry land through the Red Sea.

They found it easy enough to take the land when they believed the Lord.

They made themselves beautiful homes, divided it all up; to each of the tribes giving a part. But they knew that God was then only giving them the land for a little while—that the time had not come for them to have it forever. They said they were strangers and pilgrims in it, as all their fathers were.

Their days were so short—they could live such a little while, that they knew this could not be the giving of the land to them for an everlasting inheritance—the everlasting life was not yet theirs.—The Friend of the Children.

Bible School Announcement.

At the close of the November Conference to be held in Plymouth, Indiana, beginning Nov. 15, and holding ing over Sunday, a Bible school will be held at the same place beginning on Monday morning and continuing one week. There will be three sessions each day, morning, afternoon and evening, except Monday evening. It is earnestly desired that there be a large attendance. There will be no tuition fee, but each attendant will be expected to pay his board. Come to the Conference prepared to stay for the Bible school. We feel sure that all will be much benefitted by this week of earnest Bible study.

Brother S. J. Lindsay of Oregon, Illinois and Brother J. L. Wince of Pierceton, Indiana will be the teachers. Any information concerning the school can be obtained by addressing J. L. Wince at Pierceton, Indiana, or Mrs. J. H. Willey at Plymouth, Indiana. Those who expect to be in attendance will aid the committee of arrangements by sending their names to the last named person, as soon as possible.

J. L. WINCE, Chairman,
LYDIA RAILSBACK, Secretary.

If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon mortal minds, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of our fellowmen, we engrave on those tablets something which will brighten to all eternity.—Daniel Webster.

Selected.

The Apostle's Creed.

Robert S. MacArthur, pastor of a well-known Baptist church in New York, in his Easter sermon attacked the Apostle's Creed and, objecting to the statement of Christ's descent into hades, based upon 1 Pet. iii. 19, declared: "We are entering a new phase of New Testament criticism. Before ten years the virgin birth of Christ will be fiercely disputed. Nay, it is even now disputed. While we are entering this fierce conflict, let us hold fast to the blessed fact of Christ's resurrection." We rather doubt whether any one who is supposed to believe in the virgin birth of Christ will be inclined to give credit to the fact of his resurrection. We are inclined to think that the two doctrines will have to stand or fall together. Certainly Christ must have been born before he died and rose from the dead; and there is a great deal of dispute going on among so-called religious people who think it somewhat superior to call themselves Higher Critics, which seems very trivial to outsiders whom they are trying to impress and who disbelieve in the whole thing and doubt the very existence of a Christ.

Dr. MacArthur thinks that before ten years the virgin birth of Christ will be fiercely disputed. We suppose the Doctor is about 1900 years behind the times. The virgin birth of Christ has been disputed more or less fiercely during all that time, but we have never found that those who were disposed to concede points to their opponents have made any the better defenders of Christ's gospel on that account. The Scriptures must hang together, they cannot be broken (Jno. x. 35) without discrediting the entire chain of evidence. We have pointed out on a former occasion that many rationalistic writers are perfectly willing to believe any sort of a fairy tale that comes to them under the guise of science while striving in every possible way to discredit any assertion of the Scriptures.

Some months ago it was asserted that a professor in a California University had established artificial development of the eggs of sea urchins, which was described under the name parthenogenesis, which is Greek for "virgin birth," and this discovery has been received in some quarters with the greatest gloss as if it did away with the necessity for God. If a mass of sea urchins' eggs could be so stimulated by electricity into the production of little sea urchins without any fertilization from a natural parent, why cannot a mass of mud be changed into protoplasm, and the protoplasm into sea urchins, without any action outside of themselves! Is it not strange that men who will exult in the possibility of such a thing as this should become almost insane at the idea of a virgin birth of Christ?

But just as God makes the wrath of man to praise him, so out of these fresh scientific discoveries comes more and more evidence of the truth of the Scriptural narrative. The writers had no possible way, unless through Divine inspiration, of getting such knowledge of the wonderful discoveries of this century, which were to furnish corroboration for their narratives.—The Christian.

Alone With God.

Phillips Brooks wrote as follows of the glory of the life in Christ:

"Your life and mine, the life of every man and woman however different they are from one another, they are in him. In him there is the perfectness of every occupation—the perfect handicraft, the perfect school-teaching, they are all in him.

In him lay the completeness of that incomplete act which you did yesterday. In him lay the possible holiness of that which you made actual sin. In him lies the absolute purity and loftiness of that worship which we this morning have stained so with impurity and baseness.

To go to him and get the perfect idea of life, and of every action of life, and then go forth, and by his strength fulfill it, that is the New Testament conception of a strong, successful life. How simple and how glorious it is!"

Pass it On.

"Don't try to pay me. Just pass it on," an elderly lady urged upon a college girl, as the latter was saying that she never could repay a favor she had received. Some natures are always troubled about accepting favors that cannot be definitely repaid. In a way this is a hopeful sign in a selfish world, but sometimes nothing else can be done than to receive—one really needs help which another is glad to give. The only wise way is to accept gracefully and gladly, letting it teach one the beauty of such doing, and then be ready to pass it on when opportunity offers.

Obituary.

Brother C. W. Eudaley of Redington, Neb., has fallen asleep in Jesus. He was born in Fountain Co., Ind., March 20, 1843; died Oct. 2, 1906, being 63 years, 6 months and 12 days old. He was taken sick on Saturday Sept. 29th, and died the next Tuesday at 10 o'clock of Chronic diarrhoea, (contracted in the Army). He first heard the gospel from Bro. H. J. Beebe, 14 years ago, was baptized by Bro. D. M. Hudler six years ago, since then he has been an earnest Christian, highly respected by all who knew him and was always found ready and willing to give a reason for the hope that was within him, earnestly contending for the faith delivered unto him, and he died in the full hope of the high calling in Christ Jesus, fully believing that he would be counted worthy of a part in the first resurrection, to be made equal to an angel and can die no more. And to be made a priest unto our God and reign with Christ on the earth. He leaves a wife and daughter to mourn his loss into the land of the enemy, but they sorrow not as those who have no hope, as they live in the living hope of meeting him on the morn of the resurrection, when the trump shall sound and the dead in Christ shall arise first, and the living shall be changed in a moment, in a twinkling of an eye, so whether [illegible] or sleeping they all live unto [illegible]

Your Brother.

H. G. [illegible]

Died, at Rollin, Kansas, J[illegible] 1906, Jimmy Hole, son of [illegible] and N. J. Hole. Was born Sept. [illegible] 1885, and at the time of his death was twenty years, ten months and five days old.

He died of pneumonia fever. His father died several years ago, and he was the only support of his mother; but death is no respector of persons, it takes the young as well as the old and folds them in his cold arms. His parents and many of his relatives have been baptized into Christ; but poor Jimmie, like Martha of old, had failed to choose that good part that Mary chose. This ought to be a warning to the brothers and sister, and his associates left behind, and cause them to think of the certainty of death and the uncertainty of life.

Dear friends, let us all take warning from these obituaries, and prepare for eternal life in the world to come. This is my prayer.

No one will miss Jimmie as his poor mother does, but to her and his friends I will say that he is in the hands of the Judge of all the earth, and will not the Judge of all the earth do right? Yes, he doeth all things well.

Funeral services were conducted [illegible] the writer, at Shaw, Kansas. A [illegible] congregation was present. Job [illegible] and James iv. 14, was read.

JOHN [illegible]

S. J. Mitchell was born [illegible] 1839, died Sept. 22, 1906 [illegible] years, 5 months and 15 [illegible] death was supposed to be ca[illegible] heart failure, as he died on the [illegible] going to Earle. Two other pe[illegible] were with him. He died under the shade of a tree. He had been in failing health for several years. He was a soldier in the war of 1860.

Brother Mitchell was born in Iroquois County, Ill., Was married to Amanda Burroughs, Oct. 4, 1860. To them were born eight children. The wife and five children survive him to mourn their loss. Brother Mitchell was a member of the Church of God for thirty years. His wife and four of his children were also members. His son John with him is now sleeping in the same graveyard, silently waiting for the rest of the family, but unconscious of what is going on. With the dead time is not numbered. So with them it is death and the resurrection, with us it may be days, months, and even years.

The Sister has lost her husband, the children lost their father, and the church one of their number.

"One by one we leave behind us,
While the days are going by."

Who will be the next to follow our Brother Mitchell?

JOHN FOORE.

Such as every one is inwardly, so he judgeth outwardly.

He doeth much that doeth a thing well.

The character of our life is what we choose to make it.

"Behold the voice of the cry of the daughter of my people because of them that dwell in a far country."—Jeremiah viii., 19.

The hidden sackcloth that she wears
In place of rich stuffs she has worn
Proclaims the sorrow that she bears,
Shows forth the grief that she harborne.
The harp that once she played, unstrung
Among the withered roses lies—
Upon her head—ah head is flung
The ashes of the sacrifice.

She chants in whispered measures, low,
The burden of a grieving heart,
She sees not—on that none may go.
That mark nor sees she sits apart
No gleaming crescent swings and sways
Its incense where she sits and broods—
Her cup she has drained to the lees
In darkest of all solitudes.

Her lips move softly, in the dirge
That forms itself in line on line,
Of lamentations deep, that surge
Upon a sorrow all divine.
So does she keep her watch of grief,
So does she keep her guard of woe,
So does she count each withered leaf
From joy's wealth of the long ago.

And now she gathers in her song
And for a moment lifts her eyes
To where—seen light, clear and strong,
Is glowing in the further skies—
And then into the gladder keys
The measures of her chanting swell,
For through her tears she dimly sees
The name that once led Israel.

Hieremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 51.

1. The Word that occurred unto eremias for all the Joudnians dwell- land of Aiguptos, even for eated in Magdoolon and Taph- 3 in a land of Pathouser, say-

2. In this wise hath the Lord God of Israeel said: Ye have seen all the calamities I have led upon Hierousaleem and upon the cities of Jouda; and lo, they are desolate of inhabitants

3. From before the face of their wickedness which they did to embitter me in having gone their way to burn incense to other gods whom ye have not known,

4. And I sent unto you my courtiers (house-servants) the prophets at dawn, and I sent saying, Do not do the thing for this pollution which I have hated.

5. And they did not hearken to me and they did not incline their ear to turn away from their evil-doings so as not to burn incense to other gods.

6. And my wrath and my anger distilled and it flamed out in gateways of Jouda and outside of Hierousaleem, and they became a desolation and a t ackless-waste as they are this day.

7. And now hath an all-controlling Lord said in this wise, Why are ye doing great wicked things to your souls to cut off your man and wife, child and nurseling from the midst of Jou- da, so that there will be no one of you ft,

8. By embittering me with the of your hands, by burning in- other gods in a land of Aig- into which ye have gone to that ye may be smitten and e may have become a curse and proach unto all the nations of the th?

9. Have ye ignored the evil-doings of your fathers and the evil-doings of your kings and the evil-doings of your rulers, and the evil-doings of your women which they did in a land of Jouda and outside of Hierousaleem?

10. And they have not ceased unto this day, and they have not upheld my statutes which I gave before the face of their fathers.

11. Therefore in this wise hath the Lord said, I am setting my face against them.

12. To destroy all the residue left in Aiguptos, and they will fall with sword and with famine, and they will leave off from small to great, and they will be a reproach and a loss and a curse.

13. And I shall visit upon those seated in a land of Aiguptos as I visited upon Hierousaleem with sword and with famine,

14. And there will not be one saved of the remnant of Jouda of those sojourning in a land of Aiguptos, to return into a land of Jouda, in respect to which they are hoping in their souls to return there; they shall not return, but rather those who have been saved.

15. And all the men of mark who know that their wives were burning incense, and that all the women a vast assemblage, and all the laity seated in a land of Aiguptos, in Pathours namely, answered Hieremias, saying;

16 Thy Word which thou hast talked to us in the name of the Lord we will not hearken to,

17. Because we are going to do all the word that shall come out of our mouth, to burn incense unto the queen of heaven and to pour libations unto her even as did we and our fathers and our kings and our rulers in the cities of Jouda and outside of Hierousaleem: and were filled with bread and became best and did not see calamities;

18. And since we left off burning incense to the queen of heaven we have all been diminished and have left off with sword and with famine.

19. And in that we did burn incense unto the queen of heaven and pour out libations to her we did not make cakes for her and pour out libations to her without our husbands did we?

20. And Hieremias spake unto all the laity the men of ability and their wives and all the laity that had answered his words saying,

21. Is it not for the incense which ye burned ye and your fathers and your kings and your rulers and the laity of the land in the cities of Jouda and outside of Hierousaleem, that the Lord remembered and that it came up upon his heart?

22. And the Lord was not able any longer to bear you away from the face of your wicked affairs and from your abominations which ye had made. And your land became a desolation and a trackless waste and a curse as it is this day,

23. From the face of the incense ye were burning and the sins ye were committing against the Lord: and ye did not hearken to the voice of the Lord, and did not go your way in his statutes and in his law and in his testimonies, and these calamities overtook you.

24. And Hieremias said unto the laity and the women, May ye have heard a word of the Lord;

25. In this wise hath the Lord God of Israeel said: ye women have said with your mouth, and your hands have ye filled, saying, We will make our confessions such as we have made them, to burn incense to the queen of heaven and to pour libations unto her; continuing have ye continued in your confessions, and making have ye made them.

26. Therefore may ye have heard a word of the Lord, all Jouda ye who are seated in a land of Aiguptos; Lo, I have sworn by my great name, hath the Lord said, I am against every land of Aiguptos if my name cometh to be any more in the mouth of all Jouda to say as the Lord liveth.

27. Because I have awakened against them to show them evil and not good, and all Jouda all who are dwelling in a land of Aiguptos will leave off with sword and with famine until they shall have left off.

28. And those who have been saved from a sword will return into a land of Jouda a few in number, and the residue of Jouda those who stood back in a land of Aiguptos to dwell there will comprehend whose word abideth.

29. And this is the sign for you that I am going to visit upon you for your wicked acts.

30. In this wise hath the Lord said, Lo, I am giving Ouaphree king of Aiguptos into the hands of his enemy and unto the hands of those who seek his soul.

31. The word that Hieremias the prophet talked to Baruch, son of Weesios, when he wrote these words in the book from the mouth of Hieremias in the fourth year of Jooakeim, son of Joosias, king of Jouda.

32. In this wise hath the Lord said unto thee, O Baruch;

33. Because thou hast said, Woe is mine, Woe is mine, because the Lord hath added weariness to my pains-taking-toil; I have lain down to sleep with sighing, I have not found rest,

34. Do thou say unto him; in this wise hath the Lord said, Lo, those whom I have built up I am taking down and those whom I have planted, I am plucking up, I myself;

35. And wilt thou be seeking for thyself great things? Do not seek, because, lo, I am leading bad things upon all flesh, saith the Lord, and I shall give thy soul to be a thing found in every place wheresoever thou shalt take a step.

COMMENT.

What purports to be this same prophecy contained in this 51st chapter the reader will find in the 44th and 45th chapters of the versions with variations too numerous to note in detail.

Observe however "Migdol" for "Magdoolon" and "Noph" not in the text at all and "Pathros" for "Pathours" in the 1st verse.

In the 2nd verse "The Lord of Hosts, the God of Israeel" for "the Lord God of Israeel."

In the 4th verse "servants" for "house-servants" or "courtiers."

In the 9th verse "Have ye forgotten" should be "have ye ignored" (tried to forget).

In the 17th verse "drink-offerings" should be "libations" which were poured not drunk. Elsewhere this same word is generally translated in the versions "oblations" which is also incorrect.

In the 25th verse there is no such statement in the text as "establish then your vows and perform your vows."

In the 26th and 27th verses the true thought is not as it should be, but the passage is too long to quote. Read and compare.

In the 28th "mine or theirs" is instead—not in the text.

In the 30th verse "Pharaoh Hophra" should be "Ouaphree"—no word for "Pharaoh" in the text. In fact the word "Pharaoh" means "ploughman" and became merely an official-name originally as I have previously explained like "Cæsar" or "Kaiser" "an emperor."

"As I gave Zedekiah king of Judah, etc." not in the text at all—inserted.

The 31, 32, 33, 34 and 35 verses are made over into the 45th chapter in the versions and the verses renumbered as 1-5.

In the 35th or last verse "for a prey" should be "for a thing." We have a similar expression in English for an unexpected or unhoped for attainment, "That is as good as a find."

CALLED TO GLORY AND VIRTUE. 2 PETER i. 3.

We are called of God into his kingdom and glory, so we will first consider how we are called. Peter tells us in this 3rd verse that it is through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord that are given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness. And this is the record that God gave to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. 2 John v. 11. 2 Thes. ii. 14, Whereunto he called you by our gospel to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. And we read in another place of Paul in these words, I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. Paul an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus. To Timothy, Be not therefore ashamed of the testimony or gospel of our Lord, but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God, who hath saved us and called us with a holy calling, not according to our work but according to his own purpose and grace which was given us in Christ Jesus, before the world began. But we read in Rom. xvi. that the revelation of the mystery which was kept secret since the world began, is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light, how? Through the gospel. So that we find that the promise of eternal life is only obtained through Christ, and the way to learn of Christ is through the gospel called of God through the death of his Son. Though a Son yet learned he obedience by the things that he suffered, and being made perfect he became the author of eternal life. But the God of all grace who hath called us unto His eternal glory by Christ Jesus after that ye have suffered a while make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you. But rejoice inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's suffering, that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may rejoice also with exceeding joy. The glories that are set forth in his great and precious promises are far more than our minds can comprehend. One of the promises is, that if we suffer with him (Christ), we shall also reign with him, that he will be a righteous ruler, that we will be made kings and priests unto God and his Father, and we shall reign on the earth. If our lives on earth are given for his service we have nothing to fear as he has promised to preserve us unto his heavenly kingdom, where there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away.

Brothers and sisters, the things that are so much in this life to bear, sorrow, sickness, pain and death. The promise is these shall not be, that there is a rest from all our labor. O how grateful I am to the great and all-wise God for these great and precious promises to us. Let us not be afraid of doing too much, but all we do be for the glory of God and our Savior Jesus Christ is my prayer. Amen.

MRS. ISA MCCAVE.

1 THES. v. 22.

Abstain from all appearance of evil. There are many precepts and words of advice in this 5th chapter of Thessalonians. Paul exhorts the brethren to comfort the feeble minded, support the weak and to be patient to all men, and be at peace among yourselves. But these are the words of exhortation that we have taken for our lesson this morning. Abstain from all appearance of evil. 1 Cor. viii. But when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak consciences, ye sin against Christ, wherefore if meat cause my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world stands, least I make my brother to offend. Paul is here speaking of meat offered to idols. He could eat of this meat offered to idols and know that he committed no sin, for he knew there was only the one living and true God. Yet if by partaking of this he caused a weak brother to sin or take offense, he would not eat meat while the world stood. This is strong language, but he would keep from all appearance of evil, if he suffered personally, so must we, not only in our meat and drink, for this is not all that Paul meant to teach, but in all things let the brethren and the world know that we are doers and not just hearers of the Word.

Psa. i. 1, Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners. Keep thyself unspotted from the world, and from all appearance of evil. How can we do this and live in the world? Let us read the words of Jesus, John xvii., Jesus is here talking to his Father and asking him to keep from evil those given to him, I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world. But that thou shouldst keep them from evil, they are not of the world even as I am not of the world; sanctify them through thy truth, thy Word is truth. Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through thy Word—all that believe on him through the Word. Dear brothers and sisters and all who will believe the Word, this prayer of Jesus is for us if we love him and by our faith and trust in him, he will help us to keep from all appearance of evil, and the evil that is in the world. Keep us in the love of Jesus and the patient waiting for his appearing.

"Order my footsteps by thy Word,
And make my heart sincere;
Let sin have no dominion Lord,
But keep my conscience clear.

Make me to walk in thy commands,
'Tis a delightful road;
Nor let my head or heart or hands,
Offend against my God."

Bible School Department.

BIBLE SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

Historical notes on Bible school societies. William Fox, a London merchant, corresponded with Robert Raikes and the society for promoting Sunday schools throughout the British Empire was organized, Sept. 7, 1785. Its chief object was to supply Bibles, Testaments, class books and spelling books; and to pay a shilling or two a week to teachers.

This society existed until 1864; then its balance was transferred to the Sunday School Union, London, which was organized July 13, 1803, and still continues. In America the First Day or Suncuy School Society was organized at Philadelphia, Jan. 11, 1791 and still exists, claiming to be the oldest in the world. The American Sunday School Union was organized 1824, and its purpose was to plant new schools. In the prosecution of this purpose the society has planted on an average of three and one-half new schools every day for 66 years.

Advantages of a Home Department. It is designed to reach all who are isolated or unable to attend the sessions of Bible schools.

What constitutes membership? Simply an agreement to join the Home Department of the Bible School and to spend at least one hour each week in the study of the lessons outlined for this department.

These classes take various forms according to circumstances.

An effort was made to find out how many boys and girls were readers of THE RESTITUTION, so that we might provide for the needs of those not connected with our Sunday schools. This appeal was met with indifference. An appeal was made to those of our evangelists who used charts for suggestions in chart work. Only one responded and Sister Woodward deserves to be honored, although she has never used charts she sent an outline which was very suggestive. others might have been helpful but were indifferent. If the Superintendents of Sunday schools are as indifferent as others have been, there is little hope of uniting our forces for better work. We hope to secure such information as will be profitable, and if all will do their part the labor will be small and the profit large in return. Send in your reports.

A missionary spirit needs to be cultivated in every department of church work, and a Home department will cultivate this spirit. When we know by statistics that more than ten millions of youth in the United States are without any regular religious instruction, how can there be such indifference on the part of those who are intrusted with the gospel message?

The Home department worker will plan to do the work of this department without financial assistance and with the savings bank system will be able to send out a field worker. Try this plan and note the result of the system. Those who desire to be workers must first prove their fitness for this position. Those that neglect their home work will also prove unprofitable workers in the field.

A suggestion to those who wish to enter the field as evangelists: organize a Bible class in your own town, don't attempt to sow seeds on the highway while your own garden is turned out to weeds. Go to work now, become a Home department worker and you will soon be in a field as large as you can cultivate.

In our public schools pupils learn to read before they know their letters. The work of the Home department should be teaching the purpose of religion by object lessons, systematic Bible study and systematic giving. Every Bible school should have a Home department. Our work is incomplete without this department work. It develops a more perfect Christian spirit by promoting the study of the Bible in the home. It develops Christian activity in the church because it sets Christians at work, sending them out on evangelistic errands.

Our first years work will be devoted to teacher training for Bible schools, normal work for the Home department worker. Lines of study to be pursued will be first, the Bible, a general outline of the scope, plan and contents of the Bible, its origin, authority and history. Any who wish to become members of a Home department please send your name to Harriet E. Boice, 1009 South Wright, Champaign, Ill.

If there are fifteen hundred readers of THE RESTITUTION we should receive at least five hundred names to be enrolled in a Home department before one week passes by. Try this plan. Take a sheet of paper after reading this notice, and send your name and address. State whether married or single. If under 21 years, give your age. State if connected with any Bible study class or young peoples' society or Sunday school. State also whether you are a member of the Church of God. This will take five minutes of your time, a two cent stamp and enroll you for one hour of study each week. If you choose to adopt the savings bank plan, take a small bank or square box cut a hole large enough to admit a dollar, and put in this at least one penny each week, more in proportion as you are able, at stated periods. Send the amount saved in this way to M. A. Woodward, Dutton, Mich. She will act as treasurer for this department and by August, 1907, enough will be in the savings bank to send out a field worker. Take notice, be prompt and our work will begin at once. Sister Rohrbuck's work is an object lesson for our Home department worker. We have an open field to cultivate. We have willing helpers only waiting to learn what they can do and how they can do it for Christ and Home. We have earnest young hearts waiting and willing to be shown how they can make the most of life in service to each other. "This is my commandment that ye love one another."

Can we afford to waste these opportunities because we are busy with our own affairs? Can I as Superintendent of a Bible School Association be content with the work of a ten day session of Bible School each year, with no thoughtful, prayful consideration of those unable to attend these Bible school sessions? Can Bro. Neill prepare a lesson for Sunday schools and be satisfied that he has done the best work without a conference with teachers and superintendents about progressive lines of Sunday school work? There is a place and a work for all. "Let us work in unity. We are workers together with God."

HARRIET E. BOICE.

At the Torch Lake Bible School I was appointed to the work of conducting a Sunday School Lesson in THE RESTITUTION, providing space could be secured.

I have learned, through Sister H. E. Boice, Bible School General Superintendent, that Brother Underwood has freely and kindly granted space on condition that there be no statement that will lead to trouble.

My exeprience has taught me that Paul's advice to Timothy is as good for now, as it was for then, two thousand years ago. I will therefore, "Neither give heed to fables nor endless genealogies. Nor dote about questions, nor strife of words." I will endeavor to "Hold fast the form of sound words."

I will take the "International S. S. Lessons," used nearly everywhere, and comparing Scripture with Scripture will make such Biblical notes as I think best. The notes and comments will be intended entirely for the use of children from about six to sixteen and will therefore be simple. My only fear is that I may not be equal to

"Telling the story simply
As to a little child".

There are few that can. I will try to be one of the few, as I have much interest in children.

I expect to begin with the lesson "The Lord's Supper" for Sunday, November 4, and will try to have it in THE RESTITUTION of October 24, and afterwards always in time for the succeeding Sunday, until I may stop for reasons. Meantime I pray that the work may deserve the blessing of God, and that parents and teachers will interest themselves, and the children.

P. NEILL.

In the Work.

To the Church of God scattered abroad in Iowa:

On leaving Whitten with the tent I went to Hickory Grove, the former home of Brother Samuel White and the present home of Brother J. Fish.

Commenced our meeting on Wednesday evening, Sept. 19, had about fifty out to hear us. Our attendance here was all we could ask; for many came from nine to ten miles, our attendance averaging from seventy-five to one hundred each night. On Sunday evening two hundred people attended. On Sunday Sept. 30, two hundred people gathered in the afternoon. Sept. 30, we had the pleasure of baptizing six young people into the all-saving name. Sunday evening Sept. 30, two hundred and fifty people gathered to hear us discourse on the things concerning the Kingdom.

The nights became too cold for comfort in the tent, so on Wednesday evening, Oct. 3rd, we closed the meeting. On Thursday we baptized two more, making eight in all.

A great many heard the gospel for the first time, and many were interested, and we hope for more fruit in the near future. Pray for us, that we may faithfully proclaim the Word.

Yours, in the work.

O. J. ALLARD, Evangelist.

"If I thought that there was a stain on the remotest hem of the garment of my country," said a great American leader—Daniel Webster—"I would use my utmost labor to wipe it off." Here, in this ruin of souls by drink, is no mere travel-stain upon the hem of a garment, but a garment dyed in blood. In one year drink sacrifices more children in Christian England than were ever borne to Moloch in the East. The cries of the children in England are unheard and unnoticed from very commonness, and nothing breaks our immoral callosity of indifference in a matter in which we ought to feel ready to sink into the very earth for shame. We protected the factory children by legislation; we protect dumb animals; we will not allow a horse or a dog or a cat to be misused. We interfered by Parliament on behalf of the birds of the air and the fishes of the sea; but the young children, oh, they are weeping bitterly, and are less worthy protection than salmon and sea-gulls!—F. W. Farrar.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of making statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Questions Answered.

Q. Will you kindly tell us when Pine Woods Bible Class Book will be finished, and ready for delivery, and what is the real design of the book?

A. It is now all printed, and is in the Book Binders' hands, and will be bound ready to mail on about October 21. As to its design:

The lessons contained in this volume are the result of many years of careful and critical study, being an honest endeavor to arrive at a more accurate understanding of Holy Scripture, unbiased by the creeds and opinions of men.

These lessons were prepared more especially for the instruction of YOUNG PEOPLE. An effort has been made to make the lessons very simple and plain.

The Bible Class style makes it very attractive, easy to read, and much easier to comprehend.

The series of lessons here presented would be a very profitable one for Bible Classes, Young Peoples Societies, Berean Bands, Sunday School Bible Classes, etc., to study by course. Note the arguments, and consider the Scriptures cited in support of the argument, and you will not only find it interesting, but very instructive. If young people would follow these suggestions, they would be surprised at the rapid progress they would make.

Young men who are studying for the Evangelical work, will find this Book a valuable aid. Note well the exposition of difficult texts.

I expect to attend the Conference at Rolin, Kansas, on October 12. I will return home from the Conference in order to mail the books to all who have paid for them up to Oct. 21. Let all who possibly can, have their money in by Oct. 21.

After mailing the books I go on an extended trip through Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana. Let those desiring the meetings see to making arrangements before passing through your State. It will save traveling expenses.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

T. J. DANIEL.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Programme Committee.

The following persons are appointed a committee to prepare a programme and make other arrangements for the Conference of the Church of God to be held at Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 15-18, 1906. Committee, Brother A. R. Underwood; Sister F. M. McCrory; Sister T. O. Taber.

J. H. WILLEY, Pres. Ind. Con.

Notice.

Brothers T. H. Owens and Killough of Beaver County, Okla., preach at Cline, Lavern and Zelma each Sunday. Any one visiting here enquire for C. A. Starkey, M. A. Starkey or Mrs Gabriel Rohrback.

To the Churches and Isolated brothers and sisters of the State of Ohio:

At our last Conference held at Brush Creek, Miami Co., we were elected State Evangelist. The success of the year's work depends largely upon you. The Evangelist can do but little without your hearty co-operation. We shall be pleased to visit you and hold meetings as you shall direct. The Conference has provided that our expenses shall be met. It is our wish that you write to us that we may know your wishes.

Remember that the time for evangelizing is short. We should begin our work early. We have the whole State as our field. Our work should begin the last of September or early in October. We have no hobbies to present to those of "like precious faith." It shall be our purpose to preach the "gospel of the kingdom of God." What at the first was spoken by the Lord and confirmed unto us by them who heard him, we will preach. Hoping to be able to serve you all is our wish. Your brother in the Anointed. Address R. 3, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

D. C. ROMSON.

Annual Meeting.

The Churches of God of Southern Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, who believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God, and all who believe that whom Christ has made free are free indeed, will convene in Neosho County, Kansas, October 12, 1906, and continue over Sunday, and if necessary longer. We have some important business to come before this meeting. We read in Acts xv. that in the days of the Apostles there rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses, and the apostles and elders came together for to consider of this matter, or to confer together about this matter.

This was the first conference meeting that we read of in the Bible, and that was to settle a difficulty among the brethren. We want all the brethren that can to come. Our program is always ready. It is the Gospel that Paul preached, Rom. i. 16. The ones who will do this preaching are not as yet selected, but I hope that we may have able men who will preach what is in the Bible and nothing else. How much I wish that Brothers Daniel, Snowden and W. H. Wilson could be with us. We expect Brother Oliver and Brother Joseph Williams to be with us. Rollin is on the Santa Fe R. R. We will see that you get something to eat and a place to sleep, and will raise as much as we can to cover your expenses. Come and help us in Macedonia.

By order of the Church.

Russellism Exposed.

There has been an increased demand for a sharp expose of the cunningly devised fables of Russellism, showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of the Christian faith.

I am now engaged in writing such an expose; showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of Christianity. It will be printed as a booklet of about thirty pages at ten cents each.

This will follow right along after the printing of Pine Woods Bible Class, the type-setting of which is now nearly completed. The booklet will be ready for distribution about the same time that Pine Woods Bible Class is ready to send out.

Those who wish Russellism Exposed may send in orders right away so that I may know how many to print.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

A four-page tract in the German language, by Brother M. Joblin of Cleveland, O. Subject, "What Must I do to be Saved?" After getting the opinion of one who understands this language, we have no hesitation in recommending it as simply all right. Get some for your German friends. Send to M. Joblin, 626 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O. Price 40 cts per 100.

Notice.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Nebraska will convene at St. Paul Oct. 25-29 inclusive. Meetings will be held in the Court House Hall. Invitation to participate is extended to all. A reception committee will be appointed to meet visitors and find accommodations.

FANNIE D. WELSH, Sec'y.

The Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God, in Michigan, will be held at Millbrook, Mecosta Co., Mich. Thursday evening, Oct. 25, 1906, and continue over the following Sunday.

The brethren of that place earnestly requested that the meeting be held at Millbrook, feeling that by our united effort, much good might be done.

All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

Ample provision will be made for all visiting brethren.

Those coming from Grand Rapids will take the Pere Marquette R. R., at 7:00 A. M., change at Edmore on the Big Rapids Division of Pere Marquette reaching Blanchard about 10:00 A. M. Those coming from the north will get off at Millbrook, and those coming from the south will get off at Blanchard, changing cars at Edmore for Blanchard.

Arrangements have been made and it is expected that Brother L. E. Conner, of Cleveland, Ohio, will be at the Conference at Millbrook, Michigan, Oct. 25th, 1906, also it is expected that Brother and Sister B. W. Woodward, of Dutton, Michigan, will be there.

EMMA JACKMAN, Sec'y.

The first quarterly Conference of the Church of God in the State of Indiana will be held at Plymouth, Ind., commencing Nov. 15th and holding over Sunday Nov. 18th. We hope all the churches of the State may be represented. Isolated members of the one Body are invited and will find a home with us. We extend the invitation to all who believe the gospel of the kingdom, and the return of the Master, who live in other States, to come. Come all in the Spirit of Christ, forebearing one another in love, and help us to make this the best meeting we have ever attended. Ample provision will be made to care for all. Those coming please notify J. H. Willey at Plymouth.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

T. J. DANIEL.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your po't master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $3.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Thy Will.

Lord, I have been waiting
To know thy blessed will and be at rest.
I know that thou hast led me, though my heart
At times has wayward been. Too oft my feet
Have strayed, and caused my fellows in thy steps
And when, repentant, I have turned again,
Thy hand has always been outstretched to raise.
And with a [illegible] upon his sin.
Methinks today I have [illegible] more
Than heart forgiven needs, and in my soul
There springs a new [illegible] to show my love
By walking [illegible] with thee. My trust
Is [illegible] when I bear my head
Upon thy breast, and underneath the arms
Of everlasting love doth compass me.
Then, alone, I find thy grace sufficient,
And human weakness lost in strength divine.

Lord, help me Thee to love and do thy will!
Oh, make me perfect in my love to thee!
[illegible] all my wishes and my hopes be such [illegible] and lead me forth to the
[illegible] in the [illegible] prepare [illegible]
[illegible] I would not idly wait,
[illegible] thy word,
[illegible] voice in accents clear,
[illegible] heart can do no more than send [illegible] obedient to my Lord.
[illegible] all the way, and I in trust
[illegible] hand mind the dark [illegible] more.
[illegible] me. Keep me, make me all thine own;
So shall my passage to my earthly rest,
My home at length with thee in paradise.

The Man of Sin.

In answer to the question of Bro. A. S. Clough in THE RESTITUTION of Sept. 12 in which he asks this question, "Now if the Pope is the man of sin, in what temple of God is he sitting?" The temple in which Paul predicts that the "man of sin" would sit is the Christian church, of which Paul writes, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy. 1 Cor. iii. 16-17. It will not do for us to take the position that no sinners ever get into the church of God; because the testimony of the Spirit is that they do. See 1 Cor. v. 1.

In 2 Thes. ii. where Paul speaks of the "man of sin," it is written of him "whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and destroy by the brightness of his coming." However much we may regret [illegible] wish it were not so; but nevertheless it is written that there shall [illegible]lling away and that man of [illegible]evealed, the son of perdition. [illegible]erdition is utter destruction. [illegible]stians of Thessalonica it appears that the idea by Paul's first letter that the day of Christ was "at hand." He therefore corrects that idea by stating that the apostasy must first come—and the "man of sin" would sit in the temple of God. Now if we cannot point to the fulfilment of this prediction what right have we to affirm that the coming of Christ is near? Paul further says, "Ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time"—showing that Paul understood by the prophets, that the time for the manifestation of the "man of sin" is indicated by them. Daniel calls him a little horn that wears out the saints. In reference to the bad woman of Rev. xvii. I will remark that a woman in the Bible is used as a symbol of the church—a virgin of the church in its purity; a harlot—the church in apostasy. And that the church is composed of men and women. There appears to be a fitness of things in Paul using the term "man of sin," to represent the head of the apostasy, when ruling over kings and princes. But in the picture given us in the Revelations the woman is seen riding the beast, directing the civil power—hence the feminine gender.

A knowledge of 2 Thes. ii. I think would be the best antidote for blindness as to the facts concerning the "man of sin," therefore I will briefly examine that chapter as far as it refers to the "man of sin." By verses 1-2 we learn that the church was exercised with the idea that the day of Christ was at hand. To correct this error, in v. 3, he says, "Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition." By this third verse we learn that prior to the coming of the day of the Lord; there should be departure from the truth, and that the "man of sin" should appear "the son of perdition." Note herein reference to perdition, that the beast of Rev. xvii. goes into perdition, utter destruction; thus connecting this "man of sin" with the beast of the Revelation.

Verse 4, "Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." The description of this power is so remarkable that we should be able to recognize him as soon as he appears. In Dan. xi. 36-37 we have the description of a power in which the language is very similar in exalting itself above God. And it is remarkable that in the chronology of the power referred to by Daniel that it agrees in time with the rise of the papacy. In Dan. xi. 31 we read of the taking away of the daily sacrifice, and they the same power that takes away the daily, shall place the abomination that maketh desolate; Rome pagan took away the daily and placed the papacy—the abomination that maketh desolate. The same facts appear in Rev. xii. and xiii. Rome pagan is succeeded by Rome Christian.

Now to verse 6 of our lesson. "And now ye know what withholdeth that he (the man of sin) might be revealed in his time." "In his time" proves that in the prophecy going before this "man of sin" had a place or time in which he was to appear, or as Paul says "be revealed." To withhold is to hold back, to restrain, to keep from action. Now it is patent to all by history that as long as Rome, the then mistress of the world was pagan it was impossible for Rome papal to exalt its high priest above God as stated by Paul. Paul further says, "The mystery of the iniquity doth already work; only he that now letteth will let until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy by the brightness of his coming.

Now notice in Paul's day the mystery of iniquity was working; but there was a party that prevented its development until the one preventing was taken away. Now what power but apostate Christianity worked in Paul's day, and continues until Christ comes. For four hundred years, or ever since the days of John Huss and of M. Luther the truth, the Spirit of Christ's mouth—the Holy Scriptures, has been consuming the papacy; "Eating her flesh and burning her with with fire." Rev. xvii. 16.

During these years Germany, England, Switzerland, Norway and Sweden, and all our South American republics have taken from the papacy her civil power; and in 1870 A. D. Italy did the same and now France is engaged in abolishing the concordat, the union of church and state; and even old priest ridden Spain is beginning to open her eyes as to her superstition and misfortunes as a nation. Those nations that hold fast to the papal superstitions; the decree has gone forth they are in a consuming condition. Tyndale when in trouble by persecution from Rome remembered an old doctor who lived near Sodbury, and who had shown him great affection; he went to him, and opened his heart to him. The old doctor looked at him for some time, as though he hesitated to reveal a mystery to him. "Don't you know?" said he to him, lowering his voice, "that the pope is the Antichrist of whom the Scripture speaks of?.....But take care.....silence! .....The knowledge of this may cost you your life." This doctrine of the antichrist, which Luther was then maintaining boldly, struck Tyndale. Strengthened by it, as was the Saxon reformer, he felt new energy spring up in his heart. The old doctor was for him what the old monk had been for Luther. In truth what title will fit the pope, as well as does "The man of sin"?

From first to last he gave his voice in favor of images in the churches; praying to the Virgin Mary; granting indulgence to commit sin for money. Taught polytheism and condemned monotheism. Pope Sylvester II., Gregory the VIII. and Pope McCan who called the council of Clermont, all urged on the crusades. The most life destroying and bloody wars of which we have any history. Always in favor of tyranny and against light and liberty. D'Aubigus who wrote the history of the Reformation, says, "Catholicity itself—let us say it for our comfort—contains in its bosom numerous witnesses to the truth. The primitive edifice has been consumed; but a noble fire is slumbering under its ashes, and we see it from time to time throwing out brilliant sparks." "Let us think of the thousands of obscure individuals unknown to the world, who, however, possessed the true life of Christ.

A monk named Arnoldi, daily in his quiet cell utters fervent exclamation, "O Jesus Christ, my Lord! I believe that thou alone art my redemption and my righteousness." Christopher of Utenheim says, "I seek grace, and not works." Friar Martin a poor Carthusian, wrote a touching confession in which he says, "O most loving God! I know there in no other way in which I can be saved and satisfy thy justice, than by the merit, the spotless passion, and death of thy well-beloved Son, Kind Jesus! All my salvation is in thy hands. Thou canst not turn the arms of thy love away from me, for they.....Ransomed me. In great mercy.....thou hast engraved my name with an iron pen on thy side, thy hands, and thy feet." Then he placed his confession in a wooden box, and deposits the box in a hole which he had made in the wall of his cell. The box was found on the (21st of Dec., 1776) in taking down an old tenement which had formed part of the Carthusian Convent of Basle.

Just before the destruction of modern Babylon, a voice is heard to say, Come out of her my people, a proof that some at least of God's saints are yet in her communion. Therefore the temple of God is there.

Conferences, Conferences.

How heartily we endorse Bro. Underwood's exhortation to attend the coming fall Conferences of your several States. For instance we are to have just such a gathering at Millbrook, Mich. O yes! we know it is some distance from the center, but no farther for you to go there, than for them to come here, and they need you as bad as you did them. How many Fairs, Pioneer picnics, or visits far from home, have you made this year? You did not think of the expense or effort then. Are these things really of more interest to us than the salvation we are seeking for? Remember we have been offered wonderful things on conditions of faithfulness. O may we be careful that the offered prize is not forfeited by your neglect. Let us show our willingness by prompt attendance at the first meeting. The brethren are anxious to have a good attendance, abundantly able to entertain all who come, and may we all be willing to sacrifice if it is necessary and go. God will do the rest, and care for the things at home.

B. W. & M. A. WOODWARD.

Notice.

Sister Anna Drew of Dixon, Ill., will meet with the Berean Society at Ripley, Ill., Oct. 18; also Bros. S. J. Lindsay and O. J. Allard will meet in Conference with the Church of God, commencing Oct. 28th. All the household of faith are earnestly requested to be present at all of these meetings.

BEREANS AND THEIR OPPORTUNITIES.

During these meetings a great deal has been said about the improvement of opportunities. The sad feature has also been shown, that of opportunities neglected. It is of the first importance to secure our welfare for the eternal age. In other words the world to come is of vastly more importance than this present state of things, therefore we should study the Bible with delight. Have never heard any one express a regret for having begun to study the Bible so early in life, but on the other hand have heard regrets expressed by a number who wasted valuable time reading trashy literature before taking up the study of the Bible. The holy writers, although inspired, took delight in studying the written Word.

The Psalmist says: "How sweet are thy words unto my taste! Yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" "O how I love thy law! it is my meditation all the day." We should cultivate that spirit of meditation; think more about the things we read, hear, say and do, and the things left undone. Our blessed Redeemer himself, read the Holy Scriptures; it was his custom. Why then should we not delight in the study of that sacred volume? The young Berean should not expect too much light at once, it will grow brighter with every Christian duty he performs.

Men of the best minds the world has ever known, have dug into the Book for years, and are still finding precious truths which are new to them. The more we learn, the more we see there is to be learned. Some have better opportunities than others for improving their talents. In union there is strength, therefore Bereans should band themselves together wherever it be possible to form a society, in order that more perfect work may be done.

We are told to be doers of the Word and not hearers only. After having learned what God requires of us, we should be brave enough to step out and do whatsoever our hands find to do, regardless of the criticism of men. It is a great consolation to know that "The Lord seeth not as a man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." 1 Sam. xvi. 17. Our feeble efforts are acceptable with him, if it be the best we can do. Although we may not be able to preach a sermon, we can assist in the work by scattering tracts and other good literatures, we can live well ordered lives, we can be living epistles. If the child should give up in despair after the first or second attempt to walk, it would never learn the art. Let us like the child be more patient and persistent in our efforts to shine for Jesus.

Our Sunday schools, weekly prayer-meetings, Berean and social meetings afford excellent opportunities for work. The privilege we have of writing a few lines occasionally upon some Bible topic, for the Berean column of THE RESTITUTION is a means of grace, which should not be neglected. We are not only accumulating strength ourselves thereby, but are helping to illuminate the pathway of others. One may study the Scriptures diligently, with no good motive in view. Some do it for the sake of argument. Lord Byron says:

"Better had they ne'er been born,
Who read to doubt and read to scorn."

We do not recognize such as Bereans. "Man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Job says. "I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food." "Thy words were found (says the prophet Jeremiah) I did eat them, and thy Word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart." Jer. xv. 16.

How thankful we should be unto God for that spiritual food, which so many Bereans of the noble type are learning to masticate, digest and assimilate to their use. The Bible Institute which convenes at Oregon Ill., just prior to the Annual Conference, affords excellent opportunity for spiritual growth, as we all know, further comments at this place are unnecessary. Some who do not understand the work of the Bereans, oppose rather than encourage them in their work, thinking that the cause will be detrimental to the church.

Now, dear friends, we recognize first of all, our duties to our church. The Berean work is simply a preparatory course, or training school, where the young are equipped for better servitude in the Master's vineyard. The success of every religious service depends upon the united efforts of all the workers. Each one of us has a place to fill, which cannot be substituted by another. Our Bereans certainly are deserving of much credit in regard to this matter. We realize that we can do better work in our own way and within our own sphere than elsewhere. There is time enough for outside work when we have no service of our own. Let us renew our efforts, dear Bereans, grasp the opportunities at hand, and not become weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. Gal. vi. 9.

ARMEDA MITCHELL.

"Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Matt. xxiv. 44.

In the latter days false Christs and false prophets shall arise and show great signs and wonders and many will be deceived, and although some will say, "Behold here is the Christ or there is he," we must not believe it, for the coming of the Son of Man shall be as a thief in the night. When a thief intends to rob a house he is very careful not to let the occupants know beforehand, if he did they would be prepared for him. No man knoweth the hour that the Lord will appear. What is it to be ready? Shall we follow after the example of the five foolish virgins, who took their lamps without oil and went forth to meet the bridegroom, and while they went to buy oil the bridegroom came and when they returned, the door was shut and it was too late. The Lord knew them not? No, but let us follow after the example of the five wise virgins who were prepared to meet the bridegroom with their lamps burning. Only by constant faith and works will we be ready for that bright and glorious day when he shall appear with a shout and the voice of the archangel and the trump of God. Then he will say, "Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

DIXON.

The Berean society at Dixon during the last year have had twenty-two meetings, with an average attendance of nine. The lessons from the Berean booklets have been followed with the exception of two meetings, when they had a question box lesson. The dues of the society are used whenever help is needed, for tracts and in sending THE RESTITUTION paper to one of the members. Although the number is not large there is good interest and the meetings prove helpful.

ANNA L. ADAMS, Pres.
ADA A. DREW, Sec.

MARSHALL.

The Marshall Bereans began study in Berean Bible lesson No. 1, Dec. 10th, have taken six lessons. The present membership is thirteen, with an average attendance of seven. Dues collected since Dec. 10th, $1 50.

LETITIA MURPHY.

ADELINE.

Meetings have been resumed at Adeline with a general attendance of five or six. The meetings were continued regularly till June.

MORIAH.

The meetings at Moriah have been discontinued since fall. Sickness among members, bad roads, etc., are among the reasons. We hope they will be continued soon.

RIPLEY.

In November a Berean society was formed at Ripley, Ill., with 38 members. They hold their meetings on Tuesday evenings and report that they have not missed a meeting. Their membership has increased to 50, the largest attendance 60.

CHICAGO.

The Chicago Bereans meet on the first and third Sundays of every month, the first Sunday in the afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ruth Whitehead at Austin, and the third Sunday before church at 10 o'clock, and we study the lessons of the Berean leaflet. We have a membership of eleven, two are isolated, with an average attendance of seven. We have made a speciality this year of our Christmas work and letter writing. We dressed a dozen dolls for an Italian mission and distributed Christmas dinners to nine families. Sixty letters have been written to isolated members and 170 tracts distributed. Financially we have sent a delegate to Conference, contributed $7.18 to the State treasury, spent $3.07 for literature to be sent to the sick and isolated, and distributed in charities $13.49. In preparing the Christmas work the girls have given of their time and grown together in interest and in love, and to any Berean society that is growing lukewarm we would say that there is nothing that will draw us to each other like planning and working in Christian love for the widow and the fatherless. One of our most beloved members, Myrtle Myers has moved to California but still retains her membership.

"Life Time Is Working Time."

"Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling."

When shall we work at this business of salvation? Now, in our life time. Did we ever see an unconverted man or woman working at such a trade, or for such an object. The business is work, the object salvation, and only for a certain class, none others need apply. But O, how many who made application to this business house fail to comply with its regulations or requirements, forgetting there is always work on hand, no time or excuse for idleness. Are you a married man or woman? Do you wish to know what is expected of you as people working for salvation? Then take your guide book and read, study, think of the directions given in Eph. v. 22 to the end.

Do you love your wife as your own body, as Christ did the Church, what tender devotion there will be manifested then, what loving consideration of her in the many trials incident to the raising of a family, hours of sickness, sleepless nights, household cares. Surely if the husband is as true as he is exhorted to be it would not be hard for the wife to act well her part and reverence her husband. Do you wish to know what is expected of you as a true disciple of Christ. Read John xv. In order to bring forth the required amount, "much fruit," you will have some earnest work to perform, perhaps with yourself in your home. Too many loose sight of Christ at home, and think they can be cross and petulant with the sick wife, husband or fretful babe, or careless servant. How is it? Is your Christianity just for company or on Sundays? Remember a sham is soon discovered, and God knows it all. Do we wish to know what, as Christ's followers seeking salvation we are to do with an enemy? Read Matt. v. 44, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you. What are you to do all this hard work for? 45th verse tells us, That ye may be the children of your Father in heaven. It is worth while then to work as God has planned for us. It means something, beloved ones, to work out our salvation. There is no time to lose. May God help us all.

Things most may be repented, but not recalled.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCT. 17, 1906.

WE wish all who have not renewed their subscriptions for 1906 would do so at once. We just simply need the money right now.

EVANGELISTS in Illinois and Iowa make reports of good work, and results are seen to encourage and stimulate to new efforts. May God's blessing be with all who are laboring in his name.

WE are pleased to be able to give the first one of Brother Neill's Bible Lessons in this issue,—one week earlier than first promised. We feel sure that this long felt want will be appreciated by many, and that Brother Neill will faithfully perform his part.

BROTHER S. J. Lindsay is to attend the Plymouth Conference next month, and remain the week following to help in the Bible School. Let all make plans to attend, and get acquainted with Brother Lindsay, and enjoy the good things that are in store for us at this meeting.

WORD comes that Brother Joblin is not improved much in health, being quite weak and worn, and not able to attend to his duties at the Cleveland Church all of the time. He has some faithful helpers, however, and we are assured that the work will not fail. Brother Joblin has been a valiant defender of the faith, and we hope and trust he may be spared to do still more service for God.

REPORT comes of four more young people that have been attendants at the Cleveland Church Sunday School, who have accepted Christ and been immersed into the name of Jesus, and are now members of the family of God. Such news as has been received from all points the last few months is indeed gratifying. It is especially encouraging to those who work in Berean Society, Bible and Sunday School lines, to hear that the young are interested in the cause of Christ, and that some have studied to advantage, and having learned what their duty is have not hesitated to step out on the right side. May the good work go on, and let all encourage those who are laboring with the young people, for from the ranks of the youth of the land must come the future bearers of the burden of the cause. Press on then, with vigor renewed, because of success attained, and because the time is short.

Bible Lessons with Remarks.

THE BIBLE.

1. The book currently known as the Bible, consisting of the Scriptures of Moses, the prophets; and the apostles, is the only revelation God has given to man. This revelation was made by the Holy Spirit through God-selected men, is without error, and is the Word of God. 2 Tim. iii. 16; 1 Cor. ii. 13; Heb. i. 1; 2 Pet. i. 21; 1 Cor. xiv. 37; Neh. ix. 30; John x. 35.

REMARKS.

God has spoken to us in the Bible. Heb. i. 1, 2. His Holy Spirit inspired the Bible. Heb. i. 1, 2. His Holy Spirit inspired the writers in all they spake and wrote. Neh. ix. 30; 2 Pet. i. 21; Matt. x. 19, 20, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God" (inspired by the Spirit of God). 2 Tim. iii. 16. This inspiration so filled the writers with instruction (Neh. ix. 20) and wisdom (2 Pet. iii. 15, 16) that they had no need of any human teacher. 1 Jno. ii. 2-27. As an energizing power direct from God the Holy Spirit taught the apostles "all things," gave them good, retentive memories, and guided them into "all truth." Jno. xiv. 26; xvi. 13. This unction from God made it possible to truthfully say of them: "Ye know all things." 1 Jno. ii. 20. Their words were God's; what they said were commandments of the Lord. 1 Cor. xiv. 37. When we despise their teaching we quench the Spirit, 1 Thes. v. 19, 20. When we reject the doctrines taught in the Holy Scripture we resist the Holy Spirit. Neh. ix. 20, 26, 30; Acts vii. 51-56. Their very "words" (1 Cor. ii. 13) were God-breathed. Words are used to express thoughts. Accurate thoughts cannot be expressed without accurate words. Verbal inspiration secures right words, and therefore makes the thoughts expressed infallable. So of the Scriptures Jesus could and did say: "The Scripture cannot be broken." Jno. x. 35. They teach all the "doctrine" God wants us to believe; they administer "reproof" and "correction" for every error; they give all the "instruction in righteousness" we need; they "thoroughly furnish;" "the man of God" unto all "good works." 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17. They are able not only to partly furnish but to "thoroughly furnish;" not to some good works, but "unto all good works."

Dear students, if the Spirit-inspired Word will "thoroughly furnish" you in "doctrine," "reproof," "correction," "instruction" and "good works," what do you need the Holy Spirit for? The Spirit has already revealed "all the truth." Jno. xvi. 13. Suppose you had the Spirit in all its power, would it reveal any "truth" to you? What "doctrine" would it teach you, what "correction" would it give, what "instruction" would it impart, what "good works" would it prompt you to perform: in short how could it "furnish" you in these things more than the Word? If the Book "furnishes" you with "all the truth," "doctrine," "correction," and "good works," and "thoroughly furnishes" you, I ask you, Can you be more than "thoroughly furnished"? Of course not. Well, then, you do not need the Holy Spirit, but you do need the Word; and so Paul charged Timothy before God to "preach the Word." 2 Tim. iv. 2

Realize then, beloved reader, the all-sufficiency of the Word for "the man of God." Other men may need the gifts of the Holy Spirit, but he does not need them. "The whole (complete) armor of God" with which he clothes his saints to protect them from the fiery darts of the wicked, and to make them strong to stand in the "evil day, and having done all, to stand," consists of 1, The truth; 2, Righteousness; 3, The gospel; 4, The faith; (And that comes by hearing the Word of God. Rom. x. 17); 5, "The Sword of the Spirit which is the Word of Spirit which is the Word of God;" 6, And prayer. Eph. vi. 13-19. The gift of the Holy Spirit forms no part of the saints armor. "The man of God" is "thoroughly furnished" by the Word; he needs nothing more. God has selected men and filled them with his Spirit. They spake words "which the Holy Spirit teaches." 1 Cor. ii. 13. They uttered words of "spirit and of life." Jno. vi. 63. Christ and his apostles were filled with the Spirit and they spake "the words of God." The "words" they spake was the "testimony" of the Spirit v. 33. And since the testimony has been placed on record in the Bible (1 Jno. v. 9-14), the written Word is the witness or testimony of the Holy Spirit.

In concluding this lesson let the student give the following propositions a critical study, and let him make sure that he understands thoroughly the Scriptural basis on which they rest:

I. The witness of the Holy Spirit is received by our receiving his testimony in the written Word. 1 Jno. v. 9-14; Eph. i. 13, 14; Rom. xvi. 25, 26; viii. 1-4, 15, 16.

II. Feelings are not to be trusted. Jer. xvii. 9; Luke xviii. 11, 12; Gal. v. 17, 24.

III. Feelings fluctuate; God's Word is unchangeable. Rom. iii. 3, 4; iv. 20, 21; 2 Tim. i. 12; Rom. viii. 28; 1 Pet. i. 7, 23, 25; Jno. iii. 34-36.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 4.

THE LORD'S SUPPER. MATT. 26: 17-30.

17. Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover?

18. And he said, Go into the city to such a man, and say unto him, The Master saith, My time is at hand; I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples.

19. And the disciples did as Jesus had appointed them; and they made ready the passover.

20. Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve.

21. And as they did eat, he said, Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.

22. And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto him, Lord, is it I?

23. And he answered and said, He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me.

24. The Son of man goeth as it is written of him: but woe unto that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! it had been good for that man if he had not been born.

25. Then Judas, which betrayed him answered and said, Master, is it I? He said unto him, Thou hast said.

26. And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take eat; this is my body.

27. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it;

28. For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins.

29. But I say unto you, I will not drink hereafter of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

30. And when they had sung a hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

TIME. Tuesday April 14, about 30 to 33 years after the birth of Jesus.

PLACE. An upper room in Jerusalem.

PERSONS. Jesus and the twelve disciples.

PURPOSE. To keep the passover.

It is not my intention to make short comments on each expression or statement in every verse of the lesson; but will try to make plain what I consider to be the lesson proper.

The subject today is the Lord's Supper. You can, and I hope will read carefully Exodus xii. There you will find an excellent account of the passover. The Israelites were to keep it every year, and to tell the story of it to their children, and their children's children, and they too were to keep it year after year, until Jesus came, the Lamb of God. So Jesus came, as God had promised, and in our lesson we have read about him keeping the passover with his disciples.

HE BEGAN THE LORD'S SUPPER,—Paul calls it the Lord's Supper, 1 Cor. ix. 20,—by taking bread,—unleavened bread. Unleavened bread is made without yeast or soda or such. Yeast and soda are leaven. Sin in any person is leaven, 1 Cor. v. 7. Jesus was without sin, without leaven, that was why he could say, and did say, This is my body.

Did Jesus really mean that the bread was his body?

No. He was using figure, or symbolical words, people say of a very bad boy, "He is a bad nut," they mean that he is like a bad nut.

Jesus was without sin, the bread without leaven, so the bread was like Jesus' body, represented his body.

HE TOOK THE CUP.—He took a cup in which was the juice of grapes, see verse 20, and said, This is my blood. This is also symbolical language—words.

In Deut. xxxii. 14, you will find a symbolical expression, where the juice of the grape is called "the pure blood of the grape." The blood of the grape when pure is good for this life—when properly used. So the precious blood of Jesus is good for eternal life—when properly understood. Jesus therefore said, This is my blood, is like my blood, represents my blood.

OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.—New covenant, new bargain, new contract.

We have been taught that the Bible from Genesis to Malachia is the Old Testament, and from Matthew to Revelation is the New Testament. Jesus did not mean that. When God made the earth, and Adam and Eve, that was his creation, and he called it very good, Gen. i. 31. Adam sinned, and brought death on himself and all. God made a New Testament, new bargain, of eternal life through Jesus Christ, the Seed of Abraham. God made the covenant with Abraham, Gen. xv. 18. Read the chapter. God promised Abraham that he and his seed should have the land FOREVER. Gen. xiii. 15. As he is to have the land forever, he must live again and live forever. That is the new covenant, new bargain.

God gave Abraham another grand promise about this New Testament in Gen. xxii. 17, 18.

The Lord Jesus Christ is the seed of Abraham. Gal. iii. 16. Please read this whole chapter also. Jesus is the one that will carry out the New Testament, in other words Jesus will do everything that God promised Abraham.

As the passover was to be kept by the Israelites in remembrance of the great deliverance from Egypt by the wonderful power and goodness of God, so the Lord's Supper is to be kept by the saints, in remembrance of the death of the Lord Jesus, of the sacrifice he made for them. Yes, they who have the same faith, in the New Testament, as Abraham had, are to meet, eat the bread and drink this cup, showing the Lord's death TILL HE COME. 1 Cor. xi. 23-29.

Pages could be written on this grand subject, but I will close, calling your special attention to the fact, that though Jesus made more disciples than John, iv. 1, there were but twelve at the passover, and one of them betrayed him. To me the reason is found in John vi. 66-71.

If there is any note, comment, or remark in connection with this lesson that the reader, student, or teacher does not understand, any one, man, woman or child can write to me at 366 W. Main St. Salem, Ohio, and I will promise the best Biblical answer I can give.

Report of Baptism.

Sunday evening Sept. 16, there was rejoicing in the Church of God, Cleveland, Ohio.

Agnes and Eva Gazely, daughters of Brother and Sister Geo. Gazely, Minnie and Hattie Litzenstock, daughters of Sister Litzenstock put on the all saving name of Jesus by baptism. These young people have been regular attendants of the Sunday School and have had for their teacher for some time past Sister B. H. Lang, who has assisted them to a knowledge of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Brother M. Joblin delivered an address appropriate to the occasion before a good sized audience consisting of parents and friends of the candidates and many brothers and sisters in the Lord. Brother W. L. Tomlinson conducted the baptismal service. It was very gratifying, especially to the parents and the officers of the Sunday School to have these young people decide for God and Christ and Truth. The Sunday School is in a flourishing condition and more of the scholars should soon follow the example set by our young sisters. May our new members ever strive to walk in the straight and narrow way which leads unto eternal life and finally receive a crown of righteousness which shall never fade away.

Obituary.

Mellisa Kipfer was born in St. Joseph, Co., Ind., April 2, 1847, and died in Plymouth, Ind., Oct. 4th, 1906, at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. L. R. Ocker. She leaves four daughters to mourn her loss: Mrs. H. S. Ort, South Bend, Ind.; Mrs. J. A. Maxey, Medford, Okla.; Mrs. L. R. Ocker, Plymouth, Ind.; Mrs. J. W. Renner, Columbus, Ohio.

How little we know of the future. Sister Kipfer was visiting at her daughter's in Plymouth, and feeling as well as usual. She had just sat down to the dinner table, and was finishing a conversation with these words, "I do not see how any one could desert the Abrahamic faith," both hands went to her head, and she said, "O I am so dizzy." Her daughter and husband came quickly to her side with water, thinking she was faint. She exclaimed, as though in great pain, Oh! Oh! Oh! and sank into almost unconsciousness, from which she never fully recovered. A physician was hurriedly called, friends gathered, every effort was made to arouse her but to no avail. The unwelcome messenger had come and at 5 o'clock P. M. she fell asleep in Jesus, true to the "Abrahamic faith." She was baptized twenty-five years ago last February by Elder Oppy. Sleep well, beloved mother, faithful friend and sister, until Jesus calls. We deeply sympathize with the daughters in their great loss, but trust they with their husbands will faithfully follow her example of trusting obedience to Christ. Mrs. M. A. Woodward of Dutton, Mich., spoke from Rev. xxi. 4. Funeral services from the home of her son-in-law, L. R. Ocker, Plymouth, Ind.

Duty of Bible Teachers.

Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, truly uttered a grand truth when he said to Christ: "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God." John iii. 2. This heaven-sent Teacher stands at the head of the faculty, being the chief and foremost professor and instructor in the school of divinity, which relates to man's present and eternal welfare and salvation.

But among the different instructions that God has set in the church to spread the gospel and teach the truth, to perfect the saints and edify the body of Christ, we find the apostle Paul mentions, "teachers" 1 Cor. xii. 28. Just before our great Teacher ascended on high he commanded his disciples thus: "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations,.....teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you" Matt. xxviii. 19, 20. "Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you" John xx. 21. That means his followers, his disciples, his children. So we see great duties and responsibilities devolving on us, but our blessed Teacher has given us the assurance that he would be with us always, even unto the "end of the age."

It is very plain that a true and successful teacher of God's holy Word should be God-called, heaven-inspired, and Spirit-filled, to be a Bible instructor. The Holy Spirit is an indispensable necessity to a true teacher. Our Savior before he left this earth said, "Howbeit, when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth.....and he will shew you things to come." John xvi. 13.

Every teacher should heed the admonition of Paul to Timothy: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth" 2 Tim. ii. 15. Seeing there is so much error being taught in the Sunday-Schools, and also the pulpits at the present time, one should make a study of the gospel and familiarize himself with the sacred Scriptures, to be able to understand and teach the truth in its purity; for we read that it is through the truth that we are to be sanctified and saved.

A teacher of the Bible should always be gentle, kind and patient with their pupils, for we read again in God's Word that "The servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves, if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth" 2 Tim. ii. 24, 25.

Again, a teacher in the school of Christ cannot do justice without the assistance of the Lord Jesus. Much time, therefore, should be spent in earnest prayer that God will direct the mind, and that the necessary words will be used which will touch the hearts of the pupils and open their minds to comprehend the truths of the Scriptures, and that strong impressions will be made that the verities are being discussed. A teacher should be well posted on the lesson each Sunday, have it thoroughly studied, and understood in their own minds, and also be able to refer readily to any passage of Scripture which may relate to the lesson. It is much easier to impart knowledge and make deeper impressions on others, if you have the subject thoroughly mastered yourself.

And again, a Bible instructor should endeavor to make each lesson as interesting as possible by simple illustrations to enforce and make the truth plain, and by well-chosen and proper quotations, readings, etc.

And above all things they should daily live up to their own teachings, and the word of God, and not cause their scholars or anyone to lose confidence in them, and so bring a reproach upon the glorious cause of our heavenly Father. Actions are greater than words, and make stronger and more lasting impressions. Others judge us by what we do more than by what we say. Christ, our heavenly Teacher, spake as never man spake, and lived as never man lived. This dual instruction is the only true and proper kind, producing such influences on the world that eternity can only reveal the results.

Let us ever instruct by pure words and noble examples the eternal truths of God, pointing our fellow-beings to the Lamb of God, through whom we can only obtain everlasting salvation, and a glorious future existence in the bright world to come.—E. B. Arnold.

My Work.

"All members have not the same office." Rom. xii. 4

I could not do the work the reapers did,
Or bind the golden sheaves that thereby fell;
But I could follow by the Master's side,
And watch the marred face I loved so well:
Right in my path by many a ripened ear,
Which I could stoop and gather joyfully;
I did not know the Master placed them there,
"Headless on purpose" that he left for me.

I could not cast the heavy fisher-net,
I had not strength or wisdom for the task;
So on the sun-lit sands, with spray-drops wet,
I sat, and earnest prayers rose thick and fast,
I plucked for the Master's blessing where
My brethren toiled upon the wild world sea;
Or ever that I knew, his smile so fair
Came, bringing sweet encouragement to me.

I could not join the glorious soldier band,
I never heard their thrilling battle-cry;
The work allotted by the Master's hand
Kept me at home while others went to die.
And yet, when victory crowned the struggle long,
And spoils were homeward brought, both rich and rare,
He let me help to plant a triumph song,
And hold my share in the gold and jewels share.

Oh, Master dear! the tiniest work for Thee
Finds recompense beyond our highest thought;
And feeble hands that worked but tremblingly
The richest colors in thy fabric wrought!
We are content to take what thou will give,
To do, or suffer, as thy choice shall be,
Forsaking all thy wisdom bids us leave,
Glad in the thought that we are pleasing thee!

Jeremias (or "Jeremiah").

CHAPTER 52.

1. Sedekias was twenty one years of age when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Hierousuleem; and the name of his mother was Amital, daughter of Hieremias from Lobena;

No 2nd verse.

No 3rd verse.

4. And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign in the ninth month on the tenth of the month, that Nabouchodonosor king of Babuloon came in and all his host against Hierousuleem, and they intrenched themselves around it, and they built around it with four-sided stones;

5. And the city came into a state of siege until the eleventh year of king Sedekias,

6. On the ninth of the month, and the famine pressed heavily in the city, and there were no rations for the laity of the land.

7. And the city was breached and all the men of war went out by night along the highway of the gate between the wall and the outer-wall which was over against the king's garden (kitchen garden not pleasure-garden), and the Chaldaioi were against the city round-about; and they were going their way by the highway to Araba;

8. And the host of the Chaldaioi pursued after the king and overtook him in the country beyond Hiericho, and all his house-servants had been scattered away from him.

9. And they seized the king and led him up unto the king of Babuloon in Deblatha; and he talked to him in a judicial way.

10. And the king of Babuloon slew the sons of Sedekias before his eyes and all the rulers of Jouda he slew in Deblatha;

11. And he put out Sedekias' eyes and bound him with fetters; and the king of Babuloon led him to Babuloon and gave him into a house of a miller until the day he died.

12. And in the fifth month on the tenth of the month came Nabouzardon the chief-magus who stood before the face of the king of Babuloon, into Hierousaleem;

13. And he burned the house of the Lord and the house of the king and all the houses of the city and every great private-house he burned with fire.

14. And every wall round about Hierousaleem the host of the Chaldaioi that was with the chief-magus tore down;

16. And the rest of the laity the chief-magus left for vinedressers and husbandmen,

17. And the copper-pillars in the house of the Lord and the bases and the copper sea in the house of the Lord the Chalduioi broke in pieces, and they took the copper thereof and carried it away into Babuloon.

18. And the garland-crown and the libation-bowls and the flesh-hooks and all the copper-utensils with which they performed the public-service.

19. And the saphire stones and the inquiry-stones and the oil-vessels, and the lamps and the incense-vessels, (or censers) and the cups which were fine gold and which were of fine silver the chief-magus took.

20. And the two pillars and the one sea and the twelve yearling-bullocks underneath the sea, which king Saloomoon made for the house of the Lord were of copper and there was no accounted weight of the copper thereof;

21. And the height of each one of the pillars was thirty-five cubits and their circumference line twelve cubits, and the thickness thereof all around four fingers (or inches).

22. And a copper entablature upon them and the length of it five cubits, a projection of the entablature of the first pillar and a net and pomgranites upon the entablature round about it; all these of copper, and according to these the second pillar, sight pomgranites to the cubit for the twelve cubits.

23. And the pomgranites were ninety-six, the sides accounted as one portion, and all the pomgranites upon the net round about were one hundred.

24. And the chief-magus took the first priest and the priest serving as second and the three who were watching to guard the way.

25. And one eunuch who was an overseer of the men of war and seven men whose names were with the face of the king and who were found in the city, and the scribe of the forces who was acting as scribe for the laity of the land, and sixty ordinary men from the laity of the land who were found in the midst of the city.

26. And Nabuzaudau, the chief-magus of the king, took them and led them unto Babuloon's king into Deblatha.

27. And Babuloon's king smote them in Deblatha in a land of Aimath.

No 28th verse.

No 29th verse.

No 30th verse.

31. And it came to pass in the thirty-seventh year of the removal of Jooakeim, king of Jouda, in twelfth month on the four and twentieth of the month, that Oulaimadachar king of Babuloon, in the year when he became king took the head of Jooakeim king of Jouda, and had him shorn, and led him out of the house in which he was being guarded.

32. And talked best things to him and gave his throne to be over the kings that were with him in Babuloon,

33. And changed the apparel of his prison house; and ate bread constantly before his face all the days that he lived.

34. And the provision for him was given constantly from the king of Babuloon from day to day until the day that he died.

COMMENT.

1st verse "Lobena" instead of "Libnah" R. V. and "Ameital" instead of "Hamelital."

4th verse "ninth month" instead of "tenth month."

6th verse no "fourth month" in the text.

7th verse "rations" instead of "bread." This the Greek word that we get our English word "rations" from. We have merely Anglicised the Greek word.

8th verse "in the country beyond Hiericho" instead of "in the plains of Jericho."

9th verse "In Deblatha" instead of "to Riblah in the land of Hemath." "And he talked to him in a judicial way" instead of "and he gave judgment upon him."

10th verse "rulers" instead of "princes."

11th verse "Until the day he (Nabouchodonosor) died" instead of "until the day of his death" which might be supposed to refer to the death of Sedekias and would not be true as we learn later in this chapter.

12th verse has no "which was the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babuloon" in the text and "Nabuzaradan" should be "Nabonzardan" and "the captain of the guard" should be "the chief-magus" see earlier comment on this official-term.

13th verse "Hieronsuleem" inserted in place of "the city"—not in the text.

15th verse not in the text here.

16th verse "the poorest" should be "the rest of the laity."

17th nothing about "brass" or "brazen" in the text; "copper" is the word.

18th verse nothing about "pots" or "shovel" or "snuffers" or "spoons" and "the basons" should be "libation-bowls." Compare for yourselves.

19th verse instead of "and the cup and the firepans and the basons and the pots and the candlesticks and the spoons" should read "and the saphire-stones and the inquiry-stones and the oil-vessels and the lamps and the incense-vessels (or censers)" and "cups" (of pure gold and silver) omitted entirely. It seems the chief-magus "grafted" these small things of great value for his own use and did not list them.

20th verse instead of "brazen bulls" should read "yearling-bullocks" it might be of either sex but no doubt these were males and of "copper" not "brass" and not "without weight" but the weight not "accounted."

21st verse "eighteen cubits" in height should be "thirty-cubits"—quite a difference of measurement—"it was hollow" not in the text—a little leeway is left in the text for brains and inference here as elsewhere.

22nd verse "And a copper entablature" instead of "a chapter of brass" and "the length" of this entablature instead of "height of this entablature here given. "A projection of the entablature" entirely omitted.

23rd verse "the sides accounted as one portion" instead of "on the sides" there being one pomgranite for each of the four corners making in all 100.

24th verse The names of "the priests" inserted—not in the text, and they are called "first" and "second" and "the three who were watching to guard the way" instead of "the three keepers of the door."

25th verse and "one eunuch who was an overseer" instead of "an officer" or "eunuch" "overseer" omitted also "and sixty men of the people" should be "sixty ordinary men" and "of the host" should be "of the forces" meaning not only of war but of peace, this "scribe" being the representative of the people at the court. "Deblatha" instead of "Riblah."

27th verse again "Deblatha" instead of "Riblah" and "Aimath" instead of "Hamath."

28th, 29th and 30th verses not in the text.

31st verse "oulaimadachar" instead of "evilmerodach" the successor to "Nabouchodonosor" and "Jooakeim" instead of "Jehoiachim."

32nd verse "best things" instead of "kindly."

33rd verse correct.

34th verse "until the day that he died" ends the verse, "all the days of his life" added—not in the text.

Conference Report.

The Fourth Annual Conference of the Church of God was held at the Restitution Church, on Sept. 29th to Oct. 7th. Brother S. J. Lindsay and Brother Huggins of Oregon, Illinois, and Brother Jas. W. Wilson, of Chicago, Illinois, were present. The meeting was very well attended considering the bad weather. Our beloved Sister Annie Drew of Dixon, Illinois was with us again, and we were all glad when Miss Ward was baptized by Brother Lindsay, and we believe some others are almost persuaded to obey the truth, and we trust they will do so before it is too late.

The officers elected for the coming year were as follows:—President, Z. E. Brant. Secretary, Miss Cora Partlow. Treasurer, Lewis Weaver.

Brother and Sister Lenz of Loogootee, Ill., was here and enjoyed the meeting with the brothers and sisters. We trust that we will all live faithful to the blessed truth, and should we never meet again in this life, may we meet in the kingdom of God, is our prayer in Jesus name.

Z. E. BRANT, Pres.
MISS CORA PARTLOW, Sec'y.

Sometimes bicycle-riders who have a steep hill before them get a good start and go up the incline with a rush that takes them well toward the top before they realize that they are climbing. There are a good many times in our lives when we need to know how to take advantage of momentum. We hear an address which fires us with a desire to undertake a certain work, but we wait so long before beginning that our enthusiasm vanishes. We visit a friend who uses her spare minutes so profitably that none of her time goes to waste, and we come home resolved to make our own leisure count for something; but after a fortnight has passed, we are quite content to keep on as usual. Start when the impulse is strong, when you have interest and enthusiasm to help you. The sturdiest wheelman who mounted his bicycle at the foot of a long, steep hill, would find it a hard task to pedal his way to the top, while less robust riders would drop off early in the climb. Half the hard things we have to do would not seem hard if we used our momentum just at the moment when it could be made to count.

Perseverance.

One step and then another,
And the longest walk is ended;
One stitch, and then another,
And the largest rent is mended;
One brick upon another,
And the highest wall is made;
One flake upon another,
And the deepest snow is laid.

So the little coral workers,
By their slow and constant motion,
Have built those pretty islands
In the distant, dark blue ocean.
And the noblest undertakings
Man's wisdom hath conceived,
By oft-repeated effort
Have been patiently achieved.

Then do not look disheartened
On the work you have to do
And say that such a mighty task
You never can get through;
But just endeavor day by day
Another point to gain,
And soon the mountain which you feared
Will prove to be a plain.

"Rome was not built up in a day,"
The ancient proverb teaches;
And Nature, by her trees and flowers,
The same sweet sermon preaches.
Think not of far off duties,
But of duties which are near;
And having once begun the work,
Resolve to persevere.

Birds of the Bible. No. 7.

The stork is a very large bird. It stands nearly four feet high. What strong wings! What long legs! No wonder it needs a good-sized nest to stow away so large a body, especially if two little ones are to be accommodated also. Our Father in heaven taught the stork to be his own architect. He lays the foundation of his "house" upon the branch of a fir-tree, a cedar, or an oak where it starts from the parent stem. He is his own builder, and weaves strong twigs around the branch and the small twigs of the tree, so that the "house" when built is almost a part of the tree. Then the house is properly plastered with turf and earth, and made comfortable with straw, moss and feathers. He also builds his nest on the tops of buildings, often covering a whole chimney-top. They have no fear of man, because each generation is taught to protect and not to injure them. They love human society and will build their nests in the most crowded parts of a city.

The prophet Jeremiah refers to one noticeable thing about the stork and draws a very important lesson from it; "Yea, the stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times." It is a bird of passage, and when winter is coming on it migrates to a warmer country. The stork knows when to go. He and his relations are found in all the countries of Europe except the British Isles, and throughout Asia as far as Burmah. They have a happy time of it from April to October; they gather together in large flocks, and a pretty noise they make. They have no cry, and it is doubtful whether they have any voice; but in spite of this deficiency, they make a great noise by rapidly opening and closing their great beaks. One might imagine they were having a great discussion as to where they were to go and how they were to go. They know both how and where. Some evening when the wind begins to blow chill, the laborer returning from the field misses the noise. Ruled by a God-given impulse, without map, under the pathless heavens and beneath the stars in strict order, they are already on their wing journey to the Upper Nile, or the vast plains of Southern Africa. As rich people do who go to Spain or Italy, so the storks "shut up house," and as certainly as if they put a notice on the fir-tree or the tower, "Shall be back in six months," they "know their appointed time" for return. They know when to come back and where to return; for it is a well-observed fact that the same pair of birds return to the same nest. Yes; they come back to the old house again. Very good sort of birds, these storks are they not?—so pretty, yet not conceited; so strong, yet so loving; so fitted for travel, yet so fond of home.

Sermons for the Little Ones. No. 7.

STORY OF SAUL AND DAVID—ISRAEL'S KINGDOM OVERTURNED.

The Israelites lived in the land of Canaan a long time without a King. Joshua judged them until he died, and other judges followed him. When they had no judge, they went to worshiping the idols of the nations around them, and doing many things that displeased the Lord. Then, he would let the wicked Philistines trouble them, take away their cities, and a great deal of their money.

But when they remembered and cried to him, he would send them another judge and deliver them out of the enemy's hand.

When they saw that other nations had kings, they wanted one too. God was their King, but they wanted one that they could see—an earthly king. He told them that it would bring sorrow and trouble upon them, but they kept on asking until he gave them Saul—a man head and shoulders taller than any of his fellows. Saul seemed afraid to take such an exalted place for he hid himself among some goods in a tent, but he was brought out and made king.

For a time he did well. Then God told him not to do something, he did it, and when he said "Saul you must kill some wicked people, and all the animals they own," he wouldn't mind. So the Lord rejected him from being king, and a little shepherd boy named David, who wasn't afraid of lions, or bears, nor of the great boasting giant Goliath, was chosen king.

After David had taken the kingdom the Lord sent his prophet Nathan to tell him that he was going to give him a Son, to sit upon his throne forever, and that his throne and kingdom should be established forever.

In the Psalms you will find David looking down to the time when this that Nathan had told him would come to pass.

He pictures the kings of earth setting themselves up against God's anointed King, and God telling them, that this anointed One, was "his Son," that it was he who had set that Son upon his holy hill of Zion, and that in spite of them and all their armies, "the heathen would be given to him for his inheritance," and "the uttermost part of the earth for his possession," that the kingdom was his, and that he would be governor among the nations.

Now do you think we can find out who this Son of David is? Who it is, that is to have David's throne and kingdom forever? Who it is that is to have all the earth for his possession? Who it is that is said to be "God's King" and "his Son?"

It looks a great deal as if it might be the same Son that was promised to Abraham, does it not?

Well, David died, and the Israelites had a great many kings but none of them lived forever, they all died. By and by the people got to be so wicked, that they would not listen to the prophets that God sent to them. He overturned their kingdom, telling them that it should be no more a kingdom, till the King should come, to whom he had promised to give it. It belonged to him, and he only should have it.

The enemies of the Jews carried many of them far away from their beautiful homes. Their cities were desolated, and at last the wicked Romans came and ruled over them, and made them do so many things that they disliked to do.

But they had read about the child that God had promised to Abraham and to David, to whom their kingdom was to be given forever, and they were looking for him to come.

They thought that if he should come all their dead friends would be made alive,—the good to live forever,—that the cruel Roman governor would be driven away, and David's throne be again set up in its old place. No more to be torn down, that his kingdom would reach and take in all the kingdoms of all other kings, that he would give them eternal life, and that they, with him would reign forever.—The Friend of the Children.

Selections.

Heedless.

A lady and gentleman stopped a man in front of the Brooklyn Bridge, one night, not long ago, and said, "Can you direct us to the nearest elevated railroad station that will take us to 144th St., West?" The person accosted, of course, replied to the man and gave the necessary information; when the lady spoke up and said, "Is it far?". The man had already told them just how far it was, and the course they had to take, but only one had been listening. Her mind was apparently taken up with something else just when she should have been paying strict attention. Her companion said something that sounded like this: "You have got ears to hear with"—and was still talking to her quite reprovingly, as they passed out of my sight.

Reader, this is a good representation of what the Christian world is doing to this day. They are asking the way to a certain destination, but only half are listening to the answer the Guide gives. We are soldiers of the cross, and when the Captain of our salvation says, "Attention," we must heed his command, which is: "Preach the Word." 2 Tim. iv. 2.

If the man who was asked to point out the way to the elevated station had not known the way himself he would have been unable to help the inquirers who were lost. "The whole world is lost in darkness of sin," and many will sing, if you will, sing with them, "But the light of the world is Jesus." But begin to tell them how Jesus is the light, and half of them will say, after you have told them that the "Word"—Christ—which we are commanded to preach, is coming, and is only a little way off, "Is it far?" They are alive to the fact that you are talking, but dead as to the comprehension of what you say.

Let me tell you one thing—Christ is coming. How far he is away, I do not know. But I do know that he will come as a thief, when we least think of it. If you are not ready, get ready.

Those people who wanted to leave on the elevated railroad had an object in traveling that way. They wanted to get up above the hustle and bustle and obstructions of the surface roads. We as Christians want to do the same thing, and follow out Paul's advice, found in 2 Cor. vi. 6: "Come out from among them (the world), and be ye separate;" travel above the beggarly elements of the world, and God says he will receive you and be a Father unto you, and those who do this shall be his children. Is it not worth striving for and paying attention to?

Do not ask how far to the starting place; for today is the time, and now is the starting point. Will you who are not ready start for the kingdom today? If you will, I will meet you in the morning, when Jesus comes to reward his servants. God grant that all who read this may obey the command today.—Herald of Life.

Things Lovely and of Good Report.

PHIL. IV. 8, 9.

Since the days of the great apostle, there has probably never been a better or more comprehensive description of what we call good manners, than is embodied in the expression "Whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report." It would have been impossible for Paul or any other writer, of that or any other age, to have given detailed directions for all the minutiæ of human conduct in different nations, lands and ages. Hence the apostle sums the matter up briefly; "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things. The things which ye both learned and received and heard and saw in me, these things do: and the God of peace shall be with you."

This passage is perhaps the best manual of good conduct and good breeding which has ever been written. And it was by attention to these and similar directions that the early Christians were to adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things.

The church was a little flock of lambs in the midst of wolves. They were in all positions of life, but especially among the poor and lowly, the oppressed and bound. They had not only the gospel, the Word of God, the Sword of the Spirit, with its cutting edge which smote and pierced and divided; but this was to be supplemented by the personal influence of Christians, who were as lights in the world, and who were to so live that men should take knowledge of them that they were the followers of him who was "meek and lowly in heart."

They were to consider the things which made individuals lovable, and ensured them the good opinion of those around them. They were not only to have the approval of God in heaven, and honest hearts in their own breasts, but they were to so live that they would have a good report of them that were without, that the Word of God might not be blasphemed. The directions to be pitiful, to be courteous, to be patient toward all men, to be subject one to another, to exercise long-suffering, and to show kindness, are the very perfection of the highest breeding, the noblest behavior that the world ever knew.

Wherever the gospel of Christ goes it civilizes, enlightens, refines, elevates, illuminates, and changes the whole face of society; and in the heart, the home, the neighborhood and the nation, brings men back to so wear the image of their Maker, that men seeing their good works, may glorify their Father which is in heaven.

Woman's Enemy.

"It is not the work that tires you at all; it is the way you do it, said a wise counselor to a discouraged and broken-down school-teacher.

The word fits the case of many a woman who is not a school teacher. The farmer's wife who does the whole week's work in her imagination after she goes to bed Sunday night; the bookkeeper who in her dreams adds columns of figures to bring out an obstinate balance; the school girl who grows hot and cold in anticipation of an examination; the dressmaker who never forgets her apprehension lest her customer shall not be pleased—all these and a score of other kinds of women need to learn the lesson of the value of the mind at ease.

A conscientious, worrying wife of a Maine farmer hurried to the hen-house one icy day with a pan of food. She slipped and fell—and a broken hip stopped the quick footstep and dulled the keen vision for "things which must be done." For three months the patient lay in bed, alone many hours of each day, thinking over her life and habits and responsibilities—her successes and her failures. When she could hobble to a wheeled chair, she was a different creature from the anxious, nervous woman who had been forced to submit to imprisonment.

A perspective of the months and years of life, a new conviction that peace of mind is more important than pies and cakes, a sense of proportion which included herself and the claims of her own nature as well as the appetite of her hungry family and the profits of the farm, had revealed themselves to her in the long days of enforced inactivity.

"My broken hip saved my life, and soul, too, I guess," the grateful woman used to say, with the smile of one who had found that the worst enemy of good work was worry.—Youth's Companion.

Bible School Announcement.

At the close of the November Conference to be held in Plymouth, Indiana, beginning Nov. 15, and holding ing over Sunday, a Bible school will be held at the same place beginning on Monday morning and continuing one week. There will be three sessions each day, morning, afternoon and evening, except Monday evening. It is earnestly desired that there be a large attendance. There will be no tuition fee, but each attendant will be expected to pay his board. Come to the Conference prepared to stay for the Bible school. We feel sure that all will be much benefitted by this week of earnest Bible study.

Brother S. J. Lindsay of Oregon, Illinois and Brother J. L. Wines of Pierceton, Indiana will be the teachers. Any information concerning the school can be obtained by addressing J. L. Wines at Pierceton, Indiana, or Mrs. J. H. Willey at Plymouth, Indiana. Those who expect to be in attendance will aid the committee of arrangements by sending their names to the last named person, as soon as possible.

J. L. WINES, Chairman,
LYDIA RAILSBACK, Secretary.

Notice.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift. Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Huggins, Box G. Oregon, Ill.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Programme Committee.

The following persons are appointed a committee to prepare a programme and make other arrangements for the Conference of the Church of God to be held at Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 15-18, 1906. Committee, Brother A. R. Underwood; Sister F. M. McCrory; Sister T. O. Taber.

To the Churches and isolated brethren and sisters of the State of Ohio:

At our last Conference held at Birch Creek, Miami Co., we were elected State Evangelist. The success of the year's work depends largely upon you. The Evangelist can do but little without your hearty co-operation. We shall be pleased to visit you and hold meetings as you shall direct. The Conference has provided that our expenses shall be met. It is our wish that you write to us that we may know your wishes.

Remember that the time for evangelizing is short. We should begin our work early. We have the whole State as our field. Our work should begin the last of September or early in October. We have no "hobbies to present to those of "like precious faith." It shall be our purpose to preach the "gospel of the kingdom of God." What at the first was spoken by the Lord and confirmed unto us by them who heard him, we will preach. Hoping to be able to serve you all is our wish. Your brother in the Anointed. Address Rt 3, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

B. C. ROBISON.

To the Churches of God in Iowa, greeting:

My appointments for the month of October will be as follows: Marathon on the 4th and 21st; Eagle Grove on the 7th and 18th; Gladbrook on the 14th and 25th. During September the interest and attendance at all four points was excellent, and it leads me to believe that the present Conference year is destined to be a fruitful one. Let us pray that such will be the case.

Russellism Exposed.

There has been an increased demand for a sharp expose of the cunningly devised fables of Russellism, showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of the Christian faith.

I am now engaged in writing such an expose; showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of Christianity. It will be printed as a booklet of about thirty pages at ten cents each.

This will follow right along after the printing of Pine Woods Bible Class, the type-setting of which is now nearly completed. The booklet will be ready for distribution about the same time that Pine Woods Bible Class is ready to send out.

Those who wish Russellism Exposed may send in orders right away so that I may know how many to print.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Joblin, 626 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, O. Price 40 cts per 100.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support fo. my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

The first quarterly Conference of the Church of God in the State of Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, Ind., commencing Nov. 15th and holding over Sunday Nov. 18th. We hope all the churches of the State may be represented. Isolated members of the one Body are invited and will find a home with us. We extend the invitation to all who believe the gospel of the kingdom, and the return of the Master, who live in other States, to come. Come all in the Spirit of Christ, forebearing one another in love, and help us to make this the best meeting we have ever attended. Ample provision will be made to care for all. Those coming please notify J. H. Willey at Plymouth.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us about it give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it forever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out... Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the ...urrection of Christ;" "God's Love ... Solicitude for Mankind;" and "W... Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME I.V. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 7, 1906. NUMBER 41.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, personal assurance of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Give Christ the Best.

Give Christ the best! O young men, strong and eager,
And conscious of your new-awakening life,
Ready to throw your souls' rich, growing powers
Into some noble cause or lower strife,
Christ Jesus was a young man, strong and brave;
Give him your heart's best—aye, your all—nothing
The best you have.

And you in whom the same consecration is throbbing,
But with a steadier pulse and nerve of flame,
Whose hearts were made for sacrifice and loving,
Whose soul's ideals grow with you as you grow;
O, give to Christ your first, most sacred love,
And of your heart's devotion give to him
The best you have.

And is our best I on much? O friends, remember
How once our Lord poured out his soul for us,
And in the prime of his mysterious manhood
Gave up his precious life upon the cross;
The Lord of lords, by whom the worlds were made,
Through bitter grief and tears gave us
The best he had.

An Epistle of Hieremias.

A copy of an epistle which Hieremias sent unto those who were about to be led away into Babuloon by the king of the Babuloonians, to tell them even as he had been directed by God. Because of the sins which ye have sinned in the sight of God, will ye have been led into Babuloon captives by Nabuchodonosor, king of the Babuloonians.

2. When then ye have come into Babuloon ye will be there many years and a long time unto seven generations; and after that I shall lead you out therefrom with peace.

3. But just now will ye see in Babuloon gods of silver and gold and wood borne upon shoulders, that produce fear in the nations.

4. May ye then not have reverenced them also and have become like to the other tribes, and may fear of them not have laid hold of you,

5. When ye see a multitude in front of and behind them worshiping them; but may ye have said in your thought that it behooveth thee to worship a Sole-Lord.

6. For my angel is with you, and he it is who findeth your souls.

7. For their tongue is made of wood by a carpenter and they have been gilded with gold and silvered over with silver and they are lies and unable to talk.

8. And even as men take a thing of gold for a beautiful-loved virgin,

9. Do they prepare garlands for the heads of their gods. And it is when the priests take silver and gold away from their gods to lewdly spend for themselves,

10. That they will even give it for the roofing over of their harlots. And they adorn them with their silver and their gold and wooden gods as though men with undergarments.

11. And these are not saving themselves from corrosion and kinds of food, though they are clothed with fine purple underapparel.

12. And they wipe their faces because of the dust of the house which is too much upon them;

13. And one holdeth a scepter like a mere man, a judge of a country, and he doth not destroy the one sinning against him.

14. And one holdeth an instrument in his right hand, an axe for instance and he doth not deliver himself from war and highwaymen, whence they are recognized as not being gods: Do you not fear them?

15. For even then as a human instrumentality when broken hath become useless,

16. Are these their gods, when fixed fast in their houses; their eyes are full of dust from the feet of those who go their way in;

17. And their court-yards are hedged around even as though by a one who had wronged a king, as for one led away to death; their houses the priests fortify with doors and enclosures and with bars that they may not be robbed by highwaymen.

18. They burn lamps and more than for themselves not one of which can they (the idols) see.

19. And it is even as a roof for those from out the house, and the hearts of the creeping-things from the earth they say are being licked out, and though they devour both them and their fine apparel they are not aware of it.

20. Their faces get blackened from the smoke out the house;

21. Upon their body and upon their head light things alight, swallows and such birds and likewise also the cats.

22. Whence ye should know that they are not gods. Do not fear them.

23. For the gold which enveloped them for beauty should one not wipe off the corrosion will not glitter; for not even when they were molded did they know it.

24. For every price have they been bought in the market; there is no spirit in them.

25. Without feet upon shoulders are they accustomed to be borne, showing forth their dishonor to men; they are put to shame and those who court their service.

26. Because should they fall upon the ground they cannot of themselves arise; nor if any one stand one upright, will it of itself be moved, nor if it lean can it make itself upright, but even as unto the dead are the votive-offerings being made to them.

27. And their sacrifices the priests give away and use for themselves; and even so also the women salt down portions of them, nor do they distribute them to a beggar or a disabled person;

28. Since a woman who sitteth apart and one in child-bed touch their sacrifices ye know accordingly from these facts that they are not gods; fear them not then.

29. For what should they be called gods? because women make offerings to gods of silver and gold and wood?

30. And priests in their houses sit on tripods with their tunics rent and their heads and beards shorn, and with their heads uncovered, and howl and call for help in the presence of their gods even as do some at a funeral supper for a dead person? (The whirling dervish-dance is a still a surviving relic of this heathenish ceremony).

32. From their fine apparel the priests take for underclothing for their wives and children; nor if they suffer evil done by any one.

33. Nor if they experience good are they able to repay it, nor are they able to establish or remove a king.

34. Likewise they will not be able to give riches or copper: if any one vow a vow to them and he doth not pay it they will not require it.

35. They may not deliver a man from death nor take a weaker from a stronger.

36. They will not restore a blind man to sight, they will not deliver a man who is in necessity;

37. A widow they will not show mercy to and an orphan they will not do good to.

38. Made like to the stones from the mountain are the wooden things and the things covered with gold and with silver, and those who court them will have been put to shame.

39. How then can they be supposed to be or called gods?

40. Moreover the Chaldaioi themselves though they dishonor these whenever they see a recent one that is unable to talk, are people who think that Beel gives utterance when they have offered to him though he is unable to apprehend.

41. And they are unable by apprehending to utterly forsake them; for they have no true apprehension.

42. And the women put ropes around themselves and seat themselves in the highways to offer their bean-offerings for incense.

43. And whenever any one of them is dragged back by a passer-by she lieth down and reproacheth her neighbor because he hath not been accounted as worthy as she even, and doth not allow her rope to be rent.

44. All the things that have occurred with them are lies. How then can they be supposed to be or be called gods?

45. They were fitted up by artizans and gold-pourers, not one of them can become anything other than the artizans desired them to become.

46. And those who devise them cannot become long-time men.

47. And how forsooth will the things devised by them? For they left behind them lies and a reproach to those who knew them well.

48. For whenever war or calamities have come upon them, the priests take counsel where they may hide themselves along with them.

49. How then is it not possible to perceive that they are not gods, who save themselves neither from war nor calamities?

50. For things of wood and covered with gold and covered with silver will have been known hereafter to be lies; To all the nations and to the kings will it be manifest that they are not gods, but works of men's hands and that nothing in them is God's work.

51. Should it not be known to any one then they are not gods?

52. For a king can they not cause to arise nor give rain to men;

53. They will not judge discriminatively for themselves nor deliver from wrong-doing, since they cannot.

54. For even as a sea-fowl are they between the heavens and the earth; yea, indeed when fire shall fall into a house of their wooden or gold-covered or silver-covered gods, their priests will flee and save themselves, but they even as beams of wood will have been burned in the midst of them.

55. And they will not withstand a king nor warriors.

56. How then should one accept them as or suppose them to be gods? Nor will they save themselves from thieves nor highwaymen these wooden and gold-covered and silver-covered gods.

57. Those stronger than they will take away their gold and their silver and their fine apparel lying about them and go away having them, nor will they call responsive help to themselves.

58. So then a king who displayeth his own manliness is more efficient than an instrument of use in a house, in which the one who hath acquired it shall rely for use—more efficient than false gods: or even a door in a house that saveth the things therein than the false gods; and a wooden pillar in royal apartments than the false gods.

59. Yea, a sun and a moon and stars that shine and send forth light for use are obedient (things that hear well lit.)

60. Likewise lightning also when it appeareth is easy to see; and the same spirit (or wind which?) breatheth (or bloweth which?) in every land;

61. And whenever a direction hath been given by God to clouds to go their way over all the inhabited (earth) they fulfill the thing directed.

62. And the fire sent forth to lavishly waste mountains and forests doeth the thing directed. And these have not for this reason been likened to ideas and their able powers.

63. Whence it is not a supposable thing that they are nor that they should be called gods, since they are not able to reason in a judicial way nor to benefit men.

64. Since then ye are aware that they are not gods do not fear them.

64. For they can neither curse nor bless kings.

66. And signs among nations in the heavens they cannot show, nor will they shine like the sun, nor will they afford light like the moon.

67. Their wild-beasts are more efficient, that can flee to shelter for refuge for their own advantage.

68. In no way then is it manifest to us that they are gods; therefore do not fear them.

69. For even as in a forcing-bed for cucumbers a scarecrow to guard it is of no account, just so are their gods of wood and covered with gold and silver.

70. In the same way is it also as with the thorny-shrub in a garden, upon which every birds alighteth; and as it is likewise with a dead person cast away in darkness to which their gods of wood and covered with gold and silver have been likened.

71. And from the moth-eaten purple and the corroded marble upon them it should be known that they are not gods; and they themselves will finally have been devoured, and will be a reproach in the land.

72. More efficient (better) then is a justified man (a pardoned sinner) who hath no idols; for he will be far from reproach.

COMMENT.

Such an argument as given in this epistle may seem to many of our readers, who no doubt are mostly Christian people and far removed from idolatry, the unearthing of an obsolete and uncalled for piece of ethical teaching whether inspired or not; but let us see if this old prophetic warning and enlightenment is not just as much needed today as when it was first written and promulgated. To whom was it addressed at that particular time? To the comparatively few captives of two tribes of a twelve-tribe nationality was it not? All the then civilized world outside of this nationality were idolatrous heathen. But the proposition of civilized and idolatrous heathen outside of the pale and influence of Christianity is greater today than it was then; and even the number of those who bow down to stocks and stones is greater than it was then, to say nothing of the vast number of those within the organic Christian church and within the pale of Christian influence who respect, revere and bow down to false concepts of some mere man's imagination and worship a god embodied merely in the attributes of these false concepts—utterly false when tried by the standard of God's own revelation of himself whether in his written Word or in his works. To any such who unconsciously or ignorantly have been swept into this maelstrom by the various currents of heredity, law or social custom, but still retain an instinctive desire to know their heavenly Father and walk in his ways, this old epistle will still prove a new and convincing argument for "the truth as it is in Christ" and a timely warning against heedless error.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Sunday Morning Address.

AT THE BREAKING OF BREAD.

Beloved brethren and sisters: "God commended his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Rom. v. 8 That Christ died "for us" "while we were yet sinners" was a commendation and manifestation of God's love, is obviously inculcated in this passage of Holy Writ. There exist three distinct phases of love. In the animal creation we see a love where the creature loves its offspring. Rise a plane higher, and we see a love in humanity where not only the parents love their offspring, but we love those who love us. Towering far above both the love of the animal creation and that of humanity is the love of God. This love will reach not only our offspring and those who love us, but our enemies as well. This love is perfect and "casts out fear;" and if it abides in our hearts it will enable us to obey the teaching of our blessed Master, who said, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use, and persecute you."

"God is love," And he loved us "while we were yet sinners." It is a wonderful "manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." It is the basis, cement and beauty of brotherly union. It is a virtue which ought to shine brightly in the character of every brother and sister. It ought to be conspicuous in all our conduct, expressed in actions replete with noble, heroic affection. "This is my commandment," said Jesus, "that ye love one another as I have loved you." Jno. xiv. 12. The injunction is denominated the "new commandment" of the Christian economy, and is, therefore, the cardinal virtue in the character of the saints Christ has made his love to us not only the motive, but the pattern of our love to each other. "This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you." Let us, for our instruction and benefit, dwell upon the properties of his love, and learn thereby what should be the characteristics of our own. His was real, not a mere nominal one: Let us love not in word only, but in deed and in truth. His was fruitful unto tears, blood and death: so should ours be. His was a love of forbearance and forgiveness: so must ours be. His love was unchangeable notwithstanding our weaknesses. He loved us "while we were yet sinners," while we were "of the world;" hence we are bound to love one another, and continue unalterable in our affection to each other, in opposition to all those little infirmities of temper and conduct which we discover in our brethren and sisters.

What is love: "This is love," says John, "that we walk after his commandments." 2 John vi. "If ye love me, keep my commandments;" "If a man love me, he will keep my words." Jno. xiv. 15, 23. These passages give us an infallible clue as to whether we are in possession of the divine love. If we love Christ we "walk according to his "words." And if we love the brethren as we should, we love them "indeed" as well as in "word." 1 John iii. 12. It is this practical aspect of love we wish to enforce this morning.

Christ loved "in word" but in addition to this he loved "in deed and in truth." "God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him." 1 John iv. 9. He was "sent" "while we were yet sinners;" "He loved us," John alleges, "and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins." 1 John iv. 10. "In this," he declares, "was manifested the love of God toward us." Verse 9. With grateful hearts we see that Christ's love was practical: it was real and genuine, even to laying down life itself. And with irresistible logic John says, "If God so loved us, we ought to love one another." Verse 11. "We love him," (John iv. 19), and "when we love God" "We know that we love the children of God." Verse 2. It is impossible to separate the love of God and the love of the brethren. For John pointedly asks, "If a man says he loves God and hateth his brother he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother, whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" iv. 20. Impossible; for "he who loveth God, loveth his brother also." Verse 21. "The message" "from the beginning" was "that we should love one another." iii. 11. If we love not the brethren it is "manifest" that we are "the children of the devil," and "not of God" (iii. 10) "Every one that loveth him that begat loveth him that is begotten of him." Verse 1. Loving the brethren is an evidence of our having "passed from death unto life." "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." iii. 14. Such an one is, in fact, "a murderer" (verse 14, 15), "in darkness" (ii. 9), which will lead him to condemnation and death.

Bible Accurately Scientific.

When we find what we actually and definitely know, we also find that the Bible does not agree with it. Dr. William Osler, the American who has recently been appointed by the King of England as Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford University, lately delivered an address on "Science and Immortality," as the Ingersoll lecture at Harvard University, in which he says among other things: "The association of life in all its phases with organization, the association of a gradation of intelligence with increasing complexity of organization, the failure of the development of intelligence with an arrest of cerebral growth in the child, the slow decay of mind with changes in the brain, the absolute dependence of the higher mental attributes upon definite structures, the instantaneous loss of consciousness when the blood supply is cut off from the higher centers—these facts give pause to the scientific student when he tries to think of intelligence apart from organization. Far, very far from any rational explanation of thought as a condition of matter, why should he consider the, to him, unthinkable proposition of consciousness without a corresponding material basis?....."

To a mind unbiased by theologies and creeds it would seem surprising, that anyone should doubt the truth of the conclusion to which the above statement brings us. The Bible has taught the same thing for more than 3000 years, as we reckon its chronology. Job says of the man in the state of death, "His sons come to honor and he knoweth it not; they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them." xiv. 21: David said: "For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee thanks." Psa. vi. 5. Solomon said: "The dead know not anything." Eccl. ix. 5. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. cxlvi. 4.

A Methodist minister once told me that I. was his plans or purposes that perished; but the root from which the Hebrew word is made, means to think, to consider, and in the places where it is used it means to think. In Jonah i. 6, it might mean to have consciousness. In the Psalm it doubtless means that man in death is entirely unconscious. In the New Testament, Christ called death sleep. St. Peter, in the Book of Acts ii. 29 and 34, said of David that he was both "dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day," and that he had not ascended into the heavens. If David has not gone to heaven, who among the dead have?

St. Paul says that David "fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption;" which ought to silence some of the theories concerning Paul's desire to depart and be with Christ. Paul also says: "And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." 1 Cor. xviii. 17, 18. And that ought to settle still more thoroughly the theories about Paul's departure, or his going to heaven when he died; for how could he be perished, even without a resurrection, if his spirit or any part of him was very much alive and conscious in heaven. The idea is preposterous.—A. F. Moore, M. D. in Crisis.

People err through strong drink; they are rewarded when they resist it There was once a man, a very young man, in a strange land. He was a slave in one sense, but was treated well, cared for as to body and food and clothing. His keepers wished him to drink rich wines because the king drank it; wine was offered him as a proof of showing that he was given the best of their food. But he refused to drink of the wine because his religion forbade its use. If you will follow the history of this Bible man, you will find that he was rewarded for his temperance. What was his name? When and where did he live? How did he come to be in this particular kind of slavery? What lesson may we learn from him?

"Keep thy heart with all diligence."

In our Christian life we should imitate Jesus, do first and then teach.

Plymouth, Indiana, Nov. 7, 1906.

We wish all who have not renewed their subscriptions for 1906 would do so at once. We just simply need the money right now.

It is a good sign. God's people are waking up. Bible schools are being talked of in Kansas, Illinois, Iowa, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and other points. It is a good sign. Keep working. Everlastingly at it. You are sure to win if you keep up courage and work. Use the strength you have—and God will give you more as need be.

The friends at Plymouth are getting ready for the Conference next week, and for the Bible school to follow the week after. Let all who can come for the very first meeting, and stay through to the close. This is what will insure a good and profitable gathering. Worldly affairs can wait better than the Lord's work can. His cause should be first and greatest with us—not the last and the least. See then that God has the right place in our hearts, and come and help along his work.

We have received a copy of Bro. W. H. Wilson's book "Pine Woods Bible Class." It contains 480 pages, 26 lessons, and is in every way creditable as a work for the purpose it is designed to accomplish. Bro. Wilson has done his part, and now calls on those who have given their names, and others as well, to send in their money so he can get the books mailed quickly. We trust enough has been said about this book that more words will not be necessary. Act at once, so Bro. Wilson will not be delayed. The expose of Russellism is also out, and ready to mail. Notice has been given of this, and where the views of Mr. Russell have bothered our brethren no better answer can be found than this work by Bro. Wilson. So send and get a copy.

Symbols and Symbolic Time.

In The Restitution of Sept. 5th is asked a question coming from one, whom I judge, holds the "year day" theory." The little horn, as he states, is a symbol. How are we to know what the symbol means if we do not accept the measurement of the literal Dan. vii. 23, 24, 25 If not literal will you inform us? I believe all who hold to the year day interpretation acknowledge that the 2300 (2400) is symbolic time, and means 2400 years; and that 1260 days, mean 1260 years. Are not these years literal? If not, what are they?

I shall endeavor to answer the question, and in doing so, I hope to shed light in the middle of the darkness surrounding this subject. I believe that great and lasting good will result in honest and prayerful investigation of this important time question, or problem, that caused Daniel to cry out, "O my Lord, what the end of these!

The wise shall understand. It is evident that at the time of the end, there will be a wise people on the earth. Does it not behoove us, who claim to be Christ's waiting Bride, to strive earnestly for the wisdom that God only can give? We ignore much of the wisdom of the wise of past ages; have we dropped all of these traditions? When shall we turn from man, and believe God's Word through his holy prophets? There is nothing hidden from the faithful. Mysteries belong to darkness. Israel had eyes, but could not see, ears but heard not; and because of their apostasy, the Book was sealed. Isa. xxix. 10-11. The same is true of our apostate and careless church. If we be in the faith, there is no mystery for us. The Word was given for our learning.

A symbol given without an interpretation, is like speaking in unknown tongue. Who is edified without an interpreter? Many symbols are given us, but God sends an angel to interpret their meaning, and they are measured by the literal.

In Daniel's wonderful visions we have both the symbol and the literal—the symbols are explained—the literal need no explanation. The 70 weeks of Dan. ix. 24 is symbolic time, and must be measured by literal time, to the sanctuary be cleansed." This is literal time, and covers the time of the end, of Jewish and Gentile time, and needed no explanation, or interpretation; nor has any been given. It begins with the taking away of the daily sacrifice. Did the popes take away the daily sacrifice, when Israel had had none for nearly 600 years? Has Papacy ever had dominion over Jerusalem and the sanctuary? Did Titus, Rome's greatest general, take away the daily sacrifice in A. D. 70, when there was no recognized sacrifice by Jehovah? When they crucified Christ, their house was left unto them desolate, God had parted asunder their time, by cutting off their 70th week, till the time of the end. The veil of the temple was rent, God abandoned them to the desolation, and a typical destruction of Jerusalem and captivity reached them, A. D. 70. When God closes up the breach, and permits them to finish the 70th week, or last 7 years, God will again honor their sacrifice, and recognize them as his people, during the first half of the 70th week.

Turn to Daniel ix. 27 and learn what happens in the midst of the week. At this time begins the great tribulation upon Israel and Judah, or the four sore judgments upon Jerusalem. Ezek. xv. 21. This will take place under the first five seals—the sword, famine, noisome beast and pestilence. Rev. vi. 1 to 10. Jewish time ended A. D. 70 until the time of the end, which gives 7 years more of Jewish time, and 3 years and 6 months of continued time, called the times of the Gentiles, Luke xxi. 24. Therefore from A. D. 37 to the beginning of the 70th week is still future. All the prophets of Israel are silent; the same is true of political Babylon; from A. D. 70 until great Babylon, under the 7th and 8th head, stands in its zenith of power, at the opening of the sixth seal, to continue 42 months, (three and one years) ending with the sixth trumpet, where the 2400 days end; where the 1260 days (of the two witnesses, Rev. xi. 3) end.

The seventh trumpet will usher in the resurrection of the saints, and the final destruction of Babylon and the wicked. The instruments of God's vengeance are symbolized in the seven vials of wrath. The sanctuary will be cleansed within the four months following the 2400 days.

Yes, I think we all agree that the little horn is a symbol, yet we must understand the literal interpretation. It must be measured by the literal to be of any value to us as Bible students. I think we all agree it means a mighty king, ruling the fourth great universal empire of Babylon; and is the 7th or 8th head of the great seven-head symbolic beast of Rev. xiii. We have stated above that Rome was the 6th head of this political beast, who or what power, does the little horn represent? Here is where the household of faith is divided. We are told that Rome is this little horn! Paul's man of sin! and anti-christ! Though all the combined wisdom of ages believed this, I prefer to believe God and his divine messengers. As this is not the subject under discussion I will say no more at present, but will call your attention briefly to some statements of our Savior in Matt. xxiv. 15. Here our attention is called to the prophecy of Daniel, what would take place, referring to a great time of trouble. Verse 22; "Except those days be shortened, there should no flesh be saved, but for the elects (Israel) sake, those days shall be shortened. If those days were symbolic days, and mean years, what a long tribulation God has put upon them. If Christ meant years, why did he say days? Would he trifle with his loving disciples? Nay, verily, he meant just what he said. Before I prove this, I want to notice the full time allotted to the "time of tribulation" upon Apostate Israel, and apostate Christendom; the full time is 2520 days, just seven years; 2400 days is 120 days short of the full time; reduced to months, would be 1 months, this is the time shortened from the great tribulation upon Israel, and ends before the 6th seal opens. This event also marks the tribulation on Laodicean drunkenness, ending with the 6th trumpet. Making just 2400 days, or 6 years and 8 months, instead of 2520 days, or 7 years. I wish to call your attention to Christ's words in Matt. xxiv. 34. "Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass away till all these things be fulfilled." Is this a symbolic generation? If so what does it mean? Who can measure it? If literal, how can it be reconciled? If not this generation, what generation? If Christ did not mean just what he said, what did he mean? Tradition has put many constructions on these words. Have we any right to alter his words? No. Then we must believe just what he said. This generation, the one in which Christ lived. But, says the objector, how can this be, as it has been 2000 years since Christ lived? Forty-three generations mark the time from the call of Abraham to the fulfilment of the promise made to him, "All the land will I give to thee, and thy seed after thee, for an everlasting possession." Forty-two of these generations ended with the anointing of Christ. We find the average of forty-two generations is forty-six years and six months; Christ lived three years in the forty-third (and last) generation. Jerusalem was destroyed by the Romans thirty-three years later, A. D. 70. Jewish history cut off in the third year of this generation. Political history or Babylon cut off thirty-three years later—leaving a remnant of this generation of ten years and six months, to be finished at the time of the end, which time begins when the little horn makes a covenant or agreement with Israel for one week. We find the time of the end to measure just ten years and two months to the last event mentioned in Matt. xxiv. 1 to 34, "So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the door."

We now have four months left of the political heavens and earth to pass away under the awful judgments of the seven last plagues, cleansing the sanctuary, and by bruising Satan's head.

I trust that I have answered the brother's question to his edification, and of many others who may be interested in these wonderful revelations. May God help us into the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Submitted in love.

Bible School Department.

Bible School Association.

Questions from Our Mail Bag.

Will you tell me how to carry on a Home department? If your Bible school wishes to consider starting a Home department in connection with Bible school full instructions may be had by sending to David C. Cook publishing Co., Elgin Ill.

Briefly stated the general plan is: For those who are unable to attend the Bible school to enroll in a Home department, and study the lesson at home, and contribute to the support of the school. A superintendent takes charge of this department, plans the work, appoints and directs visitors, receives their reports, and reports to the school and also to members of the department. The visitors are usually women. Their duties are to assign classes to visit or correspond with each member of these classes and keep them in touch with the school, distributing and collecting all literature, etc. To report to the superintendent any cases of sickness, destitution, trouble or religious interest.

Home department work may be simply an enrollment of members with an outline study furnished by the school or society and dues may be required or not as seems best. The plan suggested for the Bible school association is simply an enrollment of members without pledges, suggestions for work and study being furnished through the Bible department in our paper.

What is normal work? One clause of the resolutions adopted by the Bible school association reads: "To devise for their use the best methods and plans to prepare Bible school teachers." This is normal work. A special effort to prepare teachers for their work. There are usually three lines of study to be pursued in a normal class: (1) Facts about the Bible; (2) The Sunday school; (3) The art of teaching. If one wishes to become a teacher of the Bible, he should be posted as to its origin, inspiration, authority, contents, design, peculiarities, its geography, history and its fundamental teachings.

If he is to work in the Bible schools he must understand its organization and its principles of action, its aims and its characteristics. If he is to become a teacher, he must understand the underlying principles of his work. If his work is to be successful, the teacher must know not only the subjects to be taught, but also the nature of the pupil.

The first question the teacher has to face is: What is a child? It appears logical that we must have some practical working knowledge of child nature. The Bible school is a strong factor in making character, but stronger than this should be the home. Rightly linked together, what may they not accomplish.

In all our teaching we must begin in the home and work out these problems. Normal work for the Home department will include suggestions for practical Christian work. For example: The home department work is urged to take thirty minutes every Sunday afternoon with the family as a class, upon next Sunday's lesson. The committee that met last winter in Chicago, drafted a resolution and sent to The Restitution for publication. Perhaps many have forgotten, not having given the matter serious thought. The object of this resolution was not obscure. Please look this up and read again. The practice of having a fixed purpose and a definite plan to work by is sure to accomplish much that is difficult where many work together.

The matter of providing for the needs of our young people has been given serious thought, but no one has pushed the matter. I will refer you to an article in The Restitution of Jan. 11, 1905, headed "A Child's Paper." No name is given, I judge it was written by our worthy Editor. I will quote from this.

"It has been suggested that a book be written and published for our children. Some seeing in this but a temporary relief from the dearth of literature among us, object to it on the ground that a book suitable for small children would not fit the larger ones, and one for older children would be unsuitable for little ones. So that two or more books would be necessary. It is therefore urged that a paper having different departments will more nearly give what is needed."

"To sustain a book publishing department and special Sunday school lesson paper and a child's paper all three, is an undertaking that will require a large outlay, and divided up thus, it would be doubtful whether it could be made self-supporting. If the three can be combined in one and be made, at present at least, to cover all the ground, then as it grew, a separation of special features might be made as the circumstances would warrant."

Very much of this article I would like to quote but will refer to one more paragraph. "Some persons, even among our people, get impatient and do not wait for things to develop as they should. Could we agree to withhold criticism till fair trial is made? or could we give our ideas in a brotherly way as suggestions, rather than criticism? It is easy to kill such an enterprise in its early life by adverse criticism, and just as easy to keep it growing by a little word of encouragement and quiet suggestion as to improvement, coupled with a few dollars sent for its support."

This matter like similar propositions was dropped. Some may think that the matter of Bible schools as first suggested in an article of Dec. 5, 1905, has been dropped, but we hope that is not the case. There were matters that needed attention before this could be successfully carried out.

First was organization. This was accomplished in the meeting held at Torch Lake, Aug. 1906. The next proposition was to supply some of the pressing needs of our Bible schools by providing a Sunday school lesson. This Bro. Neill has in charge. Do not now begin to get impatient and wonder why Bro. Neill does not do this work just as you would. We are glad to receive suggestions, but it takes time to perfect a system of teaching and we hope all will appreciate the fact.

Home department work supplies the links between the Home and the Bible school, and Normal work provides for the training of teachers for Bible schools. Though it would be better to separate the two, at present it is necessary to combine them, at least until some one is willing to take charge of one or the other.

What do you mean by a "missionary spirit?" It is the spirit Paul had when he said: "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians, both to the wise and to the unwise, so as much as in me is I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also."

The fact that the youth of our communities, and older ones too, are unwise and do not want religious instruction is no reason for not providing the means for such instruction. Send out the young people of your Bible school on missionary errands and this will cultivate a missionary spirit.

A school should devise some plan to spend at least a portion of its income in benevolences. This should be one that both interests and instructs the children, and accomplishes a definite result. These gifts may be given for physical relief, such as Christmas dinners and food and clothing. A child may be found who would like to come to Bible school, but has not proper clothing. Organize the girls into a "Helping Hands" society, and let them sew and prepare the clothing themselves, for a destitute child. The boys may be organized into a "messenger service" society and let them distribute literature, Restitutions may be collected and sent out by the boys. Keep a literature table in your school. The children want to be active. Train them to do these things and they will grow into active Christian workers. Paul says, "I have showed you all things, how that so laboring, ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Acts xx. 35.

Harriet E. Boice.

Conference Report.

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God convened at Millbrook, Mich., as appointed Oct. 25th. House called to order by the President, Bro. L. Decker and the following devotional committee appointed. Bros. J. Hill, H. Hammond and R. Lake. Bro. L. E. Conner was present and delivered the first sermon, subject "charity." On Friday on account of school the Grangers very kindly opened and warmed their hall just across the road and invited the meeting there. The morning service was conducted by Sister Woodward, subject "Christian labor," text Heb. iv. 11. Sister Woodward asked that one session of Conference be devoted to Bible school work. She hung up the charts used by Sister Boice at Torch Lake convention for the benefit of those interested in that work. It was decided that Saturday P. M. should be given for talks on the Bible schools. Met again at the Hall at one o'clock and listened to a discourse from Bro. Woodward, text Col. i. 28, Christian steadfastness. Congregation much better in the afternoon. Because of Bro. Woodward's very poor health neither of them have been able to attend to the appointments here for more than three months, and all were delighted to see and hear them again.

In the evening we all went back to the school house to listen to Bro. Conner, who spoke from Mark xvi. 15-16. The committee had arranged for a good programme for Saturday, but a terrible rain storm kept all at their homes until evening, when a good congregation gathered to listen again to Bro. Conner as he spoke from 2 Pet. iii. 18, subject, "Christian growth." Sunday morning we met for social meeting, conducted by Sister Woodward. Greetings to Conference were sent by Bro. O. R. L. Crozier and Sister Chaffee. Sister Crozier sent a letter for the young people and Sister Boice to the Sisters' E. A. Society. All were greatly appreciated. At noon we adjourned again to the Grange Hall, where a refreshing lunch, spread on long tables was enjoyed by about fifty persons.

At one o'clock Sister Woodward spoke earnestly of the Home department Bible school work, calling for five minute talks. Bros. Conner, McCroden, Woodward and others responded. Bro. Conner gave an interesting talk on the very successful work accomplished along these lines in Illinois, and strongly advised all to take hold of this branch of Bible study. Time being limited Sister Woodward appointed meeting for Monday evening to continue this subject. Several names were added as pupils in this Home department study. At 6:30 we again went to the school house and listened to a discourse from Bro. Woodward, subject, Resurrection. Following this service was the Lord's Supper, conducted by Bro. Woodward.

At 7 o'clock we met for social meeting and listened to forty-six earnest testimonies. Then the last service of the Conference Bro. Conner again addressed us on the subject, Building of Christian Character. The rain of Saturday had chilled into snow by Monday morning, and five inches of the beautiful snow covered the ground, but it had not chilled the warmth of our Christian love, for we feel more than ever the desire to be faithful to the end of life.

Ella Decker, Sec. pro. tem.

P. S. We were very sorry that our Secretary, Sister Emma Jackman, could not be present, but she wrote a very encouraging letter to the President which we read, making us rejoice that she and Sister Hoyt were both as well as usual.

Obituary.

Brother Edward A. Smith was born in Ashtabula, Ohio, July 1, 1845; lived there with his parents until his 10th year, when he removed to Byron and lived there until his death, which occurred Sept. 25th, 1906. In September of '67 he was married to Mary Lavayea of Cleveland, Ohio, of this union were born two sons, Chas. L. and Malcolm F., who with their bereaved mother survive him and were present to care for and comfort his long weeks of severe suffering.

In early life he was converted and baptized into the Disciple Church, the church home of his parents. Later he became a firm believer in the promises of God and united with the Church of God in the Abrahamic faith in which he died with the full assurance of a glorious resurrection at the coming of our Master.

Bro. Smith was a man respected by all who knew him, as a Christian he was beloved by all his brothers and sisters in Christ. The writer visited Bro. Smith often during his sickness and by his family's request preached his funeral sermon, using as a text 1 Cor. xv. 22; Rom. v. 18.

Bro. Smith's last days were of extreme suffering, but of sweet peace with God with full hope of a resurrection to an immortal life.

Besides his immediate family he leaves one brother, Albert, of Ohio, and two sisters, Lucinda Winchester of Grand Rapids, Mich. and Laura Winchester of Byron, Mich., besides a host of friends to mourn their loss.

Eld. C. W. Winchester.

In looking at the stars through a great telescope, it is necessary to put out every light until you are left in total darkness. Every light sets the air in motion, and disturbs the focus, and blurs the vision of the stars. How often our vision of God is blurred and dimmed by the flames of self-consciousness and sordidness that float around us! How many times we have put out the light of self-seeking, earthly ambition and false pride of position in order to look upward, and in the clear, still air to know whither God's lights are leading us, and what God will have us to do!—Rev. W. H. Frances.

Poetry.

The Crowning of the Year.

"Thou crownest the year with thy goodness." Psalm lxv 11.

The rose is dead, but still, the bee has sipped
The honey that was held within its heart—
The hearty sweetness of the dew that dripped
From petals that the sun had coaxed apart.
The grass grows dark in valley and on hill
And through it lazy zephyrs seem to creep
As though it dreamed of summer noontides still
And bowed before the breezes in its sleep.

The orchard trees are bare; their laden limbs
Trace wildlike patterns on the graying sky,
The northern winds creep through like murmured hymns
Or sober chants that softly rise and die—
And yet the ruddy apples that they bore
Have caught and held the sunshine; and they bring
The morns and nights of June to us once more
And all the bloomful breath of early spring.

The fields are still: where once the wheat and corn
Laughed in the gladness of the summer noon
And waved saluting banners to the morn
And whispered softly in a twilight croon—
There, now, the barren stubble meets the eye
And there the end of harvest days is told;
The granaries are heaped both wide and high
As crucibles that catch the liner gold.

So sun and rain have wrought their yearly task,
Have given of their bitter and their sweet;
The earth that yields us freely when we ask
Has left her summer fruitage at our feet.
And now the trees and fields have earned their rest
And we may read the message that is sent;
When we have done our all, and done our best,
We, too, may fold our arms and be content

Resurrection of the Wicked.

"Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." John v. 28, 29.

Left to unaided reason, how little does man know of futurity! A thick and impervious gloom hovers over the entrance to the tomb; he can discover nothing beyond it; all is darkness and uncertainty. The torch of nature is totally inadequate to dispel the mist which envelopes futurity. And until the light of revelation gilds with its celestial rays the darkness of the tomb, the mind of man will strive in vain to penetrate the veil suspended over a future state, and to contemplate the subject with any degree of satisfaction and pleasure.

The Greek word (anastasis) which is in our text translated "resurrection," signifies standing up, or raising up, or rising up; a standing on the feet as opposed to sitting or falling.

Thus in Luke's gospel we find it rendered "rising up"—"And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the falling and rising up of many in Israel." The rising up is, in this case, opposed to the falling.

In the Septuagint or Greek Version of the Old Testament, the same word also occurs:

Lam. iii. 63, "Behold their sitting down and their rising up." Here it is opposed to sitting down. Hence, the Scriptural signification of resurrection is a standing or rising up, and it is opposed to either sitting or falling down.

The idea was probably derived from the way in which corpses were deposited in the Jewish tombs; so that to the ancient mind a return to life would imply a literal rising up of the dead person so as to be able to stand erect.

The doctrine of the resurrection has been much abused in all ages. Some men have believed in one resurrection only, that of all mankind at the same time. Others have believed in the resurrection of the righteous, but have denied the resurrection of the wicked. Another class of persons have refused to believe in any resurrection at all. But those who cling to the Word of God belong to a fourth class, and believe that "all that are in the tombs shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done ill, unto the resurrection of judgment."

Nature abundantly illustrates this doctrine; but revelation above teaches it. God has filled all nature with emblems of the resurrection. An unsightly seed without any appearance of life is thrown into the ground; and, then, the particles separating, there spring up the plant.

The apostle Paul selects such a seed to illustrate his teaching. Referring to it he says, "That which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die; and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain; but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body. 1 Cor. xv. 36, 37.

Spring-life is, therefore, a resuscitation from apparently extinct life; for not until signs of life are gone does germination begin.

What a beautiful type is this of the resurrection of the dead!

The insect tribe also illustrate this grand truth. The caterpillar dies as a chrysalis, and recovers new life under the beauteous transformation of the butterfly.

Then, again, night is the death of day; and morning is its resurrection from the shades of darkness. Winter, also, is the death of the year; and spring is its resurrection. Winter is the sleep of nature. The trees are leafless; the song of the birds is unheard and a death-like coldness reigns everywhere. But when spring returns the sleep of nature is at an end, for the invigorating powers of the sun call forth all things into life and activity. The feathered songsters once more warble in every grove, and the flowers revive and array themselves in a loveliness far surpassing the royal glory of Solomon.

'Tis night, and the landscape is lovely no more,
Yet ye beautiful woodlands I mourn not for you,
For morn is approaching your charms to restore,
Perfumed with fresh fragrance and glittering with dew.

Nor yet for the ravage of winter I mourn,
Kind nature the embryo blossoms will save,
The spring shall yet visit the mouldering urn,
The day shall yet dawn on the night of the grave.

Revelation distinctly and frequently teaches us the future resurrection of mankind. Both the Sadducees and the heathen denied that doctrine. "The Sadducees say that there is no no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit." Acts xxiii. 8.

Also the heathen Athenians, to whom the Apostle Paul had been preaching, "when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked; but others said, We will hear thee concerning this yet again." Acts xvii. 32. These Athenians, in common with the rest of the heathen, believed in the immortality of the soul; but they had not even the faintest idea as to the resurrection of the body. Menander, a heathen Greek, expresses the belief of the ancient heathen world thus:

Die when thou will,
Mortal, except another life on earth;
And for that life make choice of all creation
What thou will be—dog, sheep, goat, man or horse,
For live again thou must; it is thy fate.

Such was the wild speculation of the ancient heathen Greek, who was a type of many modern Christians; for they practically reject the doctrine of the resurrection, and they substitute for it the unscriptural dogma of soul-immortality.

No truth is more clearly and forcibly presented in the Sacred Scriptures than the resurrection of the dead. It is a fundamental doctrine of the Christian faith; it is one of unspeakable importance. Our text, with the preceding verses, furnishes us with an exceedingly emphatic statement of this subject. Our Savior declares:

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and hath given him authority to execute judgment, also, because he is the Son of man. Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth."

The patriarch Job anticipated rising from the tomb; for, with full persuasion, he exclaims, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Job xix. 25, 26.

The prophet Isaiah bears similar testimony. "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise." Isa. xxvi. 19.

The apostle Paul, when at Athens, "preached Jesus and the resurrection," Acts xvii. 18; and in his noble and able defence before Felix, he said, "So worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." Acts xxiv. 15.

Our text speaks of two resurrections—1st, "The resurrection of life," and 2nd, "The resurrection of judgment."

THE RESURRECTION OF LIFE.

"They that have done good, unto the resurrection of life."

The resurrection of life is that resurrection at which eternal life or immortality shall be conferred upon the followers of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, for we shall receive "in the world to come, life everlasting." Luke xviii. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 4.

Immortality will, then, be bestowed at the coming of Christ; at the "resurrection of life." The believer's body is buried in the earth; but it is as a seed sown in the ground resting there until the Divine quickening power shall re-animate it, and transplant it from its present soil to bloom with immortality in the Paradise of God, in the Garden of the King of kings.

"The resurrection of life."—There are several Greek words translated "life," but they have different meanings. For instance, "psyches" is rendered life. It refers to the animal nature or life, and it could, in most cases, be aptly translated self or person.

Another word rendered life is "bios," which signifies life in its manifestations, and includes the means of supporting life, livelihood, substance, goods or property.

But the life in our text is neither of those which we have mentioned. It is "zoee," and means neither self, nor life in its manifestations, but life in its principle, or life intrinsic.

It is especially (not entirely) used for immortal life. Christ is our "zoee," and he will grant that "life in its principle" to us at the resurrection of life That "life intrinsic" will then be given, for "this mortal must put on immortality." 1 Cor. xv. 53.

The prophet Daniel refers to the resurrection of life, when he says "Many of them that sleep in the dust shall awake, some to everlasting life." Dan xii. 2.

This resurrection is also called the first resurrection. "They lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection." Rev. xx. 4, 5.

It is true that "all that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man, and shall come forth;" but immortality and infinite blessings belong to those "that are Christ's at his coming," 1 Cor. xv. 23, for of such it is said, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection." Rev. xx. 6.

It is elsewhere spoken of as the dead ones. The original words are "ek nekron," and they imply that some persons will then be resurrected, but that others will be allowed on that occasion to remain in their graves. These words are applied only to Christ's resurrection and to that of his saints. "The resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." 1 Peter i. 3. "The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage, but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage." Luke xx. 34.

Therefore, the resurrection to which we have referred bears several distinct names:—1. The resurrection of life. 2. The resurrection of the just. 3. The resurrection from among the dead ones. 4. The first resurrection.

It will, as we have already observed, take place at the coming of the Lord; and, consequently, it will occur before the millennium or reign of Christ with his saints on the earth. Let us, then, still wait for, hope for and love his appearing, for that glorious event will assuredly bring unspeakable blessings in its train, including both glory and immortality, even life forevermore.

THE RESURRECTION OF JUDGMENT.

"They that have done ill, unto the resurrection of judgment."

The apostle Paul calls it the resurrection of the unjust, Acts xxiv. 15, and in the epistle to the Hebrews it is also styled "the resurrection of the dead ones," "nekron."

We saw just now that the resurrection "from among the dead ones" refers to the first resurrection, as it implies that some will still remain in the tombs; but the resurrection "of the dead ones" is evidently the second, the final one, "the resurrection of judgment;" for the idea is plainly suggested that none will be left behind. Hence, the apostle connects this "resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment." Heb. vi. 2.

Unbelievers die and are buried, but they will arise from the grave at the resurrection of judgment, in order to receive a ruinous sentence of condemnation. Some persons deny that the wicked will be resurrected; but our text, amongst other passages, is exceedingly clear as to this doctrine. "All," not the righteous only, but "all that are in the graves shall hear, his voice, and shall come forth." It is simply playing with words for any one to assert that this emphatic utterance does not include the wicked. "All that are in the graves," must mean every person (man, woman and child) whether good or evil, who has lived on this earth. Otherwise the words have no signification whatever; for simpler words are not to be found in our language. "All that are in the graves" will, therefore, arise and come forth at the bidding of the Son of Man; and, in order to prevent any possibility of our misinterpreting his meaning, Christ adds the following equally plain words:

"They that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."

Although these statements are so clear and conclusive, yet there are some who dispute them; or who endeavor to attach another, instead of the common meaning to the words.

Speaking of the interpretation of the Word of God, Dr. Argus, of London, England, says.

"The Words of Scripture must be taken in their common meaning, unless such meaning is proved to be inconsistent with other words in the sentence, or with the arguments or context, or with other parts of Scripture."

Now, in the case before us, the common signification of the words is evidently the correct one; for it agrees with the other words of the passage, and with the context and with other parts of Scripture. Whereas that exposition which requires an alteration in the verse produces a contradiction; for if by "they that have done evil," we mean Christians who have done ill, and consequently, if we deny that the wicked will rise, then we contradict the first clause of the passage, which distinctly states, "All that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." We must assume nothing, but prove everything, and "hold fast that which is good." Instead, therefore, of bringing a creed to the Word of God; let us rather throw aside every prejudice, and seek for light. The disputed words are "they that have done evil," "the unjust," and "the resurrection of judgment."

What then is meant in Scripture by these phrases? We reply as follows:

1. "They that have done evil." The Greek words are "hoi ta phaula praxantes," and signify literally, "they who practiced vile things."

In the "Handbook to the Grammer of the Greek Testament," by S. G. Green, we find that the word rendered "ill," means "vile, wicked, base."

According to Junius, Parkhurst and other lexicographers, our English word "foul" was derived from the Greek one which we are now considering. In confirmation of what we have already said, we will quote a passage from the revised version in which the same original word occurs, and is translated "vile."

James iii. 15, 16: "This wisdom is not a wisdom that cometh down from above, but is earthly, sensual and devilish. For where jealousy and faction are, there is confusion and every vile deed." Here vile deeds are classed with things earthly, sensual and devilish. And in our text we read that "they who practiced vile, wicked or base things" shall come forth unto the resurrection of judgment.

Hence, we have placed it beyond doubt that the last clause of our text teaches that the wicked will eventually arise, and will stand before their Judge.

2. "The unjust." Who are they? Are they unjust Christians, or are they wicked? In order to answer this question, we must appeal to the New Testament use of the term "unjust."

The roots of the word "adikos" means "to be unrighteous, or unjust, or iniquitous or vicious." It is, therefore, applied to those persons who love injustice, or unrighteousness, or iniquity, or vice.

Our Savior said, "He maketh his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust." Matt. v. 45.

The apostle Paul writes, "Dare any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?" 1 Cor. vi. 1. This verse proves to any man of common sense that "the unjust" are not "the saints;" or in other words, that the unjust and the wicked are identical.

Christ suffered "the just for the unjust," 1 Peter iii. 18; that is the righteous One took the place of the wicked, and suffered in his stead.

The apostle Peter uses exceedingly strong language when he refers to the unjust: "To reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished.... .....these as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things they understand not: and shall utterly perish in their own corruption." 2 Peter ii. 9, 12. So that according to the Sacred Scriptures, the unjust or wicked shall be taken and destroyed, they shall utterly perish in their own corruption.

It is, therefore, to these unjust or wicked ones that our text refers when it says that "they that have done ill, (practiced vile things,) shall come forth unto the resurrection of judgment," or as St. Peter has called it, "the day of judgment." 2 Peter ii. 9.

The word "adikos" (unjust) is translated "unrighteous" in the following passage: 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10, "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God?"

This query is then answered, and the reply contains a full description of the unjust or unrighteous. "Neither fornicators, nor idolators, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God."

In this verse we have a long catalogue of those who are unjust or unrighteous, and therefore wicked. And hence, the objection that the "resurrection of the unjust" does not mean the "resurrection of the wicked" is simply an erroneous fancy, and is in direct opposition to the teaching of God's holy Word.

3. "The resurrection of judgment." The Greek word "krisis" signifies distinction, separation, discrimination, judgment, decision, sentence. A crisis is the decisive moment, the point of time when an affair is arrived at its height, and must soon undergo a material change.

At the first resurrection, "the resurrection of life," eternal life will be conferred upon believers; but at the final resurrection, "the resurrection of judgment," the decision, the sentence, the doom of the unjust or wicked will be pronounced. After the resurrection of life, there will be an interval of one thousand years; for "the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." Rev. xx. 5.

Concerning the resurrection of judgment, we read, "And the dead were judged out of the things which were written in the books, according to their works.....And whosoever was was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." Rev. xx. 13, 15. This will be the awful end of all those who obey not the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

If we reject the resurrection of the wicked, we must also, in order to be consistent, reject the resurrection of the just; for they stand or fall together, both being supported by an equal amount of Scriptural evidence. Both are plainly revealed, and therefore, we must receive both, otherwise we shall oppose ourselves to the clear light of truth.

Scripture implies that the wicked will be raised from the grave; for they will possess temporary consciousness. "The angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth." Matt. xiii. 40, 50. There must, therefore, be a resurrection of the wicked, else they could not be capable of "wailing and gnashing of teeth."

Future punishment will be conscious for a period; but "the end" of the ungodly will be the "second death," Rev. xx. 14, 15; everlasting unconscious punishment by deprivation, an eternal deprivation of life.

"All that do wickedly shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Mal. iv. 1.

The wicked are dying around us; but they must have a second life, otherwise they will be unable to undergo the second death. Therefore, seeing that there will be a second death, they must be raised to life again. Hence, the resurrection of the wicked will certainly take place prior to their final destruction.

Resurrection does not necessarily involve immortality or endless life. The important idea of the perpetuation of that restored being is an appendage to the primary signification, "a rising or raising up." Accordingly, Jesus, when speaking of the resurrection of the just, adds, "Neither can they die any more," Luke xx. 36; and St. Paul declares that "Christ, being raised from the dead, dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him." Rom. vi. 9.

These supplementary statements prove, therefore, that resurrection does not necessarily include the idea of immortality.

All that are in the tombs shall hear Christ's voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, the first resurrection, when endless life will be given to the faithful followers; and they that have done vile things, the wicked, unto the resurrection of judgment, when the sentence of everlasting destruction will be pronounced.

Destruction is the doom of the ungodly, but immortality or endless life may be obtained through Christ Jesus, for "the wages of sin is death; but the free gift of God is eternal life in Jesus Christ our Lord."

O morning Star! O risen Lord!
Destroyer of the tomb!
Star of the living and the dead,
Lift up at length thy long-veil'd head,
O'er land and sea thy glories shed;
Light of the morning, come!
Speak, mighty Life! and wake the dead,
Like statue from the stone,
Like music from long-broken strings,
Like gushings from deserted springs,
Like dew upon the flowers soft wings,
Rouse each beloved one!

Dear Restitution:

Yesterday morning while looking over my paper—THE RESTITUTION—I saw an article under the heading of "Who is my Brother;" written by Dr. T. J. Daniel, of Magazine, Ark. I want to say to the brethren wherever dispersed, that before I got through reading that article, I never in my life experienced such a willingness to heed a call as I was that one, I got right up and went and procured a post office order and forwarded it to Sister Daniel—and I want to say farther, I never have experienced such a blessing from giving as I have from this. I don't recollect of ever having more sensibly a spirit of prayer as I have experienced since reading, "Who is My Brother." Brethren, there is something in this call. The Bridegroom surely is near us, I tell you when an old Brother is shaken up as this dear and blessed letter has shaken me, there is something in it, yes, I say, it is the Holy Spirit calling us to duty—I thank God that I ever subscribed for THE RESTITUTION—or probably I would have never seen so plainly—who is my brother. Oh, how that impresses me this morning. Brethren, look up your copy of Oct. 10th and read it again, and for Jesus sake, join Bro. Daniel in giving the last call of mercy—join him by sending a contribution to his wife and children. I have never seen one of your faces, but I thank God for a people who holds out such grand truths.

Yours in hope.

The Seed.

The farmer planted a seed—
A little, dry, black seed;
And off he went to other work—
For the farmer was never known to shirk,
And cared for what he had need.

The night came with its dew—
The cool and silent dew;
The dawn came, and the day;
And the farmer worked away
At labors not a few.

Home from his work one day—
One glowing summer day—
His children showed him a perfect flower;
It had burst its bloom in that very hour;
How, I cannot say.

But I know if the smallest seed
In the soil of love be cast,
Both day and night will do their part:
And the sower who works with a trusting heart
Will find the flower at last.

Sermons for the Little Ones. No. 9.

JESUS—THE CHILD OF PROMISE A SON OF DAVID AND OF ABRAHAM.

If one of the little boys, to whom I am talking, were of the house and lineage of Brunswick, or Hanover;—a first-born son of that House, we should know at once what great things were in store for him, if he should live to become a man. We should know, that by and by when the reigning sovereign was dead, that he would be crowned king.

Well, we have found that Jesus is of the house and lineage of David, that he was really born of the royal race of kings, and is the first-born son of the last of David's family.

Then the throne of David rightly belongs to him, no other heir to dispute the right with him.

What was once David's kingdom, must sometime be his kingdom, because God promised David, to give his son, his throne to hold forever.

You see now what the wise men meant when they asked, "Where is he that is born king of the Jews?"—and that Herod's feare were not groundless, when he sought to put him to death; do you not?

You have learned from the 3rd chapter of Galatians that whatever was promised to Abraham, was promised to Christ—that when God deeded the land of Canaan to Abraham for an everlasting inheritance, and from Genesis that he is sometime to possess the gates of his enemies—or to take all their cities and their power away from them, and rule, where they now rule.

You have learned to, that he is David's son, and so must have David's throne and kingdom forever, and now that you are sure of this much, you are sure, too, that God will sometime seat him upon his holy hill of Zion in Jerusalem, according to his promise.

You are sure that his throne will be just where David's throne used to be, and that he will not only reign over David's kingdom that was once overturned, because he is David's son, but that he will also reign over all the earth, because he is God's Son.

You have now taken some of the first steps toward coming to Jesus. You have learned what was promised to him and to us, in the Old Testament Scriptures. You have identified him as the seed, or child of promise. You are sure that he is the one to whom God promised the land of Canaan and all the earth, from what God has said about him in the New.

But you will want to know what good it will do you, now that you have heard, and understand, all about the promises made to Abraham to Isaac and to Jacob, to David, and to Christ? Do you not know that the same promises are made to you, if you will be good, and will mind God?

You may have a place in the kingdom of Jesus. But God says, You must first believe there is going to be such a kingdom, and then do just as he tells you, before you can get into it.

That is the reason we have been trying to teach you what we have about the kingdom.

God meant there should be such a kingdom in this world, when he first made Adam and Eve, he put everything under Adam's rule, but Adam did not mind God and the great kingdom of earth, was taken out of his hands.

He meant this, when he told the woman "that her seed, or son should one day bruise the serpent's head"—meant that Jesus would sometime overcome and destroy all evil, and reign in its place.

Jesus said, that his Father had covenanted to give him a kingdom,—to give the twelve disciples a kingdom, and that it was also his good pleasure to give the little flock a kingdom.

Jesus preached the Gospel, or good news of a kingdom when he was here on earth, and said that all who believed that gospel, and were baptized into that faith should be saved. But you can't believe that of which you know nothing. You must know what God has said about this kingdom before you can believe there will be such a kingdom.—The Friend of the Children.

Among the many mysteries of human existence Time is not the least mysterious. We talk of its silent lapse as of a river; and we set up arbitrary landmarks to mark its passage by. Imagination bodies forth the notion in a personal old man with his appropriate accompaniments of skull and hour-glass and scythe. But what, after all, is time?—Does man exist in time? Or is time in man? Philosophers puzzle themselves for a reply, and the plain Christian is sent back to the ancient ordinance of the lights of heaven "for signs and for seasons, and for days, and for years."

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Huggins, Box G. Oregon, Ill.

All Brethren in Iowa wishing Evangelistic Meetings during the fall or winter will please make their requests to the Conference Board at once.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through The Restitution and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through The Restitution. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through The Restitution, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for The Restitution, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

T. J. Daniel.

Announcement.

The first quarterly Conference of the Church of God in the State of Indiana, will be held at Plymouth, Ind., commencing Nov. 15th and holding over Sunday Nov. 18th. We hope all the churches of the State may be represented. Isolated members of the one Body are invited and will find a home with us. We extend the invitation to all who believe the gospel of the kingdom, and the return of the Master, who live in other States, to come. Come all in the Spirit of Christ forebearing one another in love, and help us to make this the best meeting we have ever attended. Ample provision will be made to care for all. Those coming please notify J. H. Willey at Plymouth.

Bible School Announcement.

At the close of the November Conference to be held in Plymouth, Indiana, beginning Nov. 15, and holding over Sunday, a Bible school will be held at the same place beginning on Monday morning and continuing one week. There will be three sessions each day, morning, afternoon and evening, except Monday evening. It is earnestly desired that there be a large attendance. There will be no tuition fee, but each attendant will be expected to pay his board. Come to the Conference prepared to stay for the Bible school. We feel sure that all will be much benefitted by this week of earnest Bible study.

Brother S. J. Lindsay of Oregon, Illinois and Brother J. L. Wince of Pierceton, Indiana will be the teachers. Any information concerning the school can be obtained by addressing J. L. Wince at Pierceton, Indiana, or Mrs. J. H. Willey at Plymouth, Indiana. Those who expect to be in attendance will aid the committee of arrangements by sending their names to the last named person, as soon as possible.

J. L. Wince, Chairman,
Lydia Rahlsback, Secretary.

Russellism Exposed.

There has been an increased demand for a sharp expose of the cunningly devised fables of Russellism, showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of the Christian faith.

I am now engaged in writing such an expose; showing especially where it undermines the fundamental principles of Christianity. It will be printed as a booklet of about thirty pages at ten cents each.

This will follow right along after the printing of Pine Woods Bible Class, the type-setting of which is now nearly completed. The booklet will be ready for distribution about the same time that Pine Woods Bible Class is ready to send out.

Those who wish Russellism Exposed may send in orders right away so that I may know how many to print.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. Wilson.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

Subscribe for The Restitution.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Syriac New Testament.

A new edition of Murdock's Translation of the Syriac New Testament has just been issued by a Boston publishing house, and we have arranged to supply our readers with the work. The regular price is $2.50, and every Bible student should own this book. It is bound in half leather, and lies open in the hand when being used. The printing is clear and plain, and the paper excellent. We have so arranged with the publishers that we can supply this book for a limited time only at a reduced price, which will enable all who wish this valuable aid to the study of God's Word to possess it. We can offer it now at $1.95 post paid. All who wish to avail themselves of this low rate should do so at once.

Joy of the Lord.

The joy of the Lord co-exists with burden and sorrow because of iniquity and out of concern for the sinner. The joy that lifts you up and makes you elated and "feel your oats," is the devil's counterfeit. "Beware of spiritual blessings that do not cause you to be burdened for the unsaved." The joy of the Lord is given to make us strong to do his will, bold to witness for him and seek the lost. He blesses us that we may be a blessing, not that we may enjoy religious luxuries, not as an evidence that we are special favorites.—Missionary World.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

EDEN.

"So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way to keep the way of the tree of life."—Gen. iii. 24

We have eaten the fruit, as dared we should:
And we know of evil and know of good.
We have walked our ways with our heads erect
And we take the paths that the fates select;
But many the times that we call to mind
The wondrous Eden we left behind.

We remember now how we left the gate,
And the road seemed pleasant and broad and straight;
But the hills were many and hedges were few,
And O, how surely our feet to progress!
And we vain would turn to our Eden, there—
Would turn go back to the joys again.

We must rove our land in our sweat, and toil
While tugging on with unwilling feet;
And the sun is rough and the way is steep,
And our dreams so fair we fear to sleep—
For we dream and dream how the flowers loosed
In the Eden scorned and the Eden lost.

Sometimes—sometimes, on a lone, high hill,
When they give us rest, and air is still,
We gaze far back down the dwindling road—
Far back where the sweated roses glowed—
Then o'er it runs a sword we can see, in truth,
And it bars the Eden we knew—our youth!

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. Our subject for tonight is: ARE YOU ASHAMED OF JESUS, AND HIS WORD?

How natural it is to the impulses of the flesh to desire to be in the popular run, to desire the plaudits and praise of men of flesh, whose aspirations are fleshly and worldly. Oftentimes such people will even sacrifice that which is right, pure and godlike, that they may attain to that which they have set their hearts upon. They would scorn to be classed with, and follow the lead of such a person as the Prophet of Nazareth, who in a very humble and unostentious manner, went forth on his godlike mission. In our time, he would be classed as a crank, and expelled from our popular churches, and magnificent cathedrals, by those who call themselves followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. Should people attempt to live strictly according to the teaching and practices of the blessed Christ, they would certainly be frowned down upon, and called a little off. Often times the flesh would wince severely under wounded pride, until they would be tempted to be ashamed of Jesus and his words.

Q. Jesus evidently foresaw this. Now what did he say about it?

Arlon. He said: "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me, and of my Words, in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels." Mark viii. 38.

Q. We learn from this, that there is a day coming, when the flesh will cease to be in the ascendancy, when justice, right and truth, will be on the popular wing. At this time the Prophet of Nazareth will be the mightiest and the most glorious and powerful monarch the world has ever seen. In our day, kings, great men, the rich men, the chief captains, and the mighty men of earth, are much sought after, praised, and almost worshiped. But there is a day coming, when they will "hide themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains, (in place of their rich palaces) and say to the mountains and rocks, fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb." Who will at this time be on the popular wave?

A. The despised King of the Jews, and his loyal followers, to whom he will grant the mighty honor to share with him the glory and the power of his kingdom.

Q. When will that be?

A. "When he cometh in the glory of his Father, with his holy angels."

Q. Who will be ashamed of them?

A. Those of his professed followers, who are now ashamed to confess him, and his words, (teachings, especially the message of life—the gospel of the kingdom.

Q. Will these faint-hearted professors seek recognition from him at that time?

A. Yes. See Matt. vii, 21-23: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me ye that work iniquity."

Q. To what extent will this word "whosoever" cover?

A. The word "whosoever" is of universal application, it includes all, male and female, of every nation, high or low, rich or poor, of every class or condition, who are ashamed of him.

Q. Have you ever stopped, and noted the strange intermingling of vivid contrasts in the life of Jesus?

A. Yes. In the first place we find an angel was dispatched from the court of heaven to announce to Mary that she should be the mother of him who shall be called the "Son of the Highest," the future occupant of the throne of David, whose kingdom should have "no end." According to the thinking of the flesh, we would naturally expect that the birth of the Great Eternal, the coming king of Israel, and monarch of all the earth, would be attended with such a magnificent display of grandeur, pomp, glory and royal magnificence, such as was never before beheld by mortal eyes. But no, he was not, he was born as the humblest of the humble, in a stable among cattle. "He was despised and rejected of men," yet honored by heaven "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." His earthly parental Son of him who has riches greater than mortal man can compute, yet he was poor, "the birds have nests, and the foxes have holes, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." All through his earthly life, it was a strange scene of an intermingling of opposite contrasts.

Those who listened to his discourses said, "Never man spake as this man," "what manner of man is this, why even the sea and the waves obey him."

Without being either seen, or heard, his power is today mighty in the earth. He is supreme over all. He stirs and agitates the minds of men all the way from the king upon his throne, to the humble peasant in his cottage. Some tremble at his name, and fall down and piteously plead for his mercy; to others the sound of that holy name is sweet music to their ears, they shout and sing aloud for joy, while others scoff and jeer.

Q. Why should this man, who passed from earth nearly two thousand years ago, and has never been seen since, still so mightily agitate the minds, and consciences of men?

A. Yes. Such is the case, and that without a word from him other than those found in the Sacred Volume the pens of men are still busy translating his wonderful words of life into foreign tongues, writing eulogies of his wonderful life, essays, and commentaries upon his words, learned expositions, works of art, sermons and marvelous poems and songs of praise.

Q. Why should this be? Was it ever so with any other illustrious personage? What means this power emanating from such humble beginnings, two thousand years ago, still agitating all nations, and all classes of people high or low, rich and poor, with such tremendous effect, at which some are filled with joyous emotion, others with fear, while others curse?

A. It is a marvelous power and influence that can not be laid aside. As century after century passes away, and generation after generation succeeds each other, Jesus and his Word are ever a live topic, that is uppermost in the minds of the people. His Word while an "old, old story," is still new and fresh, and looses none of its interests by advancing age.

Q. Is it not a two-edged sword which cuts mightily?

A. Men who don't understand it, both reverence and fear it. Sceptics will not only curse it, but fear it, and praise its lofty moral precepts. Many professed Christians when in the presence of scoffers are ashamed to confess belief in it, and laugh at coarse jokes they make on the Bible. Many professed Christians will only confess belief in such portions as will harmonize with their notions and creeds; and yet it is a book, which still agitates the minds of all classes of people, in one way or another.

Teacher. Oh, why is it that mortal men, poor worms of the dust, should be ashamed of such a marvelous and wonderful person, whose Word cuts like a double-edged sword? Are not men vain and proud over the recognition of some fellow-mortal who has attained power and distinction for a brief period? Are you ashamed of him who has been appointed "heir of all things," "who being the brightness of (God's) glory, and the express image of his person, and upholdings by the Word of his power?" Are you ashamed of him whom God has seen fit to crown with "glory and honor," and set him over all the works of his hand? Has God sent forth his unchangeable decree that Jesus shall "put down all rule, and all authority, and power," "and that he hath put all things under his feet." And that "the last enemy"—"death," shall fall before this mighty conquering hero?

A. He has.

Q. Are you aware that he is coming again, clothed with the power of the great Omnipotent, all radiant with "the glory of his Father, with the holy angels?"

A. Yes, we are.

Q. Do you want him to recognize you then?

A. If you do, then you must not be ashamed to [illegible] now, under all circumstances and conditions. If you are ashamed to so confess him, remember that Jesus says to you, "of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels."

Q. Are you ashamed of his marvelous words recorded in the sermon on the mount, which even command the admiration of skeptics? Are you ashamed of "the Word of the kingdom," which Jesus himself says is the "seed" which yields fruit, from thirty to one hundred fold, when sown in "good ground?" Are you ashamed of the "Word of God," which Peter says is the "incorruptible seed," "and this is the Word, which by the gospel is preached unto you." Can you join with Paul in saying: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation?"

A. If so you are not ashamed of Jesus' Word, for that is "the Word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace (the gospel of peace) by Jesus Christ." "That Word I say ye know, which was published throughout Judea, and began from Galilee after the baptism which John preached." If you don't know it, see Mark i. 14, and receive unquestioned proof: "Now, after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." In the next verse Jesus says: "Repent ye, and believe the gospel—"the gospel of the kingdom." Jesus further says in the close of the same book: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel (of the kingdom) to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned."

Q. Can this saving gospel be any other than the "gospel of the kingdom?"

Q. Why not?

A. Because Jesus himself preached "one gospel" and it is certain he never authorized his disciples to preach two gospels. "He sent them to preach the kingdom of God," and "they departed and went through the towns preaching the gospel." And Paul says: "If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that you have received, (which was the one gospel of the kingdom,) let him be accursed." Now, to be ashamed of this one gospel which Jesus preached, is to be ashamed of his Word, "the Word of the kingdom," the fruitful seed, which is the message of life, when coupled with obedience, and the observance of the sublime moral precepts attached thereto, which constitutes it a valid, living faith.

Q. Do men revile you for confessing your love for Jesus and his words?

A. If they do then remember Jesus' Word: "Blessed are you when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you, falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceedingly glad; for great is your reward in heaven." "Behold, I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be."

If you love Jesus and his words don't be ashamed to confess that you do, and if at any time you should be placed in circumstances that you may feel it a cross to do so, let me beseech you to remember the following words of the blessed Master: "Whosoever therefore (that takes in every body) shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven."

Q. Does not Jesus know?

A. Yes, he does, and he cannot be deceived.

A. Would it not make you feel very happy to have a realizing sense that he has confessed your name before the blessed Father who is in heaven?

A. Well, then confess him "before men," that means a public acknowledgement.

Teacher. Personally I confess that Jesus is my supreme joy. He loved me, and I love him. I love his sublime moral teachings, and I know the [illegible] I love the "Word of the kingdom," the fruitful seed, the message of life, for which hope's sake the apostle Paul was bound in chains, which also was the burden of the Master's gospel preaching. I love to think of his coming to reign, which will finally culminate in a glorious age of peace, in which "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." This is my heartfelt testimony, what is yours?

"Onward, then, to battle move!
More than conquer ours we shall prove;
Though opposed by many a foe,
Christian soldiers! onward go!"

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Bible Lessons with Remarks.

THE BIBLE.

III. The Bible was written to give faith, impart understanding, and secure obedience; to beget, convert, sanctify and save sinners, when they obey it; to comfort, teach, guide, and to produce love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance in the children of God. It is the Witness of the Holy Spirit. We hear the "fruits of the Spirit" when we obey it. Rom. x. 17; Jno. xx. 31; Psa. cxix. 98-100; Deut. xi. 18; 2 Cor. viii. 1; 1 Pet. 23; Psa. xix. 7; Jno. xvii. 17; Jas. i. 21; Jno. xv. 26; xvi. 13; Gal. v. 22-25; Rom. vi. 14, 10.

REMARKS.

If our reader has been taught that man is unable to understand, believe and obey the Bible unless God gives his Holy Spirit personally to him to enable him to do so, he will be nonplussed by this proposition. He will think that we are ascribing a work to the Bible which is the prerogative of the Holy Spirit. The Spirit does the work, is the dictum of popular theology, though confessedly obstruse and nebulous in its operations. The claim is this, viz., that the Holy Spirit operates personally, abstractedly and miraculously upon the sinner's heart. The Spirit, then, is nonpareil; not the Word. The Word of God is a mere adjunct to the Spirit. If this be so the Word of the Lord is dethroned; it is relegated to a "dead letter." Now I feel it my duty to say, without prevarication, that a theory that aims such a deadly blow at the intrinsic efficacy of God's Holy Book is not only preposterous but dangerous. God's "name" is "holy and reverend" (Psa. cxi. 9), yet he has so magnified his Word, and made it so honorable, (Isa. xlii. 21) that it stands pre-eminent to his great name. Psa. cxxxviii. 2. Do not, I beseech you, beloved reader, belittle the Word which God has magnified. It is no sidgling matter. When men make the Spirit everything and the Word secondary—nothing—let us tell them plainly (without being mordacious) that they stand committed to a monstrocity—a towering delusion of the apostasy.

Instead of the Holy Spirit operating independently and personally upon sinners, we have the categorical affirmation that it did not—that they cannot receive it. Jno. xiv. 17. Then it is not true that it enters into worldly persons to give them understanding, faith and spiritual power. In the ministry of the apostles we find that their converts believed the gospel before they received the gift of the Holy Spirit (Acts xix. 2; Eph. i. 13); that sinners repented, were baptized and forgiven (Acts ii. 38; viii. 6, 12, 16) and were made sons of God (Gal. iv. 6) and yet never had a "Pentecostal Outpouring" of the Spirit! It is plain, then, that since all this was accomplished in the absence of the Holy Spirit, the Spirit did not enter into these people and work in them, faith, repentance, understanding and obedience. The Word preached did this. We affirm, then, in this lesson that God gives

I. Faith. We are distinctly taught that faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. Rom. x. 17. The apostles preached the Word; people heard it [illegible] believed it. Preaching is not the only way people "hear"—or understand—a matter. Writing is another way of communicating knowledge. The Word was first preached; afterwards it was "written." Jno. xx 31. Now whether we have faith by hearing the Word preached, or reading it as it is written, one thing is evident, namely, Scriptural faith is produced by knowledge of the truths to be believed. Faith is not the result of testimony only. The supernatural truths of Christianity require supernal proof of their truth. Christ entreated men to believe his testimony because he did the works of his Father. Jno. x. 37, 38. The testimony of the apostles was confirmed by God. Mark xvi. 20. Agreeably with the preceding the sagacious among men believed Christ and his apostles when they heard their testimony and saw the miracles they performed. Jno. iii. 2; ii. 11; iv. 50-53; xi. 45; Acts iv. 4; viii. 6-12. Faith in any statement is produced by testimony and proof. So God's way of giving faith is by preaching and writing the statements to be believed and proving them to be true.

II. Understanding. The Scriptural way of getting understanding is equally rational. "Thou through thy commandments has made me wiser than mine enemies; for they are ever with me. I have more understanding than all my teachers; for thy testimonies are my meditation. I understand more than the ancients because I keep thy precepts." Psa. cxix. 98-100. The Psalmist got his understanding and wisdom from God's Word, from his "commandments" and "testimonies." God gives wisdom truly, but "thou through thy commandments hast made me wiser than mine enemies." "Through thy precepts I get understanding." v. 104. In exactly the same way Daniel was made wise. He set his heart to get understanding (Dan. x. 12) and he obtained it through information supplied by books. ix. 2. Since understanding is attained by using means to get it, the New Testament exhorts believers to attain it. 1 Cor. xiv. 20; Eph. v. 17. Christ imparted understanding to people by giving them instruction (Matt. xv. 10) and complained when his disciples did not understand what he said. Matt. xv. 16, 17. Now it is true that God gives understanding as well as faith; but it is by supplying the means to enlighten the mind, namely, his Word. And men get what he supplies by giving their minds to attain it, like Daniel; by meditating upon it, like David. We attain to the understanding of any question by giving our minds to it, by studying it, by meditating upon it; and if it refers to the performance of duty, by having a disposition to practice it. The testimony of God—his Word—"enlightens the eyes" and makes "wise"—imparts understanding and wisdom. Psa. xix. 7, 8.

III. Obedience. Throughout the divine procedure God's way of securing this is by setting before men what he requires, and then showing him the consequence of obedience and disobedience. "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Gen. ii. 7. God instructed Abraham that the man who did not obey the terms of the covenant, should be cut off from his people. Gen. xvii. 14. "Behold I set before you this day a blessing and a curse; a blessing, if ye obey the commandments of the Lord your God, which I command you this day; and a curse, if ye obey not the commandments of the Lord your God." Deut. xi. 26 28; xxx. 1. In order to secure obedience God "set before" the people the "blessings" of obedience and the "curses" of disobedience; and asked them to "choose" which they would have. And in order to give believers power to render obedience he gave the greatest encouragements possible in the shape of motives. 2 Peter i. 4; 1 John iii. 3; 2 Cor. viii. 1. God gives power to obey his will; but it is not of a secret and mysterious nature. It consists of spiritual armor which we can understand, appreciate and em[illegible]—"Take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day and having done all to stand." Eph. vi. 13. And what does the armor consist of? Truth, righteousness, the gospel, faith, the hope of salvation for an helmet, the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, and prayer. This is God's complete armor—"the power of his might;" and there is nothing mysterious about it. We know that truth will vanquish error. That a righteous character will be able to withstand attacks against it. That the gospel of peace carried with us will be a blessed attendant to our feet. And that faith in God's Word gives strength to overcome our foes. And we can easily see how the promises of eternal life and glory will protect us from the blows aimed at us; how they will hold us fast to our profession, as an anchor; and stimulate us to prepare by holiness, for the Lord's approach. And we can understand how God's Word, the Spirit's Sword, which the believer (not the spirit) is to "take" and to wield—how that will enable us to vanquish the errors, subtleties, and seduction of lying spirits, though professedly ministers of righteousness. And we also can comprehend how holding communion with God in prayer, will preserve us from the corrupting influences of this sinful world, and bring us to be holy as he is holy. Now since God supplies testimony and evidence to produce faith, instruction to give understanding, and motive power to secure obedience, we can see the reasonableness of his requiring those to whom these are supplied to believe, understand, and obey his will. And also the reasonableness of his condemning those, who, having these, do not honor him by rendering obedience to his requirements. But if man cannot believe, understand, and obey, without the personal influence of the Holy Spirit, and yet is required to do so without, and condemned for not doing them, we can see no reasonableness or justice in such a procedure. Such a theory mars the divine goodness and wisdom in many distressing ways. Let us rejoice, beloved reader, and thank God, that so unrighteous a method of action is not only diametrically opposed to the Divine Nature, but to his revealed will and constant operations.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christian King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

OUR paper is late this week, partly owing to attending meetings during Conference week, and partly to an accident that has caused us extra work.

THE Secretary of the Conference has given a report of our meeting last week. We were expecting Bros. Lindsay and Neill to be with us, but all were most happy that Bro. O. J. Allard, of Iowa, who had been assisting Bro. Lindsay in some meetings in Illinois, decided to come and attend our Conference. All will vote to have Bro. Allard come again. The Bible school is attracting much interest in all who can attend, and will be reported later. The weather has hindered the work somewhat however.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 25.
THE WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY.
ISAIAH v. 11-23.

"Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink; that continue until night, till wine inflame them. And the harp and the viol, the tabret and pipe, and wine, are in their feasts; but they regard not the work of the Lord, neither consider the operation of his hands. Therefore my people are gone into captivity, because they have no knowledge: and their honorable men are famished, and their multitude dried up with thirst. Therefore hell hath enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure, and their glory, and their multitude, and their pomp, and he that rejoiceth, shall descend into it. And the mean man shall be brought down, and the mighty man shall be humbled, and the eyes of the lofty shall be humbled; But the Lord of hosts shall be exalted in judgment, and God that is holy shall be sanctified in righteousness. Then shall the lambs feed after their manner, and the waste places of the fat ones shall strangers eat. Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart rope. That say, Let him make speed and hasten his work, that we may see it: and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come, that we may know it! Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter! Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight! Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink: which justify the wicked for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him!"

The title of our lesson today is not quite clear, the expression is not found in the Bible. The lesson is really on intemperance, commonly called drunkenness. Woe unto them. Woe, grief, sorrow, misery, shame, disgrace and calamity to them that drink often during the day, and are drunk at night. But do they have woe? No, not now. According to verse 12 the drunkard has a real good time, has music. The harp, viol, tabret, pipe, wine and feasting. There is nothing to prevent him from full enjoyment—his kind of enjoyment. He does not trouble himself about what the Lord has done, nor what he is doing. The thought of God does not disturb him. That is the common effect of the constant drinking of strong drink. He does not care who suffers so long as he gets what he wants. Sometimes he pretends to care, but it does not last long.

Intemperance is not always and only in drinking much strong drink. Men, women, boys and girls are often intemperate in different ways, such as talking without thinking, also loud, noisy talk is intemperate—not controlled by good sense. Loud, coarse laughing, eating too much, playing too much, reading too much, getting mad—very angry, even expressing and showing too much grief, usually called "prostrated with grief," intemperate passion or frenzy—commonly called love, leads to much trouble, sometimes crime. Intemperate thinking is also dangerous. There is also intemperate fun. Let us take the Lord's advice by Paul. "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." 1 Cor. ix. 25.

The Lord's people—the Israelites, would not take that advice. Isaiah advised them, Isa. i. 16-20. Also Jer. iii. 14. They would not be advised. Ezek. iii. 7. God through Isaiah called them "A sinful nation"—a nation full of sin—intemperate in all their ways. Isa. i. 5. They had so far neglected the knowledge of God that they asked Jeremiah, "What is our sin?" Jer. xvi. 6. When they were told what their sin was they gave no heed, and they were taken captive. 2 Kings xvii. 6 and 2 Kings xxv. 21. And so we might say it this way. The Israelites, as a nation, were destroyed because they disobeyed God, and took to drinking, feasting and foolishness. History informs us that drunkenness and general intemperance has been the destruction of the most powerful nations—the Assyrians, Babylonians, Medes, Persians and Romans. Therefore, for this reason, because of drunkenness and intemperance—"hell hath enlarged herself." I call the special attention of all to this word hell, it is so much misused. It is from the Hebrew word Sheol—the grave, the place of the dead. Grave is the proper word, and by using the word grave instead of hell we can ever so much better understand how the grave has been enlarged, and has received the glory and the pomp of those who rejoiced in drunkenness and intemperance. As we have already noticed the drinkers and drunken have a real good time, they have now but few woes, but they bring woe, grief, sorrow, misery, shame and disgrace on fathers, mothers, wives, children even on friends and neighbors. But praise to the living and true God, and our Lord Jesus Christ, the time is coming, and seems near, when the woes of the drunkard will be on himself. For "the Lord of hosts shall be exalted in judgment." In Jude we read, "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints, to execute judgment upon all. Then the woes of the drunkard begin. They shall not drink wine with a song, etc. Isa. xxiv. 9. God has no sympathy for a drunkard. Under the law he was stoned to death. Deut. xxi. 21. Under the gospel he is shut out of the kingdom of God. 1 Cor. vi. 10. And under the reign of Christ, the King, and his saints, the drunkard and all such will be burned up. Mal. iv. 1. Thus the Lord of hosts shall be exalted, and when Christ has finished his work, there will not be the world's temperance Sunday, but there will be a whole temperate world. "For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." 1 Cor. xv. 25. The drunkard and all such will be destroyed for ever. 2 Thes. i. 9. And the kingdom of God established. Dan. vii. 27. Then whoso walketh uprightly shall be saved. Prov. xxviii. 18. Then indeed shall the Lord Jesus Christ be exalted. "He shall be King over all the earth; in that day shall there be one Lord, and his name one. Zech. xiv. 9. Then "every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess, that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Phil. ii. 9-11. And righteousness and temperance will prevail.

A word to men and boys. There are men, very bad men, that do not drink, but I beg of you to remember that where you may find one or two bad men that do not drink, you will find seven or eight do drink. Again remember that the finest, the best, the wisest men in the world do not drink strong drink. Concerning women, there are some that drink, but I will venture this statement, that if we had no drunken men, drunken women would be very, very scarce.

BIBLE SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

NOTES ON THE UNIFORM LESSON SYSTEM.

The International Uniform Lesson System as we see it now, is the growth of the ideas of several men, and is the result of several plans. The beginning of this was in 1825 when a "Limited Lesson Scheme" was inaugurated; it was so called to distinguish it from the then prevailing custom of teaching on the whole Bible and memorizing verses.

The plan was to limit the lesson to a given passage or section of Scripture. This plan was endorsed by the American Sunday School Union, and later was largely extended under the title of "Selected Lessons."

The First National Convention of Sunday School was held in New York City, 1832, and those following attracted attention to the Sunday School movement.

In 1865, J. H. Vincent, better known as Bishop Vincent, began the "Sunday School Teachers Quarterly." After this became the national Sunday School Teachers monthly. This quarterly was edited under the direction and in the employ of the Chicago Sunday School Union. Other publications adopted the "Teachers" course of lessons, each giving their own explanations.

The first lesson notes published regularly by any weekly paper in this country was given by Mr. J. F. Jacobs in "The Standard" (Baptist) of Chicago. These notes were for the first Sunday in January, 1868. He conceived the idea of extending the benefits of uniform lessons to the whole world, and began to agitate the subject before conventions. At Mr. Jacob's suggestion 20 religious publishing houses sent representatives to consider the subject of uniform lessons. At this meeting of publishers a committee of five were appointed to select a series of lessons for 1872. Three of this committee in the absence of two others decided that a series of lessons could not be agreed upon, but by Mr. Jacob's persistance, the decision was reversed, and notice was published that a series of lessons would be prepared.

The first series of Uniform Lessons was prepared by B. F. Jacobs, Dr. J. H. Vincent and Edward Eggleston, and published for 1872. April 16 to 19, 1872 was held the First National Convention, and the first International Lesson Committee was appointed. The International Lesson is now used around the world.

THE HOME DEPARTMENT.

Dr. W. A. Duncan of Syracuse, N. Y., has the credit of being the originator of the Bible school idea called "The Home Department." The first leaflets were issued in 1881, the same year that "Father Clark" started his Christian Endeavor movement.

Dr. Duncan began his work with the New York State Sunday School Association. The motto of this association was "The Bible in the hands of the living teacher to every man, woman, and child in the State." The field workers were sent out organizing departments, the practical effort to realize the motto of their association. The work soon spread to other states, and later to foreign countries. The International Home Department Association was organized with Dr. Duncan, President.

All the Home classes formed in connection with any Bible school are recognized branch of the school under a superintendent.

1. A class may be one or more members studying alone. 2. A family class. 3. A correspondence class. 4. A neighborhood class. 5. A combination of several or all of these.

A Home Study Class. A suggestive method for neighborhood or family classes is the following: Have a meeting of the class for organization. Elect a president, secretary and treasurer. The president will preside while they make quarterly reports, and during any action of the class. The Treasurer will have charge of the "Home Bank" and send collections to the Treasurer of Bible School Association, Sister M. A. Woodward. The Secretary will keep class records of attendance and study.

Divide the members of the class into four departments, even if there are only four members of the class, as follows for home study: 1, Historians, John and Henry. These will be assigned to study and look up the history of next Sunday's lesson, give the leading events. 2, Biographers, Mary and Anna. These will find out all they can about the persons connected with the lesson. 3, Explorers, Fred and James. These will look up all about the geography of the lesson. The places named, their location, with events connected with them, prepare maps and locate the places. 4, Theologians, George and Walter. These will study the lesson to be able to tell of other similar teachings in the Bible, the principal truths taught by the lesson, its practical suggestions.

Let the teacher be sure to call upon each one present to report his studies when he has found out.

A family class may not be able to follow out just this plan, but be sure to interest every member of the family in the study.

The following is suggested as to what each grade should take for a standard record. a For the primary—the title, golden text and memory verse. b For junior and Intermediate, in addition to the above, the time, place, persons and simple facts of the text. c For senior, in addition an oral or written outline of the Spiritual doctrines of the lesson.

All the members of the class must not be expected to make the same preparation, but a simple and easy standard for each, according to age and ability.

Special work for members of the Home Department for the months of November and December, will be securing members for the Home Department and organizing classes. Our aim is to promote a systematic Bible study in every family of the church. To circulate and secure subscriptions for THE RESTITUTION, which will be our weekly lesson paper.

We hope to have a special work for the children of this department. Can you realize what it means to have the children connected with a work such as this? "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." All children should be enrolled whose parents are connected with the Home Department. There will be three special records for children, a cradle roll for children under five years. A birthday record, dear little ones, at your birthday time, we will send a message of love to you. The days will fly fast and the months roll by, and soon with happy and smiling face, we'll look for you in our Bible School. "Helping Hands." "Record for girls."

"Two hands to work for him all our days,
Take them dear Jesus and may they be,
Ever obedient and true to Thee"

"Home Messenger." Record for boys.

"Boys, we won't tell what you will do,
In the future, it may be true,
Your record will show what you can do;
So just for the present we'll only suggest,
For boys are quick, they need only a hint,
Boys—do your best, and do it now."

DO IT NOW.

Under every clock in a factory in England is this motto, "Do it now." This will be the motto of the Home Department, "Do it now." The Home Department work is an over present opportunity. It will add thousands of good deeds to daily happenings. It will set Christians to thinking, Christians to talking, Christians to walking, Christians to working and praying.

Golden text, "Behold now is the accepted time. Behold now is the day of salvation." "To be always intending to live a new life but never finding the time to set about it," says Tillotson "is as if a man should put off eating and drinking until he is starved to death." The habit of putting off disagreeable duties is responsible for much needless unhappiness, for these bugbears weigh on the mind and prevent the satisfied content that comes from duty well performed. "Do it now" will straighten out half the tangles of our complicated domestic life. How often have we found that when we were "just going to" it proved to be too late. In fact we are apt at just going to do things, but never get them started. Have we always intended to have family worship? "Do it now." Do it now.

1 Become a member of the Home Department.

2 Organize the Home Study Class.

3 Begin a systematic Bible Study.

4 Invite your friend or neighbor to study with you.

5 Secure a subscriber to THE RESTITUTION.

6 Pray, "Thy kingdom come."

"Thy kingdom come, thy will be done,"
Thy children pray;
But heedless, thoughtless, caring not,
These go their way.
They do not help the kingdom come,
They love their ease,
And will not give, but still prefer,
Themselves to please.

"Thy will be done." Lord make us read
In all we say;
Keep us from speaking idle words,
That come what may
We'll strive to do thy will.
Where'er we go.
We'll do the thing that's nearest,
And leave the rest.
Sometime, some where.
God knoweth best,
He helps us then, to do the rest.

Conference Report.

The November conference of the Churches of God in Indiana convened November 15, in the church at Plymouth.

The evening lesson was John x. 14 to end, read by Brother J. H. Willey, President of the Conference; who also led in the opening prayer.

The foundation of the opening remarks made by the president were "I must work the works of Him that sent me." The welcome address was given by Brother Tuttle and a welcome it was, followed by a hearty response by Brother George Neill of Cleveland Ohio.

At 8:15 Brother S. J. Lindsay, of Oregon, Illinois, spoke on "Trials."

Friday 10:30. The lesson read was Colossians ii. The sermon by Brother D. T. Halstead. Text, Colossians ii. 10. Subject, "Completeness in Him," or "Abide in me." Following which a few well chosen remarks were made by Brother J. F. Wagoner.

At 2:00 p. m. The lesson read was Titus ii. And Brother George Neill spoke on "The Coming of the Lord."

At 3:15, The business meeting convened with president J. H. Willey in the chair. Roll call of churches showed that Antioch, Bracken, Plymouth, Rensselaer, South Bend, and Hillsburg were represented. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Moved and carried "that the chair appoint a committee of three to investigate and report on the change in time and number of the conferences and report at next June meeting."

Historical committee reported nothing done but would go to work at the close of the Bible School.

Literature committee reported that property held by A. H. Zilmer had been turned over to the present committee. Treasurer reported amount on hand—$275.19, Received from Sec. $26.68, total—$301.87. Paid out on orders—$26.00, Balance on hand—$281 87.

Adjourned till 3:00 p. m. Saturday.

In the evening at 7:00 the social meeting was led by Brother Wince. Thought for the meeting Rom. viii. 1, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit."

At 7:30 The lesson read was a part of the 72nd Psalm. The foundation of the discourse by Brother Wagoner was Ecclesiastes xii., 13, 14. The subject was "The Judgment."

Saturday morning 10:30 The lesson read was Heb. viii. Sermon, Brother O. J. Allard of Iowa. Leading thoughts, "What art man that thou art mindful of him," and "There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body."

2:00 p. m. Prayer was offered by Brother Wince and Brother Wagoner spoke on "The Church of the living God."

At 3:30 Business meeting convened. Committee on Conferences appointed as follows, A. R. Underwood, T. O. Taber, J. A. Burnham.

Evangelist committee reported that they had decided to engage Brother George Neill for one year. The church at South Bend to have him half of the time and the Evangelist committee to give him work the rest of the time. He to begin work as soon as possible. Approved by the Conference. Greetings sent by Brother Neill from the Cleveland church were extended to the Conference and especially to the young people.

Very appropriate remarks concerning Brother Neill's coming into the State and taking up the work here were made by brothers Lindsay, Wagoner, Wince, Underwood, Allard, Halstead, Thompson, Railsback, Neill and Willey. In fact some of these were very touching and helpful. Adjourned.

At 7:00 The social meeting was led by Brother R. C. Railsback. Lesson Galatians v. 16 to end.

7:30, Lesson Rom. vii., read by Brother Allard. Sermon Brother Lindsey. Subject, "The Law."

Sunday 10:00 a. m. Social meeting led by Brother Willey. Lesson 2 Peter i. While our dear blind Sister Cregg sang of the Grace of Jesus many were the eyes that were filled with tears. May the time soon come when the eyes of the blind shall be opened to close no more.

10:45, Lesson part of Romans xii., Prayer by Brother Wagoner. Sermon by Brother O. J. Allard. Hebrews xvii. 14, "Follow peace with all men, and holiness without which no man shall see the Lord."

2:30, Short sermon by Brother Neill. 1, Thess. v. 23. "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

3:20, Communion conducted by Brother Wince. At 7:00 the social meeting was led by Brother Wince.

7:30, The lesson was read and prayer offered by Brother Allard. Sermon by Brother Lindsay. Leading thought, "O worship the Lord in beauty."

At this Conference we had the pleasure of having present Brother George Neill, of Ohio, Brother S. J. Lindsay, of Illinois, Brother O. J. Allard, of Iowa and one night Sister Woodward of Michigan. Such an array of talent it has not been our fortune to have for many years if ever before. The meeting was a grand success and we rejoice that two were immersed into the All saving name. May we continue to be workers together in his vineyard and share in the glories of the soon coming King.

Asleep in Jesus.

Sister Agnes Westgarth fell asleep in Jesus, May 27, 1906.

Sister Agnes Westgarth was one of the early pioneer believers of the gospel of the kingdom in this western country. She was a member of the old pioneer church located at Geneva Illinois, the center point from which the gospel of the kingdom was proclaimed in the western states both by voice and press in those early days.

Sister Westgarth's maiden name was Agnes Baxter. She was born at Westmoreland England, December 23, 1822. Her girlhood days was spent at the Lake Region, near the home of Wordsworth. At the age of 22, she married George Westgarth, who after their removal to this country, in 1849, became a member of the old Geneva church.

She was married in the old historic Kendal church.

She was a very efficient nurse of the sick. Her friends and neighbors have good reason to feel grateful for kindly and willing service she has given them.

She was the mother of nine children, seven of whom are now living: Mrs. B. E. Merrick, Elburn, Ill., Isaac Westgarth, Minneapolis, Minn.; Mrs. Mary Walker, Wasco; Mrs. John Hamilton, Benton Harbor, Michigan; Mrs. E. W. Plane, Wheaton, Ill.; Sarah Westgarth, Benton Harbor, Mich.; Mrs. E. C. Cooley, Lily Lake, Illinois.

She was buried at Geneva, Ill., where her husband and many other believers are waiting for the coming of the King.

"Life is a span, a fleeting hour;
How soon the vapor dies!
Man is a tender transient flower,
That in the morning rises."

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. B. WILSON.

Dear Restitution:

Brothers S. J. Lindsay and O. J. Allard have just closed a two weeks meeting at Ripley, Ill., Nov. 11th. Had a fine attendance, with best of interest. Also had a Bible class each afternoon at 2:30, conducted by Bro. Lindsay, which was very well attended and interesting. Three bright youths, Miss Pearl Woods, Miss Vena Densmore and Miss Violet Howell put on the all saving name of Jesus Christ by baptism. The baptismal service conducted by Bro. Lindsay. It was very gratifying to our ministers who assisted them to a knowledge of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Yes, all the household of faith and especially their parents rejoiced to have these young people decide for God and Christ and truth. They have been regular attendants of our Berean Society and Sunday school. I trust that many more will soon follow the example set by our young sisters. Sister Anna Drew of Dixon, Ill., was also with us during part of our meetings, and was a great help to us in our Berean work. She is filling her place faithfully. Bro. Lindsay left an appointment near Camden in the neighborhood of Sister Decounter's, Dec. 1, to hold a series of meetings, if the Lord is willing. My prayer is that much good may be done and God's richest blessings rest upon all our faithful workers.

JENNIE COX.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

T. J. DANIEL.

Fret and worry are two little black bump-backed artists who ambush in our shadows to creep out at night to draw lines in our faces, turning the dimples of the fairest into wrinkles and caricaturing even that finest of all, the beauty of age.

Poetry.

"Today and Forever."

"One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth forever." Eccl. i. 4.

Man builds a castle on a hill,
He makes a fit ideal or town
And ere the world may know he's skill
Another comes to tear it down.
Yet day by day and year by year
Through all the changing centuries,
While men appear and reappear,
God paints his sunsets on the seas.

Not all the years the world has known
Have changed the pattern of the stars—
Though men in conflict for a throne
Have mapped the world with battle scars,
Though men in their own blinded way
Have grown accustomed to wrong and right,
God still gives them the gold of day
And silent glory of the night.

He turns Time's inward page on page,
And writes His history the same,
While men blot out each bygone age
In foolishness or feeling tame
In countless symbols men arise
And try their weakness on their bows,
Yet calmly through the endless skies
The earth holds its appointed course.

Man's dreams no deeds to him appear,
And tremble, deeds and words are gone,
But day by day and year by year
We have the sunset and the dawn.
We never come to understand
The tremendous message brought by those—
God hangs his sunrise on the land
And paints his sunsets on the seas.

Hold Fast the Form of Sound Words.

In these times of the apostasy we hear very little said about the form of sound words. Neither are we commanded to hold them fast. The Diaglott translation makes the text some plainer. "Retain an outline of wholesome words which thou didst hear from me, in that faith and love which are in Christ Jesus." We are admonished to retain an outline of wholesome or sound words which the apostle had spoken to them in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus. Paul said to the Romans, I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto every one who believeth (the gospel). To the Corinthians he said, In Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel. 1 Cor. iv. 15. The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation when believed. Also it is the power that begets if believed. In 1 Cor. xv. we read, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep (hold fast) in memory what I have preached unto you unless ye have believed in vain. What the apostle preached to the church at Corinth he preached elsewhere. The form of sound words, is the gospel and they become the begetting power when believed. 1 Pet. i. 23 we read, Being born (begotten) again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by the Word of God which liveth, and abideth forever. In this chapter (verse 3) the apostle says Jesus Christ hath begotten us again unto a lively (living) hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. The words born and begotten in these two texts are rendered from the same Greek root and evidently mean the same. Therefore we find that the power of begettal is the incorruptible seed which the apostle here calls the Word of God and declares that it liveth and abideth forever.

Again Paul says, Eph. i. 13, In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the Word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also after that ye believed ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise. Here it is the Word of truth, the gospel of your salvation. We shall then conclude that the "form of sound words" is the gospel of Christ of which the apostle was not ashamed but desired to preach to them in Rome. How careful the apostle was to teach that the gospel only became effectual to those who would believe the "Word of truth, the gospel of your salvation." In Gal. i. we read, Though we, or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." The above Scripture is so plain that it needs no comments and yet we hear men preaching numerous gospels. We have certainly proven to our readers that the "form of sound words" is the gospel and it must be believed in order to salvation. Also there is a curse pronounced upon all, an angel or a man who preaches any other gospel.

Now we shall attempt to show what this gospel preached by the apostle is. We will show that it is an "outline of wholesome words." In Heb. ii. 3 we read, How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them who heard him (Christ). It will not be a difficult matter to find out what was spoken by Christ at the first. Matt. iv. 23. And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom. Luke viii. 1. He went throughout every city and village preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. Luke iv. 18. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor. In these two texts glad tidings of the kingdom of God and the gospel are the same. We find also that the glad tidings were concerning the kingdom of God. In Mark i. 14 we have, Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, the time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe the gospel. Believe the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. In the last text we have the "form of sound words" in full, "The gospel of the kingdom of God." This same gospel says Paul, Was confirmed unto them who heard him. Those who heard him were the apostles who were with him during his ministry and beheld the signs and wonders and divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Spirit. Luke ix. 2. He sent them (the apostles) to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick. Verse 6, And they departed and went through the towns, preaching the gospel and healing every where. Therefore to preach the kingdom of God in this chapter is evidently to preach the gospel. These terms are interchangeable. Remember that Jesus taught the gospel of the kingdom and sent his apostles to preach the same. It is reasonable to conclude that they preached the same message. The phrase kingdom of God has a definite meaning as we shall show. Referring to Scriptural testimony we find that God had a kingdom and it was on the earth. This kingdom is known as the kingdom of Israel, over which Saul ruled. David and Solomon also ruled over the same. 1 Chron. xxviii. 5. Of all my sons (for the Lord hath given me many sons) he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel. 1 Chron. xxix. 23. Then Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord as king instead of David his father. The kingdom of Israel is here called the kingdom of the Lord or God. In Ezekiel xxi. 25-27, we read, "Thou profane wicked prince—Zedekiah—of Israel whom day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, thus saith the Lord God; remove the diadem, and take off the crown; this shall not be the same; exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it—the kingdom; and it shall be no more, until he comes whose right it is, and I will give it him. Can any one doubt from this testimony that God had a kingdom and that kingdom was the kingdom of Israel? Also that it was overturned and would remain in that condition until he—Christ—shall come when God will give it to him? Isa. ix. 6, 7, we have this testimony, unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called wonderful, counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice for henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this. Bible scholars admit that the child born" and the Son given herein spoken of is a prophecy of Christ. He is the one to whom Ezekiel alludes who will receive the throne of the overturned kingdom. The angel says to Mary, Luke i. 32, 33, Thou shall call his name Jesus, and he shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. He shall rule over the house of Jacob forever and unto his kingdom there shall be no end.

These testimonies are enough to identify Jesus as the son of David who should occupy his throne forever. This is the gospel that Jesus and his apostles preached. These are the "forms of sound words" which the apostle Paul preached. During the forty days which Jesus spent with his apostles after his resurrection he spoke of the things concerning the kingdom of God. Upon this occasion his apostles asked him, "Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" The same kingdom over which David and Solomon ruled and which God overturned in the day of that wicked prince, Zedekiah. The glad tidings about this kingdom is that God will restore it again. Just as sure as it was overturned will it be restored. The Lord of hosts will perform it. Man may doubt it, yet it is God's purpose to again build up the tabernacle of David which is fallen down and set it up. When the apostles requested that Jesus again restore the kingdom his answer was, it is not for you to know the times nor the seasons which God has put in his power. It is our business to watch and hold fast the form of sound words.

Before closing this article we wish to call attention to the things which the apostle Paul preached. Acts xiii. 34, As concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you—Christ—the sure mercies of David, margin, holy or just thing. This promise was made to David's greater Son. The one who should occupy his throne forever. Again we find Paul disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God. Acts xix. 8. Before Agrippa he said, I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers. Acts xxvi. 6. Many came to him into his lodgings; to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus both out of the law of Moses, and the prophets, from morning till evening. His testimony here is concerning the kingdom of God and Jesus, which is found in Moses and the prophets. It is further stated that Paul dwelt two whole years in Rome in his own hired house and received all who came in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him.

In conclusion shall we not say that we have proven that the "form of sound words" spoken by Paul is the gospel of the kingdom of God. The same gospel preached by Jesus and afterward confirmed by those who heard him. Taking the testimony produced from the Scripture how can any hope to be saved and not believe it? It is to be hoped that these truths may find a place in some honest mind and lead him to obey the gospel and be adopted into the family of our God.

"Take Away the Heart."

"Whoredom and wine and new wine take away the heart." Hos. iv. 11.

Intoxicating stimulants interfere with digestion to a large extent. They seem in some instances to aid digestion and improve nutrition by causing a more copious flow of blood to the stomach, which blood carries with it the elements of the digestive fluids. There is no doubt that a temporary benefit may in some instances be derived from their use, but the congestion and inflamation of the mucus membrane produced by them, the irritation and permanent injury of the liver, and other internal organs, the poisonous and ruinous effects upon the brain and nervous system, to say nothing of the social miseries, the poverty and crime they occasion leaves no doubt as to the danger of employing them "moderately," or even for medical purposes, and affords proof that at last they "bite like a serpent and sting like an adder." Prov. xxiii. 32.

"Wine is a mocker," and it is so "raging" that if any get deceived by it they are "not wise," Prov. xx. 1. Pepsin, the organic element of the gastric juice, which is soluble in water, is rendered insoluble in alcoholic spirits. So it matters not how "moderately" or "temperately" you may partake of them, the tendency is to decrease the digestive powers, and sooner or later induce disease. All drunkards have inflamed stomachs, and no person can use ardent spirits habitually, for any length of time, without inducing a congested condition of this organ. "Strong drink" lays the foundation for organic heart disease, dyspepsia, dropsy in short, all the fatal maladies of our land. Every "dram" you take you sin against the law of nature: therefore for this consideration alone it should be avoided.

But there are other considerations to contemplate; considerations more weighty, powerful and mighty. God has a claim upon our fealty: He has given us his word, and we must hearken and hear it. We must speak in harmony with his "oracles," 1 Pet. iv. 11, and according to his "Word," Isa. viii. 20. Now the Deity has declared by the prophet Hosea that "whoredom and wine and new wine take away the heart," chap. iv. 11. God's seer here associates "whoredom" and "wine," and affirms that they take away the heart."

This divine statement admits of an easy demonstration. Ephraim joined himself "to idols," Hos. iv. 17. "I have seen a horrible thing in the house of Israel," the Deity says; "there is the whoredom of Ephraim, Israel is defiled," chap. vi. 10. The prophet had said that whoredom would "take away the heart." Ephraim indulged in whoredom: did it "take away" his heart as the prophet said it would? Listen to the words of the Lord: "Ephraim is also like a silly dove without heart; they call to Egypt," Hos. vii. 11. In Ephraim then we have an historical verification of the word of the Lord. And just as surely as whoredom takes away the heart just so surely will "wine and new wine."

What then is the import of the phrase, "Take away the heart?" What does it mean? The physical heart, think ye? Suppose it does: you cannot live a physical life without a physical heart. To take away the heart in this sense would mean physical and real death. Surely this is bad enough, especially when we stop to think of the sad fact that his own hand fired the shot that sent a bullet to his own heart, and took it away!

But the language under review has a deeper meaning. This we prove by the fact that Ephraim, although "without heart," yet continued to live physically and feed on wind, Hos. xii. 1. The "heart" taken away or "destroyed," Eccl. vii. 7, by "wine," is the spiritual heart of man. Since we cannot live a physical life without a physical heart, we cannot live a spiritual life without a spiritual heart. It is this spiritual or "new heart" that "wine" takes away. Wine leaves us dead spiritually, in "error," "out of the way," Isa. xxviii. 7. As it takes away the heart, and the righteousness the righteous have, Isa. v. 23, it is an "abomination to the Lord," Prov. xvii. 15.

You are forbidden to even "look" Prov. xxxiii. 31, at wine. Beware, it will take your heart away! "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life," Prov. iv. 23. The Hebrew is more emphatic: "Keep the heart above all keeping." Since the "issues of life" are out of the heart," wine, in taking away the heart, will take away the "issues of life" as well. Take warning, young man, and "keep thy heart with all diligence."—R. G. Huggins.

Peace.

"Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." John xiv. 27.

These words were spoken by Jesus to his disciples the night before his crucifixion. They had spent many precious seasons together, but now he knew that his hour was come, that he must leave them; and this text is one of the many comforting ones left them, and us: "Peace I leave with you."

The blessings of peace, who can number them? When peace is declared after war, what a rejoicing there is! Families long-parted are again united; homes, desolated by its cruel devastation, are again established, and the peaceful avocations of life go on. But this is only temporary, pertaining to the things of this life. How different the peace that Jesus leaves!

"My peace I give unto you. Not as the world giveth give I unto you." The world can give peace only in temporal things, but Jesus gives abiding peace, which the world can neither give nor take away.

Do we have this peace at all times? Not when faith grows weak and doubts arise. Then are our hearts troubled, and fearfulness takes hold on us and we begin to try and save ourselves by good works; forgetting that God never knew the man that "in his name had cast out devils, and in his name done many wonderful works."

Jesus says: "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. Ye believe in God, believe also in me." Here is where we get this peace—in believing, trusting and leaning on Jesus. It is worse than useless to try to save ourselves. O, to rest passive in his hands!—committing all our ways to him; letting him direct our steps.

"Perfect love casteth out all fear," and a perfect faith will beget a perfect love; for one can not believe in God and recognize his wondrous love and care for the children of men, his precious promises to them, coupled with pleadings as "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest;" "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters; come, buy wine and milk without money and without price," and not have a kindling of love in his heart toward such a God. If men can be led to worship gods of wood and stone, made with their own hands, which can neither see nor hear, how much more should the intelligent, thinking man take hold by faith on the God "that created the heavens and the earth; that holdeth the winds in his hands;" such a God as this, who giveth us breath and life, yea, and has promised us eternal life—the life that "is in his Son." "He that hath the Son hath life [but we love the Word, it means much]; but he that hath not the Son shall not see life;" there is "no life in him;" consequently "he is like the troubled sea, casting up mire and dirt." There is no rest for him. The peace, sweet peace, that Jesus gives, finds no place in his heart, but the peace and rest in the believer's heart create in him a desire to see Jesus and to be made like him. Knowing this, he told his friends that if he went away he would come again.

How sweet the words, "I will come again!" Yes, and he gave them tokens by which they might know when he was nigh, even at the door. Brother, sister, do you often read them over? Do you find in them, in their successive fulfillment, a strong consolation? When hope seems almost gone, and the tarrying time seems so long, does it not give joy to your heart to read the words—"When ye see all these things come to pass, then know that it is nigh, even at the door. This generation shall not pass till these things be fulfilled?" Blessed assurance! bringing peace to the believer's heart, and a hope that maketh not ashamed. "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." "He is coming soon, I know."—Mrs. N. R. Orcutt, in Herald of Life.

"Fret Not Thyself in Anywise."

"Calm me, my God, and keep me calm,
Soft resting on thy breast;
Soothe me with holy hymn and psalm,
And bid my spirit rest."

This might well be called the Nervous Age. Men and women alike quiver and quake, scowl, shiver and shudder under the lash of abused nerves. Then the tense nerves—stretched beyond human endurance—snap, and nervous prostration takes control. This would not be if men would dwell apart from the things that jar. But they allow themselves to suffer a hundred deaths in a living day. They are struck by every lightning flash, bitten by every passing dog, and smitten by every suggested disease. A child's creaking pencil, a stress of complex duties, an uncongenial presence, a blunt or hasty word, set all the pampered nerves on edge, shorten life, and lessen their chances of being immortalized.

There are times when life seems an inextricable tangle; when the spirit of injustice and evil broods over everything; when nothing is as it should be, and when we ourselves are warped in heart by the hot fires that have burned within, as the iron frame of a building is crooked into a shapeless mass by a conflagration. The mythical pit which made our childhood shudder can furnish no pangs so keen as some of the passages which have indeed made this world to us a "vale of tears." But there can be no "vale of tears" if God walks through it with us. So long as we keep quiet under provocation we are strong. By self-control we exert influence, but by losing our patience we incur shame. When anger is suppressed it is effective energy, but when controlled it becomes mere folly. We plant briars along our own path and that of our friends, and then complain that the thorns are sharp. By not fretting over little things which are of no account we show that we possess that kind of religion which made the life of Christ the wonder of all generations to the present day, and the model for all men till time shall end, while the fretful and impatient show themselves to be "fit neither for the land nor the dunghill." Luke xiv. 35. They make themselves wretched, and cast a fretful spell over every one about them. We retreat from them as from a bomb which may explode at any moment. Why they should not explode we do not know, for they think that the whole world should agree with them, and become exasperated if it does not. Impatience, ignorance, and self-conceit are all members of the same family.

In every walk of life there are abundant sources to pierce and rankle the soul, if there is a disposition to allow them. To brood over evils and obstacles is to magnify them, and to magnify them is to diminish our ability to resist and overcome them, and to discredit God's word, which says that for whatever stint he may see fit to apportion his strength shall enable us to perform it, and that he will not suffer us to be tempted above that which we are able to bear. That conviction emboldens the heart, and so reacts on the physical system that we literally possess additional strength.

"But," says the continual fretter, "is it not my duty as a Christian to protest?" Yes; and in some cases even to die for the truth. But when it leads to fretting never! He who sets out in life determined to shun all those who do not square with his rules of propriety; who makes his neighbor an offender because of hasty words spoken; who exalts himself as a judge to determine the right and the wrong of every man's conduct; who becomes a self-constituted Nemesis to avenge by bitter denunciations the real or imagined frailties and defects of others, will find that he paves for himself a thorny road indeed, or if he be overmuch disturbed when everything seems to go against him.

It is God's wish that we shall be disciplined, developed, ripened and sweetened by whatever befalls us in this vale of tears. All the trouble and affliction of a kind providence, and if we rightly improve them, they will be sanctified to our growth in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, by inducting us to prepare to meet him in whatever way he may be pleased to meet with us; so that "when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, we may appear with him also in glory." Meanwhile, the God of peace being with us always, we shall be enabled to possess our souls in patience, and even in the midst of that amazing scene of a dissolving world, when our ears shall hear the dismal sound of rending rocks, quaking earth, bursting tombs and dissolving nature, to stand forth unmoved, with calmness and serenity of mind exclaiming, "Lo, this is our God! We have waited for him; now will we be glad and rejoice in his salvation;" for "more welcome to us his return—of greater far delight, than to the pilgrim beauteous morn, who wandered all the night."—J. A. Gray.

"After you have done a worthy deed, never stop to be admired. Half of the talent in the world dies of a deadly disease contracted in that way. If you have done a good job, hurry up and prove that it has qualified you to do a better. This advice may be commended to the attention of young men and women who have set out to win any of the crowns of this world or the next."

"Prayer is not conquering God's reluctance, but taking hold of God's willingness."

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of the book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

Youth's Column.

The Hebrew Child.

I'll tell you a story, Roy,
If you will be very still,
About a beautiful baby boy,
Whom bad men tried to kill.
And his mamma hid him by day and night,
Out of their wicked, cruel sight.

But her heart was filled with fear,
As she heard the people say,
"That Hebrew woman over there,
Hath hidden her babe away;"
And another plan she sought to try,
For how could she see her darling die?

She secretly made for him
A cradle, pretty and light,
All woven with rushes, long and slim,
And she made it water-tight—
Then quick to the river's edge she flew,
And laid him down where the wild flags grew.

For she knew that every day,
A princess, tall and grand,
With her maids-in-hair, would come that way,
And the real was in God's hand—
If weal or woe, she could not tell,
And bade his sister guard him well.

So when the maidens fair
With the lovely baby came,
The little boat lay safely there,
Watched by Miriam.
And the princess said, "What is that I see?
Go fetch it, I pray thee, unto me."

Now when from his tiny bed
To take him the maiden tried—
'Twas a Hebrew child, they whispering said,
And the little baby cried.
Then the princess lovingly on him smiled,
And made him her own adopted child,
By God's own finger led.

Care for Sparrows.

A little girl, seeing the servant throw the crumbs into the fire, said, "Don't you know that God takes care of the sparrows?"

"If God takes care of them, we need not trouble ourselves about them," was the careless reply.

"But," said the little girl, "I would rather be like God, and help him take care of the little birds, than scatter or waste the food that he gives us."

So she carefully collected what was left of the crumbs, and threw them out of the window. In a short time several little birds flew eagerly to the spot and picked up the crumbs she had scattered. After this she every day collected in a little basket the crumbs and bits of bread that had fallen around the table, and threw them under the window for the birds; and during all the winter these little creatures came regularly after each meal to partake of the food thus provided for their support.

How beautiful it was to see this little girl trying "to help God," as she said, and thus early learning to be kind to the helpless of God's creatures!

The Praying Child.

"My children," said a poor widow to her five little ones, "I have no food for you this morning, as all the bread in the house is gone, and I have no money to buy more. Pray to the good God to supply our need, for he has said, "Call upon me in the day of trouble."

Little Christian, one of the widow's children, who was not more than six years of age, went on his way to school sad and hungry.

But as he passed the door of the church he saw that it was open, and determined to enter in and pray there; for his mother's dwelling was so small and crowded that he was never able to say his prayers quite alone. So he went into the church, not knowing that any one was there; he knelt down in the middle aisle and said the following prayer:

"Dear Father in heaven, we children have nothing left to eat. Our mother has no food in the house for us, and without thy help we must all starve. O Lord, help us. Thou art rich and powerful, and to thee it is an easy thing to help us. Thou hast promised to do so, therefore now fulfill thy word."

So prayed Christian with childlike simplicity, and then went to school. On his return home he saw the cloth laid for dinner; and bread, meat, eggs, and rice temptingly spread upon the table.

"Thank God!" said little Christian, when he saw it, "He has heard my prayer; mother, did a beautiful angel bring these things for us?"

"No," replied the widow, "but God has sent them in answer to your prayer. When you were in the church you thought no one saw you but God; but there was a lady sitting in one of the pews, and she heard you pray, and saw you through the lattice-work on the side of the pew. She sent us our feast; she is the angel whom God raised up to help us. Now let us ask his blessing on our meal, and never forget, my children, those sweet lines:

"Trust the Lord and wait his hour,
He will aid in love and power."

BAPTISM—A PICTURE OF YOUR FAITH.

You would not like to come up from the dead only to die again; would you? You would not like to come up and have all the naughty things you have ever done stand out before you to condemn you?

Everybody would know you then. They would know that you had not minded God when he had told you what to do, so that you could live forever. They would know that you had by your own fault, let your chance go by.

How bad you would feel—your name in the Book of Death! and no time in which to try again, nobody to save you,—all lost, and lost forever!

Once, you might have come to God. Once there was a pleading Savior waiting to be gracious, but you wouldn't come, you wanted to live in sin, and the wages are yours. "It is too dreadful" you say, even to think about. But if you do not think about it now, you must think then. You will know then just what you have lost, and why you have lost it.

You better think now. God has promised to give you eternal life, if you will believe on Jesus. I have shown you what it is to believe on him. You believe on him when you believe that the promises made to the fathers, were made to him. You believe on him when you believe that the throne and kingdom of David will be given to him, and that the uttermost parts of the earth are to be his. You believe on him, when you believe the story of his birth, believe what he taught during his life of the kingdom, and of what people must do to get into it—how he died, rose from the dead, went to heaven and is coming again, to crown and reward the good.

God has promised to forgive your sins if you will believe these things, and take the name of Jesus by being baptized into his name. But you must first believe that Jesus died, and that he died for you.

You have all read how he was put to death on the cross,—just think, and keep thinking that it was for you—that you might be saved by his death. He loved you, and gave his life a ransom for you.

He was buried in the new tomb of Joseph; he rose the third day. For forty days he talked with his disciples and was then taken up into heaven, while angels stood by and said, "That same Jesus shall come again in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Now you believe all this. You believe that he is alive to die no more, and that he will come again to raise the dead, to establish his kingdom, to make all the earth like Eden, to bless all the people of the earth, and to give all the good things God has promised to give them.

You want to tell people that you believe it. You feel just as if you would like to act out your faith in a picture. God has told you how you can do this. You believe that Jesus died, you can die—or picture death—by being put under the water. You would die, if you were to stay under water. You believe that Jesus was buried—you are in a picture grave when in the waters of baptism. You believe that Jesus came out of the death state, to die no more, and that you will be raised to die no more if you do right—you picture this when you come up out of the water. "Without shedding of blood there is no remission." You are commanded to be baptized for the remission of your sins. When you picture the death of Jesus, by being baptized, God promises to forgive you. His blood cleanses you then. There is no other place where God has promised that the blood of Jesus shall reach you. His blood was shed for you, when he died; when you picture that death, it touches you, and God forgives, when he says "I will forgive you if you are baptized," and you go and are baptized you know that he has forgiven you, because he always does just as he says he will do.

I know when you learn all you can about Jesus, and think how much he has done for you, that you cannot help feeling sorry that you have even done wrong. If God has loved you so much as to give his own Son to die for you, you will want to do something to please him. Then give him yourselves, you can give him no more precious gift.—The Friend of the Children.

At the Breaking of Bread.

ECCL. IX. 10.

Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest. The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything. Therefore let us work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work. Jesus said, My Father worketh hitherto and I work. What a grand example of industry, patience and perfect obedience to the Father's will. When we work for the Lord we should work earnestly and cheerfully, not in a half-hearted, slothful manner. For God is not unrighteous to forget our work and labor of love which we show toward his name. We should be not slothful but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises. What doth it profit though a man say he hath faith and have not works, can faith save him? By works a man is justified and not by faith only. For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also. For by grace are we saved through faith, and that not of ourselves, it is the gift of God, for we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus unto good works. God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. Now the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant make us perfect in every good work to do his will, working in us that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen.

FATHER BURTON.

Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near. Isa. lv. 6. When once the Master of the house is risen up and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us, and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not, whence are ye? Luke xiii. 25. Cor. vi. 2, For he saith, I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succored thee, Behold, now is the day of salvation. Heb. iii. 13. But exhort one another daily while it is called today, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. Jno. vii. 34. Ye shall seek me and shall not find me, and where I am, thither ye cannot come, for as the lightning that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven shineth unto the other part under heaven, so shall also the Son of Man be in his day. Luke xvii. 24. And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship and in breaking of bread and in prayers. Acts ii. 42.

MINNIE L. TOWNSEND.

After the above had been read by Sister Townsend, attention was called by Sister Moroon to the first verse of Isa. lv. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. She coupled that with John iv. 14. But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life. This was followed by Sister Neill calling attention to Isa. lv. 2, Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and you labor for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. Also the eighth verse, For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. Appropriate remarks having been made, Sister Ella Knowles closed the exhortations by reading verse 3. Incline your ear, come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. There was a good attendance, and all heartily enjoyed the morning services.

P. NEILL.

If you give up your life to serving and loving Christ, one of the blessings of your consecration to him will be that in him will open up to you as a pattern your possible self as God sees it; then life will have but one purpose and wish for you, which will be that you may realize that idea of yourself which you have seen in Christ. —Phillips Brooks.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Common Things.

"Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun." Eccl. xi. 7.

The sunshine and the gentle rain,
The clear bird song that hails the morn,
The meadow clad with dew and flowers,
The grass that whispers to the trees,
What common, common things are these!

The broad, blue mirror of the lake
That smiles back at the sleeping sky,
The hillside, with their heap and heap
And flings their dreamy jewels high;
The ceaseless rebounds that one by one
Toss back the fire of the sun;

The stars that blaze no jewels blaze,
And make the world old mysteries,
While they, on their appointed ways,
Go speeding through eternity
Across infinite realms of space
On paths that we but dimly trace—

All these are common—brook and bird
And trees of red, and rosy glow;
Seem most as they were unheard,
So common that they seem unseen,
And yet there is no day or night
But heaven is all of their delight.

No common thing is held apart
From us, or put with bolt and key,
But in the goodness of his heart
They all are made for you and me,
It always seems God loves the best
The things he makes the commonest.

How, When and Where and by Whom was the Gospel of the Kingdom First Introduced Into the Western States?

As the early pioneers who in those early days so "earnestly contended for the faith which was once delivered to the [illegible] waiting for the coming of the King, I thought it might be of some interest to many of like precious faith to learn something of the history of its introduction into the Western States, so long ago.

First, I will go back and show how the truth first began to illuminate the minds of those who afterwards introduced it.

Now let your minds follow me across the mighty ocean, to Halifax, England. At that place, about the year 1829, or 30, certain ones were enduring a great struggle, in order that they emerge out of the gross darkness of old Babylon, and back in the full sunlight of God's saving Message of Life. Among that number, was my father, Joseph Wilson, and his brothers, Benjamin, John and James, also Benjamin Boyes, Richard and William Appleyard. At that time they were all members of the same Baptist Church at Halifax. About this time Alexander Campbell began preaching what he called the "Reformation," urging the people to get back to the Primitive Faith and Practice. He started well, but stopped short of ascertaining the primitive faith. He introduced baptism for the remission of sins, ignored all human creeds, and established weekly communion.

A congregation was organized on this partial reformation called "The Disciples of Christ," at Halifax, England. The parties named above left the Baptist church, and united with this organization. The little light which they had received, made them anxious for more light. The congregation then formed itself into an investigating class, with a firm determination to search carefully the Holy Scriptures. They resolved to begin with the first chapter of Genesis, and go through the entire Word of God. They had not progressed very far in the study of Genesis, before they came across the Covenants of Promise, made unto Abraham, and repeated unto Isaac and to Jacob. An enquiry was made as to whether those promises had been fulfilled or not? You can imagine how like a golden cord they discover that those promises permeated and ran through both the Old and the New Testament Scriptures, and constituted the base of the gospel of the kingdom. It was at this point, that the true light began to shine, and as the investigation progressed, the light shone brighter and brighter, until they were led unto the obedience of the one true faith and hope of the gospel.

While the investigation was in progress, my Uncle James and Benjamin Wilson and Benjamin Boyes emigrated to America in 1841, bringing with them what little they possessed.

Later on, in 1843, my father, Joseph Wilson, his brother John Wilson, William and Richard Appleyard, also sailed for Geneva, Illinois, where my Uncle Benjamin had previously located, and engaged in the printing business. Uncle James had bought a farm a few miles west of Geneva. Later still came Joseph Cockroft, and became a partner with Uncle Benjamin in the printing business. Later still George Westgarth and family located in Geneva.

Meetings for Bible study were still continued in their homes, at Geneva. About this time came Dr. John Thomas, who had been in the Reformation work along with Mr. Campbell. He soon passed Mr. Campbell in his Bible study, and obeyed the gospel of the kingdom, and then Campbell and Thomas became antagonists. John Thomas became a noted proclaimer of the gospel of the kingdom, and life eternal only through Christ. If I mistake not he baptized my father and Uncle Benjamin. Both Campbell and Thomas then transferred their labors into the State of Virginia. For a time Virginia became a fierce battleground, where Thomas and Campbell waged many a conflict.

Finally John Thomas located in Hoboken, New Jersey. He planted a church at Brooklyn, N. Y. From Hoboken he published a magazine, called, "The Herald of the Kingdom."

Hoboken was the center point from which the gospel of the kingdom radiated in the Eastern States, and Geneva, Ill., for the Western States. I remember as a boy witnessing baptisms at Geneva, as first one, and then another, learned the true gospel message. A church of believers was then formed at that place.

At St. Charles, Illinois, two miles north of Geneva, lived Mr. and Mrs. Underwood (the father and mother of the present publisher of THE RESTITUTION) and also John Christian and wife. They united with the Church at Geneva.

Bro. Underwood engaged in a flour mill, at St. Charles, and became quite an accomplished student of the prophecies.

My Uncle Benjamin, owning a printing office, commenced the publication of a magazine called "The Gospel Banner," which became an uncompromising exponent of the gospel of the kingdom, and eternal life only through Christ. Books, tracts, and hymn books were then published, and the light began to spread in every direction, Geneva, being the center point.

The congregation began to grow, and a church building became a necessity. Plans were then made and a plain stone church building was erected. I well remember one moonlight night, how the men, with their sons, met to dig the foundation, bringing with them lanterns and spades I as a boy, was with them, and helped to dig the foundation. Bro. Westgarth, being a stone mason, built the walls, and plastered the house.

At Aurora, Ill., ten miles south of Geneva, quite a number of the Campbell reformation settled at that place. The true gospel light from Geneva soon reached them, and a congregation of believers was established there.

The work began to spread to the different points of the compass. Others who had the natural ability as public speakers, believed and obeyed the gospel of the kingdom. These were then scatted abroad everywhere, spreading the glorious light. Geneva was the point from which the literature was printed. As the gospel spread, and churches were established, Semi-annual Conference gatherings were held at Geneva in their church house in July and December.

Benjamin Boyes, William and Richard Appleyard finally settled at South Northfield, about eighteen miles northwest of Chicago. After getting settled, they let the gospel light shine. The result was, a congregation was formed at that place, and a church building erected.

The gospel light then spread from this point. As the light spread other able speakers entered the field and became heralds of the glad tidings, which was brought to the West, by the few who emigrated from Halifax, England.

While I was a boy, my father put me into the "Gospel Banner" office to learn the printing business. It was during this time, that the "Emphatic Diaglott," was translated and printed.

I can now in my mind's eye see my Uncle Benjamin, sitting at his desk, making a literal word for word translation of the New Testament. I remember seeing the Greek type arrive from England. Many readers of the Diaglott may not be aware that my Uncle not only translated the Diaglott, but took charge of the mechanical work as well. He electro-typed the entire book himself. The following was the process he followed.

As each page of the Diaglott was put into type, he took an impression of the page of type in wax. This wax mould was then black-leaded with very fine black-lead dust. He had a vat containing acid. In this acid, he hung a copper plate, and also the wax mould, before he went home at night. In the morning he would find the wax mould would be covered with a thin sheet of copper. The acid dissolved the copper, and the black-lead attracted it to the wax mould. He then made metal plates, out of melted metal and fastened the copper sheet upon it.

He then printed the first edition of the book, from these plates, on a hand press. I used to ink the plates, by a soft roller, while he worked the press. Thus from Geneva as the early gospel center, issued one of the most useful aids for Bible study, that ever issued from the press, in any section of this country.

Along about this time, Joseph Marsh issued a magazine, from Rochester, N. Y., called the "Prophetic Expositor." This magazine published much truth, but as he held the gospel of the kingdom in a rather loose manner, it provoked somewhat the hostility of Dr. John Thomas, of Hoboken, N. J., who would not tolerate the least infringement of the glorious gospel of the kingdom. We also need men of back bone today, as its defenders.

The "Prophetic Expositor," finally came into the hands of Thomas G. Newman. Then it was finally merged with the "Gospel Banner." The "Gospel Banner" was in turn merged with "The Herald of the Kingdom," published by my oldest brother, Thomas Wilson, at Chicago, Ill. While in his hands he changed the name to THE RESTITUTION, and was issued in the form in which it is now printed.

As time went on the contest for the gospel waxed hot. The worst foes we had to meet with, were the followers of Alexander Campbell, and William Miller.

Indiana had a hard struggle with the Adventists, under the leadership of Joshua V. Himes, Dr. Field, and E. C. Andrus. These Advent leaders put up a strong and bitter fight to capture the present Conference of the Church of God in Indiana, but they failed. Brethren Corbaley, Wince, Wagoner, Hutch, Halstead and others, are old veterans in the struggle.

A great deal of interesting history might be given with regard to the great battle of the age of the supremacy of the gospel of the kingdom, as against spurious gospels. I have been conversant with the contest from its early start, in Geneva, and I felt that it might be of interest to many believers who know nothing about this memorable struggle.

I was a member of the Geneva church, and was baptized into the sacred name by Bro. Edwin Smith in the waters of the beautiful Fox River, in 1857. Bro. Smith now rests in the Geneva grave yard, where many old veterans lie buried.

A few weeks ago, while I was away filling an appointment, our much esteemed Brother James Whitehead fell asleep. He was one of those who had learned the glad tidings at Geneva, and was a member of that church. [illegible]shead was also. In the East at Elizabeth, N. J. still lives one of the old veterans, John O. Woodruff. This old veteran in his life time has sent over thirty thousand dollars in printed literature, in defence of the ancient faith of the gospel. Faithful believers have struggled hard to hand down to their descendants the pure gospel of the kingdom, unmixed with the traditions of men. Will you preserve it; or will you suffer hobbies and liberalism to creep in and compromise it?

Personally I have long been in the fight, and am still in it, and expect to be in it as long as God gives me the strength to use both voice and pen. As you well know that I have no use for anything else than the straight genuine article, unmixed with human perverseness, and doctrines which tend to undermine the fundamental principles, which we have struggled so long to protect from error. I have placed these things in book form, The Pine Woods Bible Class, that it may find a place in your libraries, and through it I shall still speak to you, when I shall be unable to use either voice or pen.

Another old veteran, who now nears the close of his work, is Bro. Maurice Joblin, who has long fought for the purity of the gospel of the kingdom. Also Bro. Elton, who writes "Random Thoughts" for THE RESTITUTION, [illegible] wrote a few to the Line," Bro. Wince and others, who are now near the end of the contest.

We need Bible Schools in every State to instruct the young, and faithful workers who will not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, unmixed with hobbies, traditions, and seductive doctrines. If it were otherwise the Bible School would become a curse. Look well to your teachers.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY, DEC. 2, 1906.

JESUS BEFORE PILATE. LUKE XXIII. 13-25.

"And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people, said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people; and, behold, I having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him: No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him; and, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him. I will therefore chastise him, and release him. (For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast.) And they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas. (Who for certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.) Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them. But they cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. And he said unto them the third time, Why, what evil hath he done? I have found no cause of death in him: I will therefore chastise him, and let him go. And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified; and the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed. And Pilate gave sentence that it should be as they required. And he released unto them him that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired; but he delivered Jesus to their will."

Time: Wednesday morning, April 15, about A. D. 33. Place—Pilate's Judgment Hall.

Jesus charged with perverting the people in one word treason—trying to put the people against Cæsar, the Roman Emperor, an offence punished with death.

Jesus examined by Pilate, and three times found not guilty. Pilate was anxious to let Jesus go, but they said, "If you let this man go you are not Cæsar's friend." John xix. 12. Pilate tried to reason with them, asking, "What evil hath he done?" The answer was, "Crucify him, crucify him."

Pilate gave in to them, washed his hands, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person. They answered taking all the blame, and calling down on themselves and their children the most awful of curses. Matt. xxvii. 24, 25. Pilate gave sentence of death as they required, and delivered Jesus to them.

This is the end of five trials. Before Annas John xviii. 13; and Caiaphas, Matt. xxvi. 57; and Pilate and Herod, Luke xxiii. 7-11, and again Pilate. The more he was tried, the more he was found—not guilty. Read John xviii. 13, and verses 19-24; Luke xxiii. 1-15.

Let us make application of this lesson. What instruction is there for us, for those who are Christ's, and Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise? Gal. iii. 29. Do not go to law before the "unjust." 1 Cor. vi. 1. Let all matters of the saints be settled by the saints. It is impossible for the justified to obtain justice from the unjust. If circumstances should draw us before the unjust, as our Lord was, let us do as he did, state our case clearly and calmly—once—do not keep repeating, eager self-justification creates suspicion. Remember our Lord, follow his example. "If reproached happy are ye." 1 Pet. iv. 14.

A case in point. Some years ago a young man was induced—by great promises—to put some hundreds of dollars into a business venture. He lost. He asked if I would advise him to go to law to recover his money. I said, Will you in the court, tell lies and swear to them? He said, You know that I cannot do that. I replied, The other side can and they will. He did not go to law.

A few words to the children, little ones in and out of the Sunday school. I find it not easy to write lessons for you, because the Bible is God's message to men and women, and big boys and girls. The word children is in the Bible more than 1500 times, but mostly means men and women of all ages. But for all that God did not forget you. He commanded the fathers and mothers in Israel to learn and obey his Word, and teach it to their children. Deut. iv. 10, and talk to them often about the great God of Israel and his love, and great works. Deut. vi. 4-9. O no, little ones, God did not forget you. Neither did Jesus Christ. He instructed his chosen servant Paul to tell all the fathers and mothers, that believed and obeyed the gospel of the kingdom, to teach their children about him, and his kingdom, and his coming again. Eph. vi. 4. Jesus knew that many of you could not read and understand the gospel. So he said the fathers, mothers and teachers should read the story, and tell it to you. God and Jesus Christ both remembered you.

P. NEILL.

Exhortations at the Breaking of Bread, Springfield, O.

"FORSAKE NOT THE ASSEMBLING."

Heb. x. 23-25, "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised, and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works, not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." We are first admonished to "hold fast the profession of our faith," and as a means to this end, we are admonished to consider one another, to provoke unto love and good works.

In the preceding chapter the apostle contrasts the blessings procured by the services of the Levitical priests in earthly tabernacles, with the blessings procured by Christ in the heavenly tabernacle. Hence, he begins this chapter telling us. The law contains nothing but a shadow of good things to come. Wherefore when he cometh into the world he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not, but a Body hast thou prepared me. I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second. By the which will we are sanctified by the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all. He died and rose again and is now entered into the Holy of holies to intercede for us. As Aaron entered into the most holy place once a year and came out to judge the people, so Christ has entered into the holy of holies to intercede for us, and when he comes he will come with the breast plate of judgment. He was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him will he appear without a sin offering unto salvation. Having therefore brethren, boldness (or liberty) to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, let us draw near with a true heart.

Under the Levitical priesthood none but the high priest was permitted to enter this sacred place, but now by a new and living way which he hath consecrated for us, that is to say his flesh, we are invited to draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith. The assurance may be full, for he says, I am he that was dead, Behold, I am alive for evermore.

Dear brothers and sisters, having such an high priest over the House of God, can we not draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith. Having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed in pure water, we [illegible] liberty of Jesus, even bidden to come boldly to the throne of grace. We have a high priest which can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities.

Let us, dear brothers and sisters, hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised. The Israelites who stood off and did not offer sacrifice were not blessed. It was the one who sacrificed who was blessed. So we, if we would have the blessing, must offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God, and if acceptable it must be in the appointed way. Let us consider one another to provoke one another to love and good works, not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching.

These emblems before us point to our crucified and risen Lord. When he instituted these emblems as a memorial of his death, it was to be observed till he comes again. We cannot commemorate his death, without remembering his resurrection and expecting his return, looking for that glorious appearing. Is it not fitting that we should exhort one another and build one another up in our most holy faith? Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering. "In due season we shall reap if we faint not."

REMARKS.

"Communion means to converse together with sympathy and confidence. To interchange sentiments of feeling, to take council. Here is where we meet and commune with our Lord. Here we may build each other up in our most holy faith. "May we ever keep in the strait and narrow path that leadeth unto life eternal."

MARRIED.

At Humboldt, Ia., Nov. 21, 1906, at the home of Bro. and Sister W. C. Nowl, their daughter Ruth to David G. Maricle of Winslow, Ill. We hope to see the time come when these young people will become obedient to the faith and share with us the blessings of the kingdom when Jesus comes.

Plymouth, Indiana, Nov. 28, 1906.

On account of meetings, sickness, and other hindrances, our paper is late again this week. We hope to be able to gain time enough soon to get back to our regular day of issuing. Please bear with this annoyance, and we will do our best to remedy it.

The Conference and Bible School at Plymouth are past, and the reports of the Secretary are published. To add more to what has been written would be but a repetition of words. All who attended are more than satisfied with the work, and are anxiously looking forward to the next meeting with joyous anticipation, knowing that with proper effort success is sure to come. We cannot speak too highly of the work done by Brother Lindsay. He has endeared himself to the hearts of all of the brethren with whom he came in contact, and will be welcomed back at all times.

The Jew in the Future.

The future welfare of the world is bound up in the Jew. The covenanted blessing to all nations flows through the channel of the Jewish nation. As a people chosen and preserved, they are the divinely appointed agents to execute Jehovah's judgments in subjugating the obstinate and rebellious nations, and afterwards the messengers of peace and good will in teaching the way of righteousness to all the world. In contrast to their present condition as outcasts and aliens, hated and despised, they are to become famous and honorable, in all the countries of their dispersion! As it is written "I will get them praise and fame in every land where they have been put to shame. At that time I will bring you again, in the time that I gather you, for I will make you a name and a praise among all people of the earth, when I turn back your captivity before your eyes, saith the Lord." Zeph. iii. 19-20.

Israel in a sense is the Lord's sanctuary, including also the land from which they were removed because of their defiling the promised heritage with idols. Israel and their land are coupled together in tribulation and desolation—when the people are scattered the land lies waste and barren, and both are alike a reproach in the eyes of their enemies. There is however, a cleansing time promised when the reproach of both the people and the land shall be taken away. "For thus saith the Lord God, In the day that I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities, I will also cause you to dwell in the cities, and the wastes shall be builded and the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by, and they shall say this land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden." Ezek. xxxvi. 33-38.

It will be seen from the foregoing testimony that when God, justifies Israel, he also cleanses the land, that is in waiting for their return. It is apparently surprising at the present time when the Jew is attracting the attention of all Christendom, that the Protestant clergy in their comments and sermons pertaining to the Russian massacres that not one coming to my notice appears to have any just conception of the the future work and destiny of the Jews. While they give to some extent their sympathy in behalf of the suffering, and in words protest, and remonstrate against the cruelty of the mob, yet so far as I have been able and privileged to read I have been unable to find any recognition of the active and beneficent work of the Jew from a prophetic point of view. With an open Bible before them, one would naturally conclude that their remarks would hardly be limited to the past and present, with no word of good cheer for Israel's exaltation and glory in an age to come. There may be some exceptions, but they have not come under my notice, and I cannot but think the exceptions are rare and far between. The reformed and cultured Jewish Rabbi rivals his brother prophet of the church for silence in ignoring the prophetically revealed will and purpose of Jehovah pertaining to the history and destiny of Israel in the determinate times and boundary lines of the hereafter. When the Deity separated the sons of Adam, and divided to the nations their inheritance, he set the boundary lines of their habitation according to the number of the children of Israel. Deut. xxxiii. Before the nation was born or had existence it held the first place in the purpose of God—not simply under Moses and the law, but also under a greater than Moses, even the Lord's Anointed, the promised Seed of the covenant, in a dispensation to come.

No other nation has been permitted to come near unto Jehovah. No individual stranger could come near save through the arrangement and intercession of the "first born Son," the Jew. In our own time when God is visiting the Gentiles to take out a people for his name, it is still necessary to become a member of the Abrahamic family by obedience to the divinely prescribed mode of naturalization and adoption into the Jewish commonwealth. Hence it is declared that "strangers to the covenants of promise and aliens to the commonwealth of Israel are without Christ, having no hope in the world."

The evangelical churches seem not to know how much they are indebted to the Jew, and much less do they understand the noble and exalted station the Jew is to fill in the hereafter. The testimony of the prophets is misapplied, spiritualized and misappropriated to the children of the apostasy, so that nothing is left for the preserved of Israel unless they become both perverts and converts by accepting of the Christ preached from the pulpits of the popular churches. If we are painfully disappointed in looking to the church for light and knowledge concerning the future of the despised and persecuted Jew, it is in vain that we turn to the synagogue for consolation.

Of course we cannot expect much from the modern prophets of the reformed synagogue, for a man of understanding declared long ago that "blindness in part has happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." It is, however, gratifying to know that there is a limit to Jewish blindness, because when the vail is removed from off the face of Israel, all the world will become luminous with the knowledge and glory of Israel's God. The church and the synagogue are both very optimistic as to the betterment of present conditions from natural causes, but both are shy of miracle, by virtue of drinking in the agnostic spirit that prevails among the intelligent masses. Like people like priest, for public opinion cannot be ignored by those seeking lucrative employment in the pulpit or on the rostrum of the synagogue. In olden times Israel said prophesy unto us smooth things—promise us peace, pleasure and plenty, though every sign of the times indicated that war, famine and pestilence was close at hand. Likewise the "itching ears" of modern times demand what they bargain for, and the men gifted with brains and eloquent speech are compelled to pander and please their patrons.

Geo. Moyer.

At the Breaking of Bread.

Paul and Timotheus writing to all the saints in Christ Jesus at Philippi, also the bishops and deacons, prayed for grace and peace upon them, and thanked God for their fellowship in the gospel, and had great confidence that God would bless them. Phil. i. 1-6. And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge, and in all judgment; that ye may approve things that are excellent, that ye may be sincere and without offence, till the day of Christ. Verses 9, 10.

What a kindly and far-reaching prayer; covering the whole time from the hour that Paul was writing until the coming of our Lord, and including the whole duty of the saints until that time.

From the reading we can see that the love, knowledge and judgment of the saints at Philippi was good. Their love was sincere, unfeigned, they had knowledge of the way of eternal life; they had good judgment. But still their love, knowledge and judgment could be increased, and therefore Paul prayed that their love of God, Christ, of the truth, of their brethren, and of their fellowmen might, and would abound; become more, make more, be multiplied, be enough and to spare in knowledge of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, that by that knowledge they might have judgment, perception, skill to be able to examine, and clearly distinguish truth,—the truth from error, and thus approve, confirm and testify to the things that are excellent, most excellent, that excel all others, and are above all things valuable. Also that they might be sincere, truly honest about it, and without offence, without blundering, or causing confusion, as well as not offending till the day of Christ.

Now let us make the application of the prayer to ourselves as to the children of God by adoption. Has the love of God been shed abroad in our hearts? If so it then follows that we love God, and Christ, and those who are Christ's. Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born—begotten—of God, and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him. I John v. 1. The love of God for us, creates in us a love for God, and we gladly, eagerly desire more knowledge, that we may be the more able to judge and approve of the most excellent things.

How are we to do to succeed?

How do those do who love to excel to win in things earthly? "They are temperate in all things." 1 Cor. ix. 25. They are self-restraining, self-denying, they do not give way to a single desire that would in any way interfere with their chance of success. They undergo hardships to obtain what they have set their heart on, but cannot be sure of holding for one hour, and no value for life eternal. As in the natural, so in the spiritual. Those who are begotten by the incorruptible Word of God, and are longing for the kingdom to come, they take up their cross daily denying themselves any thing and every thing that would hinder their love, their knowledge, their judgment. They are always abounding in the work of the Lord, they can always be depended upon to do whatever they can to uphold and further the work of the Lord. Where there is a church, you will find them at every meeting, they never find nor offer excuse, if detained from any cause they are troubled, because they have learned to know the love of God and the Lord Jesus, to value the favor o God in being justified by faith, thus they achieve, and abound more and more in love, in knowledge, in judgment, and do not approve of things excellent, things spiritual, which do excel all other things. To all such, the prayer of Paul comes as a benediction, a blessing indeed, for they know that their labor is not in vain in the Lord, notwithstanding the [illegible] the never failing use of their talents—whether one or five—are blessed to them, they suffer the trials that come to all that will live godly. With that peace that passes all common understanding they cheerfully endure the cross, that they may win the crown.

Spiritual Worship And Its Great Need.

In 1st Corinthians, 12th, 13th and 14th chapters Paul treats this subject at length. It might be well to read these chapters over. In these days of formality there is great need of spiritual worship, and this need covers all kinds and parts of worship, preaching, praying, singing, public, home and private worship. There can be but little question as to results if our worship was more spiritual.

First let us consider what is not spiritual worship. And here I speak of "spirited worship," that is, lively church services. I have heard leaders say "Sing spirited!" These are days of much singing. So-called "prayer-meetings" consist of one prayer, about twenty songs, and a few verses of poetry, or Scripture. Choirs often sing about forty minutes of an eighty-five minute service, and not unfrequently are composed of sinful persons who make no profession of religion. Such is not and cannot be spiritual worship.

Singing is a God-ordained way of worship. Many churches bring in instruments of music that drown the human voice so that no one can understand the words. This cannot be spiritual worship. The Word speaks of "spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." Eph. 5: 19.

Preaching that aims at display, either in eloquence or scholarship, or that treats on the popular themes of the day, or that advocates some pet dogma, or doctrine of "our church" cannot be spiritual.

Prayer that consists in mere words, no matter how earnest or expressive of the real needs of the people, but void of the inleadings of the Spirit of God, is not spiritual praying. There are days of much praying in a way. From fifteen to thirty minutes are often used by the preacher, in going over the different needs of humanity; foreign and home, without any expectation of change in conditions. Such is not spiritual prayer. I heard it said of a noted man that he "made one of the most eloquent prayers ever offered to a Boston audience." No doubt this was true, but it was offered to be heard of men, and if answered at all it was answered by men. When Jesus was here, some prayed to be heard of men, and they had their reward.

Private prayer, though less liable to being mere pretense, may fail of the Spirit's leading, being governed by selfish motives, ambitious desires, vindictive feelings, wishing to bring others to our terms and the like, and so the Spirit of God have no leadings in our private worship. In brief, what is spiritual worship? "True worshipers shall worship the Father in Spirit and in truth." John 4: 23.

Singing, to be spiritual, must be done by spiritual persons. The heart must be in the sentiments expressed that it may be spiritual. More than this, the Spirit of God must suggest and prompt. Who has not heard some old saint, or young saints break out in song when the Spirit prompted; and what a flood of glory from the throne "filled" all the place where they were sitting. The Spirit's leadings are not formal.

Spiritual preaching can only be done by a spiritual person. There may be great fervor, much display, great eloquence, much mesmeric power, great devotion even, but all this is not spiritual. The burden of the message must be upon the messenger.

These are the days of substitution, of imitation of counterfeits. When the church or worshipers lose the Spirit, instead of humbling themselves and seeking it again, they seek a substitute to fill up the loss. Said a man to me the other day; "When the Salvation Army was arrested and put in jail for preaching on the streets, they had power and men were saved by their labors. But when the mayors began to show favor to Gen. Booth, and protect the Army, and the Army in turn arrested those who would disturb them, they lost their power; and now they seek to fill up the loss by the social and charitable features of the work." So also do the churches as they lose a spiritual element out of their worship they seek a substitute.

As the church has lost her joy of heart, she has sought for singers who would sing for pay, without regard to their standing with God, until the singing of to-day is largely for the display of a fine voice and of the music, with almost no regard to the words or sentiment expressed. No wonder the Spirit is grieved away.

Also in the matter of preaching; as the old time power has waned, something has been sought to take its place. An educated ministry is thought to be indispensible, with very much polish. Short essays of twenty minutes take the place of the two hour sermons our fathers used to preach. The church must be remodeled, both inside and outside. Something must be done to draw and hold the people. They forget that the greatest drawing attraction to humanity is the Holy Spirit. Abnormal conditions are resorted to on every hand to stimulate spiritual worship. Young people's societies are organized, much new machinery is added to the church when she has lost her power and is unable to run successfully what she had.

Some may ask, How shall we have spiritual worship? Only in God's way. Be born again, "born of the Spirit." "Walk in the Spirit." Pray in the Spirit. Sing in the Spirit. Preach "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power" (1 Cor. 2:4). "We know not what we should pray for as we ought" except "the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us." Rom. 8: 26.—L. A. Baker, in Our Hope.

Why Expedient.

It is easy to see why it was necessary for Christ to go away from his Church, in order that he might live most freshly and constantly in the love of his disciples. Had he remained on earth in daily contact with his people, he would, in a certain sense, have outgrown his character as the crucified and risen Christ. But going away with his death and resurrection fresh in the minds of his followers, and remaining, henceforth, out of sight, these events abide in perennial freshness in the Church, with all their power to kindle a living and ever-growing love; for a person who goes out of the world, is remembered just as we saw him last, and lives perpetually in that character. "Those who have lost an infant," says Leigh Hunt, "are never, as it were, without an infant child." The other children grow up to manhood, and womanhood, and age, and when they go from us they are men and women in our thought. But the infant dying is always and infant, so far as our thoughts and realization are concerned. All the passing years can never move the little one forward a single step toward manhood or age. Death has transfigured him into a perpetual and glorified childhood; and we love him henceforth, as an infant, with the gentle affection, and with the tender devotion, which a babe always wins from its parents.

So Christ, taken up into glory, with the freshness of the resurrection beauty in his form and face, and with the scars of his crucifixion fresh upon his body, lives forever in thought and affection of his people as he appeared on that resurrection morning, clothed with immortal youth and holiness.

Now, have you not noticed what strong expressions of affection and ardent love Christ drew forth from his followers after his resurrection? "Did not our hearts burn within us as he opened to us the Scriptures?" was what they said about the walk to Emmaus. "Lord thou knowest all things. Thou knowest that I love thee," was said by Peter to the risen Christ. "They held him by the feet and worshiped him," is what is told us of the women meeting him after he had arisen. And it is this risen Christ, fresh from his victory at the cross, crowned with the dew of the resurrection morning, and traveling in the greatness of his strength—it is this Christ whom we know in glory! Love him not because we have not seen him! Away with such a thought! To us who have been washed by his blood, and filled with the hope of immortality by his resurrection, he is the most real person in the universe. In the pardon of sin he has come so near to us that we feel that we have almost touched his glorified body, and thrust our fingers into the prints of the nails in his hands and feet. That is the conception of Christ which fills my thought; "The man of sorrows" transformed, in those three short days, into the man of infinite joy! the thorn-prints still visible in his brow, to tell of his sufferings for us; but that brow "anointed with the oil of gladness," as is beautifully said in the Hebrews.

This is the picture that the Church carries forever in its heart; so that, aside from the gift of the Spirit, we can see why it was expedient for Christ to go away. But that expediency is only temporary, let us remember; and Christ's words warrant no such thought as we have lately seen drawn from them, viz.; "the inexpediency of Christ's return to earth." Because the Lord said, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Surely if it was expedient that he should go away, it is infinitely expedient for him to return.

Behold, the Bridegroom Cometh.

Many anxious ones are crying out in loving earnestness, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." There seems to be a widespread conviction that the coming of the absent One draweth nigh. Never has there been more anxious gazing upward, with the eye of faith, in earnest expectation, since the angels said he would come again in like manner as he ascended into heaven. The whole creation groaneth together; men's hearts are failing them for fear; the shades of night are gathering fast and thick; the midnight hasteneth on. The future to men of the world seems shrouded in darkness. The anticipation of some mighty event seems general. The church—the bride—is awaking and laying aside her robes of worldly conformity, is putting on her robes of salvation from all sin. Holiness to the Lord is already lifted up as a standard, and the people are being urged as never before by God's faithful watchmen to get ready to meet God; to be holy as he is holy. Many are being brought into the condition of conscious salvation from all sin; they are washing their robes and making them white in the blood of the Lamb, with the perfect assurance that they shall walk with him in white.

Soon will the morning dawn. Lift up your heads, ye waiting saints, for your redemption draweth nigh; your King will soon appear. Only a little while and he that is to come will come, and will not tarry. Watch therefore, for in such an hour as you think not the Son of man cometh. Holiness of heart is the only condition that will enable you to meet him with joy—to see him and live. Oh, let us see to it that we are cleansed from all unrighteousness, that we may not be ashamed before him at his coming, but may go forth to meet him and hear his welcome voice saying unto us: "Well done, good and faithful servants; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."—Mrs. A. C. Babcock.

Poetry.

Where the Need is Sorest.

From the desert dunes behind thee,
With thy feet all sandal-sore,
And where still the sand-plumes blind thee
While in front the breakers roar—
In the place where the need is sorest,
God maketh an open door.

Where the ramparts frown above thee,
And thy path is hedged about—
Though in this the Lord would prove thee
And dispel thy deepening doubt,
In the place where the need is sorest,
Are his angels to guide thee out.

TEACHER—TRAINING LESSONS.

The wise Teacher says: "Give instruction to a wise man and he will be yet wiser; teach a just man, and he will increase in learning." Prov. ix. 9.

It is the law of life that we must improve or deteriorate: There is no stand still in God's great system of living, moving bodies. There are no dead levels in the Christian life. True religious life is a life of growth and no lapse of years can bring one to the age where one cannot "grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth."

Every thing that broadens our vision and deepens our religious life is an aid to more effective work in teaching. All influences, acquirements and aspirations, which tend to make a better man or woman, tend to make a better teacher. The work of teaching is so important that nothing less than the best of our time and opportunities should be given to preparing for this work.

Thring's definition of a teacher is this: "The teacher is one who has liberty enough, time enough, heart enough and head enough to be a master in the kingdom of life."

1. Liberty enough. That would mean to us, freedom to teach what we know and believe to be true.

2. Time enough. Implies opportunity for proper study and mental preparation.

3. Heart enough. Here is the key note, love, sympathy, insight, devotion and patience.

4. Head enough. This means a wide range of study, digging for things both old and new.

John Ruskin wrote of the "Seven Lamps of Architecture and painting." The fine art of teaching has been described as having seven elements, seven lamps or lights.

First lamp. "The sense or importance of the calling." "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

Second lamp. "The duty of knowing and studying." Over the doorway of the school room is written one word for the teacher to read, "Teach." Over the doorway of his own dwelling is written the other word "study." When you cease to study—then it is time to cease to teach.

Third lamp. "Process of interpretation." It may be comparatively easy to teach facts, but the teacher's art consists of making them alive with power. Building this material into a life. Do not shovel out facts to your pupils as one handles nails or other things, put yourself into your teaching.

Fourth lamp. "The authority that comes by sincerity." If the teacher is not true in his own nature and life, the scholar soon detects it and all authority disappears. Jesus spoke with authority, "I say unto you." His life was in perfect harmony with his teaching. He made truth a living, vitalizing spark.

Fifth lamp. "The spirit of unselfishness, generosity and sacrifice." Souls are not won by selfishness, but by open heartedness.

Sixth lamp. "Sympathy." By love and sympathy more things are done than are dreamed of by hard, cold handling of facts. Sympathy is warm and often brings latent powers to life. Plants do not grow in the snow and souls are not won by icebergs. The finest magic of love is to touch the secret spring of human lives and bring forth the hidden riches of the mind.

Seventh lamp. "Solid weight of character." Life itself is more powerful than any method. Example is the supreme thing. Greater still is the force of a living example. Knowing this, the teacher of the Word of God should live close to Christ. If you will be a true teacher of Christ, let the vision of his face fill your whole soul. Sit with your scholars at the feet of Jesus, and show them in a thousand ways the beauty of the Master.

PASTORAL WORK OF A TEACHER.

The teacher's duty does not end when the class is dismissed. He should know his scholars personally.

1. To know their personal habits, aptitudes, associations, tastes, etc. This is the key to their right instruction.

2. To know the home surroundings of the scholars, their social and religious helps and hindrances. This is the key to their successful management.

3. To win the scholar's affection. This will surely come to the teacher who loves the scholars for Christ's sake.

4. To urge the scholars to accept and confess Christ. Do not neglect this privilege. It is the aim of your teaching to bring your pupils to accept Christ and to build up Christian character.

THE TEACHER TRAINING FOR SERVICE.

There is no way to learn how to teach like teaching. Practice teaching and study results. Begin in your own home. Try and judge the results. Watch where you succeed and where you fail. Experience gives the best training. Study the art of teaching and study methods. Study human nature, and cultivate a love for human souls. Watch others teaching. Cultivate a spiritual life. No teacher can hope to have all the qualifications desirable for his great work. He may be deficient in the knowledge of the Bible, may have no acquaintance with the art of teaching, and may act on mere intuition in his efforts to win others to a better life, and succeed even better than the trained teacher, through the power of a holy life. There is a spiritual fitness that dominates all other qualities and often almost alone gives success. No one, however ignorant, need despair of securing this one essential qualification. Pray for spiritual power, to lead and teach others in the way of holiness. The spirit of prayer and service is linked together. Come sit at the Master's feet and be taught by his living example.

THE TEACHER PREPARING A LESSON.

Lesson helps should not take the place of the Bible. No text book should take the place of the Bible in our study of the Bible. The Bible is so written that it illuminates itself. The first and most important thing is to learn all that is possible from the Bible itself. The New Testament illuminates the Old and the Old makes plain the New. Let the gospels explain the epistles and the epistles the gospels. We do not reject the results of rich scholarship, nor helps from many sources. But first let us get all we can from the Bible. Let each one learn to use it for himself. Go to the fountain and drink deep, refreshing draughts and feel the power and inspiration that comes from God's Holy Word.

In taking in physical food the process is:

1. Mastication. 2. Digestion. 3. Assimilation. It is the same in taking in spiritual food.

First comes searching of the Scriptures: this is mastication.

Second. Prayerful meditation; this is digestion.

Third. The personal acceptance of the truth and its obligations. This is assimilation. This requires time, daily reading and study. "Blessed is the man * * * in his law doth he meditate day and night. Psa. i. 2; cxix. 97, 99. "Meditate upon these things, give thyself wholly to them," were the words of Paul to Timothy.

The teacher must prepare the lesson with a double purpose, first to know it for himself, and second to adapt it to his class. The first involves a plan of study, the second a plan of teaching.

The three best known skeleton plans of study are: the five W's, five P's, and four D's.

1st. When? Where? Whom? What? Why?

2nd. Places. Persons. Parallel passages. Precepts. Purposes.

3rd. Dates. Doings. Doctrines. Duties.

Make a plan of study for yourself. This will develop individuality in your study.

After you have mastered the lesson without lesson helps, then study all helps with a threefold purpose.

1. To get additional light.

2. To correct errors you may make.

3. To get Illustrations.

Some have searched into ancient manuscripts; some have studied the peculiarities of the original tongues; some have delved into the earth for buried mementoes of the past; some have deciphered from monuments the contemporary history of those early days of Bible history. All this and much more is beyond the original investigation of the ordinary student. We should be foolish indeed to reject such sources of knowledge in our study.

Lesson helps gather up the results of scholarship and put them at the disposal of the reader. They are of great help, but should not be used in place of the Bible.

In preparing a lesson for a class the subject matter must be condensed, arranged, eliminated, simplified.

1. Review your study.
2. Think of the special needs of the class.
3. Arrange your material in order.
4. Write out your teaching plan.

A suggestive plan for both study and teaching the Bible school lesson is:

1. Read the lesson with the intervening chapters. Use the Bible only.
2. Fix the connecting links clearly in mind.
3. Read the lesson again and fix in mind the facts of the lesson.
4. Study the surroundings of the lesson, as to authorship, time, place and persons addressed. Draw a pencil map, and fix in memory places named.
5. Study the parallel passages, also marginal references.
6. Analyze the lesson as to its teaching points. What truths need special emphasis. Write them down in order as they should be taught. Retain what is best. Keeping in mind the needs of the class or individual.
7. Make a few, simple illustrations. Illustrate from daily life. Use anything that makes plain the lesson.
8. Think—pray—think.

Decide what personal application you shall make first to your own life, then to that of your pupils.

QUESTIONS FOR TRAINING LESSONS.

1. What does the wise Teacher say in regard to teaching?
2. What is the natural law of life?
3. What is true religious life?
4. What reference does the Apostle make to it?
5. State two things that make better teachers.
6. Give your own definition of a teacher.
7. Give seven elements in the art of teaching.
8. State Paul's charge to Timothy.
9. How does the word "study" and "teach" apply to the Bible teacher?
10. Which is more powerful in developing Christian character, "method" or "example?"
11. What is the pastoral work of a Bible school teacher?
12. Give the key to the first and second propositions.
13. What should be the aim of the Bible school teacher?
14. Write in a note book the most helpful suggestions on "The teacher preparing a lesson." Have a ten minute talk on these in your young people's meeting or teacher's meeting.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Dear ones of the Home department, my last letter gave suggestions for organizing the "Home Circle" class. This is a suggestive name for the class, for much of our chart work will be a circle.

There has been an appeal made for graded work. "Give us work for all ages" is the appeal that comes by letter. If the work is successful it must be suited to all ages. For our "Home Circle" class includes all members of the family circle. It is very difficult to arrange a lesson suited to all ages with limited space for the work. We will give suggestions that will be helpful to those who use the International Sunday School Lessons in the Bible school. Those that have children that attend Bible Schools, should encourage the children by helping them to prepare the lesson at home.

Please cut out and save the outline Bro. Wince has given. It will be helpful in our study.

HOME CIRCLE BIBLE STUDY.

Subject. The book—the Bible. Lesson 1. Text. In the volume of the book it is written of me. Heb. x. 7.

Sing "Search the Bible well."

Heart Melodies, page 1

O ye Christian band,
For the Bible stand;
By the Lord's command
Ne'er give o'er.
Lead the army on,
Till the strife is done
And the cause is won
For evermore.

Responsive Scripture readings. Ps. cxix. 1 to 17. Prayer, "Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes; and I shall keep it unto the end." Psa. cxix. 33. Daily reading and meditation. Psa. cxix. Read repeatedly. Let each member select one verse each day for daily meditation.

Golden text. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." Psa. cxix. 105. Scripture illustration—A lamp.

Give me the Bible! Holy message shining;
My light shall guide me in the narrow way;
Type and promise, law and love combining,
Night shall vanish in eternal day.

Note 1. Before we begin the real study of the book, it is usual, first, to examine the title. What is the significance of these words, Holy Bible? The word "Bible" is of comparatively recent date. It came from the Greek Biblion "little book" and the Greek and Latin Biblia—"books." The Bible is a collection of books; a library of 66 books. Jerome and Latin Christians called the collection of sacred Scriptures "Sacred Library," and Greek Christians "Divine Books." Showing that they regarded them as a collection rather than a single book. During the growth of this collection we will find that they were given different names. First we will search study the [illegible] titles of this collection of books.

1. The Book of the Covenant. Ex. xxiv. 7.
2. Statutes, precepts, judgments, commandments, testimonies. Psa. cxix. 1-8.
3. Oracles. Acts vii. 38; Rom. iii. 2; Deut. iv. 1, 2; Deut. iv. 1, 2.
4. The law. Deut. xvii. 18, 19, 20.
5. The book of the law. Josh. i. 8; Neh. viii. 8.
6. The law, the prophets and Psalms. Luke xxii. 44.
7. The Scriptures. John v. 39; 2 Tim. iii. 16.
8. The Word of God. Heb. 12.
9. The Sword of the Spirit. Eph. iii. 16.

Note 2. For Junior grade. We must remember that our Bible is composed of two collections of sacred writings, called the Old and New Testament. The first collection (called the Old Testament) was complete a long time before Christ was born. We will have a lesson on these ancient and sacred writings later but now we are studying the different titles of these collections, their divisions, and how this collection was arranged in this library of sacred books, our Bible. The word Testament came from a word means "will," "Testament" or "covenant." The Old Testament contains the old covenant or agreement that Moses read to the people and they said "All that the Lord hath said we will do." The people broke this covenant and he told them that he would make a new covenant with the people. The New Testament contains the terms of the new covenant and so it is called the New Testament. So we see there were two covenants but the Old Testament contains very much more than this old covenant or "Book of the Law."

Why, this Old Testament is the most wonderful collection of books or writings in the world. It contains history, biography, poetry, prophecy, prayers, songs and stories, parables, riddles, a long list of genealogies, and through it all there is a red line running. (You want to get your red crayon ready to mark all these.) This line is a line of prophecy leading up to the coming of the "seed of the woman," but we must not talk of this now. You will see in Bible study that its very hard to keep to your subject, there are so many interesting things to look up and talk about.

Besides this "Book of the law" there was the "Book of the Prophets." Acts vii. 42. "Book of the Psalms," Luke xx. 42. Jesus speaks of all these together as the "Scriptures." Paul calls them Holy Scriptures. These were what we now call the Old Testament. The New Testament like the Old is a collection of writings. It contains biography, or the Life of Jesus, history, or the Acts of the Apostles, Letters and Prophecy.

Now if you will draw a cupboard or bookcase we will arrange these books on the shelves as we would in a library. You want five shelves. Divide this book case into two parts. Old Testament on the left side. Law books 5, history 12, poetry 5, Prophets 17. There are so many of these that we will put the 5 major prophets on the one shelf and 12 minor prophets on the other.

Now arrange the New Testament on the right side. Biography 4; History 1; Paul's letters 14; general letters 7; prophecy 1.

This is our Holy Bible, a library of 66 books.

We want our Juniors to teach the primary class so we will give a few questions for the primary grade.

1. What is the Bible called? Word of God. 2. Who was the "me" in our text? Jesus. 3. What did Jesus call the Old Testament? Scriptures. 4. How many Testaments are there? Two. 5. How many books in the Old Testament? 39. 6. How many in the New Testament? 27. 7. How many in the Bible? 66. 8. What is the golden text? Let us repeat it in this verse.

Thy Word is a lamp to my feet, O Lord,
Thy Word is a light to my way;
It shines in my soul like a star by night
And comforts and cheers me by day.

QUESTIONS FOR JUNIOR.

1. What is the title of the Bible given in the memory verse? 2. What is the Bible called in Heb. iv. 12? 3. What is the Word of God called in Eph. vi. 17? 4. Why is the "Word" called a lamp? 5. How many collections of sacred writings? 6. How many of these books did the Jews accept as sacred? 8. How many books are called historical? 8. What books in our Bible do the Jews reject? 9. Arrange the books of the Bible as you find them in our Bible in groups. Law, historical, poetical and prophetical. Draw a circle and write Holy Scriptures in a small circle in the center, and then write the names of the different books of the Bible on the outside circle pointing out. See how many you can write from memory.

Note 3. Senior grade. The word "canon" signifies the list of Hebrew and Greek books belonging to the Bible. "Canonical" means belonging to the authoritative books. The words Apocrypha, Apocryphal, on the other hand, are applied to certain books rejected by Protestant bodies, though they are accepted as canonical by the Greek and Roman churches.

In the Hebrew Bible the books are divided into three classes called "the law, the prophets and the Writings." Jesus recognized this triple division in Luke xxii. 44. It may be that this triple division corresponds to the order of time in which these books were included by the Jews in their canon.

Write brief answers to the following questions. Sign your number instead of your name and send to the "Home Circle Talk." Number 27, In what is Old Testament literature distinguished from all other literature?

Number 5. Is there any thing in the Bible to show in what order the books of the Old Testament were added to the Canon of Scripture. The Old Testament Canon was evidently completed and recognized 300 years before Christ.

Report of Bible School.

As per announcement the Bible School of the churches of God in Indiana, convened in the church at Plymouth, Monday morning, Nov. 19, at 9:30.

The opening of each session consisted of hymns and a prayer. Three sessions were held daily, at 9:30 a. m. 2:00 and 7:30 p. m., each session lasting for one hour and a half.

The first session was led by Brother Lindsay. He began on an outline which starts at creation and leads to Christ, dividing the period into four divisions of one thousand years each. From Adam to Noah being the first period; Noah to Abram the second; Abram to Solomon the third; and Solomon to Christ the fourth.

Brother Wince led the afternoon session, beginning with the Outline published in THE RESTITUTION.

The evening session was a discourse by Brother Lindsay, on "Obedience."

Tuesday morning Brother Wince followed his Outline with "Man," and "The Law of Recurrence."

Tuesday afternoon Brother Lindsay continued the work of Monday morning. In reviewing this work the following are some of the thoughts gathered. "Christ the Sun of Righteousness." "The church gets her light from Christ. The church is the light-bearer."

Tuesday night Brother Lindsay spoke on "Holy Spirit Baptism," on which the seven following points were brought out:—1. Holy Spirit Baptism does not make people better. 2. Neither did it convert any man as a sinner. 3. Water baptism does not effect it in any way. 4. None but the apostles, outside of Christ, could confer it on any one else. 5. It gave only power. 6. It was given to confirm the Word. 7. It had nothing to do with salvation.

At the Wednesday morning session Brother Lindsay compared Ishmael and Isaac, and Isaac and Christ, Isaac being the type, Christ the Antitype.

On Wednesday afternoon, Brother Wince continued on his Outline, taking up the "Nature of Man."

Wednesday evening Brother Wince spoke on "The Gospel is the Power of God unto Salvation."

Thursday morning Brother Wince continued on his outline and in the afternoon Brother Lindsay took up the story of Joseph, types and antitypes. Joseph cast into prison without cause. Christ accused falsely. Joseph's wife a Gentile. Christ's Bride made up of Gentiles. When Pharaoh sent for Joseph he sent a robe to be worn in place of the prison clothes. So when the Spirit goes forth to gather the elect, they too come forth with a royal robe.

Thursday evening Brother Lindsay spoke on "The Holy Spirit, What is it?"

Friday morning Brother Lindsay first gave some Scriptures for Old Testament Types. Then the story of Moses was taken up, leading up to the Tabernacle. Types in tabernacle. Christ our High Priest. High Priest comes out to Priesthood first. Saints to make up priesthood. Then the blessing to the whole world.

Friday afternoon Brother Lindsay continued his work, beginning with the death of Moses, the cause of his death, and then the thought of his successor. The story of Samson and the lion was then brought up and a lesson in overcoming was vividly drawn from Samson's conduct.

Friday evening Brother Lindsay spoke on "What Does it Mean to Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ."

Saturday morning the great dream of Nebuchadnezzar was taken up. The beasts in Daniel vii. 1-8, being compared with the kingdoms in Daniel ii. In other words what Nebuchadnezzar saw as a great man, Daniel, through the Father saw only beasts. The fourth beast spoken of in Daniel's dream was compared with the one described in Rev. xiii. 2, 3.

Saturday afternoon the subject of the "Three Worlds" was taken up and followed closely from the beginning to the end of the Millennial Age.

Thus ended the first Bible School of the churches of God in Indiana. This School, though only one week in length will surely result in much good, all those in attendance being hungry for more. We hope this is a beginning of a regularly established school, sessions of which may be held once a year, at such time and place as the board of management may designate. The next session will, no doubt, be held in next June, and let me say to the young people, as well as to the [illegible] tend this next session. All who were present will join in saying, You will never have reason to regret the time and money spent in this way.

MRS. LYDIA RAILSBACK, Sec'y.

Skeptical "Impossibilities."

When skeptics read the miracles recorded in the Bible they call them "Impossibilities." For instance they read that Christ fed five thousand with five loaves of bread. Matt. xiv. 17. They say of this: "Increasing five loaves to feed so many people and doing it instantly—its an impossibility." Well, Give me one grain of wheat and allow me time enough and I will raise enough bread to feed five thousand. "But here Jesus instantly increased five loaves,—an impossibility," responds the skeptic. Of course the skeptic, the poor skipjack, knows what is possible and what is impossible! Suppose that fifty years ago R. G. Ingersoll had read a verse in the Bible like this: "The apostle Peter was dwelling in Brooklyn, N. Y., and Paul was in Liverpool, England. Peter, therefore, called to Paul, and talked with him for an hour, saith the Lord of hosts." The Colquel on reading this statement, would, of course, immediately pronounce it a "contradiction." He would tell how many miles Liverpool was from Brooklyn; and for $100 an evening he would expose the "absurdities" in the Bible; and as he would tell with grandiloquence how Peter talked with Paul, when he was hundreds of miles away, without cable or means,—how he talked through the air—how that was contrary to "natural law" and "experience,"—what an "impossibility" it was; he would be lauded as a "smart" man by the simple minded. Wireless telegraphy, however, is a fact. Why, friend, there is not a miracle in the Bible which is harder for me to understand and believe, than the modern inventions of men.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS.

An avaricious man is like a sandy desert—sucking in all the rain, and giving back no fruit.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

Youth's Column.

"Some Day."

Little child, beside the stream,
What hast pictured in thy dream?
Floating down the tide of time
To that merry song of thine,
Has the bold in fancy there
Golden castles in the air?

Ah! "some day" thy fare will fade,
Sad-eyed grief thy visions shade;
Time will bleach thy sunny hair,
Touch thy brow with wrinkled care;
Breaking every golden tie,
Friends will flee in falsehood by.

And aweary, in life's street,
Will thy fainting pulses beat,
Coming where the rubbish lies
Of thy youthful fantasies,
Weeping, o'er the cherished dead,
Graves of Hope, thy feet will tread.

Dream no longer, little one!
Life hath much that must be done,
And thy cup of happiness,
God will fill, when others bless;
Better visions give to thee,
When thy youthful fancies flee.

Let thy golden castles fall,
Learn that God is all in all;
Dearer far than gold or fame,
Is the worship of his name;
Take his name and love to-day,
Let the cycled ages pay!

Ruined Boys.

We knew at one time of a city that had three murderers under sentence of death, and they were less than twenty years of age. Is it not shocking to see so many boys going to ruin! One of these murderers was hardly more than seventeen; and he was once a Sunday School scholar. Think of this—from the Sunday School to the gallows! Think of three broken-hearted mothers, besides many other grieved and dishonored friends! Worse than all this is the thought of the judgment that comes after death. The sentence that God pronounces upon the murderer is still heavier to bear than the sentence of our civil law. We cannot forbear giving the dear boys of our homes and Sunday School another warning to keep from bad books, bad company, and bad habits. They are sure to lead to a bad end. There is no safety but in a true Christian life.

The Man Who Wanted to See Jesus.

The Lord Jesus used to walk about [illegible] so that they could see him with their bodily eyes. There was in those days a man who wanted to see Jesus very much, and he was a very rich man. But all his money could not help him to see Jesus. You know there are some things which money cannot do, and this is one of them; money cannot help us to get to the heavenly country and to get near Jesus and God. So this man, who was Zacchæus, could not get near Jesus, because of the crowd that was pressing around him. He could not get into the thick crowd, he could not see over the heads of the people, because he was a little man; he was not tall enough to look over the others. But he wanted to see Jesus so much that at last he ran on and climbed up into a tree, and waited there till the Lord Jesus got up to the place. And then Jesus saw him—he always sees those who really want him—and he stopped and called to him to come down out of the tree. The Lord never passed by any one who was wanting him.

So he stood now, and perhaps he pointed to Zaccheus, up in the tree, or perhaps he only looked at him with that sweet yet piercing look of his which made Peter weep, it was so full of meaning, and then called to him and said, "Zaccheus, be quick and come down, for today I must stay at your house."

So Zaccheus made haste and came down out of the tree very quickly, and he was so very glad to take the Lord Jesus into his house.

But the people were not pleased, they did not like it at all. They said Zaccheus was a bad man, and they grumbled because our Lord went to stay at his house. But Jesus said he had come to seek and to save that which was lost. He had come to this world on purpose to save poor men and women who had lost their way, and he was seeking them out; so when he found one that wanted to be put right, he did not mind what people said, he just went and saved that one.

Well, the people were vexed, but Zaccheus was very glad, and bestood and said like this, "Look, Lord! I'll give half my goods to the poor, and if I have taken anything from any one which I ought not to have done, I will give him four times as much back again."

And Jesus said that man was saved, that he was now in the right way; and he was in the right way, for he was so glad that the Lord Jesus had visited him, and shown him how he came to die that he might be forgiven, that he made up his mind he would show by his acts, that is by what he did, how very much he thanked him for saving him.

You see he believed Jesus,—that is, he felt quite sure he would save him, and then he could not help loving him, and then when he loved him, he could not help trying to please him. When we love people we will always try to please them.

BAPTISM—A PRAYER FOR PARDON THROUGH THE SINLESS ONE.

You may be sure that God wants you to be saved, so that you will not perish or he would not have given that dear and only Son to die for you. He has chosen that blood shall make atonement for sin. But there must be no spot, no blemish, in the offering. The precious Savior did nothing wrong. He always minded God. If he had sinned, if he had refused to obey God, it would not have been possible for him to have obtained forgiveness for you. No sin must be in him who offers himself for sin. If there were any wrong, any stain upon the character of Jesus, we could not come to God through him, God would not have accepted him as an offering. We could not plead to be forgiven, because of the righteousness of Jesus, if he had not been righteous.

But now you can say—"I am not worthy, but Jesus is worthy. I have nothing to give, nothing with which to buy salvation and all the beautiful things in the kingdom, but he has given himself for me; accept the offering, and in accepting it, accept me." "In offering himself, he has secured eternal redemption for me. I come, that I may have it." "Look upon him, and forgive me." "Take all my sins away, for his sake. Put his righteousness over me. Wash me all white and clean in his blood. Let me be pure in thy sight because he did no sin.

You say all this, when you are baptized. Baptism, is not only a picture of your faith in the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus, and of your faith in your own future resurrection through him, but it is also a picture of your death to sin and of the death of sin to you. It is a prayer for pardon. Sin has been your master, you have minded it, you have served it, like a slave serves his master. But when you go under the water you nail that master to the cross. You crucify him. You begin serving God—because you begin minding him when you go under the water. He has told you to be baptized and you do it.

Sin is not your master now, you have slain him. He is dead, and you, in a picture have died to him. There is no one now to hold you in bondage. You have died to sin in baptism, but you have also been made alive in that significant picture—to God. The dead master cannot make the dead slave mind him.

You came out of the water to begin a new life; to begin new service, to be obedient to God. You must mind him now, in everything that you do.

Remember, if you are baptized, that you are in that very act, praying God to forgive you, and to take the dreadful penalty of sin away.—The Friend of the Children.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

Obituary.

Died in Portland, Ore., on Oct. 24, 1906, James F. Eshelman, aged 54 years. He was a native of Lancaster Co., Pa., but grew up to manhood in Canton, O. Afterwards went to Colorado, thence to Seattle, Wash., and within the last few years, he has made his home in Portland. He was ill all summer with an internal growth, but bore his sufferings patiently, feeling hopeful and resigned, knowing that if death came, the "sting" was only for a time, and the "victory" would be a glorious resurrection through our Lord Jesus Christ. His request was carried out, that he should be brought to Seattle for burial, where his mother and other near relatives, are resting in hope, and is the home of his only daughter, a sister, and a brother. These, with his faithful companion are left to mourn their loss.

Dr. Wm. Chapman, his esteemed friend, and brother in the one hope [illegible] mon, giving our reasons from the Scriptures, in a very able manner, for believing that death is an unconscious condition—"We shall sleep but not forever," according to the hymn, so beautifully sung on that occasion. While our hearts mourn, we know in whom our dear brother believed and trusted, and that in faith and hope, he remained firm to the end. May we all meet where there is no more sorrow, no more death, is the prayer of his only sister.

The Gift of Eternal Life.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner, how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa., or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

WILL all concerned take note, the address of Brother D. C. and Sister N. B. Robinson will in future be 595 South Limestone St. Springfield, O.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Glad Hand Shake.

As fortune smiles or frowns across us
While we run the race of life,
And we lose and have to stumble and fall
It lightens the load for us one and all,
When a friend we meet as we run our race
And he gives us a cordial, old-fashioned shake.

The world is clever when you're down and out
In the sweetest music it can make,
It puts us in mind of a cur or toad
When you spy a friend on the road ahead
And walk hand in hand in the old time way,
He gives you a smile and the glad hand shake.

So remember that as Life's road you wend,
The word you speed to the friend in need,
The clasp of your hand and the cheer of your smile
May shorten many a weary mile—
May banish many a sad heartache,
So be sure with your smile and your glad hand shake.

Teacher. The topic for our study to-night is:

THE WORD "WORLD."

Is Christ's Kingdom to be of this world? What does Jesus say?

Arlon. Jesus says: "My Kingdom is not of this world."

Q. When is the world to come to an end?

A. See Matt. xxiv. 3. "As he sat upon the Mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, When shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming and of the end of the world?" The world comes to an end when Jesus comes.

Q. Who turned the world upside down?

A. The disciples? See Acts xvii. 6 "These that have turned the world upside down have come hither also."

Teacher. We have quoted three different texts containing the word WORLD, which cannot be understood apart from the Greek original. Now, I would ask, how could a person, who is not acquainted with the meaning of the original know how to place and understand those three words, seeing that they are translated from three different Greek words having very different meanings? The first of these three words is KOSMOS,—the arrangement of things which exist upon the earth, such as the world of fashion, the political world, the commercial world, the religious world, etc. The second word is AION,—meaning a period of time, an age, or a dispensation. For instance the "Harvest is the end of the world"—age. "Sign of thy comin; and the end of the world," —age, or the present dispensation. "Be not conformed to this world," —age. The third word is OIKOUMENE, —meaning the habitable earth, or land, as for instance, "Hath he not put in subjection the world to come." The inhabitants of the coming age. "That all the world should be taxed." The inhabitants of the Jewish world.

The Common Version does not give the sense of the Greek originals, but translates each word by the one English word "world," which is misleading. I will now quote from the best authority, a number of texts under each one of these words for the benefit of those readers who may not have access to the Greek originals.

THE WORD "KOSMOS."

Matt. iv. 8, Showeth him all the kingdoms of this world.

All this information can be gathered from large and expensive books. How many of you would like to have all this, beside much other matter essential to a more accurate study of the Holy Scriptures condensed into a 200 page book to cost fifty cents, entitled "The Student's Text Book?"

Pledges are now being sent in and entered on my pledge book. I would like to have the pledges all in within the next two weeks. It would be just as easy to do so, as to stretch it over months.

Many need such an aid both for themselves and their children. The sooner the pledges are in the sooner the book can be issued.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

"Do good, and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of time can never destroy. Write your name in kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of thousands you come in contact with, year by year; you will never be forgotten—your name, your deeds will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind as the stars on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as the stars of heaven."

LESSON FOR SUNDAY, DEC. 9, 1906.

JESUS ON THE CROSS.

Luke xxiii. 33-46. And when they were come to the place which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

34 Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them: for they know not what they do. And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

35 And the people stood beholding, and the rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be Christ, the chosen of God.

36 And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar.

37 And saying, If thou be the King of the Jews, save thyself.

38 And a superscription also was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

39 And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.

40 But the other answering, rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?

41 And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds: but this man hath done nothing amiss.

42 And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom.

43 And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in paradise.

44 And it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour.

45 And the sun was darkened, and the vail of the temple was rent in the midst.

46 And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; and having thus said, he gave up the ghost.

Time—Wednesday, April 15, about A D 33.

Place—Calvary, outside the north wall of Jerusalem, on a low hill or rising ground.

With two thieves, Mark xv 27. He was numbered with transgressors, Isa liii 12. Father, forgive them—Jesus doing as he taught, Matt v 44; vi 15. For they know not—Did it through ignorance, Acts iii 17. They parted his raiment, Psa xxii 17. Derided him, Psa cxix 51. Let him save himself—All laugh me to scorn, Psa xxii 7. They gave me vinegar, Psalm lxix 21.

Jesus was born King of the Jews, Mat ii 2; John xviii 37.

One of the malefactors—Matt xxvii 44 says, The thieves mocked him. That might easily be so, as they were hanging several hours, they had time to think, and they saw some strange things. It is also well for us to know and keep in mind that many things that Jesus did and said, are not written, not told, John xxi 25, but enough and even more than enough has been recorded for us to have full faith.

The other rebuked him. Do you not fear God? We are punished justly. Something had wrought a change of mind in this man, but "those convinced against their will are of the same opinion still." This man hath done nothing amiss. 1 Peter ii 22.

Lord remember me—kingdom.

As the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, Acts viii 12, is the key to the Bible, we will give this part of the lesson special attention. The kingdom of Israel—the twelve tribes—the Hebrew nation—was the Kingdom of God. 1 Chron xxix 23. The kingdom lasted about 500 years; from Saul to Zedekiah. On account of wickedness was overturned, ended for a time, until Christ come; it will be given to him. It belongs to him. Ezek. xxi 25-27. Give verse 27 close attention, as it promises the restoration of the kingdom of God, the kingdom of Christ, the kingdom of David.

The promise was renewed by the angel Gabriel, sent from God to Mary the mother of Jesus. He would have the throne of David, the house of Jacob, and the kingdom, Luke i 26-33; 2 Sam vii 12-16.

Thirty years later Jesus came preaching the kingdom of God, Mark i 14, 15. He sent the twelve to preach it, Luke ix 1, 2. He sent seventy to preach it, Luke x 1-11. It was preached in every city and village, Luke viii 1. From these few Scriptures we can assure ourselves that the penitent thief had known the story of the kingdom, but like thousands of others did not recognise the Christ, the Messiah, the King. But when he saw the great signs and wonders that took place between the sixth and ninth hours—noon and three p m—he was, like the centurion and the soldiers, Mat xxvii 54, fully convinced that Jesus was truly the Son of God, the One who would have the kingdom; and now we can well understand why he prayed Lord remember me when you come in your kingdom.

And Jesus said, Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in paradise.

Now let us read that in plain modern language—simple words that all may understand. Indeed I say to you now, you shall be with me in my kingdom. This way of reading the answer is in harmony with every statement of God, and Jesus Christ from Ezek xxi 27 to Rev xxii 20. With equal consistency we may read it, That day you will be with me in paradise—a word of Persian origin—a Royal domain.

When Jesus has come, and all his saints with him, Jude 14, 15, and has filled all the earth with the glory of the Lord, Num xiv 21, and the Lord is praised by all, everything, Psalm cl, this earth will be paradise indeed, and the resurrected and glorified thief will be there.

And Jesus cried, Father, into thy hand I commend my spirit—life. He gave up the ghost—expired. Poured out his soul—life—unto death, Isa liii 12, gave his life—no man took it, John x 17, 18. This precious life was given for us while we were yet sinners. Let us so live, so earnestly strive to live godly, and abound in the work of the Lord, that if we have to give up our lives, we may be able to say with all confidence, Lord into thy hands I commend my spirit.

There is considerable detail given in this lesson, and I advise the earnest student to go over it all carefully. To the teachers I commend the same, but advise them not to try to instruct with the whole lesson, but with the parts that most strongly appeal to their mind and heart—affections.

P. NEILL.

Berean Notice.

Remembering that "he who giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord," and also that it is "more blessed to give than to receive," the Chicago Bereans have made it an annual custom to give dinners at Christmas time to the poor. During the year we have heard isolated Bereans and Bereans living in small towns say that they know no poor to whom to give. So we extend a hearty invitation to all Bereans or older members to co-operate with us in this work. In a large city the poor are easily found, and it is a blessed thing to send to them some of the Christmas joy. We never send any name with the baskets. If any one desires to take part in this work send the money—up to Dec. 16, to Miss Gertrude H. Ellis, 1200 Washington Boulv'd, Chicago; after Dec. 16, send to Lelia E. Whitehead, 5428 Ontario St., Austin Station, Chicago. Please send as soon as possible.

If you would sleep in Jesus, you must live in Jesus; for so only can you insure the blessing, that when your heart and your flesh fail you, he will be the strength of your heart, and your portion forever.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the literal "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Selections.

Our Vocation.

Consistency is a peecious jewel. Let our calling be what it may, all admire a worthy walk—a walk that shall correspond with the principles, aims and objects of that calling. The physician must understand the nature of disease, the power and effect of medicine, he must hold himself in readiness to serve his patients when called. Here are the main features of the physician's calling. Should he be lacking in any of these particulars, would he be worthy of the physician's calling? Certainly not.

And if we take any of the other professions, we shall find that the same principles hold good. Christianity is a "calling," a "vocation." As such it has its principles, its aims and objects. Hence Paul says, "I beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called." Eph. iv. 1. Now if a doctor cannot omit any of his duties and be worthy of his calling, can one be a worthy Christian and omit any of the duties of Christianity? Without hesitation, I answer, no. And just here let me quote the Master's solemn warning: "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." God grant that this warning may sink deep into the heart of everyone that has assumed to wear that "worthy name."

A Habit of Indecision.

There is a great deal of truth in what a gifted writer says concerning habits of indecision or dilatoriness. It is so much of it pure habit that children cannot be too early taught, first the necessity of making up ones mind, and then of acting upon it. The trick of "hanging about," of waiting minute after minute, hour after hour, in work as in play—for idlers never play conscientiously—is often acquired in mere infancy, in imitation of elders and betters, never to be got rid of to the end of life. What is in the boy or girl pure carelessness becomes in the man and woman a confirmed peculiarity, which haunts them like a curse, causing no end of misery to themselves and to all belonging to them. One by one some application is neglected or thrown aside till the last chance of benefiting ourselves or our neighbor can never be recalled; our remorse over an unanswered letter, when the writer has suddenly gone whither no kindly words can reach him any more: our regret over cordial visits unpaid, and pleasant meetings unvalued, till friendship, worn out, dies a natural death, or burns itself to ashes like a fire without fresh coals. Then we may lay the blame on Providence, luck, circumstances; anything or anybody except the true sinners, ourselves—but it is too late. We can no longer help ourselves.

The True Idea.

A pious shoemaker being asked what was his business, replied: "My business is to serve the Lord, but I make shoes to meet expenses." This is the true idea of Christian life and character, and it is a pity it is not more fully realized. Our great business in this world is to serve the Lord, to do his will, and to glorify his name; and everything should be made subservient to this end. "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." So teaches an inspired apostle. But this is not the idea of the great majority, even of professing Christians. Their great business is to make money, and as far as can be seen, secure the comforts and luxuries of this life for themselves and their children, to amass as far as possible, a fortune. The service of the Lord is a subordinate thing an accidental matter, which, if it can be attended to is very desirable. When professing Christians make the service of the Lord their "business," and their worldly pursuits contribute to this end, we will have such a practical illustration of Christianity as will convince gain-sayers.

Plymouth, Indiana, Dec. 5, 1906

This is the season when renewals should be sent in. We have passed through rather a hard year, and trust that our friends will need no urging to renew promptly. We will appreciate your efforts in this line, we assure you. There are a number of the poor that no one has provided for the past year. We have carried them through so far, but our ability is about reached the limit. We dislike to ask for this purpose, but we also dislike to cut one of the aged poor off. Perhaps when it is once known that there is a need in this direction, some who can spare a little will help.

The President's Message to Congress wherein he censures California for her stand against allowing adult Japanese the same school privileges as her small native children, has raised a storm on the Pacific coast, and threats are freely made of resistance to any interference by the federal government. The Californians would welcome war with Japan sooner than give up their point. However, we do not think there need be any alarm in this matter at present. Japan has a wonderful activity, but there is a limit to her resources, and she must have time to recover from the losses of the war with Russia. Then when that time is reached, she will have her hands full with her old foe, for Russia is not idle, and though turned back for a time, her design is not changed. All of Japan's strength will be needed in another direction than toward the United States.

Bible Lessons with Remarks.

THE BIBLE.

IV. Begettal. The reason Paul gives for not being ashamed of the gospel is, "It is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Rom. i. 16. The Greek word translated "power" in this text is dunamis. Our word dynamics comes from this word. Dynamical power enables man to accomplish their work with celerity, and to perform an amount of labor impossible without their aid This word "dunamis" is used by God to convey to our minds the kind of power he uses upon sinners to bring them to repentance and to his favor. The gospel is the power, not a power, not a power among a hundred other powers, but "the power." Now if the gospel is the power God uses to save us, we are not saved by a personal and direct operation of the Holy Spirit. And if the gospel is the saving power it must be the gospel that secures or brings about every prerequisite of salvation, begettal with the rest. Spiritually Paul was a father; he had many sons. The "power" he used in begetting them he explained in writing to the Corinthian Ecclesia: "In Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel." 1 Cor. iv. 15. The begetting power was the gospel; it is the saving power, and the only power. The Spirit of God quickens us, but always by "the words" recorded in the Holy Scriptures. Psa. cxix. 50; Jno. vi. 63. We are begotten by God through the "Word of truth" (Jas. i. 18), by the Word of God (1 Pet. i. 23), by the gospel. Man changes the mind of his neighbor by giving him information; so God changes the mind of the sinner towards himself by revealing his truth, wisdom and love. While the sinner's mind is changed by the instructions imparted to him, still the change is effected by God and the Spirit of God, inasmuch as the means of changing the mind is supplied by God through the instrumentality of the Holy Spirit. If God had not, through the revelations of his Holy Spirit, supplied the requisite knowledge to change the mind it would not have been changed. We are indebted to God for the truth, and to the Holy Spirit for revealing it; therefore the change is properly ascribed to God and his Spirit, although it is the truth which operates on the mind and renews it. The Holy Spirit renews us (Titus iii. 5) but always by knowledge. Col. iii. 10.

V. Conversion. In the Greek conversion is always in the active voice. Conversion is a human effort; we are active, not passive, in conversion. We are converted by using our eyes, ears and understanding. Acts xxviii. As to how conversion is brought about and what does it, we will let David, the inspired prophet of God, instruct us: "Take not thy Holy Spirit from me." "Renew a right spirit within me." Psa. li. 10, 11. "The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, his Word was in my tongue." 2 Sam. xxiii. 2. David had the "Holy Spirit," a "right Spirit;" his "tongue" was used to proclaim God's "Word." Now how did David convert men? After praying for the retention of God's Spirit he says: "Then will I teach transgressors thy way; and sinners shall be converted unto thee." Psa. li. 13. Why, David "converted sinners" and "transgressors" by teaching them God's "way." A man becomes a sinner when he "errs from the truth;" he is converted when he returns to the truth by obedience. Jas. v. 19, 20. The truth, then, is the power God uses to convert transgressors. "The law (doctrine, margin) of the Lord is perfect, converting (restoring, mar.) the soul." Psa. xix. 7. He who hails the law, doctrine or teaching of God's Word is inadequate to restore (convert) the soul, impugns the perfection of the inspired Word. "The law of the Lord is perfect." Jas. i. 25.

VI. Sanctification. The seventh day, Aaron, the tabernacle and the altar were all sanctified. Gen. ii. 3; Lev. viii. 10, 15, 30. When people marry they are sanctified (1 Cor. vii. 14); but they are not more immaculate than celibates. The contracting parties are set apart for each other's use in the matrimonial relation. The sanctification of the seventh day and the subsequent sanctifications of the marquetry Kosmos were one and all a setting apart to the service of God. Now when a sinner is sanctified the same thing happens to him as occurred when the seventh day, the tabernacle and altar, were sanctified, viz: he is set apart to the service of God. He is now to serve God, and let God use him. Now how is a sinner sanctified or set apart for the service of the Lord?

We are sanctified by God (1 Thes. v. 23) and by the Holy Spirit. Rom. xv. 16. Because we are set apart by the Spirit many people have covered the subject of sanctification with a web of mystery. Many a poor soul is groping in chaos, "feeling his way" in the darkness of ancient and modern superstitions, assuming by force of habit that whatever the Spirit of God does, is sure to be of a nature that will flabbergast him. But God, dear reader, is not groggy. He does not mock me with a flatus; he does not ask me to chase a phantom. "God is light and in him is no darkness at all." 1 John i. 5. The "god of this world" (not the God of heaven) gives you inexplicable riddles to blind your mind. 2 Cor. iv. 4. The God with whom we have to do is a "God of light;" and I am certain that before him I am not esteemed fugitious because I seek to know his operations by the Spirit. As a father will teach and simplify recondite subjects to his children, I feel sure that my God, "in whom is no darkness at all," will take you in his arms, dear student, if you ask him; and for the promotion of his glory, and the honor of his great name, and to effect your sanctification, he will make his truth shine.

Our heavenly Father is "Light." As for "darkness," there is none in him "at all." Well, then, since he is the author of the Bible, I am led to believe that it is a Book of Light—that it is not a "dark book." If there is no darkness in God "at all," how could he write a "dark book?" The Bible is not an extravaganza. Its doctrine relative to sanctification, like all other doctrines it formulates, is intelligible and soul-satisfying. The Holy Spirit sanctifies, truly, but how? Well, under the Levitical law, some beasts were sanctified—set apart—for man to use as food; others were forbidden. When Christ ended this law in his death, the Spirit of God said: "Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused (for food,) if it be received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer." 1 Tim. iv. 4, 5. The Spirit sanctifies a sinner just like it does food—"by the Word of God." When the interdict regarding meats in Moses' law was lifted, and when the Spirit said they were all "good" and "nothing to be refused," they were all "clean," "sanctified,"—set apart for use—"by the Word of God." So the Spirit sanctifies a Sinner in the same way. That we are sanctified by faith in God's Word is affirmed (Acts xx. 32) and reaffirmed. (Acts xxvi. 18.) "Sanctify them through thy truth," the Savior prayed, and then gave this explanation of what he meant by "thy truth," "THY WORD is truth." Jno. xvii. 17. We are sanctified by the truth revealed by the Holy Spirit in God's Word. The Word both sanctifies and cleanses. Jno. xv. 3. Christ cleanses and sanctifies obedient believers of the gospel "with the washing of water—baptism—by the Word." Eph. v. 26. When faith in the Word is followed by the "washing of water"—baptism—in the name of the Lord Jesus, we are sanctified—set apart—by God, by the Spirit of God by the truth, by the Word, by faith, by the "washing of water"—baptism. 1 Cor. vi. 11.

Sententious Paragraphs.

"Hope is the mainspring of activity in all the concerns of life."

Every man complains of his memory, but no man complains of his judgment.

We can only shine as lights in the world by bearing the Light of the world within us.

"Teach with authority! Have your beliefs and your doubts, but do not believe your doubts or doubt your beliefs."

Benevolence is not merely a feeling, but a principle; not a dream of rapture to indulge in, but a business for the hand to execute.

"There ought to be nothing vague about religion. Of all simple and clear convictions, what we believe about the eternal verities should be clearest and simplest."

"The philosophy of hard knocks is hard to understand, yet everyone who looks sparely at life recognizes its wisdom. The pampered boy often comes to uselessness, if nothing worse; while his mate who has received rigorous treatment at the hands of the world, attains strength and effectiveness."

"One of the most useless of all things is to take a deal of trouble in providing against dangers that never come. How many toil to lay up riches which they never enjoy, to provide for exigencies that never happen, to prevent troubles that never come; sacrificing present comfort and enjoyment in guarding against the wants of a period they may never live to see."

The English is a "composite" language, because it is composed of words from various other languages. A careful examination of standard authors shows that of every hundred words, about sixty are Anglo Saxon, thirty are derived from Latin, five from the Greek, and the remaining five from the French, Italian, and several other tongues.

The burden of my message to any of my brethren who may read these words is this: We have the best theology in the world, but let us get nearer to the loving heart of Christ, and preach our message with an unconquerable love. Men don't care to listen to our speculations, but they are ready to listen to the positive message of salvation, which it is our privilege to deliver to a perishing world.

That humble current of little kindnesses which, though but a creeping streamlet, yet incessantly flows; although it glides in secrecy within domestic walls and along the walks of private life, and makes neither appearance nor noise in the world, pours, in the end, a more copious tribute into the store of human felicity than any sudden flood of detached bounty however ample.

I cannot but think that the average Christian life of this day wofully fails in the simple, conscious realization of this great truth, and that we are all far too little living in the calm, happy, strengthening assurance that we are never alone, but have Jesus Christ with each of us more closely, more truly, in a more available fashion, and with more omnipotence of influence than they had who were nearest him during the days that he lived upon earth.

"None of us is free from the influence of results. We are prone to estimate success by what we see and hear. This is right, in a measure; but faith is dishonored when we rely on ocular demonstration. God does not promise we shall see the results of work He gives us to do. Our part is to sow beside all waters, leaving all else to Him. Faith is honored of God by our taking Him at His word. We should not be concerned about the results when we have obeyed in the letter and spirit the command to do, to wait, to sacrifice. It may be long in years, in God's own good time, before the fruit of this service is seen."

Signs of the Lord's Coming

Unwise prophetic students have brought the blessed hope into discredit, by setting the exact time of the advent. We may, however, discern the near approach of that grand event by certain prophetic, fig-leaf signs, now increasing in number and clearness. Luke xxi: 29 31.

1. Physical Signs. The powers of heaven will be shaken, the sun and moon clouded, and the earth swept by cyclones, shaken by earthquakes and distressed by fires, pestilence and famine. Nature has always been affected by great moral catastrophes. Luke xxi: 25; Mark xiii: 19, 20.

2. Intellectual Signs. The inventions of genius will control the forces of nature, give rapid transit and increase of knowledge. Scoffing scientists will assert "the uniformity of nature," and deny His coming and all the supernatural. The natural man with his natural theology, gropes through the darkness of nature into the greater darkness of the awful future. He waits for the unknown ferryman, and "the sullen stroke of the muffled oar," to bear him over the river to the unknown shore.

Evil servants will postpone His coming in the desire of their hearts, and signal apostasies will occur. Dan. xii: 4; Matt: xxiv: 48; 1 Tim. iv: 1, 2: 2 Pet. iii: 3, 4.

3. Commercial Signs. Marts of trade and business will be filled with the intense frenzy of worldliness; men and women will be overwhelmed with business and politics, fashion and pleasure, and great Babylon will be in her boomtime of glory. Luke xvii: 26-30; xxi: 34. 35; Rev. i: 11-13.

4. Political Signs. There will be a great national distress, and wars, great fear of things coming on the earth, bombs, bullets and knives, but a delusive "peace and safety" with reference to any judgment from God, and anger at the final proclamation of the gospel. Luke xxi: 25, 26; 1. Thess. v: 14; Rev. xi: 18.

5. Social Signs. Lawlessness against authority in the family, church and state, and treasonable combinations to throw off all wholesome restraint will prevail.

The anarchist, opposer of government, is born of the lawless one, opposer of law, in prophecy. Psa. ii: 1-3; 2 Thess. ii; 7, 8; 2 Tim. iii: 4.

6. Spiritual Signs. A terrible apostasy of unbelief, delusion, lukewarmness, formalism and worldliness among the professed people of God, and false Christs, and priests, and self-styled monarchs and generals. Satan and demon rulers are cast down to the earth, and in accord with the theory of demoniac marriages before the flood, it is reported that a woman has been lately married to a materialized spirit. Matt. xxiv: 12; Luke xviii: 8; Thess. ii: 3; 1 Tim. iv: 1; 2 Tim. iii: 1-5

7. Evangelistic Signs. A great revival of evangelistic zeal in spreading the gospel, and completing the fulfillment of the great commission in all lands. Matt. xxiv: iv; Rev. xiv: 6, 7. All these signs have appeared or are graphically manifested now as never before. Rom. viii: 19-22.

But the exact time of His coming remains unknown. The great clock of God's chronology stopped when Messiah was cut off, and we are in a parenthesis, waiting for the Lord's coming and the seventieth week of Daniel. The first trump awakens the sleeping dead, and the trump thrills the living into immortality, and summons all to meet and greet their Lord.

Although some characteristic of prophecy or a missing link in chronology always obscures the exact time, yet we now know no unfulfilled prophetic event, and we cannot place the tick of a clock between us and that "blessed hope," his coming for his saints with "clouds" of attendant saints and angels.—E. P. Marvin.

Nature's Witness to God.

Suppose that to-morrow morning the sun should rise, inscribed across its surface in letters brighter than its own light, and such as to be visible throughout the illumined half of the world, with the words: "Holy! Holy! Holy! Lord God of Hosts, who was, who is, and who is to come." Let this inscription be made intelligible in all languages, and among all nations. One would think that under that awful light, as it passed over the continents and seas, and from people to people, the dusky tribes of heathendom would quit their idols at once; that, in the high marts of civilization, avarice, malice, and dishonesty, serpents writhing colossal in the hollow streets asin caves, would wither to ashes; that literature, politics, [and] art, on all their frozen hills, would feel the approach of a vernal season beneath this touch of supernatural fire; and that before the slanting rays had passed thrice round the globe, they would have peeled from off the burdened world something of the ulcerous growths of sin, and in time would turn into another channel the course of the dolorous and accursed ages.

To those whose eyes with the secret eyes of science the sun is thus inscribed; and not the sun only, but every natural object—the seas, the mountains, the forest arches, every lowliest violet, the human frame.—Joseph Cook.

Buried—Raised.

"Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."

Did the thought ever occur to you who read the word, that in baptism there is crucifixion? I presume it has, and yet we often wonder why it is that so many gladly receive the truth and when the ordinance of baptism is set like a bar to their path, a wall around the fold, they turn sadly away; rejecting the counsel of God against themselves. They cannot bear to be hung on the cross with Christ, cannot bear the jeers of the rabble world long enough to die in symbol with the divine Son of God.

Crucifixion! crucifixion of the will, of self, of the old life, of all that we have been—and what for? That we may also live with him! We give up our way and obey God that we may be his children and receive the glorious gifts that he has promised to bestow on the willing and the obedient. We are raised from the watery grave to walk in the new life of obedience that by and by as Christ was raised by the glory of the Father, so we too may be raised to die no more. "In the way of righteousness there is life." In the way of obedience there is life. Let the old man of self, die; let him be crucified; come and be buried with Christ and thus yield yourselves to God as those that are alive from the dead. Give up your wills to him as they who will come up in the resurrection will yield to him. Consider yourselves as if already transplanted into that new and soon-coming kingdom, as to the life you are to live, letting it begin by obedience in burial with Christ. No crucifixion is too great to endure, when we think of the glory that will follow. Come, and may God bless you! He will bless you! Prayerfully—S. K. Vince.

Sorrow's Ministries.

Manifold in the Christian life are ministries of sorrow. There are many indeed who never saw Christ at all until the light of some tender beauty faded from before their eyes, and looking up in the darkness, they beheld his blessed face beaming down upon them.

Very many of the sweetest joys of Christian hearts are songs which have been learned in the bitterness of trial. It is said of a little bird that he will never learn to sing the song his master will have him sing, while it is light in his cage. He learns a snatch of every song he hears, but will not learn a full, separate melody, of his own. And the master covers the cage and makes it dark all about the bird, and then he listens and learns one song that is taught to him, until his heart is full of it. Then ever after he sings that song in the light.

With many of us it is as with the bird. The master has a song he wants to teach us, but we learn only a strain of it, a note here and there, while we catch up snatches of the world's songs and sing them with it. Then he comes and makes it dark about us till we learn the sweet melody he would teach us. Many of the loviest songs of peace and trust sung by God's children in this world, they have been taught in the darkened chambers of sorrows.

Many of the rarest beauties of character are touches given by the divine Spirit in the hours of affliction. Griefs, sanctified, soften the asperities of life; they tame the wildness of nature; they burn out the dross of selfishness and worldliness; they humble pride; they reveal to us our own weaknesses, faults and perils; they deepen and enrich our experiences. It has been said that "the last, best fruit which comes to late perfection, even in the kindliest soil, is tenderness toward the hard, forbearance toward the unforbearing, warmth of heart toward the cold, and philanthropy toward the misanthropic." But there is no influence under which these late fruits ripen so quickly as under the power of sorrow. It makes us gentle towards all. Many a home is saved from wreck by a sorrow that comes and draws estranged hearts together again.

Then sorrow cuts the chains that bind us to this earthly life, and sends us out to sea on voyages of discovery. It opens windows in our poor prison life here, through which we get glimpses of the better things of immortality and glory. Especially is this true of the loss of friends by death. We live absorbed in our little earthly life, thinking of no other, our eyes fixed upon the dusty soil at our feet, and not seeing the radiant heavens that glow above our heads. Then suddenly one whom we love is plucked away from our side, and for the first time we begin to look up and to obtain glimpses of the eternal things of the life beyond us.

Thus, viewed from any side, affliction comes as a messenger of God, sent to minister to us in some blessed way. What is needed is that we always recognize this truth, and accept with reverance the messenger and the message.—J. P. Miller.

Again and again God, like the pitying Father that he is, has been compelled to chastise man for man's good, and the history of these chastenings is graven for all time upon the face of the earth. The thorn and the thistle are with us yet, and reminders of sinless Eden. The flood has written the record of its ravages upon every portion of the globe and in the legends of all the children of the earth. The ruins of the great cities of old bear witness to God's effectual denunciation of their wickedness; and the sulphur-streaked hills and vales of Sodom and Gomorrah are voicing perpetual evidence of God's warnings against sin, and his purpose to sweep it from the earth.

"Show me a man who has absolute control over himself, and I will show you a powerful man. The most powerful man in this life is he who has himself under control. Every man is in a sense 'a tamer of wild beasts, and these are the passions.' The question is not how shall he imprison them, but how shall he effect their expulsion. When this is accomplished, he then has achieved one of the grandest of victories. What does Christ say in regard to this? 'He that ruleth himself is greater than he that taketh a city.'"

Doing the Extra Things.

It is doing the little extras,
The things we're not asked to do,
The favors that help one's brother,
To trust in God and you;—

It is stepping out of one's pathway,
To show some poor child his home,
And the laying aside one's pleasure
To help some poor, suffering one;—

It is doing, I say, "the extras,"
The things not looked for, you know,
That will bring us our King's kind notice,
A "Well done," as on we go.

Revelations Chapter xvii.

For definite particulars this is one of the most remarkable chapters in the book. John's attention is arrested by the angel in order to show him "The judgment of the great harlot that sitteth upon many waters." Right here it should be remarked that in chapter 17 every finger post points toward Rome; every specification given by the angel has its counterpart in Rome, and cannot be applied to any other place on the known earth. 1. The harlot is a great harlot: in this we see Rome; and again in the second place "that sitteth upon many waters." The many waters being explained in verse 15 to be "peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." This has received its fulfilment in Rome, be it Pagan, Christian or Papal.

Verse 2, With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication. That Papal Rome is the power symbolized by the harlot seated on the beast, is evident, because of its intercourse with the kings of the earth,—the harlot making the inhabitants drunk with the wine of her fornication.

The civil power, the beast, shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition, verse 8. Perdition being utter destruction proves that this union of the harlot and the beast is the last phase of the power of Rome. In verse 3 we read, So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness. Before proceeding any further it is necessary to have a clear view, an intelligent understanding of what is here symbolized by the wilderness.

Albert Barnes favored the idea that by the wilderness is meant that low condition Rome had reached, about the close of the sixth century, the lowest period of her depression. He says "The chair of St. Peter under the reign of Maurice, was occupied by the first and greatest of the name of Gregory. The sword of the enemy was suspended over Rome; it was averted by the mild eloquence and seasonable gifts of the pontiff, who commanded the respect of heretics and barbarians." Many objections may be urged against this view of what is represented by the wilderness; but one is sufficient to disprove the theory; and that is that it is out of all harmony with the appearance of the beast and the harlot as seen by John. At the beginning of the sixth century the papacy was in its infancy; the ten kingdoms into which Rome was divided, had not yet made their appearance as indicated by the ten horns on the head of the beast. And we learn by Dan. vii. 8 that the ten horns preceded the little horn that plucked up three of the first by the roots.

In the Scriptures we have the account of a literal wilderness, and of a symbolic state represented by a wilderness. In the literal wilderness trees, thorns and thistles grow wild; the land is uncultivated, and in dense forests the light of the sun is obscured. Lions, tigers and wolves have their homes there; and on that account it is dangerous for human beings to reside there. This is not the kind of a wilderness into which the angel conducted John, no indeed, in such a wilderness there is no woman "arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand." Neither did those conditions prevail when the papacy was in its infancy and the civil power of Rome at its lowest ebb. The wilderness into which the angel conducted John is a condition rather than a place.

The wilderness into which John was carried is indicated by the following Scriptures. "I will open rivers in high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys: I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water. I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah tree, and the myrtle, and the oil tree; I will set in the desert the fir tree, the pine, and the box tree together. That they may see, and know.....that the hand of the Lord hath done this, and the holy One of Israel hath created it."

The goodly trees here spoken of represent men, that God will plant in the desert or wilderness; and in this way will create new heavens and a new earth wherein righteousness will dwell: note particularly the "oil tree;" symbol of God's Spirit. The leaves of the goodly trees are for the healing of the nations. The axe will then be laid to the root of every tree that bringeth forth not good fruit. In the wilderness where the harlot controlled the beast, trees of righteousness were as scarce as an oasis in the desert. The fruit that grows on the trees of the wilderness, where the harlot rules is bitter in its effect, and is sour like the grapes of the vine that God brought out of Egypt, and planted in his vineyard.

As the trees of the wilderness entwined with poison ivy, prevents the light of the sun to shine there; so does the harlot and her worshipers who dwell in that condition represented by the wilderness, prevent by their mental darkness the light of the Sun of righteousness to shine into their hearts. The officials of the harlot have their counterpart in the wild beasts of the desert; they watch for the followers of Christ, and pounce upon them like the lion or the tiger and destroy them, and appropriate their substance to themselves. "And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet color;" here we have a noted finger post pointing direct to Rome. I, says Albert Barnes, asked this question of an intelligent man, who had resided in Rome, "What would arrest the attention of a stranger in visiting Rome?" He unhesitatingly replied, "The scarlet color." "This is the dress of the cardinals—their hats, and stockings, being always of this color .....no one can take up a picture of Rome without seeing that this color is predominant." Another finger post pointing to Rome is the "golden cup" in the hand of the harlot: money from start to finish of the lifetime, of the dupes of that system, is the principal thing sought. The invention of the doctrine of purgatory is a rich gold mine to Rome. In the sale of indulgences to commit sin; we behold the depth of depravity, to which it is possible for humanity to sink. "Drunken with the blood of the saints." That this charge is true against the papacy: let the blood shed in the valleys of Piedmont, and that shed in the low countries by the Duke of Alva, and that of St. Bartholomew's day testify. In verse 8 we have an enigma. "The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition." The meaning of this is applicable to no power except Rome. In the last part of the verse, the language is changed a little and reads, the beast that was, and is not, and yet is. The empire of Rome existed for some seven centuries before the Christian era; therefore it is evident that the power symbolized by the beast "was." Now can we find in the history of the empire when it "was not." By reference to chapter xiii. 3, we read of one of his heads, being wounded to death, and of it being healed, and all the world wondered after the beast. Wounded to death, and still lived—enigmatical like the text we are considering; and in verse 14 of this 13th chapter we learn that the wound was by a sword; this will help us in locating the time when the beast "was not." The war of the Goths and Vandals, against the Roman empire is what wounded the sixth head of beast to death. In A. D. 476 Augustulus the last emperor of the west resigned the office of emperor; and Odoacer, the Goth, became the king of Italy; and thus for a time, the empire symbolized by the beast "was not." After a little time signs of life appeared in the dead body, and the Romans for a time acknowledged the authority of the Exarch's of Ravenna; and finally the wound was healed by the rise of the papacy. Then the words "yet is" was fulfilled; "and all the world wondered after the beast." Notice the time when the world wonders after the beast; in chapter xiii. 3 it is after the deadly wound is healed. In chapter xvii. 8 it is when they behold the beast "that was, is not, and yet is." And that was when the 8th or Papal head of the beast, ascended out of the bottomless pit. If one descends into a well, or a pit he looses the light of the sun, by reason of his position; so when we fall into error and superstition, we lose the light of truth; so the rise of the papacy came about on account of the professed Christians falling into error and superstition, that has no bottom nor fact to stand upon, viz. the immortality of the soul, going to heaven at death, and many kindred errors. In verse 9 the 7 heads represent the 7 different forms of government through which Rome passed prior to the rise of the papacy, which is as said in verse 11 "the eighth and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition." We learn from verse 12 that the ten kings were to be a future manifestation from the time John wrote, and such is the record of history. In verse 13 we read concerning the 10 kings, "These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast." History shows how abundantly this prophecy has been fulfilled during the 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th and 15th centuries, up to the time of the Protestant reformation. Then commenced a change in the actions of the kings as foretold in verse 16 "these shall hate the harlot and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire." This process of consuming the harlot commenced with the reformation in the forepart of the 16th century. France has, and is now engaged in casting off the yoke of the papacy. And Spain the most priest ridden country in Europe, is now demanding reform on the question of the rights of the state; as against the claims of the papacy. Truly the mills of the gods grind slowly, but surely.

Verse 18, "And the woman which thou sawest is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth." Now we have come to the last finger post pointing unmistakingly to Rome. Who but Rome has claimed universal dominion over the kingdoms of the earth; and that the papal, and last phase of Rome. It now remains for Spain to do as all the other nations have done and then the consuming process will be complete, and it will then be in order for the destruction of the system "by the brightness of Christ's coming. 2 Thes. ii. 8. Amen.

Exhortations at the Breaking of Bread, Springfield, O.

PHIL. iii. 14

"I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Paul was running for a prize. He was pressing toward a mark for a purpose, the purpose is to obtain the prize of the high calling.

In order to do this he was forgetting those things which are behind. Let us with Paul forget the things we have turned our backs on, and reach forth unto those things which are before.

He tells us in the 7th verse, The things that were gain to me I counted loss for Christ. He counted all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord.

And counted them as refuse that he might win Christ, and be found in him. Why is Paul so anxious to be found in him? He says, That I may know him and the power of the resurrection, and the fellowship of his suffering, being made conformable unto his death.

Dear brothers and sisters, we have believed the glad message of the gospel, and have been made conformable unto his death. Have been planted in the likeness of his death and shall be in the likeness of his resurrection. Are we willing to be counted as refuse that we may win Christ? Are we forgetting those things that are behind, that we may reach forth unto those things which are before?

Do we press, or are we doing just what falls easily in our way. Brothers, sisters, there must be some energy in the race for this prize. We have entered the race and let us so run that we may obtain.

In view of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, can we be satisfied to barely save ourselves? O we dare not take this position. We have enlisted as soldiers, running for the prize. We cannot expect the mastery unless we strive lawfully. We cannot think of ourselves alone. We must consider our brother to provoke unto love and good works, and more is to be considered than our brother and ourselves. The Gospel Light must be held up to others. Do men light a candle and put it under a bushel? No. He puts it on a candlestick, and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven. This figure of speech is used after the Lord had named one what is now termed The Beatitudes, among which we read "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall inherit the kingdom of God."

Does this mean alone, to make peace between parties who have fallen out with each other? It means vastly more. It is the peacemaker that can prevail on man to make his peace with God, which you can only do by telling the glad message of life, and this we can only do by making the cause first of everything in our hearts.

May we press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

N. B. Robison.

REMARKS.

One brother read and admonished, "To be diligent, to make our calling and election sure." A sister, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God." "Wherefore, gird up the loins of you mind, be sober and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought into you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

COLLOSSIANS ii. 6, 7.

"As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him, rooted and built up in him, stablished in the faith as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving. Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death that like as Christ was risen up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life; for if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. Knowing this that our old man is crucified with him that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. If we be dead with Christ we believe that we shall also live with him, knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more, death hath no more dominion over him. There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit. This I say, then, Walk in the spirit and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh." We then, as workers together with him beseech you also that you receive not the grace of God in vain. Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit perfecting holiness in the fear of God. Let us walk honestly as in the day, not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying; for we walk by faith and not by sight. And walk in love as Christ also hath loved us and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour, that ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work and increasing in the knowledge of God. As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord so walk ye in him. Nevertheless whereunto we have already attained let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same things, but if we walk in the light as he is in the light we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son, cleanseth us from all sin.

David Beck.

REMARKS AND SCRIPTURE READINGS ON THE ABOVE LESSON.

"If ye be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God." "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." "When Christ who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." "Let the fear of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body." "Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs. Singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord."—A Sister.

"For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord. Walk as children of the light." "Awake thou that sleepest—and Christ shall give you light. See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil."—A Brother.

"They that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened and heard, and a book of remembrance was written before him, for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name."

Dear brothers and sisters, as we are admonished to walk in Christ, rooted, and built up in him, stablished in the faith, how can we do this without exhorting one another, building one another up in our most holy faith. To this end let us speak often one to another, stirring up our pure minds by way of remembrance, thereby becoming rooted and grounded in him, stablished in the faith.—A Brother.

"Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves; for if any be a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass; for he beholdeth himself and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was; but whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the word, this man shall be blessed in his deed."—A Sister.

Brother Underwood:

Meetings began last night at a point near Camden, Ill. There is a good interest shown. It is a result of the persistent effort of one of God's children who has a faith that she knows is right and a zeal with which to back it up. Last winter while I was at Ripley near here she prevailed upon me to come and give a few discourses in the school-house in her district. I did so feeling that the chief end of my coming was to satisfy her, that little could be done, especially at that time of the year, in such an isolated place. As a result of that meeting one was baptized at that time. She has been at work ever since and I am here now to do what I can for truth. Today we baptized four more into the all-saving name of Christ. Following are their names:—Lawrence Vincent; Mrs. Mary Vincent; Miss Phebe Robbins and Miss Ella Lung. These dear souls need all the help we can give them as they are surrounded on all sides by nearly all of the isms known to man. They are able to put up a good fight for themselves but every help we can give will encourage them just that much. The other good sister of whom I spoke is Sister Mena DeCounter. I speak of her because she is an example of what can be done by one who knows she is right even though practically alone. May God's richest blessing be added to all of these. Pray for them that they may be faithful, and for me that I may not shun to declare the whole counsel of God.

Your Brother in Christ.

S. J. Lindsay.

Dear Restitution.

Will you permit me to say to those of like precious faith, that I am now doing all I can for the Master's cause. I have been in meeting a number of days. On last Sunday evening my own dear daughter became obedient to the faith, and she with another lady was buried in baptism.

While I never seek debates, yet sometimes we have to fight in self defense. On the 30th of November a two days discussion will begin between Brother T. H. Shelton of the Church of God, and a Mr. Johnson of the Disciple Church, on The Kingdom. I am to be moderator for Brother Shelton.

On the 3rd of December, an eight days discussion will begin at Havana, Ark., between Bro. W. L. Gibbs of the Church of God, and Wm. Hix, of the Baptist Church. I will be moderator for Brother Gibbs and preach at night during the discussion.

On the 14th of December I begin a meeting near Barber, Ark., to continue indefinitely. I want the prayers of the household of faith everywhere. A few faithful ones have responded to the call made through The Restitution some time ago. A full report will be given by Sister Daniel in the future.

I am going to do all I can, brethren, and will make another report in the near future. Pray for me.

T. J. Daniel.

Obituary.

Mrs. Anna Skeels, wife of Simeon Skeels, of Columbus, Ohio, died in this city on Nov. 17, 1900, cause, hemorrage of the brain. She suffered for months. Her age was 67 years and 23 days. She is survived by her husband and one son, W. L. Skeels, all of Columbus, Ohio.

In looking back over the history of the life just ended, we are confident that the most important step in that history was the day in which she enlisted as a soldier of the cross, which was some twenty-four years ago. The long struggle is now finished, the crown of glory is now awaiting the faithful one who is resting from labor until the Lord comes in glory. May they all meet as an unbroken family in that glorious day.

Humboldt: Only what we have wrought into our characters during life can we take away with us.

At the Breaking of Bread.

Dear brothers and sisters:

"That ye might walk worthy of the Lord, unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God." Col. i. 10.

When our knowledge of God's love to man increases, and there is a very generous amount of love bestowed on us daily, we do not feel that we walk worthy of the Lord, and I am glad we are not satisfied with ourselves, to only know a little of the Word of God, but that we have a desire to search the Scriptures that we may become more worthy of God, and grow in grace and wisdom. Almost the least favor God bestows upon us is so wonderful that we think, What is man that thou art mindful of him? Man with his rebellious ways. Eph. iv. 1. "I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation, wherewith ye are called." As we expect to be judges and rulers we must be capable of holding those positions, or we will not get it, for God will not allow the wrong persons to rule as is sometimes the case in this present time. 2 Cor. viii. 8. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you, that you always having all sufficiency in all things may abound to every good work; one would judge from the present times that the fruit of good work was yielding a very small crop, but this is to be, is the sign of the beginning of the end; that the higher and better things would be ignored, and the love of gold, getting gain, being rich, (in worldly goods,) the principal aim in life. But we are to give the more earnest heed to obedience to God as we see the signs fulfilled, and the time approaching, for these are to be, before the end comes. John xv. 16, Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain, that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you. How often when we read some verses in the Bible, (although they may be favorites, and often read) we see new beauty and higher thoughts in them, and more of God's love and mercy for mankind. And so we increase in knowledge of God. Heb. xiii. 20. "Now the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever. Amen."

Religious Impressions.

The simplest lessons are often the most impressive and abiding. Many years ago a child was leaving the junior department of a city school for a new home in the country. As he left, his old teacher put her hand upon his head, and in a single simple sentence commended him to God and to good. Years passed, and the child grew up, and read books—English, French, German, Greek—on ethics, and listened to lectures on the same subject, by famous professors in a venerable university. But no word which he read in the pages of ancient philosophers, or listened to from the lips of living teachers, ever proved to him a beacon-light, like the simple words of his old school mistress. In the time of temptation, the learned discussions of the philosophers were forgotten, or were remembered only to cause bewilderment as to the basis of right duty; but the lesson of childhood shone then most clearly in the secret chamber of the soul, and neither time nor doubt had power to dim its radiance. That, nothing could obscure, that, nothing can obscure. Here is the power which God has given to those who train the little ones. Perhaps neither mother nor teacher can lead the child into the knowledge of the world's deeper wisdom; but a few simple, earnest words for God and good, for either, may do far more—they may enter into the very being of the child, to be a strength in weaknesses, a refuge in temptation, and a cherished memory in the long, hard conflict of earthly life. This is not the wisdom which is taught by the speculative thinkers; but it is the best and most enduring wisdom nevertheless.

Good would it be for men if, remembering that life is something more than toil and struggle, they would snatch an hour from their labors, and seek in the stillness of their souls that voice which only the humble can hear, that strength which only the meek can obtain.—James Drummond.

Youth's Column.

What the Birds Teach Us.

Oh! little birds, God taught you songs
In many a changeful note to raise;
We hear you in the bush and cliff,
The meadow, and the dusty way.
He taught us, too, and we can sing
A sweeter, nobler psalm of praise.

Oh! little birds, God shaped your wings
To cleave at will the sunny air,
And soaring up o'er field and wood,
To glide in freedom everywhere.
And he has shaped for us our wings—
The winging swift of faith and prayer.

Oh! little birds, God gave you hearts
Of quiet joy o'erflowing pain;
You live contented through the days
Of Summer sun or Winter rain.
And he can give us godliness
Mixed with content—our greatest gain.

Oh! little birds, God showed you how
To choose the tree that suits you best,
To weave the twig, and straw, and grass,
To bind the clay into your nest.
And he will show us how to build
A home of love, where we may rest.

Oh! little birds, God grants you gifts
Exhaustless through the changing year,
And in the fields you find your food
Sometimes afar and sometimes near.
And he will give us all we want—
His children never need to fear.

Present Truth.

A little girl was recently waked in the night by a severe thunder-storm. The vivid lightning and the crashing thunder at first frightened her, and she called to her mother in alarm. Then as her mother came to her bedside the child said: "But, mamma, my Sunday School teacher told me that Jesus could take care of me now in a thunder-storm just as easily as he did of the disciples in the boat; so I won't be afraid." And she quieted down to her sleep again. That child's teacher had made the right use of a Bible lesson, applying it practically to every day matters. And the result showed how much of good may come from a wisely spoken word by a loving teacher, even to a child out of a Christian home where the same truth has been often spoken before. The freshness of a teacher's word may give new power to a familiar truth which the parents have by no means ignored.

Sermons for the Little Ones. No. 13.

HOW TO GET INTO THE COMMONWEALTH OF ISRAEL.

I wonder if the children can tell me what Commonwealth means? It means a popular government, a realm. We often speak of our Commonwealth, meaning not only the government, but all that it takes to make up these United States.

God has but one Commonwealth. It is made up of the good people of all times. He chooses these to rule his kingdom when Jesus comes.

They will have crowns. Thrones will be given to them, and all the nations of earth will obey their laws. They will be kings, but Jesus will be king over them, because it is said that "He is King of kings and Lord of lords."

God's Commonwealth is a Commonwealth of kings, elected to rule the world.

It is called the Commonwealth of Israel. You can read the first chapter of Ephesians. See, everybody who refuses to believe and obey God is an alien to the Commonwealth of Israel. He can have no part in the government of God's kingdom.

If one of the boys who are reading these papers was grown, and should go to another republic to live, the people would not look upon him as one of them until he had made himself a citizen of their country according to law. Then he would belong to their government, and could take part in making and executing their laws.

So, until you comply with God's law for making yourself a citizen of his Commonwealth, you do not belong to his country or government; you have no right to a place in the kingdom, and God will not permit you to enter into it.

You would like then to know how to become citizens of that Commonwealth wouldn't you? You are far off now, but you are made nigh by the blood of Christ. Again, he is the only door. You already know how to come to the blood, and when you have come to that by being baptized, you belong to the Commonwealth of Israel—you are a prince of the royal house of David.

Now the covenants of promise can only be claimed by members of that Commonwealth. You are strangers to all that was promised to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob until you come to Christ. You must take Christ's name before you can have any portion in the inheritance that God has promised.

You must become God's children by being adopted into his family.

If some great man was going to make you his children, you would have to take his name according to law. You would then be counted of his household, or family, and would share in the inheritance, that would be covenanted to his children in his will.

You would believe him when he said he would make you his heirs if you would take his name, and do in all other things as he commanded you to do. You would believe him when he told you where you would find your inheritance. You wouldn't dishonor his word by looking for it in another place.

Now though you should take his name, and become obedient to the laws of his household, would you expect to get anything named in the great man's will until after his death.

Well, Paul says, "If you have been baptized into Christ, you have put on Christ, and if you are Christ's then are you Abraham's children, and heirs according to the promise."

God gave the inheritance to Abraham by promise, and if you have taken Christ's name for your name, if you are Christ's, then you belong to that family, you are the children of Abraham, and as his children, what was promised to him was promised to you—your names will be found with his in the will or deed, that gives God's land to the meek.

You are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, and as God's children, you have a right to God's land. You have faith in Christ Jesus, because you believe all that God has said about him and his kingdom, and because you are going to obey him, to get all that he has promised to give you.—The Friend of the Children.

Who Makes It Rain?

Little Nettie stood by the library window one morning watching the rain as it fell in a steady patter, patter, upon the wet sidewalks. When she turned her face towards her father, who sat in his big chair before the fire, one might have fancied that her cheeks were wet with the rain too, and that her eyes were brimming full of raindrops.

"O papa," she said with trembling lip, "It has spoiled all my pleasure! Just think of all of us, the nice carriage-load, all going up to the lake on that lovely picnic! and—then—then—look at this rain!"

Nettie's tears poured in showers, and she sank upon the sofa, burying her face among the pillows.

Her father, who dearly loved his little girl, went towards the sofa; and gently placing her upon his knees, he talked very kindly to her about her disappointment, and told her that he was very sorry for her; then he said:

"Nettie, who makes the rain?"

"Why, God makes it, you know, papa. No one else can make the rain come."

"Well Nettie, why does God send the rain? Is it for good, or for evil?"

"For good, I guess; only—only—if he only would not let it rain today, I should be very glad!"

"But supposing God wanted it to rain today, my daughter?" said her papa very seriously.

"Did God really want it to rain today, papa?" said Nettie, with wondering eyes. "Then I will not say another word about it. I want it to rain too, just because God knows what is best. Why, papa, I never thought about it before; but it seems to me that it is a wicked thing to fret about the weather whatever it is; for God sends it, and he always does right. I wish I could forget my wishes when God wants to do anything." And the little girl kneeled upon her knees in her father's lap, and asked God to forgive her for her complaining of the rain, and teach her to love whatever was his holy will, whether it suited her or not, for Jesus Christ's sake.

There was sunshine in that home all the rest of the day, in spite of the pattering rain without; and better than all, Nettie was never heard to utter a complaint about the weather again.

Our Helping Fund

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

T. J. DANIEL.

The Gift of Eternal Life.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner, how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

Evangelistic Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalisation of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

True Worth.

True worth is in being, not seeming—
In doing, each day that goes by,
Some little good—not in the dreaming
Of great things to do by and by.

For whatever men say in their blindness,
And spite of the fancies of youth,
There's nothing so kingly as kindness
And nothing so royal as truth.

We get back our mete as we mete—
We cannot do wrong and feel right,
Nor can we give pain and gain pleasure—
For justice avenges each slight.

The air or the wing of the sparrow,
The look or the bend of a reed,
Both always the path that is narrow
And straight for the children of men.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY, DEC 16, 1906.

JESUS RISEN FROM THE DEAD.

Matt xxviii. 1-15. 1. In the end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

2. And, behold, there was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

3 His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow:

4. And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

5. And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

6. He is not here: for he is risen as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

7. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

8. And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.

9. And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet, and worshiped him.

10. Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid; tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

11. Now when they were going, behold, some of the watch came into the city, and showed unto the chief priests all the things that were done.

12. And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers,

13. Saying, Say ye, his disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept.

14. And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you.

15 So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

In the end of the Sabbath. We may understand that Matthew was using Roman time from midnight to midnight. So the end of the Sabbath would be what we know as twelve o'clock Saturday night. Dawn would be some time between midnight Saturday and six o'clock Sunday morning.

Jesus was put in the tomb, a cave or chamber cut in the rock, the entrance closed by a large stone. The sepulchre belonged to Joseph, a rich man. Matt. xxvi 57 60; John xix. 38-42. The Scripture was fulfilled. He was with the rich in his death Is. liii 9.

The women from Galilee went to see the sepulchre, and returned to prepare spices and ointments and wait for the end of the Sabbath. Luke xxiii. 55. 56.

A great earthquake, likely at the tomb, just as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father Rom vi 4 Many Bible events were testified to by great wonders. The giving of the law. Eccl. xix. The dedication of the temple. 2 Chron. vii. The birth of Jesus. Luke i. The angel—there were two Mark xxiv. 4; John xx. 12. One seemed to be leader or speaker.

His face was like lightning—no wonder the guard shook, and became as dead. The presence of the heavenly often troubled the earthly. Manoah and his wife fell on their faces. Judges xiii. 20 My face toward the ground. Dan. x. 9.

Fear ye not—the kindly and comforting way the angels—messengers—of God spake to the faithful men and women. Fear not Abraham. Gen. xv. 1. Fear not Zacharias. Luke i. 13. Fear not Mary. Luke i. 30.

You seek Jesus—he is risen, as he said. The sign of Jonas was completed and the prophecy of Jesus was fulfilled. Matt. xii. 40 Jesus was put in the sepulchre Wednesday afternoon or evening, April 15, and rose some time between the evening of Saturday, and before daylight Sunday. John xx. 1. He was three nights and three days in the grave.

Tell his disciples and Peter. Mark xvi. 7. A special message to the one who had denied him thrice. Luke xxii. 56 62. He will meet you in Galilee—Jesus had told them so just before he was betrayed. Matt. xxvi. 32. With fear and great joy. They were awed by the appearance of the angels, and while they believed them, yet the story was almost too good to be really true.

Jesus met them saying, All hail—all is well. Be of good cheer. "It is I, be not afraid." Mark vi. 50. They worshiped him—recognized him, adored, honored, reverenced and believed him. When he comes again angels will worship him. Heb. i. 6; Psa. cxlvii. 2, and kings and all nations. Psalm lxxii. 11.

Some of the watch—the guard that the chief priests urged Pilate to set over the sepulchre. Matt. xxvi. 62-66. They had recovered enough to go and tell the priests "all the things that were done"—told of the earthquake, the angels, their unearthly appearance, the stone rolling away, and their terror, and that they fainted. One would think that ought to have convinced and converted the priests and elders; but no, just the opposite, they gave the soldiers much money—bribed them—to tell a falsehood—a lie—that would forfeit their lives, it was death for a soldier to sleep on duty. They took the money and did as they were told. Rome had, and was deteriorating. When we consider what priests professed to be, and ought to be, as the servants of the God of Jacob, Psa. cxlvi. 5, guardians of the eternal welfare of the people. And of the soldiers as the custodians of the temporal interests of the masses, what a disgraceful change had come over both. Think of Aaron in the holy garments for glory and for beauty, upon his forehead, HOLINESS TO THE LORD. Eccl. xxviii. 1500 years after the priests opposed to all that is holy, Acts vii. 51, eagerly, gladly making a murderous bargain with Judas Iscariot. Luke xxii. 1 6. And again buying over the degraded Roman soldiers. By the admission of all kinds of people into the army, the national glory and honor of the Roman soldier slowly but surely gave way to the vulgar and dishonorable hireling. The corrupt elements of priest and soldier a fitting combination to put to death the Lord of glory, and deny his resurrection. There are, today, thousands who deny the death of Jesus by saying that the real Jesus did not die, only his body. Such statements also deny his resurrection. If the real Jesus did not die, he did not rise. "But Christ did rise from the dead." 1 Cor. xv. 20. Let all who "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ," Acts xvi. 31, also believe the angels. "He—the Lord—is not here, he is risen. This great truth is made doubly sure by the Lord himself. "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore. Amen. Rev. i. 18."

The Church of God in Thessalonica was grieving over the faithful who had died. Paul comforted them with the occurrence that if they believed that Jesus died and rose again, they should also believe that he would bring with him—when he comes—those who had died in Christ. 1 Thes. iv. 13-18. "The Lord is risen indeed." Luke xxiv. 34.

An Important Distinction.

In the Common Version, we have the word Life, translated from two different words having two distinct uses, and yet, no distinction is given. This is very misleading to Bible students who are not aware of it, and may not have the means of ascertaining the distinction.

In order to ascertain this distinction it will be necessary to have recourse to the Greek originals.

These two words are PSUCHE and ZOE, the equivalent of the Latin "anima" and "vita." By translating these two words in the English Version, by the one English word LIFE, the distinction does not appear.

To illustrate, let me call attention to John xii. 25, "He that loveth his (psuche) life shall lose it; he that hateth his (psuche) life in this world shall keep it unto (zoen aionion) life eternal."

The word life occurs three times in that one verse; the first two are from "psuche" and the last one from "zoe." From the reading of the Common Version no one could detect the distinction. Again, "That mortality might be swallowed up of (zoe) life." The idea is, that the mortal (psuche) life, may be swallowed up by the (zoe) life. The greater swallows up the lesser.

The "psuche" life is dependent upon the spirit (breath) for its continuity. See Jas. ii. 26. "The body without the spirit (breath) is dead." This is not the case with "Your (zoe) life hid with Christ in God." The animal life is not hid with Christ in God.

"No murderer hath (zoen aionion) life eternal abiding in him." He may have the (psuche) life.

The (zoe) life is called "The Life," as distinguished from (psuche) which is the soul or animal life. "He that hath the Son hath THE life, and he that hath not the Son hath not the life," but he has the soul or animal life.

As many of our readers may not have access to the means of knowing where the word should be "zoe" or "psuche," I have quoted a large number of texts, and given the references.

If you should preserve them, for future use, it will be an help to you in studying the Scriptures.

If I should ever issue a Student's Text Book, the above, as well as other hindrances to Scripture study, will be noted, and put in a more simple form.

Read carefully the following classified passages, and note the marked differences.

Rom. viii. 2, The Spirit of life.

2 Cor. ii. 16, The Savour of life unto life.

Eph. iv. 18, The life of God.

1 Peter iii. 7, The grace of life.

Contrast the word ZOE with the word PSUCHE-SOUL. Young defines PSUCHE as follows:

PSUCHE-ANIMAL SOUL, ANIMAL LIFE, BREATH.

The word life, in the following texts are translated from the word PSUCHE, and means animal life.

Matt. ii. 20, They are dead which sought the young child's life.

Matt. xi. 25, Take no thought for your life.

Matt. x. 39, Loseth his life.

Matt. xx. 28, To give his life a ransom for many.

John x. 17, I lay down my life.

Acts xv. 26, Hazarded their lives.

Acts xx. 24, Neither count I my life dear.

Rom. xi. 3, They seek my life.

Rom. xvi. 4, Laid down his own life

Phil. ii. 30, Not regarding his life.

1 John iii. 16, He laid down his life.

1 John iii. 16, Lay down our lives.

Rev. viii. 9, Had life died.

Rev. xii. 11, Loved not their lives.

Studies like the above are necessary, if we ever expect to acquire an accurate knowledge of Holy Scripture.

There are still other studies where the light is hid, because the Common Version has translated words which differ, by one and the same word.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

While I May.

Papa, shut the book please, let us play together.
I'll be Patty Wotton, in her gown 'o gray,
Mamma'll be a lady, buying all my berries,
And you'll pay in silver. Papa what you say?

Pages of the Poets, open at your sweetest,
You will be tomorrow what you are today,
But the sunny eyes here, if I now deny them,
When I fain would meet them, may have turned away.

Singing birds are songful, only in the springtime;
Blossoms will be blossoms only for a day;
Golden hair is golden, but a little longer;
So I'll make your heart light, darling, while I may.

Ever willing fancy charm away the present,
Summon all thy magic, honor bright to play,
Let my little maiden, in her seventh summer,
Be a wrinkled woman in her gown o' gray.

Sermons for the Little Ones. No. 14.

HOW YOU MUST DO AND LIVE, TO BE GOD'S CHILDREN.

I know you want to become one of God's children, and that you may become heir of God, through Christ, to the beautiful new earth, you want to see it, you want a place in the new Jerusalem, you want a crown that will never fade, and never be taken from you.

You want to live when the time comes for everybody to be glad; when tears will be wiped from all faces, and when death will be no more. And you want "to live on and on forever, and never never die."

Jesus has invited you to come, I have tried to show you how to come. You get a good many blessed things by learning about Jesus, you are made a great deal happier here, by knowing that your future life is secured to you, and that, having secured it, and become God's child, you are all the time under his watchful care— that his blessed angels are ministering to you.

You come to Jesus when you learn about him, you come to him when you believe what God has taught of him, and you come when you are baptized into his death. You learn, you believe, you are sorry for your sins, you turn away from them, you begin doing right by being baptized,—that is coming to Jesus.

But once in the way of righteousness, you must continue to walk in it. You must not stop minding God.

You want to be right that you may do right, and to know how to be right. You must keep on learning about Jesus, you can never become too well acquainted with him. He was gentle, you must be gentle, he was patient, you must be patient; he was submissive, you must learn to submit. It is a hard lesson for your stubborn wills, but they must be made to bend to God's will.

When he says "come ye children hearken unto me, and I will teach you the fear of the Lord," you must not refuse to be taught, for "the fear of the Lord is to depart from evil."

When he says "honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee," you must obey, and the long days of eternity will be yours in the earth made new.

When he says obey your parents, this is right and well pleasing unto the Lord, he is not going to be pleased nor to bless, if you disobey.

You must form the habit of the daily study of God's word. It is not enough to read it, you must try to find out what it means, and what it means to you. Commit portions of it to memory, think about them when at your work, think about Bible texts, until it becomes a perfect delight to do so, make the Bible a real lamp to your feet so that you may always know just what is right to do. You can learn to love it so well that you will scarcely want to study anything else, and no other book has the words that are life to them that find them.

You have learned that Jesus is coming to this earth again, and that he is going to reward you then. You must think about him and about that coming, so much that you will love it, for Paul says, all who love the appearing of Jesus, will have crowns in the day of his coming.

You must love it so well that you will want to hasten it; bring it sooner love it so well that you will be in a hurry to get ready, and to have others learn about it, so that they can get ready.

Prepare yourselves dear children, watch, pray, be sober, live as you would like to be living when he comes.

—The Friend of the Children.

"Think a Minute First."

Apropos of the sayings of the little ones I am reminded of an incident which touched me very much at the time and may find the responsive chord in the hearts of those who are parents. I was sitting on my porch on a pleasant summer morning when up runs my little five year old Bell, intent on a visit to a playmate across the way. "Papa," she asks, "may I go over and play with Carrie awhile?" and when she seemed to discern a dissent in my face, she put her little rosebud lips to mine, and quickly added: "Please don't say no—think a minute first." Was there ever a more charming protest against a hasty and inconsiderate answer? Of course the little girl had her wish. We are, perhaps, all too ready, thoughtlessly, to deny many of the requests of the little ones—things that seem trifling to us, but are everything to them. And when their little appeals come, before letting the "no" rise too quickly to our lips, let us think a minute.

Now, in order that people may be happy in their work, these three things are needed. They must be fit for it; they must not do too much of it; and they must have a sense of success in it—not a doubtful sense, such as needs some testimony of other people for its confirmation, but a sense, or rather knowledge that so much work has been done well, and fruitfully done, whatever the world may say or think about it.

Plymouth, Indiana, Dec. 12, 1906.

Because persons interested cannot get their papers early enough in the week to have the Sunday School lesson as prepared by Bro. Neill, in time to be of use, we this week print two lessons, so that they may appear a week in advance. As everyone is presumed to have a Bible at hand when studying the lesson, we omit the text as it takes up much space and can as easily be read from the Bible.

This is the season when renewals should be sent in. We have passed through rather a hard year, and trust that our friends will need no urging to renew promptly. We will appreciate your efforts in this line, we assure you. There are a number of the poor that no one has provided for the past year. We have carried them through so far, but our ability is about reached the limit. We dislike to ask for this purpose, but we also dislike to cut one of the aged poor off. Perhaps when it is once known that there is a need in this direction, some who can spare a little will help.

In order that our readers may understand the calls we have for aid to send some papers to the aged and poor we give below some sample letters received this week. It is hard to think of denying the paper to such old veterans, and yet it must be plain to you that when our means reaches the limit, we are compelled to unless others will aid. We don't want the money for ourselves, but to enable us to supply these good old soldiers of Our King, who are unable to help themselves through age and poverty. Then if you want to share the blessings that come from doing a kindness to one of God's children, the opportunity is open.

Brother Underwood:

I see that it must have been you that has carried me through this year on The Restitution, and Dear Brother, I hope and pray that God will reward you for it. I can't pay for it, for I am not able to earn enough to live on. If I was able to earn it you would not have to ask me to pay for it. We have taken the paper about 40 years, and Brother Underwood, you will have to take our name off. As ever your Brother in the hope of the glorious Kingdom of God, is my prayer.

G. W. B——.

Ed. Restitution:

After taking The Restitution for about twenty-five years, I am compelled to tell you to stop my paper as I am not able to take it any longer, for I am not able to pay for it. We have enjoyed reading its pages for a long time, but on account of age and means must drop it. Yours in love

Thanksgiving.

The Church of God in Salem, Ohio, held Thanksgiving Services Thursday morning, Nov. 29.

With the exception of two or three the members were all present, those absent were not in town. We had the company of Brother J. C. Thompson, of Cleveland, and several strangers. There was no sermon. It was agreed that the Program would be made up of songs, talks and readings. This was carried out, and many took part as follows:

The services were opened with a song,

My soul for help on God rely
On him alone thy trust repose.

Followed with prayer by Brother Thompson.

Song,

The Savior! O, what endless charms
Dwell in the blissful sound!

Sister Ella Knowls being absent her paper was read.

Psalm lxv. 11.

"Thou crownest the year with thy goodness, and thy paths drop down fatness, thy pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn."

This is one of David's Psalms of praise of thanksgiving for his God's benefits. I will also use this Psalm of thanksgiving this morning "Thou crownest the year with thy goodness." With thy blessings; for our land has been blessed; our store-houses are filled and we as a nation are blessed; for "Thou hast crowned the year with thy goodness." And again, in Psalm xxvii., I thank thee for the promise given there, "Trust in the Lord, and do good, and verily thou shalt be fed," and this promise we know will be fulfilled if we serve and obey him.

This day is set apart for returning thanks to God for the blessing of daily bread, and we must and do thank him; for life could not continue without the supply of daily bread, and my heart today is filled with thanksgiving for the blessing; but how can I find words to thank him for that spiritual bread, the Bread of Life, which was given that we might have eternal life. And again, I thank thee for the privilege of meeting with those of like precious faith, and to learn thy Word, and each year thy Word is more precious; and thy promises have a deeper meaning.

Dear brothers and sisters, let us exhort each other, and pray that we may stand fast in the faith, and I pray God will accept my thanksgiving this morning, and the prayers of all the dear ones, and may we be found worthy to share in the greater blessings which Jesus soon will bring. Eternal life in the glorious kingdom, then indeed will the years be crowned with his goodness.

Ella Knowles.

Sister Ella Burton sent verses to be read.

"Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving." Psalm xcv. 2-4.

"In Zion shall be thanksgiving and the voice of melody" Isa. li. 3.

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving." Psa. c. 3, 4.

She wrote saying, "I want to come but it is uncertain."

Sister Mary Knowles sent the following:

Dear brothers and sisters:

As I could not be with you on thanksgiving day I will send a few lines to be read, as I do not want to be forgotten, neither by the church nor the One we all owe our thanksgiving to. I would surely like to be with you, as there is no company like those of like precious faith. I hope to be able to be at home next Sunday.

With love to all, your Sister,

Mary.

Thanksgiving.

"Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms." Psa. xcv. 2.

"Be careful for nothing; but by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." Phil. iv. 6.

The definition of thanksgiving is: "A public celebration of divine goodness; a day set apart for public acknowledgement of divine goodness." This is very good, to have a day to render special thanks to the Giver of all good things, but alas! among all these blessings, how few remember the Giver, or render thanks to him.

"For the Lord shall comfort Zion, he will comfort all her waste places, and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of melody." Isa. li. 3.

When this is fulfilled, then the earth will be full of true thanksgiving, and may we all, who realize who the Giver of all blessings is, not neglect to honor him.

"Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving." Col. iv. 2. "For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God." 2 Cor. iv. 15.

"Being enriched in everything to all bountifulness causeth through us thanksgiving to God." 2 Cor. ix. 11.

By Sister McCave:

"Be glad in the Lord and rejoice ye righteous. Great is our Lord and of great power; he it is who covereth the heavens with clouds; he prepareth rain for the earth; he maketh grass to grow for food for the beasts; he preserveth the stranger, the fatherless and widows. Blessed be the Lord our God, who is our salvation, who daily beareth our burdens. Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised, for the earth is full of the loving-kindness of the Lord." Everything we have or ever hope to be comes from the Father above, and while we in our humble way offer a prayer of thanksgiving for the many blessings we have enjoyed; for food and raiment, and and all temporal things, we can rejoice in this, that death has had no part among us in the year past; but four persons have been added to the faith, and that we are permitted a portion of health and strength to meet on this, another Thanksgiving morning, and especially do I thank our heavenly Father for his great love which he has showered upon us in the gift of his Son. While we were yet sinners Christ died for us, and I am so glad that I was ever brought to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. What an exalted position to stand in the favor of God to be called sons and daughters of the Lord to be joint heirs with Christ, who is heir of the whole earth.

When all thy mercies O my God,
My rising soul surveys,
Transported with the view I'm lost
In wonder, love and praise.

"O that men would praise the Lord for his mercy endureth forever and his faithfulness unto all generations."

By Sister Neill:

Song,

"Awake my soul, stretch every nerve,
And press with vigor on."

Making a personal application of the words of David this morning I ask, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits unto me" and with him will repeat, "I will offer unto God the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the Lord.

Dearly beloved, in the Lord, we have met together for the purpose of offering up praises and thanksgiving due unto the Giver of all things, and we know that what the apostle James says is true, "Every good and perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights with whom there is no variableness neither shadow of turning." Then the apostle Paul tells us to "give thanks always for all things unto God and the Father, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns, and spiritual songs, making melody in your hearts unto the Lord." Did you notice, we are to give thanks always for all things, not only for life, and health, and strength, and food, and raiment, but also for the trials which refine and purify us. I offer up thanksgiving from a grateful heart today because of the love the Father hath toward us, in that while we were sinners Christ died for us, to redeem us from the curse and to deliver us from the power of the grave. And I thank him because I have understanding and a knowledge of his plans and purposes revealed in his Word. I have obeyed them from the heart and I pray him for help to walk consistently with them. And again, I offer up thanksgiving for the fellowship of those of like precious faith to whom we can go for comfort in trials, and for encouragement when cast down, and with whom we can freely speak of the glorious future in store for all the faithful. But, brothers and sisters, it is with a full heart I offer up thanksgiving when I see the faithfulness, and the earnest endeavor you are putting forth that your calling and election may be sure, and I feel to understand John when he said, "I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth." We have taught a goodly number of you the gospel which is the power of God unto salvation, and our hearts desire and prayer to God for you is, that you may continue in the faith, grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, and that as ye have received Christ Jesus, the Lord, you will walk in him rooted and built up in him, stablished in the faith as you have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving.

David, the Sweet Singer of Israel, breaks forth, "Oh come, let us sing unto the Lord the rock of our salvation, let us come before his presence with thanksgiving and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms." I am rejoiced that we too can do this as David did, with hearts overflowing with love and gratitude for his loving kindness and tender mercies are over us at all times. Amen, and Amen.

By Sister Crawford:

"Behold how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Psa. cxxxiii., and several verses from Psa. cv. "O give thanks unto the Lord, call upon his name."

By Sister Baker:

Reading of Psa. cxi. "I will praise the Lord with my whole heart," followed by most touching remarks.

Song,

The God of harvest praise,
In fond thanksgiving raise
Hand, heart, and voice."

By Sister Annie Burton:

"For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God." 2 Cor. iv. 15. "Being enriched in everything to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God." 2 Cor. ix. 11, 12.

By Brother Thompson:

After kindly greeting and affectionate remarks, he gave an excellent reading on present favors from God, and the glories of the coming kingdom of God. Reference was made to Psa. ii. "Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion." "Every knee shall bow." Isa. xlv. Phil. ii. "The kingdom of the world has become our Lord's and his Christ's." Rev. xi. 15. Then the new rulers—the saints—chosen in every age, from every nation, will sit on the throne with the Lord Jesus Christ. Rev. iii. 21.

By Sister Buckman:

"Continue in prayer and watch in the same with thanksgiving." Col. iv. 2. "Whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, of good report, if any virtue, if any praise, think on these things." Phil. iv. 8 9. Everything created by God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving. 1 Tim. iv. 3-5.

By Brother Buckman:

"O come, let us sing unto the Lord .....Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving." Psa. xcv. 1-4. "For the Lord shall comfort Zion." Isa. li. 3.

Song,

"Come, and let us sweetly join Christ to praise in hymns divine."

"He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord.....He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks." Rom. xiv. 6 9.

By Sister Monroe:

"Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer. Psa. xix. 7-14.

Song,

"Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All to leave and follow thee."

By Bro. Barber:

"Grace to you, and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. I thank my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers." Psa. i. 34.

By Sister Moore:

Words of affection, gratitude and thanksgiving to God that she was able to be present, and for the encouragement of the words she had heard, and the pleasure of the company of those of like faith.

By Ethel Neill:

"Thou shalt keep the feast of ingathering which is in the end of the year when thou hast gathered in thy labor out of the field." Ex. xxiii. 14-19.

By P. Neill:

That no other body of people, knew and realized quite so well why thanksgiving should be made to God, the giver of all good gifts, and from no other should thanksgiving be offered so fervently, freely, gratefully and gladly. The first thanksgiving in this country was in 1621, by the few who came in the May Flower. There was no annual thanksgiving from that time until 1789. It then became annual by custom, and was recommended by the Protestant Episcopal Prayer book to be held the first Thursday in November. In 1863 established as a yearly observance by President Lincoln.

Special attention was called to Deut. xxiv. 19, "When thou cuttest down thine harvest in thy field, and hast forgotten a sheaf in the field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it; it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow; that the Lord thy God may bless in all the works of thine hands." The services were closed by singing:

"We plow the fertile meadows,
And sow the furrowed land,
But yet the waving harvest
Depends on God's own hand."

Dismissed with prayer by Sister Neill. Nearly all present went to the home of Brother and Sister Neill and took dinner together. This had been arranged for by each one sending or bringing something necessary. Afterwards several hours were spent talking over things past and present but with especial joy and satisfaction on things to come. At the close of the day as each prepared for home, words failed them to express their gladness of heart, their unfeigned thanks to God and our Lord, that one could have and enjoy such a gathering, with none to make trouble.

A friend present, whose years are many, said she had never spent a thanksgiving like this. Bro. Thompson stayed over night, and next day visited members at their homes, leaving in the evening for Cleveland, with expression of delight at having been with us, and as we had so much enjoyed his company we reluctantly bade him good by.

Those whose hearts are full of the faith that works by love, can combine in worship and gratitude to God through our Lord Jesus Christ, and thoroughly enjoy THANKSGIVING.

P. Neill.

The Lord is My Shepherd.

Reader did you ever think of how much is meant by the above words, and how many beautiful lessons can be drawn from this short sentence? David knew what he was talking about when he uttered these words. Had he not been a shepherd himself, and had he not risked his life for his sheep? Yea, rather than see one little lamb of his flock destroyed, he, at the peril of his own life, smote the lion and slew him and delivered the lamb out of his mouth. He had led his sheep to the green pastures where there was no scarcity, but they could eat till they were filled, then lie down to rest by the quiet stream, perfectly contented. What more could they want with their present need supplied and no thought or care for the future? No doubt, he thought of all this, and then of God's goodness to him. How he had been delivered time and again from the hand of King Saul, who hunted him far and near to take his life, and numberless other snares and dangers on every hand, from which the Lord hath delivered him, and had exalted him from its "low estate" to a throne. After meditating on all these things he exclaimed, "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters."

David fully understood the position of a shepherd and his sheep, and what could more beautifully illustrate the tender watchcare of the great "Shepherd and Bishop of our souls"? I believe this is the first time in the Bible where the Lord is compared to a shepherd: but it has been echoed and re-echoed down the corridors of time, till I suppose, there is no text in the Bible that has been used more often than this one. Isaiah, looking down through seven hundred and twelve years to the coming of Christ, says, "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd. He shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom." One hundred and twenty-five years later, Ezekiel, through inspiration, catches the same sweet strain, and says, "And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David (Christ the seed of David); he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd." Six hundred and nineteen years afterwards, Christ takes up the same subject and says: "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.....I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father; and I lay down my life for the sheep."

Now, since Christ has taken upon himself the responsibility of a shepherd, cannot we take the humble position of the patient, innocent sheep, and lovingly and confidingly trust him to fulfill the promise in Phil. iv: 19 to "supply all our needs"? Then let us not try to go beyond what he designs that we shall have, lest it should happen to us according to 1 Tim. iv: 9; but let us continually seek the true riches spoken of in 1 Tim. vi: 18 and Jas. ii: 5 For he has promised that if we seek these things first, all other things needful will be added. Mat. vi: 33. "Therefore take no thought (Be not over anxious) saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed?...for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things." Mat. vi: 31, 32. This brings us to the place where we can, like the sheep, look to the Shepherd for all we need, knowing that he has given his life for us, and will "also freely give us all things." Rom. viii: 32.—Selected by W. M. Farley.

Report of Work.

Editor Restitution:

I am still holding meetings at Camden. The weather has been very inclement. The roads are almost impassible. Yet the people come out to hear the Word spoken, some coming as much as three miles on foot. While calling on one of the older residents one afternoon, I expressed my surprise and gratification at the attendance under such weather conditions. He told me that he could in a measure explain why it is so. He said that years ago we had a good old brother who held much land in this vicinity and also owned the old mill which yet stands in the community, and which is still known as the Greenwell Mill. He said that old Uncle Billy Greenwell had a name that was above reproach, that he was conscientious to a fault, and that people knew him only to love and respect him. While many thought him "queer" as to his religious notions, yet they had to respect his life. Uncle Billy was known here as an Advent, as all our people are. My friend also said that there had never been one of these Advent preachers through here until I came, and that the respect that the people were paying to the truth came as much from its adornment in Uncle Billy's life as from any other source. I was also informed that we had another member, who still lives in the community, whose life is a monument to the truth she proclaims.

A widow herself, she follows James' advice to visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction. Her zeal and life speak for themselves. I am not writing to laud these worthy brethren so much as to point out the thought that there are many times when we think our experience amounts to little, and that because we are isolated from others of like precious faith and lonely we cannot have much influence for righteousness in the world. Dear ones, God's words are true. If we are the children of God that we ought to be, if we live the life he has planned we should, there can be no question but that we will count for truth and righteousness sooner or later. We may not always see the fruits in this life, as in the case of Uncle Billy, but we may be sure it will count, and count for us, if not in this life, then in the life which is to come. I have no doubt he saw victory in other directions if not in the direction above represented.

Listen to these words: "Let your conversation be without covetousness: and be content with such things as ye have; for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." Again, "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men." "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord."

We are too prone to "fight for our rights" rather than to suffer wrong, feeling that if we do not do so, we are the losers, heeding not the command rather to suffer wrong than to bring the truth of God into contempt, and forgetting that "the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves.

Let us all take a lesson from the above narrative, and though we be alone or cast down, and though times come when we feel that we are not even a drop in the bucket, let us take heart, and know that God is true and that our lives will count the full measure somewhere, sometime, if we are but faithful. Let us not lose sight of the thing to do that lies before us, in looking for the harvest which has not yet ripened. May God's truth possess His saints everywhere.

Besides the four who were baptized on Sunday, Dec. 2, and included in my former report from Camden, Illinois, I have to report the baptism of Mr. Rolla Hightower and his estimable wife, Minnie on Thursday, Dec. 6, and on yesterday (Sunday, Dec. 9) four more were added to the number. William Robbins and his good wife, Pauline, and Mrs. Alverda Chapman and her daughter, Hettie. This makes ten baptisms for this place within an eight days. The people here seem hungry for the truth. Yesterday we organized a class for Bible study with Bro. Hightower as leader or elder, Bro. Lawrence Vincent, as deacon, and Sister Hettie Chapman as secretary. The interest is very good and the opposition is beginning to turn. Some of these dear ones will have to suffer for their action and will need our best prayers and endeavors in their behalf. We met together yesterday to partake of the emblems for the first time in this place. May this be but the beginning of a grand and glorious end in the Kingdom of God.

Poetry.

The Way of Day and Night.

Where is the way where light dwelleth? and as for darkness, where is the place thereof?—Job xxxviii. 19.

An endless ride on a course world-wide
Is the race of Day and Night.
Day speeds ahead where the dawn is red,
On the path ablaze with light.
Across the seas, to awake the breeze,
And above the hill and glen
He calls Night-cries to the paling skies
Till they echo back again.

And the decks of frost by his wheels are tossed
When the winter hours are cold;
And he dries the dew to the rose-heart, too,
Where it summer nestles rolled,
But he has no rest either East or West
For he must keep on his round
On the course that swirled all around the world
At the hour Time was unbound.

Over earth's broad rim, to the west of Him
The reverse the banners seem,
And there comes the beat of the muffled feet,
Telling Night is on the way.
Then the Night sweeps high in the fading sky,
With her trailing purple cloak,
Till she holds the seas and the evening breeze
In her calming, world-wide hush.

Yet the Night must look at the path Day took
And must hasten o'er plain and steep.
In her arms there gleams all the gold of dreams
And the silver seeds of sleep.
And she flings them over land and sea
To the best or tiny worm in sight—
Then she hurries on at the shout of dawn.
For the Day is come again.

Thus they sweep and swerve up the long, long curve
That is bid from East to West;
And there is no stay on the speedier way—
Neither pause, nor halt, nor rest—
But the two rush on with the dark and dawn
On the path that lies before,
In the endless ride on the course world-wide
Until Time shall be no more.

The Bereans Column.

Dear Bereans:

In James iv. 14 we read whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapor that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away. All life is the same. It all comes from the same fountain. God is that fountain. In him only is life unlimited. The word that proves this statement is immortality, found in 1 Tim. vi. 16. God is light and life and in him is no corruption, and if we keep his sayings, working in his love we may have eternal life. For he will change this vile body and fashion it like unto his glorious body. Then we will be built upon the solid Rock, Christ. As in 1 Cor. x. 4 and did all drink the same spiritual drink, for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them; and that Rock was Christ. For the wages of sin is death but the gift of God is eternal life, and in his service is true freedom. The last great enemy to be destroyed is death. In view of all these things, dear Bereans, let us come unto the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find help in every time of need.

"Stand up, stand up for Jesus,
The strife will not be long;
This day the noise of battle,
The next the victor's song;
To him that overcometh,
A crown of life shall be;
Then with the King of glory,
Shall reign eternally."

EMMA LINDSAY.

JUDGING OTHERS.

"Don't look for the flaws as you go through life;
And even when you find them,
It is wise and kind to be so blind,
And look for the virtue behind them.
For the cloudiest night has a hint of the light,
Somewhere in its shadows abiding;
It is better by far to look for a star,
Than the spots on the sun abiding."

We have a divine teaching on the subject. Our Lord said, "Judge not, that ye be not judged." We do not know what may be the causes of the faults we would condemn in others. If we did we would be more charitable toward them. Some people's imperfections are an inheritance which they have received from their parents. They were born with the weaknesses that now mar their manhood. Or their faults have come through errors in their training and education. With beams in our own eyes we cannot see clearly to pick motes out of our brother's eye. We should train ourselves therefore to see the good, not the evil in others. We should speak approving words of what is beautiful in them, not bitter condemning words of what may be imperfect or unlovely. We should look at others through eyes of love, not through eyes of envy or of selfishness and should seek to heal with true affection's gentleness, the things that are not as they should be.—Selected.

I have been requested to write upon the subject of "Character Building." Character building is of slow growth, it is not something to be formed in a day, in a month, but is a gradual growth from day to day, and year to year, to the end of a life time. Character is that which a person really is, not what he pretends or professes to be. God looks upon the heart. man upon the life, God knows the character, man the reputation. For the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart. 1 Sam. xvi. 7. Character is the only thing we can carry with us to the grave: money, houses, the things of this world, are all laid aside and left behind, character only remains.

A character to stand the test of time and eternity, must be built upon a solid foundation which is found in Christ, "for other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. iii. 11.

Character means everything to a person, especially the young, who are just beginning their building. A good character, for of such I am writing, is made by putting into practice daily, righteous principles of life and duty, a slow unfolding from day to day of the life that is from within. It must be "precept upon precept, line upon line, here a little and there a little." The contrary is true in regard to a bad character, if a man has low, base principles of life, his character will be of that nature, for has not Solomon, the wisest man who ever lived, said: "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Prov. xxiii. 7. It is a good thing to keep a pattern or model continually before our eyes and where may we find a better than in the life of Jesus when he walked among men? He has furnished us the only perfect pattern of life and duty by which to shape our lives. Let us try to follow in his footsteps, ever remembering his noble example, cultivating those beautiful traits of character which he possessed, and so bring our lives as near to his standard of perfection as is possible to make them. God grant we may all form a character acceptable to him.

ANNA L. ADAMS.

FORGIVENESS.

And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any, that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will our Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses. Mark xi. 25, 26. Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times? Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times; but, until seventy times seven. Matt. xviii. 21, 22. We should not go to God, asking pardon for sins, with malice or envy in our hearts. We should have charity and forgiveness toward one another, for how could we ask God to forgive us if we forgive not others. So likewise shall our heavenly Father do also unto us, if we from our hearts forgive not every man their trespasses. Bless the Lord and forget not all his benefits, who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases, and who redeemeth thy life from destruction. Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Matt. v. 3.

PROMISES TO THE OVERCOMER.

Jesus has given many promises to the overcomer. We are to have faith, for faith is the power that helps us to overcome, 1 John v 4, and if overcomers we have gained a victory through Jesus Christ. 1 Cor xv 57. Through faith and patience we are to inherit the promises, so if we be of faith we are blessed with faithful Abraham. In overcoming we have promise of the life which now is, and the one to come. We are to be partakers of the divine nature, and escape the corruption of the world. To the overcomer he will give to eat of the tree of life, and shall not be hurt of the second death, will give power over the nations, and shall inherit all things. Rev ii 17; iii 5. 12, 21. These promises will be realized at Jesus coming, and the resurrection. 1 Peter i 7; 1 Peter i 4, 13; 1 Peter v 4; Job xix 25; Luke xxi 36; Luke xx 35, 36; Luke xiv 14.

QUESTION BOX.

[Interested readers of the RESTITUTION who desire to have Scriptural questions answered in this department, should address Robert G. Huggins Box G, Oregon, Ill. No anonymous communications will be noticed.]

"A LITERAL RESURRECTION."

The statement of your belief as printed on the first page of THE RESTITUTION, on the face of it, has my approval. I do not know, however, what you mean by a "literal resurrection." My understanding of it is at death these bodies are done with. My personality and identity as a person is the same for some score of years, though my body has completely changed; its matter by physiological process every seven years. What do you mean by a "literal resurrection"? Very truly yours.—A Correspondent.

REPLY.

You do not know what we mean by a "literal resurrection." I will explain. Immortal soulism forces its teachers to believe in what they call a "spiritual resurrection," that is, an unreal resurrection. When the body dies the immortal spirit is liberated, set free, raised "spiritually," from the dead! The body is then "done with," as you phrase it. We believe that the resurrection is at the "last day" (Jno. xi. 24), not at death; and that there will be a "literal resurrection" (anastasis, up-standing) of dead ones. That they will be raised to a literal existence (though immortal, if right-eous) as we have here. This view does not commit us to the belief in the resurrection of the atoms which compose the body. Personality and identity do not reside in atoms. An octogenarian is the same person with the same identity as when he was 20 years old, though his body is composed of new material. Since, then, we have the same man here, though composed of new matter, we can have the same man restored to life by resurrection, without raising the same atoms which composed his body when he died. We are real here, though made of different atoms (or matter), at different times; so we believe we will be real hereafter, though made of different substance. Resurrection restores a man to existence who has gone out of existence, and must, therefore, be real or literal.

QUESTION.

Matthew says (i. 17) that from the "Carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations." By counting the genealogy (vs. 11-17) we find there were but thirteen generations. Explain the discrepancy.—Anxious.

REPLY.

Marked eras which ended in an extraordinary event in the Jewish nation, were often roughly, but conveniently, grouped together, as a help to the memory. Such helps were artificial and did not need to be verbally correct. Matthew might have said there were fourteen generations from the Babylonian captivity to Christ, and then have given only five generations in his genealogy, and there would have been no "discrepency." Some six generations are omitted in the genealogy of the priesthood. Ezra vii. 1-5; 1 Chron. vi. 3 15. But when counted right there are fourteen generations from the captivity to Christ. Notice Matthew counts David twice, the last of the first fourteen and the first of the second. Ver. 17. This method of reckoning gives us the right to count the second fourteen as ending with Josiah, who was contemporary with the captivity (verse 11). Begin the third fourteen with Jeconiah, and you will find there were exactly fourteen generations from the Babylonian captivity to the birth of Jesus Christ.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY, DEC. 28, 1906.

JESUS ASCENDS INTO HEAVEN.

Luke xxiv. 36-53.

Golden text. While he blessed them, he was parted from them.

This is a fine lesson, leading up to it we find when Jesus died and was buried, his disciples lost faith and hope in him. "We trusted that he would redeem Israel, Luke xxiv. 21, forgetting that Jesus had told them that he must be slain, and raised the third day. Luke ix. 22. Simon Peter said, "I go fishing, the others went with him." John xxi. 3. Two of the disciples went to Emmaus, about eight miles northwest of Jerusalem. Jesus joined them, having made himself known to them, he vanished, surprised and delighted, they at once returned to Jerusalem to tell the good news. Luke xxiv. 13-35.

As they were speaking Jesus stood among them, though the doors were shut. John xx. 19. As he was now born of the spirit, resurrected, Rom. viii. 11, he could come and go, appear and disappear, no one could tell where he came from, nor where he went to. John iii. 8. Peace be unto you—they were troubled and terrified, thought they saw a phantom, a ghost as superstitious people say. He said, What troubles you? Why do you doubt? Handle me and see for yourselves that it is I myself. I am not a phantom—a ghost. A phantom hath not flesh and bones as you see me have. They were so bewildered—dazed—and so filled with joy, they could not believe their senses. To further assure them he asked for food, and ate before them.

While I was yet with you, before I was crucified—I told you that "all things written in the law of Moses and in the prophets, concerning me, must be fulfilled." This deserves extended comment, but it is not the lesson, and we pass on.

He opened their understanding. He made himself known to them, so fully, both by words and actions, that he cleared their minds of all doubts and fears, and they understood the Scriptures, John ii. 22, that he should be crucified, and rise from the dead, and "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, Acts viii. 12, should be preached among all nations." And it was. Acts viii. 4; Rom. x. 18.

Ye are witnesses—they had heard, and seen and handled. 1 John i. 1, 2. Those who preach the glad tidings of the kingdom now, are not witnesses, but have received, believed and adopted the testimony of the witnesses, and therefore preach and teach.

The promise of my Father—the comforter, the Spirit of truth. John xiv. 16, 17. The Holy Spirit, Acts viii., with which he baptized the twelve apostles. Acts i. 13, 26.

As far as Bethany, about two miles east of Jerusalem. And while he blessed them,—spoke well to them, and of them, and for them, giving them joy and encouragement, "Was carried up into heaven—borne up, ascended, taken up." Acts i. 2. Jesus was the first among men to rise—be raised—from the dead and ascend to heaven. The first fruits of them that slept, 1 Cor. xv. 20, the first from the dead that "ascended up on high." Eph. iv. 8, the first from the dead "that is passed into the heavens." Heb. iv. 14. "The first born from the dead" —pre-eminent in ALL things." Col. i. 18. Enoch was taken alive, Heb. xi. 5; Gen. v. 24. Elijah was taken alive. 2 Kings ii. 11. It was expedient that Jesus should ascend into heaven. Jno. xiv. 8. It was necessary for perfect working out of God's great plan and purpose of salvation. Jesus spent forty days, after his resurrection, and before his ascension, instructing the apostles concerning the kingdom of God. Acts i 1-3.

They worshiped him—no wonder, they were privileged, had advantages and blessings, both conferred—and promised, beyond any men that had ever lived. No one before had ever seen a change from the natural body to the spiritual. None ever had such promises. Matt. xix. 28. His resurrection and ascension had proved to them all that God by holy men, 2 Peter i. 21, had promised.

His ascension was a positive demonstration to them that when he comes again they would be caught up to meet him in the air. 1 Thes. iv. 16-18. For the dead shall be raised, the living changed. 1 Cor. xv. 52.

"They returned to Jerusalem with great joy"—why? Was it because Jesus had gone? No, but all he had told them and all they saw, coupled with the statement of the two men in white apparel, Acts i. 10, 11, answered them that they were indeed blessed above many prophets and kings. Luke x. 23-24. "And were continually praising and blessing God. Let all who have believed the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and been baptized, praise and bless God continually, our reasonable service.

There are some things that are likely to be often repeated in the lesson notes, those who love the truth will love the repetitions. Believing parents, be entreated by the love of God, to see that your children know and understand the glad tidings of the kingdom; it will keep out of their minds many traditions and errors, and bring you much joy.

Teachers be advised—kindly advised to leave out all opinions, teach the Word only. The Word saves, opinions do not. Students, you are anxiously urged to know the Bible, if you should not know any other book.

Berean Notice.

Remembering that "he who giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord," and also that it is "more blessed to give than to receive," the Chicago Bereans have made it an annual custom to give dinners at Christmas time to the poor. During the year we have heard isolated Bereans and Bereans living in small towns say that they know no poor to whom to give. So we extend a hearty invitation to all Bereans or older members to co-operate with us in this work. In a large city the poor are easily found, and it is a blessed thing to send to them some of the Christmas joy. We never send any name with the baskets. If any one desires to take part in this work send the money—up to Dec. 16, to Miss Gertrude H. Ellis, 1290 Washington Boulv'd, Chicago; after Dec. 16, send to Lelia E. Whitehead, 5428 Ontario St., Austin Station, Chicago. Please send as soon as possible.

When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

Evangelising Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Huggins, Box G. Oregon, Ill.

All Brethren in Iowa wishing Evangelistic Meetings during the fall or winter will please make their requests to the Conference Board at once.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

The Gift of Eternal Life.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner, how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

TEACHER TRAINING LESSONS.

"Teach me good judgment and knowledge; for I have believed thy commandments." Psalm cxix.

"Teaching" is causing another to know, hence teaching implies two—a teacher and a learner. It is the teacher's business to find out how much the scholar has retained of previous lessons so that he may begin at the right place—where the scholar's knowledge ends.

Our last lesson ended with a teacher preparing a lesson. By way of review of previous lessons, the connecting thought is found in Psalm cxix. 99, 100, "I have more understanding than all my teachers for thy testimonies are my meditation. I understand more than the ancients because I keep thy precepts." Daily meditation, the power of a holy life, are suggestive themes for our young people.

CLASS MANAGEMENT.

The teacher must first use good judgment combined with knowledge. A scholar learns only as his activities are aroused, directed and enlisted. The principle of co-operation is involved in this, and the teacher must secure the active co-operation of the scholar in order to secure attention and interest.

1. Attention. Webster's definition of "attention" is the act of attending. It may also be described as a concentration of the mind upon any thing or upon any idea. There are many lessons in teaching to be found by giving attention to the great Teacher. The many incidents connected with his teaching furnish good illustrations of his method of teaching. The following incident is a striking illustration and shows the effect of the unexpected in securing attention. Luke xix. 40 to the end. The fact of the incident, "He taught daily in the temple." The unexpected in the incident. "He went into the temple and began to cast out them that sold." The result of the incident, immediate attention. Then he began his teaching: "It is written." In this incident we have two kinds of attention given. In the first case attention was secured by an act.

In the second, appreciative attention was given because of what was said. "All the people were very attentive to hear him." So attentive were they to what he said that "they heard him gladly." Their interest was such that they followed him from place to place as he taught.

Interest is described as the motive power of attention, they certainly are closely connected for the two always exist together. The teacher's aim is to train the pupil so that things that now require an effort of the will in order to direct the attention to them, will by and by claim appreciative attention. This is why we must use various methods in arousing the activities of the pupil. The scholar's attention must be maintained not by compulsion, but by the skill of the teacher. This often requires that the unexpected be introduced to bring the mind of the pupil to the lesson. What we are interested in we attend to; and the business of the teacher is to so arrange the ideas in the mind of the pupil that appreciative attention to desirable things will be aroused.

In relation to knowledge interest has been described as the holding firm to acquired knowledge with the desire to acquire more. So long as a pupil desires to know more about a given subject he is interested and the activities of the scholar may then be directed. One of the definitions of interest is self-activity. This leads us to the most practical deduction. We must secure the co-operation of the pupil in all that we do. Unless the pupil does his share of the work nothing can really interest him.

The teacher usually is tempted to do too much for the pupil. It must be remembered that the teacher's business is so far from being to save the pupil trouble, is to make him trouble of a particular kind. We are all familiar with Watts' remark about the connection between Satan and idle hands. Teachers ought not only to know these lines, but to realize all that it implies. In order to be interested the pupil must share in the work that is going on. To get scholars thus interested and co-operating will make teaching delightful. To be interesting one must be able to look at things from the point of view of the person to whom he is speaking.

An interesting teacher always leaves something for his pupils to do, this is a share of the work they enjoy. An interesting speaker will supply the premises and leave his hearers to draw their own conclusions. If the teacher is able to arouse interest and maintain attention, the question of keeping order will need only the suggestion: Keep the pupils busy. One way of being dull and uninteresting is to say all that can be said on a given subject. So now, we will turn our attention to a short review of a suggestion in THE RESTITUTION, dated November 21, 1906.

A HOME STUDY CLASS.

This was suggested with the International Lesson in mind. If you are following a study by subject or a special theme of course you must follow some different plan. Home study of the Bible school lesson may be secured.

1. By co-operation with parents. Visit the parents and get them interested in assisting in the study and by reporting the progress of the study.

2. By co-operation with scholars, showing interest in their individual progress. Suggesting books for them to read and inviting them to your homes to look over some helpful book. Teachers of young pupils must make modification of suggestive plans to suit circumstances.

THE HOME DEPARTMENT.

To our messenger boys of the Home Department. I would like to meet all of the boys in our Bible School next year. Some boys seem to regard the Bible as a volume designed just for older people. There must be some reason for this, I wonder if it is because that most every body has a Bible of their own, and older folks forget that boys need one too. I believe that if more boys had Bibles of their own that they would take pleasure in reading and stuying for themselves. I hope you all have Bibles. I believe the Bible is a book for boys, and I know you will be interested in your study. You have to learn to study its pages and then it is like digging in a gold mine. There are some things in this wonder book that seem to me were written just for boys. Don't you think that God inspired the Shepherd boy to write some things especially for boys. I do, for he seems to have them in mind many times. In David's beautiful songs, prayers and writings God was talking to you through David. The many experiences that he had are such as are apt to come to any boy or man. How the beautiful words that God inspired him to write fit into a boy's life. How his mind is directed back to his boyhood days, when he was a Shepherd boy on the hills of Judea, when he wrote the 23rd Psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want, he maketh me to lie down in green pastures, he leadeth me beside the still waters." Go to the Book and read the story of David's life, and of the messengers that were sent by King Saul to call David from the fields to the court of the King. How David went with his harps to play before the king. How when Saul became jealous of David, he tried many times to kill him. Then read how the prophet was sent to anoint his head with oil, for he was to be king some day. Don't you think you will appreciate reading these Psalms after knowing the many incidents of David's life that he mentions in his writings. He was human like you are and he made many mistakes, but you will know his heart was right, when you read the Psalms. You must remember when you read about the wicked things that men did, that these are written for warnings. All through the Bible you will find how God's chosen people made many mistakes. God sent messengers to tell them of their many mistakes, sometimes these were angels. The meaning of the word angel is messenger. Sometimes they were prophets. Sometimes God told these prophets to write all he had spoken to them in a book, these writings or books were preserved very carefully and so our Bible grew into this completed volume, we now call the Bible. This is our Guide Book to show us how to live in this world of sin and sorrow.

God has two books in this world, one is the Bible, and the other we call the book of nature. The Psalmist must have read in this book too, out in the night, guarding the sheep, for he says, "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork, day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge." Then in one place he says, Make me to understand thy precepts: so shall I talk of thy wondrous works All these things are for you to read and know for yourselves, and then to apply to your own lives. How much better it is for you to talk about God's beautiful and wonderful works than to forget and speak words that fall from many lips of boys that forget God and take his name in vain.

Make the prayer David uttered your prayer, and never forget what he said, because God was speaking through David to you. The lessons we are studying will help you to reverence God's Word and study it, not as other books, but with a conviction that it is the Word of God. That it contains a revelation from him, a revelation of him, and a revelation of our ownselves. Let the conviction take firm hold of you when you open the Book, that God is here speaking to you. We must allow this Book to have supreme sway over our lives.

This lesson today is a word outline of the books of the Bible. Each word will suggest to you the contents of the book. When you write, "1, Genesis, Beginnings." This will suggest to your mind the contents of that book. In order to turn readily to the different book. First learn the order in which they come: (1) Law, (2) History, (3) Poetry, (4) Prophets. Then learn the title of each division and you will soon turn to your books as readily as an old student of the Bible. Follow the lessons as carefully as you can and if you wish to ask any question, write to the Home Department. Sign your number instead of your name and it will be answered in our home circle talk.

HOME CIRCLE STUDY.

The Book, the Bible. Lesson 2. Text. "In the volume of the book it is written of me." Psa. xl. 7. Note 1, Christ is the center of Scripture. Toward him all its lines converge. In him all its strange voices harmonize and blend; in him its promises and predictions have their fulfilment. One majestic thought runs through it all from first to last, binding together its diversified parts into a single and harmonious whole. The Author of the New Testament is the Author of the Old. One mind pervades them both, the mind of God.

Memory verses. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Tim iii. 16, 17. Sing "Holy Bible." Tune Nuremburg.

Gold text. "Cleanse thou me from secret faults."

Psalm xix. Responsive reading and daily meditation. Read repeatedly. Prayer: "Let the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in thy sight. O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer."

Senior grade. Themes for written work on Psalm xix. "There is a living personal God, the Creator of the universe, as revealed in the Bible and the Book of nature." "Looking at the heart." "Cleansed by the Word." The best theme sent to me will be published.

Junior grade. Topic, Old Testament books. Note 3. Continue your circle of book adding the word outline.

1 The Pentateuch.
1 Genesis, Beginnings.
2 Exodus, Redemption.
3 Leviticus, Laws.
4 Numbers, Wanderings.
5 Deuteronomy, Repetitions.
II. Historical Books.
1 Joshua, Conquests.
2 Judges, Deliverance.
3 Ruth, Love.
4, 5 1 and 2 Samuel, Kingdom.
6, 7 1 and 2 Kings, Kings.
8, 9 1 and 2 Chronicles, Temple.
10 Ezra, Return.
11 Nehemiah, Rebuilding.
12 Esther, Providence.

Note 3 Senior. The titles to the books are an addition to the original writings. The titles of the Old Testament books are chosen to indicate the character and contents of the books, or the writer of the same. The Hebrews took the name of their sacred books from the first word with which each begins, but the Greeks, whom our translators generally follow, take the name from the subject matter of them. Genesis is the Greek title to the book and means "origin or creation." The Hebrews called the book "Bereshith" in the beginning.

"Exodus" Greek, meaning a going forth. Leviticus, because it contains the law of the Levites, or priesthood.

Numbers so called because it gives the census of the Israelites.

Deuteronomy is from the Greek and means, the second or repeated law.

Joshua after its chief character. Joshua means, "The Lord is salvation."

Judges because it is a record of the acts of the Judges of Israel.

Ruth after chief character.

Samuel because of the earlier part being a history of this prophet, Samuel means "asked of God."

1 Kings from the chief character, otherwise known as the "Third Book of Kings" as it is a continuation of the history of 1 and 2 Samuel.

2 Kings from chief character.

1 and 2 Chronicles is the name given by Jerome. They were called the "Words of Days" also called "Things Omitted" that is things omitted in the book of Samuel and Kings which cover largely the same ground.

Ezra from author and principal character. Ezra means help.

Nehemiah named after the author, the word means "Jehovah comforts."

Esther from the chief character.

Note 4, Pentateuch, this term designates the first five books of the Old Testament. Modern critics who regard the book of Joshua as an integral part of this great historical work designates the whole as the Hexateuch, the sixfold book.

QUESTIONS FOR SENIORS.

1 What does the universe teach concerning God? Answer Psa. xix. 1.

2 What does the voice of nature teach? Psalm xc. 2.

3 About what is the book of Genesis?

4 What did the Hebrews take the name of their sacred books from?

5 Give the word outline for each book of the Pentateuch.

6 Give the second division and the outline.

QUESTIONS FOR JUNIORS.

1 Name the first 5 books of the Bible.

2 What was this division of the Bible called?

3 Name the second division?

4 What four names are given the Word of God in Psa. xix.?

5 What seven things are said of the Word of God in Psa. xix.?

6 Name seven things Paul said of the Scriptures in memory verse.

7 What does James say of the tongue in James iii.?

8 Why do we need to pray? Psa. xix. 14.

QUESTIONS FOR PRIMARY.

1 What did the Psalmist call sweeter than honey?

2 What is more to be desired than gold?

3 What does the Word of God do to the eyes?

4 What will it do to the heart?

5 What shall we do to the tongue?

6 Repeat the prayer.

Now sing

"Two little eyes to look to God,
Two little ears to hear his Word,
One little tongue to speak his truth,
One heart to give him now in my youth."

Scripture Illustration for Primary. The 7 branched candlestick. Use yellow crayon for the stick and red for the flame. Write the following word coming out of the flame. 1 Perfect; 2 sure; 3 right; 4 pure; 5 Clean; 6 true; 7 righteous.

Home Circle Talk. Home classes are being formed now. No. 46 reports a class of 7 members. No. 22 reports she thinks she will be able to form a class. Let the good work move on rapidly.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your orders will much more promptly attend to.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Star of Bethlehem.

How many centuries have passed
Since on His natal day
The Magi journeyed from the East
To where the Christ-child lay!
And brightly in the western sky,
To lead their steps aright,
Before them moved the Star of Hope
Throughout that sacred night.
And when upon His holy bower
Their offerings rich they placed,
All sure from Herod's wicked wrath
Their final steps they retraced.

So every year, through every sky,
That star of promise gleams,
And not an eye that knows the light
But sees its radiant beams;
And unto them that far astray
In fields of sin may roam,
It shines with kindly beckoning ray
Again to lead them home;
And whoso'er shall bravely dare
Until his task is done
To follow this unfailing light
The wrath of sin shall shun.

What is the Gospel?

"It is the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus." In other words it is the truth, as taught, and exemplified in the life and character of the Lord Jesus. The truth of God is pure and absolutely good, and generates goodness in the life of every man who in sincerity of heart believes it. It is the staff of life to the honest and good heart. The truth is light, and darkness flees from it. It makes manifest evil doing, and exposes what is false and hypocritical. Jesus could justly say, "I am the light of the world," for he was truly the embodiment of the truth. He endured hardness for the truth's sake, and though put to the proof and tried in every way, came off triumphant because the truth of God was in his mind and instantly at his command under all circumstances, and in every emergency.

A lie originates in ignorance, and often times when ignorance is combined with evil intent. A lie becomes the arrow of enmity and death. Lies are the foundation stones of confusion and mental uncertainty, producing moral feebleness and degeneracy. Light and heat are as essential to spiritual life, as they are to the animal and vegetable economy. Sin and death entered the world through the deceptive influence of a lie, and only by the truth can man recover or regain a standing again in life and peace. It is the truth of God that makes a man conscious of sin, and to see himself as unclean both mentally and morally. When a man who is as the apostle affirms alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in him hears the gospel, he becomes first of all conscious that he is a sinner, and estranged from his Maker by wicked works of wrong doing. Not only do we witness the effect of apostolic preaching in making men conscious of sin, but also the earnestness and sincerity of heart of those convicted. Sincerity coupled with ignorance is often violently cruel as well as blind, but when combined with knowledge it is the cream of goodness. Sincerity will not save a man, and yet salvation cannot be attained without sincerity. It is the man who is sincere at heart, that makes himself an acceptable sacrifice through the operation of the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus. Paul desired his brethren to have an accurate knowledge of things divine, not that they might argue and debate well, nor for the mere defense of a unique theory, but rather for the upbuilding and strengthening of spiritual mindedness as opposed to fleshly lusts.

Clearness of perception is equally essential to spiritual growth, as is digestion to physical vigor. If bodily strength is rooted in sound digestion. Spiritual health must be the fruit of that love of the truth that springs from an understanding heart. The law of the Spirit of life is not merely a statute or command forbidding the overt act of sin, but rather a life giver, power that kills or neutralizes the desire to sin,—it in a word crucifies evil desires, and at the same time, invigorates the mind not only to will to do right, but to perform and practice what is good. This the law given at Sinai could not do. The law said, "Thou shalt not covet, thou shalt not steal, but it imparted no strength, or help to perform what it required. It left its subjects helpless, because of another law which the apostle "discovered working actively in his member" and constituted him a sinner in spite of the mandatory commands of Sinai. Hence the apostle wrote his brethren that "the righteousness of God cannot be attained by the law," and that no man is justified by the deeds of the law." The law of Sinai by antagonizing that "other law" of sin, could and did keep sin alive until the time of reformation, but could not overcome and expel it from its stronghold. What does it avail to say "thou shalt not kill" if envy and hatred is permitted to dwell unmolested in the human heart? The way to stop murder is to kill the root, by renovating the thinking and reasoning of the flesh, and thus purifying the affections, eradicating the human soul of evil desires, making the subject thereof "dead to sin," even hating the thought of sin. The "law of the Spirit of life," is the law of goodness and love, and being also the law of faith, it is the inbreathing of God of a new life, untainted by sin, or evil desire and therefore that creative energy that regenerates and makes one a new creature in Christ Jesus. It reveals the goodness of God, making man sensitive and responsive to his Creator's love, inspiring him not only with the disposition, but also the ability to be obedient to the divine will. It also creates an interest in the Deity's work and purpose, because it reveals his purpose, and just how we as his servants are related to it. To be delivered from mental and moral darkness,—released from the bondage of ignorance and sin, enlightened and renewed in spirit, raised up and made to sit in the heavens of faith and hope is a condition and experience certainly all sufficient to inspire an active and intense desire to know more and see more of the Deity's work in the earth. To cherish the hope of life everlasting, and an inheritance in the kingdom and glory of the Lord Jesus, is certainly such a manifestation of God's goodness and favor that we can hardly conceive how any grateful heart could even tolerate the thought of any thing sinful and offensive to his creator. Indeed this is just what the law of the Spirit of life accomplishes for all who are intelligently and sincerely in Christ Jesus,—they become partakers of his Spirit, and rejoice in hope of his glory. "For the joy set before him he endured the cross, despising the shame." Likewise all his faithful servants are imbued with a like disposition and ambition, for they all drink from a common fountain,—all are looking not at the visible things of the fleeting present, but to the unseen principalities and powers of the age to come. The law of faith and life is not written upon tables of stone, but upon the heart, as promised to Israel in a future time "I will put my law in their inward parts and write it in their hearts," Jer. xxxi., which is also now the experience of all those who have received the love of the truth and are holding fast to the anchor of hope. But says one we must have the law in order to salvation, because "by the law is the knowledge of sin." The knowledge of sin by the law, is what brings us under the curse of the law, and from which curse there is no deliverance provided by the law, for salvation is not to be obtained by the works of the law, and whoever seeks justification by works says the apostle fails, and even to such he says, "Christ will profit you nothing." The knowledge of sin by the law is not merely an apprehension of what sin is, but rather an experimental knowledge, which caused the apostle to exclaim, "O miserable man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of sin," condemned and doomed to death by the law.

There are some well meaning and sincere persons who think to merit God's favor and blessing by keeping the 4th commandment, but it is a vain and foolish effort, be they ever so honest. It however involves a principle of corruption, in that the gospel of itself is not the power of God unto salvation, but there needs to be a mixture of works, human works, a voluntary effort to do something not commanded or required, and therefore a presumptive effort to mix the reasoning of the carnal mind, with the teaching of the Spirit. They that are led by the Spirit, that is the truth, are not says the apostle under the law." The purpose of the law given at Sinai if properly understood would preclude the necessity of showing the folly of seeking justification through Moses, instead of Christ. It is not the law of commandments and ordinances given through Moses that regenerates, and makes anew in Christ. The law of the Spirit of life is the power of God unto salvation. The vital principle is faith, or belief of testimony submitted for our enlightment, that we may be able, as expressed by the prophet, to see and know and consider and understand." It is an intellectual process requiring it is true more or less of time and strength in the way of self application to the study of the Word. The treasures of divine wisdom do not lie on the surface, but must be sought after and searched out, in other words, "Seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you."

In conclusion permit me to say, it is not theory, doctrine or dogma, to be sought after, but rather how and in what way we can be so related to our Creator as to think and act in harmony with his Word and work. The law of the Spirit of life, is the formative energy of God to reform and make new, in a word to create in man a new life or character, spiritually a foretaste of life everlasting—the glory of the divine nature. In this process of creating anew there are the following stages:

1. Begettal by the Word of truth—the gospel.

2. Birth mentally, a new creation, a babe in Christ, as yet undeveloped in character under trial.

3. The period of infantcy and childhood, a time of growing in knowledge of things divine, and especially in the development of moral stamina, and spiritual strength.

4. Mature manhood, enduring hardness and self control, the exercise of patience and love for the truth's sake. Moreover watchfulness, lest we forget things we have heard and received, and neglect the opportunities of the hour, cautious that is fearful of becoming entangled with the affairs of this world, and so overburdened with many cares, unnecessarily exposed to the manifold temptations and trials that come thick and fast where domestic and financial troubles abound. How many have pierced themselves through with sorrow by making haste to acquire riches? How many have come to grief by contracting debts and becoming otherwise involved in business complications and perplexities? The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus is more than meat and drink, for it gives promise of the life that now is, as well as the life to come, but threatens with chastisement all who become indifferent, and irresponsive to its requirements. He that searcheth the reins and hearts, is ever present to comfort and protect his loyal servants, but at the same time demands of the lukewarm repentance, and will give unto every one according to his works. Rev. ii. 23.

Dear Restitution:

I will write a few lines to let the household of faith know that I have not forgotten the glorious faith we so cherish, and am waiting and watching for the glorious appearing of our blessed Lord and Savior to establish that long promised kingdom that shall never fail, but shall come in the fulness of time. We can lift up our voices with praise and joy, giving thanks to our great King and Savior who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel and herald the eternal banner of endless life to a perishing world. Dear brothers and sisters, have we a firm grasp to that great helm which will tow us to that great port of eternal safety, to rest for a season while God's great indignations and judgments shall meet out punishment to an ungodly world? May this sin and sorrow, pain and death soon pass away, and peace and righteousness take its place through eternal ages. I do not want to forget the Conference which was held near Kesler Station on the premises of our esteemed Bro. and Sister Lehman, who did all in their power to make our meeting just what it turned out to be —a glorious success, where we all felt as though we were one large family in Christ Jesus; and to add to this important gathering two dear ones came forward confessing their sins, one being the daughter of the writer. Now dear ones, rejoice with me, I have been rejoicing ever since that grand Conference and expect to as long as life continues. May those dear ones stand firm in the faith, immovable, always cherishing the glorious hope which they have espoused, looking to Jesus the author and finisher of their faith.

A few of the brethren probably would like to know why I am here in New Mexico. I came here soon after the Conference, I thought the climate would cure my disease, which I thought was asthma. So I went home to prepare to come to stay, but found out by examination my disease is incurable heart trouble. I will say this is a cure for throat, lung and asthma, if taken in time, pleasant climate, nice, clever people, far more hospitable than our eastern folk. As to myself I would be most miserable, but with that glorious hope which I have embraced for over thirty three years. I shall be happy in Christ. Love to all of the brethren. Yours in Christ.

A Remarkable Sermon.

The Christian Herald of Oct. 3, 1906, prints a sermon by "Rev." John Balcom Shaw, D. D. on "The Unseen World." He preached it in the Second Presbyterian Church, Chicago. It is, in many ways, a remarkable sermon. He asks and answers two questions: "Do our dead friends know?"

The following extracts from his sermon are his answers to this question: "They do." "Their sensibilities are infinitely keener" than ours.

Then the second question: "Can the dead speak to us?" With "sensibilities infinitely keener" than ours are, you would expect him to say yes to this question; but he strangely says no. He regards hypnotism or mind reading as equivalent to Spiritualism. Then remarks: "If it be not somesuch translation of our own sub-consciousness, how sad and unsatisfactory these communications are. They give us no assurances about departed friends save that they have obviously deteriorated since their entrance into the spirit world." "According to returns which these socalled mediums bring us, immortality must mean insanity, or, at the best, inanity." "They were above such puerile exhibitions as table-rapping and piano-moving when here among us, and their writing was intelligent and sensible, whereas now it seems to have neither reason nor purpose." Because the immortal spirits of the departed have "deteriorated;" because their "exhibitions" are "puerile," "sad," "unsatisfactory," and indicates "insanity" rather than keen "sensibilities," this great preacher decides that it is not the dead speaking to us. Their writing is not "sensible and reasonable" enough to convince him. The dead, he thinks, are "sensible," "reasonable" have very keen "sensibilities"? They are so wise that they make him feel uncomfortable. He says, "I am forced to believe—I could almost wish it were not so,—that the citizens of eternity know what is taking place down here on earth." He then proceeds to talk about "Lessening the joys of heaven." "Your loved ones," says he, "are fully aware at this moment whether you are a saved or an unsaved man. If you are living an immoral life, they are conscious of it and are pained by it." "We have the power to lessen or increase the joy of the redeemed. Pain by right has no place in heaven, but we sometimes actually force it into the hearts of our departed friends." "Man, your mother whom you promised on her death bed you would meet in heaven, knows that up to this hour you have broken your promise, and it lays a weight upon her heart."

From which it appears that heaven is, after all, a poor place to go. Hits joys are lessened by the immoral life of relatives; if their conduct "actually forces pain into the hearts of the departed;" if the instability of a son "lays a weight upon" mother's heart, one might, if his relatives and friends were mean enough, be miserable in heaven. Beloved reader, "prepare to meet thy God." Christ will soon come, and his promise is that you shall have no more "weights," pain, sorrow and death. Let them go to sleyana who will; let us be ready when Christ comes to "enter into the rest" of God's people, and reign with Christ on the earth made new.

Faith.

Much has been written and much has been said from our pulpits in regard to faith and still there seems to be just as much need today as ever to cultivate this oft mentioned grace. Why should we cultivate it? 1st, Because by it the elders received a good report. 2nd, Because if we have the faith of the gospel it will beget love for others within us, and we will neither be barren nor unfruitful in God's work. For Paul says the faith of the gospel works by love, and John says by this we know we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. Therefore we are the sons of God with the promise that we shall be like Jesus, for we shall see him as he is. And if we have this hope in us we will purify ourselves even as he is pure. It is often our boast that we have the faith that was once delivered to the saints. Brethren, we should be careful not to carry our zeal too far, I have seen and perhaps have been guilty many times of the same things. Many of our brethren earnestly contend for the faith and argue for hours that made no effort whatever to take part in our church work. Never attempt to teach a class, lead a prayer meeting, pray in public, or make an open confession to the world that they were really interested in church work. How was it with the Savior? Did not every one know what his life was every day? Why? Because he had faith God would do what he had promised and he showed his belief by his works. As also did Abraham. Now brethren, if we have faith that God will fulfil the promises to Abraham we will cultivate the FAITH that works by love and thereby keep God's commandments and have right to the tree of life and enter through the gates into the city. Will we do it? We must.

O. J. ALLARD.

Those Hast the Words of Eternal Life.

This phrase has lost its meaning. God told the children of Israel he placed before them life or death, blessings or cursings (Deuteronomy). "Choose you this day," we find Christ talking to the sinful woman at the well that he could give her living waters to drink. And again he told his disciples he came to give them life and more abundantly. Now the beauties of the above and the difference as a beautiful diamond and a counterfeit. Yes, still worse, take our life and all is gone, the woful counterfeit who established it on earth, mysterious Babylon, the mother of harlots, the Catholic church. She is the first one that taught a burning hell for immortal souls that don't exist, but she has a purgatory not like her daughters, the Protestant world, who send them all direct to an endless, burning hell. One time I was talking to a Catholic priest and he said, Why, the laws of our country don't punish all alike. He was hissing at the Protestants punishing all alike in an endless hell. Well may our Presbyterian friends get ashamed of this horror and erase it from their creed as they recently did in Chicago. And recently one of our neighbors Mr. Inman was asked where would the righteous be recompensed (in heaven and hell). Our preacher says, No, they will be recompensed in the earth. He had never heard this before, and it was good news and now we see our neighbor out at our meetings. The old theology taught by mysterious Babylon only causes him not to search his Bible. How eagerly he would grasp for life. Seek ye first the kingdom of God and all these things will be added, not seek all these good things and then lose life, for then all is lost, all is oblivion. If we are closed in the grave all is lost.

This Scripture now comes forcibly to me, They shall move out of their holes like bats and be afraid of the Lord when he ariseth to shake terrible the earth. Now it is this false theology that has been taught us that makes us afraid and makes us not desire his coming, when if we had been taught that he would make this earth beautiful and it would bloom as the rose, then we would desire it. Now I have lived half a century and in that time wonderful changes. We are seeing wonders done with electricity, steam, etc. No doubt the former will be used for cooking, and the latter for plowing. Yes, Edison says, The horse will soon be in the past and it seems he will rest. And we also see people having success with the baloon and navigating the air. All this is beautiful, but what if we have to loose life, as the test is soon coming. Jesus is coming and then the saints can navigate the air. They can visit the heavenly planets all though the earth will be their home. Sister E. Hochteller recently said, The remnant whom the Lord thy God shall call. Yes, he is calling them now, "To occupy as kings and priests, and reign with him on the earth." God's ways are higher than our ways. This I said to one who was wishing a burning hell for the wicked. How could I dream of this but God says the wicked shall perish, be as though they had not been, and many who have perished without knowledge will yet be given an opportunity in the age to come will be progressive.

Yours waiting,
MRS. GABRIEL ROHRBACK.

To the readers of the Restitution:

I feel it my duty to say a few words concerning Bro. W. H. Wilson's book, "The Pine Woods Bible Class." While these articles were in THE RESTITUTION I read them with much interest. I have read the most of them again in the book. I find them very interesting and instructive. The questions and answers are so arranged that they will interest the young as well as old. I have spent many years as a teacher and am able to judge in these things. To ask a question and answer it correctly and interestingly requires tact and talent. These two traits are not often found in one person. Bro. Wilson is known everywhere he has been as a profound Bible scholar. In this book he has put his best thoughts. It is now ready, just having come from the publisher's hands. All of "like precious faith" should have one or more copies of this book. It should be out doing a missionary work. In sending this book out you are sowing the good seed of the kingdom of God. Many lessons in this book are well worth the price asked for the book. Hoping that Bro. Wilson may meet with a ready sale for his book we are your brother in the "one faith."

Our wish for each of our readers is that you may enjoy a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

We have so much matter in hand in the shape of communications that we give them preference as much as possible, and give variety. Bro. Joblin has promised to supply some more of his writings soon, so we can assure our readers that we will have some good things for them in the future.

The Japanese trouble with the California education rules is likely to settle itself without violence, and the complete separation of church and state in France is accomplished with less difficulty than was at first apprehended.

The "Messenger" is a monthly magazine published in Glasgow, Scotland. Brother Alex D. Donaldson, 127 Ryerson St. Brooklyn, N. Y. is the American representative. The price has been reduced to 37 cents post paid. Five or more copies to one address at 25 cents a year each. This magazine advocates Conditional Immortality, Baptism by Immersion and the Coming of Christ. Send to above address, and the order will be attended to promptly.

This is the season when renewals should be sent in. We have passed through rather a hard year, and trust that our friends will need no urging to renew promptly. We will appreciate your efforts in this line, we assure you. There are a number of the poor that no one has provided for the past year. We have carried them through so far, but our ability is about reached the limit. We dislike to ask for this purpose, but we also dislike to cut one of the aged poor off. Perhaps when it is once known that there is a need in this direction, some who can spare a little will help.

Exhortations at the Breaking of Bread, Springfield, O.

Lesson Rom. xii. 2

"And be not conformed to this world but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil. Jesus says, The world cannot hate you, but me it hateth because I testify of it that the works thereof are evil. But if you were of the world the world would love his own, but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you, and if the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God, therefore the world knoweth us not because it knew him not.

Where in times past ye walked according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. And what is the exceeding greatness of his power to usward who believe according to the working of his mighty power. For which things sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience. For we ourselves were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived serving divers lusts and pleasures. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God, for it is written he taketh the wise in their own craftiness and the counsel of the forward is carried headlong. Among whom also we all had our conversations in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desire or will of the flesh and of the mind, and were by nature the children of wrath even as others. And this I say, Then walk in the spirit and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.

Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their hearts. Let the eyes of your understanding be enlightened, that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints to give light to them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death to guide our feet into the way of peace.

Then Jesus spake again unto them saying, I am the light of the world he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. And be renewed in the spirit of your mind, for to be carnally minded is death (minding the flesh), but to be spiritually minded (the minding of the Spirit) is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God, and you that were sometimes alienated and enemies in your own mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death to present you holy and unblamable and unreprovable in his sight. So they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit if so be that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you, and if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin, but the Spirit of life because of righteousness. Know ye not that ye are the temple of God and the Spirit of God dwelleth in you. For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God, for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. To an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for us. Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. Wherein we greatly rejoice, though now for a season if need be ye are in heavincss through manifold temptations. That the trials of your faith being much more precious than of gold, that perisheth though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ. For the Word of the Lord endureth forever, and this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you. For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of ourselves it is the gift of God.

Annie Beck.

Romans xii. 2.

Brothers and sisters, our lesson this morning is of twofold importance and full of meaning. Not only is it so to the seeker of truth, but also to those who have obeyed the requirements of the lesson by the change or form of walk in life prior to the putting off of those things Paul calls the "old man." The Dieglott version is, And do not conform yourselves to this age; but transform yourselves by the renovation of your mind—i. e. leave off former desires and love of pleasure we once had so that Bible reading and study was then dull and uninteresting. I apprehend that all now present in this room have passed through the trial of faith and belief of the Word in the act of obedience by a burial of former affections partaining to this life—and in so doing have changed or renovated desires and loves to walk after spiritual things and not after that which is carnal. Having thereby so renewed our mind by love for the truth we want to know and to prove or ascertain what is the will of God—the good and well pleasing, and perfect.—Dieglott.

We know that God is love—he is good and perfect. Then to ascertain what is the good and well pleasing in question, must be something pertaining to ourselves. And to determine this, is first the ground in which the seed, (which is the Word of God) has fallen or been sown. If it has been sown in a good and honest heart, predestinated to be called, according to God's purpose, it germinates and takes root—Leading from conviction which is repentance, to obedience. Continuing henceforth steadfast and unmovable, believing that God is, and that he is the only true God—and that Jesus is God with us and was sent of God to redeem us—keeping our faces Zionward, running the race set before us with patience and godly fear. This is good, and also well pleasing and acceptable to God. How we ought to rejoice that we have been called "out of the darkness unto his marvelous light"—for to be predestinated to be called means to be justified—and Paul says in Rom. viii 30—"that whom he justifies, them he also glorifies." Then to those of the called out ones begotten by the Word of truth who have called many to righteousness, and have brought forth fruit an hundredfold is perfect. And to those who by well doing as outlined from our lesson—will prove when Jesus comes what is that good, and acceptable and perfect will of God, by being found worthy of an entrance into the kingdom of God. The way of life age lasting is a narrow one. We have put our hands to the plough, brothers and sisters, will we turn back, discouraged? Nay, verily—"For to him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of God"—is the assurance given us by John the Revelator in Rev. iii. 12. Let us be patient, brothers and sisters—few we are—"but the Lord knoweth that are his." And we know he is coming again because we believe his Word. And we know he is coming as the great Restorer to judge with equity and justice. Let us then love the Word of God and be conformed to the precepts it contains and the love of fleeting pleasures will vanish away.

Mathilda Woodbury.

John, an apostle of Jesus Christ, sent from God to bear witness of Christ, or the light that all men through him might be saved, or all that would accept him might be saved. As he said, He came to his own, and his own receive him not, meaning the Jews, and lo, I turned unto the Gentiles to take out a people unto my name. But as the words of our text, "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." They were born not of blood, nor will of man, but of God. If we are led by the Spirit of God, then are we sons of God, for we have received the spirit of adoption. And we are then heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ. As the marginal rendering gives it, we have the right or privilege to become the sons of God, and what a blessed privilege it is, to be counted as one of the worthy ones to enter into the kingdom of God, and not only enter into, but to occupy positions of honor therein, some to rule over one and others to rule over ten cities to live and reign and be with Christ, as Paul says is far better. All have the privilege to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name, as Paul says to the Galatian brethren. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster, for ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. If we have been baptized into Christ, and are then neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, male nor female, but are all one in Christ Jesus, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise made to Abraham. When we think of Christ as being our elder brother, and giving his life as a ransom for the sins of the world, or who died that we might live, live eternally in his kingdom, and enjoy all the blessings that are promised to those that obey and serve him, ought we not then be up and doing while it is yet light, for the night cometh wherein no man can work. Put not your light under a bushel, but let your light shine that others may see your good works. And we hope that many others may yet see the light, and come to a knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ before he gets the full number that he is today taking from among the Gentiles, and may we all so live that when our summons comes to go down into the valley and shadow of death, we may go with the full assurance that when he comes, we will then be raised to immortality, and live and reign with him eternally.

Review of the Lessons.

Lesson 1. The Two Great Commandments.

Golden text—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart. Mark xii 30.

Lesson 2. The Ten Virgins.

Golden text—Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh. Mat xxv 13.

Lesson 3. The Parable of the Talents.

Golden text—A faithful man shall abound with blessings. Proverbs xxviii 20.

Lesson 4. Jesus anointed in Bethany.

Golden text—She hath wrought a good work upon me. Mat xxvi 10.

Lesson 5. The Lord's Supper.

Golden text—This do in remembrance of me. 1 Cor xi 24.

Lesson 6 Jesus in Gethsemane.

Golden text—Not my will but thine, be done. Luke xxii 42.

Lesson 7. Jesus before Caiaphas.

Golden text—He is despised and rejected of men. Isa liii 3.

Lesson 8. The World's Temperance Sunday.

Golden text—I keep under my body and bring it into subjection. 1 Cor ix 27.

Lesson 9. Jesus before Pilate.

Golden text—Then said Pilate, I find no fault in this man. Luke xxiii 4.

Lesson 10. Jesus on the Cross.

Golden text—Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. Luk xxiii 34.

Lesson 11. Jesus risen from the dead.

Golden text—He is risen, even as he said. Mat xxiii 6.

Lesson 12. Jesus ascends into heaven.

Golden text—While he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven. Luke xxiv 51.

For consideration today there is given the title of the lesson and the Golden text. Long experience has proved to me that it is impossible, in the usual class-time to do more than give a passing notice of each lesson for the past quarter. The review can be made interesting by giving each scholar a lesson title and golden text to recite. The Sunday before review give the pupil a slip of paper with lesson number and date, title and reference of golden text. The teacher calls for them in rotation.

This with a few leading questions, will occupy the time to good advantage.

The lessons for the coming year begin with the first chapter in Genesis, and will be full of interest and information. All who search as for hidden treasure will find many jewels of thought.

God the Creator. Gen. i 1-25.

Golden text: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Gen i. 1.

Reader, you will notice that God's book is unlike men's. Therein no preface, introduction, explanation or apology. It starts out with the strong, bold, definite statement, "In the beginning." Many and various are accounts and opinions about when the beginning was, one guess is as good as another, for no one knows, and as the Bible is not a history of the world, but God's great loving message of salvation to mankind, it is not necessary to know the particulars of the beginning.

"God created"—produced, formed, caused to be. In the mind of the average civilized and educated man and woman there is no doubt about God being the Creator. There is no possibility of correctly and reasonably accounting for the existence of the heaven and the earth without God. There is one class of people who say there is no God. David moved by the Holy Spirit said they are fools. Psa. liii. 1. It is sad to record that these thousands and thousands of men and women who believe that God is the Creator, but who live and act every day as if there was no God. We find them described in Psa. xlix. 12. There is a third class who honor God with their mouth only. Matt. xv. 8, 9. But there is yet another company called "the people of God." Heb. iv. 9. Also called "the house of God, the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth. 1 Tim. iii. 15. They have faith in God, they not only believe, but teach that God created the heaven and the earth, that he "formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited. Isa. xlv. 18. "He formed the mountains, he created the wind." Amos. iv. 13. "God created the creation." Mark xiii. 19. "He created the heavens, the earth, the seas and the things therein." Rev. x. 6. In these few Bible references we have the best of testimony, covering a period of about four thousand years, that God is the Creator.

The rest of the lesson text informs us how God arranged—put in order the earth to be inhabited. It was without form—in a state of chaos, a disordered condition, and void—nothing on it, or in it suitable for man or beast. In darkness, and under—covered with water.

"The Spirit of God," the power by which God often manifested himself to men. "Moved" began the work of getting ready for occupation.

"God said, Let there be light, and there was light." God said, God spoke, God gave the Word, "the Word that was in the beginning. All things were made by it, and without it was not any thing made that was made." John i. 1-3. The light and darkness he called day and night. Evening and morning marked the beginning of night and day, the two together were called the first day.

"The firmament"—the space between earth and sky, called heaven. Verse 8.

The earth brought forth grass, herbs, trees, verse 12, and living creatures, fowls, creeping things and beasts. Verse 24.

The waters brought forth the moving creature, and great whales, and winged fowl. God spake to the light, or for the light, the darkness, the earth, and the waters, and they obeyed him. All was done according to the Word. He spoke and it was done. The same power was exhibited on the Sea of Galilee, by the Lord Jesus when he said, "Peace, be still, and the wind and waves obeyed him." Mark iv. 39. The apostle Paul reasons most conclusively that God is the Creator. The things of his eternal power and Godhead, though invisible from the creation of the world, are understood by the things that are made, which we clearly see, leaving no excuse for doubt. Rom. i. 20. David, the poet king of Israel, often breaks out in glowing testimony to the fact that God is the Creator.

"The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." Psa. xix. 1.

"The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof: the world and they that dwell there in. For he hath founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods." Psa. xxiv. 1, 2.

When the kingdom of God is established, Dan. ii. 44, and chapter vii. 27, "All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord; and thy saints shall bless thee. Psa cxlvi. 10, then all will know and confess that God is the Creator.

The attention of students is called to the reference given concerning the Word, John i. 1-3, "All things were made by him," should be by it, as I have quoted.

Obituary.

Died on Thursday, Sept. 6, 1906, at his home in Attica, Kan., of old age, David Williams, aged 81 years, 1 month and 2 days. David Williams was born at Llanon, Cardigonshire, Wales, on the 21st day of Aug, 1825; came to America in 1849; was married to Elizabeth Nightingale, Nov. 21, 1853. Lived in Brooklyn, Canada, Illinois and Kansas. He was successively a miller, a sailor and a farmer. He and his wife were baptized in the faith of Christ's second coming, in Illinois, 1866. He has lived in Attica since the fall of 1900. His wife, six children (four daughters and two sons) twenty-two grandchildren survive him. The children are; Mrs. D. R. Jones, Mrs. L. A. Jones, Mrs. Milton, Mrs. Smith, Joseph and Newton. The funeral services were conducted by Dr. Cleveland, Friday, Sept. 7th, at 2 P. M., and words of comfort were spoken by the writer from the subject, "The reason of our hope." Then we laid our dear brother to rest in the Attica cemetery to remain until the faithful are called to reign upon the earth forever. The remains were followed by a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends as all who knew him knew him only to love him. Thus we bade him adieu till Christ shall come. May we all prove faithful so as to hear the call, when we shall be born from the dead.

On account of business this was neglected.

Dr. O. B. Cleveland.

A Beautiful Thought.

I do set my bow in the cloud.—Gen. ix: 13.

It was out of the cloud that the deluge came, yet it is upon it that the bow is set. The cloud is a thing of darkness, yet God chooses it for the place where he bends the arch of light. Such is the way of our God. He knows that we need the cloud, and that a bright sky without a speck or shadow would not suit us in our passage to the kingdom. Therefore he draws the cloud above, not once in a lifetime, but many times. But lest the gloom should appall us, he braids the cloud with sunshine, nay makes it the object which gleams to our eye with the very fairest hues of heaven.....Peace in trouble, gladness in sorrow, nay peace and gladness, produced by the very tribulation itself, such is the deep love of God, and such is the way in which he makes all things work together for good to us.—Dr. H Bonar.

Beauty is its own argument, its own evidence; and there is nothing so beautiful as the graces of the soul. There is nothing like meekness and gentleness and sweetness.

It takes a lifetime to build a character; it only takes one moment to destroy one. How sensitive is righteousness, how resentful is the spirit of purity and nobleness!—Joseph Parker.

Feeling vs. Duty. To rest upon the feelings is to [illegible] They will always be ready to [illegible] slothful work in some way. Feelings are apt to end in smoke; purpose well maintained must accomplish. When feeling whines out, "I don't want to!" if the face smiles and the steps go steadily forward to right doing, just as much of a victory will be won as if one went to war with great shouting and noise of instruments. In the end feeling itself will fall into line and become a strong ally.

"A delightful compliment was paid to religion, and to her own form of faith, by a sweet faced Quakeress, the other day. A street car had stopped in front of a meeting house, to let off a number of Friends. Among them was an aged and very infirm man. One of the passengers took his arm and helped him to the ground, and the old man's companion acknowledged the service by saying, 'Thank thee; I see thee is going to the meeting, too.' Evidently she thought that only a Quaker could be courteous!"

Infidelity reproves nothing that is bad. It only ridicules and decreases all that is good. It tears down: it never constructs; it destroys—it never imparts life; it attacks religion, but offers no adequate substitute.

Our Helping Fund

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us! Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Huggins, Box G. Oregon, Ill.

All Brethren in Iowa wishing Evangelistic Meetings during the fall or winter will please make their requests to the Conference Board at once.

Christmas Hymn.

Songs of praise the angels sang,
Heaven with hallelujahs rang,
When Jehovah's work began,
When He spoke, and it was done.

Songs of praise awoke the morn,
When the Prince of Peace was born;
Songs of praise arose, when He
Captive led captivity.

Heaven and earth must pass away,
Songs of praise shall crown that day;
God will make new heavens and earth,
Songs of praise shall hail their birth.

"I Have Fought."

Dear brethren and sisters:

My Lesson for your consideration to-day are those ecstatic words of the Apostle Paul's,—"I HAVE FOUGHT."

As a working force of Jesus in the world he had not been an idler. Immediately after his conversion and baptism he had gone out under the banner of the cross to battle with the effete superstitions of the Romans, the philosophic sophistries of the Greeks, and the still more dangerous errors of the Gnostics. His opposers were strong, for they were backed up by the governmental arms of mighty nations and by the no less mighty power of a wealthy and cunning priesthood, who sanctioned and partook of the sins that the people loved. The sword that Paul wielded struck constantly at SIN, and to strike at SIN was to strike at the gods of the people, at the priesthood, and at every idolatrous system of religion. It was to strike at the very head and foundation of the nations, for the gods were sinners deified, and the very emperors who were worshipped by the multitude as almighty and deathless beings, were steeped in the most odious crimes. Babylon and Greece and Rome were built on fraud and deceit,—the father of lies was their father. For Paul to uncover the hidden life of such a people was treason against the rulers, though so foul as delineated by Roman historians as to be totally unfit for any person to read of. "It was a shame even to speak of the things they did in secret." In the name of religion, said Paul.

He wrestled not against flesh and blood, as earthly soldiers wrestle; he did not kill those pitted against him, but his fight was against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. It is the heads, the leaders of the people who keep them in darkness. Idolatry can only thrive where there is ignorance of God.

Paul proclaimed a gospel that was to unseat alike emperor and priest and king. They rule for the present but the rulership of the world is not theirs, for "the kingdom and the dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Preaching this kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ as exalted of God to be our Priest and King, and believing in the future restoration of his people, and in the resurrection of the dead at Christ's coming, and showing the deluded people that an "idol is nothing in the world." Paul, as the apostle of the Gentiles began the fight that will culminate in the utter downfall of all sinful powers.

"I HAVE FOUGHT." He had let the the light shine, he had rebuked sin, he had spoken boldly, he had not been "ashamed of the gospel of Christ," knowing it to be "the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth." And while showing wicked men that the judgment of God is against those who "change the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and birds and four-footed beasts and creeping things," "who like not to retain God in their know'edge" being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness, full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity" and that those who do such things are treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath for themselves, and are worthy of death, he was careful to keep his own body under, lest he also might himself be a castaway. He knew that this fight for God must begin in one's own heart, that if he would win others, he must himself overcome, must "be temperate in all things" must put away wrath and anger and clamor, and evil-speaking, and let no corrupt communication proceed out of his mouth. He must "endure hardness as a good soldier of the Lord Jesus Christ." He must submit to be worsted, to be troubled on every side, to be perplexed, to be persecuted, to be cast down, to "alway be delivered unto death for Jesus' sake;" to be "in stripes above measure," and in prisons; to be "beaten with rods," to be stoned; to be ship-wrecked; to hunger and thirst; to suffer from cold and nakedness; to be weary and in pain; preaching the gospel of God freely, after long and tiresome journeys, the way beset by robbers, by his countrymen and by cruel heathen who sought his life.

"I HAVE FOUGHT." O the exultant words! Well might he say them. "I have fought the good fight." It was faith that gave him the courage to fight. He believed the promises made of God unto the fathers. He was hoping to come to the same inheritance that the twelve tribes instantly serving God day and night hoped to come.

"I HAVE FOUGHT the good fight, I have finished my course." The battle was over, and he had won the victory. The result was assurred.

"I HAVE FOUGHT the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." No worry, no trouble, had turned him aside. Not an iota of the gospel had he given up. Not for a moment had he submitted to the Judaizing Christians who would have had him again put his neck under the yoke of the law.

"I HAVE FOUGHT the good fight, I have finished my course. I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a CROWN." Write it in capital letters shining like the light. "A CROWN!" for a crown means rulership and a throne. "A CROWN of righteousness," because it had been won by a righteous course of life. "A CROWN, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only but to all them also that love his appearing."

Paul strained every nerve that he might attain unto the first resurrection. He knew that the righteous dead would be raised at the coming of Jesus, and that the crown would be awarded then, and so he fought.

Are we fighting as Paul fought? or are we letting self gain the victory? We call the Christian life a warfare,—do we make it such? Look back, pass under review. What worries have we patiently endured for Jesus' sake? What perils from false brethren? Have we overcome in the battle with passion? with appetite? Can the world point at us and say, "There is one who is walking in the footsteps of Christ?" Can we truthfully and conscientiously say "I HAVE FOUGHT?" —"I HAVE FOUGHT THE GOOD FIGHT?" If not, we had better be about it. Time flies on apace, and brings us near the tomb, and whether we die or live the Master's coming is near, and then it will be too late to win a crown, too late—too late! Drones and cowards keep in the wake of the army as camp-followers, but they are of no earthly use, they never win a single contingent for God. What matters it to them if the cause of Truth languishes, and its banner trails in the dust? They are not going to spring forward into the very ranks of the foe to save it, nor give their money that others may go. Yet, what victories might be won if all would fight! How fast our ranks would fill, if the money and time that is wickedly wasted in useless things and soul-destroying pleasures were spent for God! Yet that is just where the fight comes in. This "keeping the body under" as Paul did, is not an easy thing for a luke-warm or half-converted Christian. We want lovely adornments for our homes, fine clothes, dainty food, and exciting journeys here, and there, and unless we love God better than these, we are not going to deny ourselves in anywise for Christ's sake. When Paul set out to fight he laid his ALL on the altar, and nothing short of that will make a victorious soldier. Want things? Don't I? No one is more passionately fond of beauty. The home that is like a poem in its perfect ordering is such a delight. Fresh new things appeal so to ones love of cleanliness, and comfort, but I fight down my desire for these and find it an easy thing to do when the great needs of my Savior's cause are set before me. If others will not give, why, I must work the harder, do with less, and give the more. What will it matter when Jesus comes, that the smoked-up paper staid on, and the worn carpets were made to do a few years longer?

O I would rather fight the good fight than to have all the world! For to fight the good fight is to be on the side of law, of love, of holiness, of safety. Paul showed this plainly in every letter that he wrote. "The thief," he said, "who collets in this warfare, will steal no more," and the man who grew insane with anger at every provocation will no more fling wrathful invectives at his fellows, nor fret at wife and children; both out of love for God, will be transformed into the likeness of Christ. The very savage, who like Old Africaner, thinks of nothing but war and bloodshed, losing his wolfish leoline disposition, will become like the Lamb and there will be nothing too hard for him to do; nothing too dear to give up for the sake of him who gave his life on his behalf. But the sinner who has never studied these things; who has taken no thought about his salvation, and dreams not of his imperative need of a Savior, wonders what this fight is about; why it must go on for age after age, and when it will end and how? He hates it all; it seems to conflict so with all that is pleasant and agreeable to him in his theater-going, card-playing, money-getting life. Yet, his questions are pertinent ones and could be easily answered to his satisfaction, if he would but study the Bible and yield his heart to God. But, instead of studying, and finding out what God designs to accomplish through this warfare, and what is required of him as a created being, he but scoffs. Well did Solomon say,—"The scorner seeketh wisdom and findeth it not, but knowledge is easy to him that understands."

But what is the fight about? It is, as to who shall gain the mastery; who shall hold the reins of government in the world,—satan, or God? You remember that Paul said, "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, (as earthly soldiers wrestle with sword and cannon) but against principalities and powers, and against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places?"

It is easy to point out these wicked powers, for we all know them by name. Do not the Sultan of Turkey, the ruler of Thibet, the Shah of Persia, the Czar of Russia and the Pope of Rome, to say nothing of the emperors of China and the petty kings of Africa keep the millions under them in ignorance of the Bible? They want to shut the doors of their countries against its truths. They would kill all missionaries if they dared, just as the Jews are being slaughtered in Russia and in Roumania; as the Armenians are being murdered by the Kurds, and the American and English Bible-teache by the Chinese. These rulers consider themselves the infallible priests or fathers of their people, and teach them all manner of idle superstitions, to worship pictures, crucifixes and hideous images, or to follow the teachings of a spurious Bible as the Mohammedan do.

These rulers, must "be wise now;" "be instructed;" "serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling;" and "kiss the Son," or "perish from the way when his wrath is kindled but a little," for God has given to the Son, "the heathen for his inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession."

All governments that stand up adversely against him will be broken with a rod of iron and dashed in pieces like a potters vessel.

But why then must the fight go on so long?

For several reasons. You know how long it takes to discipline, to teach, and to prepare a man in every way for the highest and most responsible positions even in any earthly government. And, after choosing the very best that are available how many fail when the test of temptation is applied! The men that God chooses for his immortal rulers will be men that will not fail. And if it takes time to fit a man to be governor or president, there must be time for a far more important work. Only a few can be picked out in any age who will not recant from the truths committed to their charge, though a howling multitude bear them on to the gallows or the stake. Only a few in each cycle are brave enough, and so toughened in moral fiber that they cannot be bribed to battle for the wrong. Only a few who will always deal justly, who will not bear false witness, who will take up no reproach against their neighbors. The battle will end when the needful number for these are elected to rule the world. Christ over all, the apostles ruling the twelve tribes, and the saints governing the peoples and nations of earth, conjointly with Christ.

I said the battle would end when the needful number of rulers were elected. It will, so far as the present Sultans and Shahs, and Rajahs, and Popes and Czars are concerned, but even the Millennial reign will be a reign of subjugation, for "Christ must reign," Paul says "until he has put all enemies under his feet." But we are talking about the battle of the present dispensation, or Christian age, and the next question is, How will it end? Can the few Christians in the world put down these mighty powers by the peaceable proclamation of the gospel of a coming King and by earnest endeavor to lead lost sinners to Christ?

No, indeed they cannot. Throughout the gospel age these have been the means that God has used to bring the kingdom near, but in using the proclaimers of the gospel to bring about his ends, he has taken out of the nations, "a people for his name," —a nation,—that has been cut out, or isolated in position and by his Word from the continental nations of the Old World.

We are continually forgetting that the multitudinous seed of Abraham, as well as his spiritual seed, has a great part to play in this battle with the evil powers of earth. Read the history of England and you will see that it was not only cut out or separated from Europe by a great storm that destroyed the connecting isthmus that bound it to the mainland, but that it was also separated from the idol-worshipping dominions of the Pope, by the strong arm of God himself, working through his Word to break the yoke wherewith that Antichrist had bound the people to ignorance and sin. Since Henry the VIII. gave the Bible to his people, "the man on the Tiber" has not ruled England as a nation. I will not stop to argue the question that the English speaking people are the descendants of the Ten Lost Tribes, taken captive by the Assyrians at Samaria, and carried into Media about 721 B. C. for God says that Israel is his battle-ax and weapons of war wherewith he will break in pieces the nations, and where is there a people that are being used as God's battle ax, if the Anglo Saxons are not? Why are the English in Egypt, in eastern, southern and western Africa, in India, and Canada and in the islands of the sea, and why are we Americans in Alaska, in the Philippines, at the Isthmus of Panama, and in Guam, if we are not the multitudinous seed of Abraham? And where is there a nation that is being used as God's battle-ax if the Anglo-Saxons are not?

Even before this people settled in Great Britain, and while still in Europe they were pitted against Rome, they have been pitted against her ever since. In more than two hundred and fifty battles they have been threshing and fanning the upholders of Roman Catholicism—France and Spain. They were against Spain in the Cuban and Philippine affairs. God is a God of war. He says so himself. From Sinai to Canaan, the army marched surrounding the tabernacle and ministers of the Church, and though in the Christian dispensation God does not permit the followers of Jesus to defend themselves with the sword, he, nevertheless defends them with an army just as he did of old. The great battle-ships and the strong arm of the English and American nations protect those who go out to tell "the story of Jesus and his love" to heathen people in foreign lands. But had it not been for "the good fight" that Paul and others have made, would the Bible have come to England, to America, and have fitted these nations for the part they are taking and are still to take in the great drama?

There is to be another great battle fought and Israel is to be in it on the side of God. Many nations massed on the side of Russia are to pour into Palestine like a flood to overwhelm the Jews—our brethren—who are settling there, and to take that land that they might have the dominion of the world. But they will be beaten by Israel of Anglo-Saxondom, and will find only a place of graves. That is how the battle will end.

The warfare has been a long one because God is long-suffering; not willing that any should perish," but when he calls and keeps on calling, and men will not hear, he will by and by "laugh at their calamity and mock when their fear cometh" by taking up the rod of judgment in earthquake overthrows and Armageddon onsets. There will be no escape for the wicked. Make your escape now, dear sinner. There is time now. You need remission of sin, you need a Savior. Woe and poverty, disease and death follow close on the heels of sin. Only they are rich who have treasure laid up in heaven. Do not deceive yourself by thinking you will be given future life whether you fight the good fight or not, for you can find no promise of life in God's Book, to an unrepentant, unbaptized man.

Come, and take part in the struggle that you may have part in the glory of the great consummation; when the arch-enemy of man will find himself beaten; when death itself will perish; when tears will all be wiped away. There will be no property-losses through cruel thieves over there, no murderous hands to smite the innocent, no riots, no mobs, no little children in sweat factories, no Ghettos, no starving poor, no famines, no pestilences, no terrible cyclones, no seismic disturbances.

"Peace be still!" will have been said to all warring elements. There will be no more devil-built saloons to rob the wife of her rightful dowry of food, of clothing and of home, and worse still, of her husband's love, and of his and of her children's souls. Vice will no more stalk the streets to seize with horrid grasp our innocent babes. The chilling fear of contaminating SIN that poisons the blood, eats up the tissues and destroys the minds of its victims will be felt no more forever. It will be a grand, a glorious country to live in. Do you want to live over there? Then enter the arena and fight as Paul fought.

"I HAVE FOUGHT." Yes, dear saints of God, you have fought to a purpose and are winning the mightiest battle that was ever waged in the universe of God—a battle—that will take out of the kingdom, the tares, and will fill the earth with a righteous race and so cover it with the knowledge and glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

Though few in number and hated of all men; persecuted and put to death, you have fought, standing unmoved as the mountains in defence of truth, of purity and of true character-building. And Jesus has been with you alway, and he is coming again!

Soon where earthly beauty blinds not,
No excess of brilliance palls,
Salem, City of the holy,
We shall be within thy walls!
There beside you crystal river,
There beneath life's wondrous tree,
There with naught to cloud or sever—
Ever with the Lamb to be!
Heir of glory,
That shall be for thee and me.

Yes! Jesus is coming and the dead will be raised in glory, raised in power, raised spiritual bodies.

And you, dear saints, who are alive when he comes, you will all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed." We are living under that very trumpet at the present time, "in the days of the voice of the seventh angel," "when the mystery of God is to be finished as he has declared by his servants the prophets," and we have not to wait until it has done sounding for our redemption to come, for the Revelator says "When he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished." That angel is already calling the nations to the battle of the great day of God Almighty.

They have made war with the Lamb and the Lamb shall overcome them, for he is Lord of lords and King of kings, and they that are with him are called and chosen and faithful. The sword will go out of his mouth as it were, for he will speak the word that will set Israel,—made into a new, sharp threshing instrument,—strengthened and helped and upheld by God's own right hand of righteousness,—against the beast and the kings of the earth and their armies, and will finish the warfare for you. He will turn every man's sword against his brother in the great army of Gog and "will plead against him with pestilence and with blood and will rain upon his bands and upon the many people that are with him an overflowing rain and great hailstones, fire and brimstone."

But before this fiery onset comes, and it seems very near (for already the actors are capturing the approaches to the Holy Land, England in Egypt, in Cyprus, in the Persian Gulf, in the Suez Canal and we in the Philippines, and Russia, with fortress on Mt. Oliver, holding the gate of the Caucasus in undisputed control, with forces massed, and munitions of war stored in this "place of arms," has her face set to go via the Euphrates to Aleppo, thence to Haman, and then through the valley of the Strangers to the Plains of Esdraelon,) we shall be "above the storm."

QUESTION BOX.

[Interested readers of the RESTITUTION who desire to have Scriptural questions answered in this department, should address Robert G. Huggins Box G, Oregon, Ill. No anonymous communications will be noticed.]

THE BAPTISM OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

"Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit." Acts i. 5. When this baptism occurred the Spirit was "poured out." Acts ii. 17. Pouring, then, and not immersion, is baptism. Is this true? —An interested reader.

REPLY.

If "pouring out" is baptism, then what was "poured out" was baptized, and not the object upon which it was poured. Since the Spirit was "poured out" the Spirit was baptized, and not the men upon whom it was poured! The Spirit, in that case, baptized itself!!

Let "interested reader" note that it was men, and not the Spirit, that was baptized: "Ye (men) shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit." Acts i. 5. The Spirit was "poured out" that this baptism might be accomplished. The Spirit is not only said to be "poured out," but to be "received" (Jno. xx. 22), sent (Jno. xvi. 7), fall (Acts x. 44) and "shed abundantly." Titus iii. 6. Men are said to "drink" of it (1 Cor. xii. 13) and to be filled with it. Acts ii. 4. Now if "pouring out" the Spirit is baptism so is receiving, sending, falling, shedding, drinking, and filling! The pouring is not baptism; the sending, falling, shedding, drinking, etc., is not the baptism. The Spirit had to come in some way from heaven, or men must be taken up to heaven, that the baptism in the Spirit might be possible. We can say with aplomb that the Spirit was sent as a matter of necessity; that it fell, was shed, etc. This simply brings the Spirit and man together. Something was accomplished after the Spirit descended, and that something was the baptism.

What was the baptism of the Holy Spirit? In 2 Cor. v. 2 we have the words, enduo epi, "clothed upon." In the third verse we have "being clothed" (endus). Clothing envelope—covers up. In speaking of the Holy Spirit baptism our Lord says, "Behold I send the promise of my Father upon you, but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem till ye be endued (enduo) with power." Luke xxiv. 49. "Clothed with power." Revised Version. The Apostles went out in the power of the Holy Spirit, invested, "endued," clothed with power from on high. They were immersed, enveloped, enclosed, overwhelmed, baptized in the Spirit. "It filled all the house where they were setting." Acts ii. 2. The pouring out of the Spirit brought the Spirit down; but this was no more the baptism, than the going up of the men would have been, if God had taken them up to receive the baptism of the Spirit. To make it possible for men to be overwhelmed, immersed in the Holy Spirit as a mighty influence and power from heaven, it is said that God poured it out copiously; that it was "shed abundantly" on his people. Titus iii. 6 But to say that pouring out the Spirit was baptism is to say that the Spirit was baptized, not man. And since to "pour out" means to turn out in a stream, if a man was to be baptized, he would be turned out in a stream! And if this be so I can only say, God, pity the man!

True Consistency. During to day what one would not or did not do yesterday is not an infallible sign of inconsistency. Tribute must always be paid to increasing light. The truly consistent person is always searching for the best and keeps himself in teachable mood. Today's light and to-day's revelations are what determine his doings. If this were not so, progress would be but a dream, a name. Advancement, not fossilizing the life in a bed of imperfections, is what the true child of God desires. His gaze is set on things ahead, and he does not let the ignorance and blindness of yesterday be a stumbling-block in his path.

Selections.

When Was the Law Given?

That the law was first given in the time of Moses is so plainly stated many times over that it is strange any one should deny it. We have the most definite statements as to when it was given, where it was given, who gave it, to whom it was given, what it was, and what it was for. There is no room for guesswork about it. It was given by God through Moses, at Mount Sinai, to the children of Israel when they came out of Egypt. It was to govern that people as a nation till the Messiah should come. There were not several laws given, nor two laws, but only one law—"the law." Of course, there were numerous precepts, as in any national law, some relating to moral duties, some to religious duties, some to civil duties, public duties, private duties, family duties, national duties, temple service, etc. But it all was one law. These various precepts were intermingled indiscriminately. Often the same chapter will contain precepts of these several different kinds. See, for example, Leviticus xix.

Now as to when this law was given, here is the testimony clear and explicit: "The law was given by Moses" (John i: 17). Then it was not given before. "Did not Moses give you the law?" (John vii: 19). Then it did not exist before. Again: "For until the law sin was in the world; but sin is not imputed when there is no law. Nevertheless, death reigned from Adam to Moses" Rom. v: 13, 14. Here, again, the entrance of the law is located in the time of Moses. Once more: "If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, for under it the people received the law" Heb. vii: 11. The Levitical priesthood was first ordained by Moses, and here is where the recovery of the law is located. Again, Paul locates the giving of the law 430 years after the promise to Abraham. "And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul" Gal. iii: 17. From the covenant with Abraham to the exodus from Egypt was just 430 years. See Ex. xii: 40, 41. Beyond dispute, therefore, the law was not given till the time of Moses.

The law is nowhere found till we come to Moses. This alone is proof enough as to when the law was given. To say that the principles of the law existed before Moses, is not to the point. The law of Ohio forbids murder, theft, adultery, etc. All these principles existed from the days of Adam. Does that prove that the law of Ohio was Given in Eden? Surely not. So when our legalists go on to prove that the principles of the law existed before Moses, they are off the question entirely. Moral principles existed, law existed, sin existed, before Moses, but what the Scriptures everywhere designate as "the law" did not exist till God gave it at Sinai, as we have abundantly proved.

The law was given only to the Jewish people. No other nation had that law. Paul says: "For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves" Gal. ii, 14. Twice in this verse it is stated that the Gentiles did not have the law. Of course not, for it was never given to them. When the law was first given, Moses stated that no other nation had that law, and states that it was given only to Israel. "And what nation is there so great, that has statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?...And this is the law which Moses set before the children of Israel: These are the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which Moses spake unto the children of Israel, after they came forth out of Egypt" Deut. iv: 44, 45. Again: "Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments. Mal. iv: 4

All these Scriptures, and scores more, state over and over, that this law was given to the Jewish nation by Moses at Sinai. There is not a single intimation anywhere that any other nation had it, or that it was meant for others. Paul distinctly limits to Israel the giving of the law. "Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law" Rom. ix: 4.

The wording of that law, first and last and all the way through, exactly fitted the circumstances of the Jewish nation at that time, and no one else. See how plainly this was stated when the Ten Commandments were given: "God spoke all these words, saying, I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the house of bondage" Ex. xx: 1, 2. To that nation this law was then given for the first time. No intimation is anywhere given that this law was for any other people. All the directions of that law, from first to last, are worded to fit the circumstances of the Jews in the land of Canaan at that time.

To go through this law and pick out certain parts, and claim that these were meant for all nations for all time, is to interpret into the law what God never put there. This is perverting the Word of God. Any theory can be proved by this method. But we must not read into the law what is not plainly stated there.

The rewards and penalties of the law were all national and temporal. Will the reader consider this proposition carefully? A failure to recognize this fact has led to great error in reading the law. Notice that from first to last, in all the law of Moses, no reference is ever made to rewards in a future life for keeping this law. Every promise relates only to this life and national prosperity. Read only two passages out of scores:

"And ye shall serve the Lord your God, and he shall bless thy bread and thy water; and I will take sickness away from the midst of thee. There shall nothing cast their young, nor be barren, in thy land; the number of days I will fulfil. I will send my fear before thee, and will destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come, and I will make all thine enemies turn their backs unto thee." Ex. xxiii. 25-27. "And it shall come to pass, if thou shalt hearken diligently unto the voice of the Lord thy God, to observe and to do all his commandments, which I command thee this day, that the Lord thy God will set thee on high above all nations of the earth: and all these blessings shall come on thee, and overtake thee, if thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the Lord thy God. Blessed shalt thou be in the city, and blessed shalt thou be in the field. Blessed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep. Blessed shall be thy basket and thy store. Blessed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out. The Lord shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be smitten before thy face: they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways. The Lord shall command the blessing upon thee in thy storehouses, and in all that thou settest thine hand unto; and he shall bless thee in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." Deut. xxviii. 1-8.

This is too plain to be misunderstood. If they kept God's commandments, all temporal blessings are promised—health, children, cattle, corn, national success, etc. No reference is made to heaven, eternal life, or anything of the kind. If this is contradicted, then find the text anywhere in the law of Moses.

So, on the other hand, all the penalties of the law were temporal and national. Death by stoning was the penalty for idolatry, murder, adultery, theft, etc. (Deut. xvii. 5 12.) God's curse on all the land, and on the people, and on all they had, was to follow disobedience. For example (Deut. xxiii. 15-20:) "But it shall come to pass, if thou wilt not hearken unto the voice of the Lord thy God, to observe to do all his commandments and his statutes which I command thee this day; that all these curses shall come upon thee, and overtake thee: Cursed shalt thou be in the city, and cursed shalt thou be in the field. Cursed shall be thy basket and thy store. Cursed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy land, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep. Cursed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and, cursed shalt thou be when thou goest out. The Lord shall send upon thee cursing, vexation, and rebuke, in all that thou settest thine hand unto for to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me."

It will be seen that all these curses were in temporal things. No reference to a future day of judgment, eternal punishment or anything of the kind. And why not? Because the law was only a temporal, State or national code. Do our State or national laws threaten future punishment for criminals? Such an idea would be absurd, because State laws are not given for that purpose. Neither was the law of Moses. If people would only read that law as plainly worded, it would save a vast amount of useless and erroneous speculation.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through The Restitution and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through The Restitution. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through The Restitution, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for The Restitution, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

The difference between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it reaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. The Gift of Eternal Life.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner, how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

The Resurrection. No. 4.

Having shown in my other papers on this subject that but one class, the righteous, or worthy ones will be roused at the coming of the Lord; and that the rest of the dead will be raised a thousand years thereafter, it follows, as a logical conclusion, that those who will be raised in the first resurrection will have been previously thought worthy of eternal life. The fact of their resurrection at the epoch of the Lord's coming as a peculiar class, shows that the Great Judge had settled the question of their worthiness of eternal life before raising them. Their record was full when mortal life ended. They had been faithful unto death so the question of life will not be pending when they come into the presence of the Judge at the moment of their meeting him in the air. Let us now look at a passage which has a direct bearing on this point. Before I quote the passage I will [illegible] the charge publicly made [illegible] church of God. Here are [illegible] It is taught in the church [illegible] believers shall not come [illegible] at the appearing of [illegible] stand guilty to the [illegible] be glad to believe it [illegible] Lord this comfort- [illegible] horily I say unto [illegible] session my word and [illegible] en of sent me, hath [illegible] as shall not come [illegible] ped passed from [illegible] n v. 24. It is a [illegible] the word trans- [illegible] condemnation (krisis) in King James version [illegible] ment, and is so translated in [illegible]. The Diaglott by Wilson so renders it in the verse quoted and so in every occurrence of the word in the chapter. Christ teaches here that touching the matter of eternal life the believer comes not into judgment, and, takes the point doubly strong by the statement—"is passed from death unto life," eternal life. Eternal life is assured when the person hears Christ's Word and believes on the Father who sent him; and is assured at the end of a faithful life when the believer lies down in death to await the trumpets call and the voice of the Son of God. "The Lord knoweth them that are his." They are entitled to life and immortality. They sought for the one by patient continuance in well doing; the other will be rendered without their going into judgment at the bar of Christ. Paul, addressing [illegible] man brethren in the flesh or [illegible] condition says, "But if the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwelleth in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Ro. viii. 11.

The rendering is through the medium of the Holy Spirit; it quickens into life. Christ was "put to death in the flesh,—in his mortal condition but quickened by the Spirit." 1 Pet. iii. 18. Eternal life was his from the moment of quickening and he being a sample, a first fruit of them that sleep, the offer from or harvest will be like him from the moment of quickening by the spirit. The rendering of life will be to make alive the dead and this will be in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men according to Paul's gospel. Rom. ii. 5,16. In that day those verses are printed in capitals to call particular attention to them one who holds that good and bad are raised together, go into judgment together, both, alike mortal the good to receive eternal life, and the bad their doom of death. "Same," is also used to qualify day. But capitalizing and qualifying for emphasis will not in those passages in Rom. ii., and similar passages limit the day to twenty-four hours, inasmuch as inspiration places a thousand years between the two resurrections. There are short days, and long days in Jehovah's calendar of time. The judgment day is a long one. "One day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." The interpretation cannot be refused to the measure of ones impressions illogically inferred from passages which look strongly in the direction of time to follow the first resurrection before the wicked are raised; which fact appears plainly in the last revelation on the subject under discussion; settling the point conclusively and beyond the possibility of successful contradiction. And yet those who hold that the righteous and the unrighteous alike go before the judgment-seat simultaneously say the only passage known to them which has any semblance or show of support for the view (on view) they combat is Rev. xx. 4. Surely in this chapter there is more than the semblance of support to the Church of God's view of the resurrection and judgment; for here it is plainly taught that there are two resurrections with a thousand years between, them consequently two judgments equally apart in point of time. This chapter is so plainly against the view of a simultaneous resurrection and judgment that its advocates feel the force of its proof on our side; so have little or nothing to advance by way of explanation. The chapter remains an irrefutable argument for the view I am defending, and against the view I am combating. The author of the argument in the September No. of the Advocate referring to the 4th verse of this chapter says, "From this it is inferred that only the faithful are the subjects of Christ's dealings at the commencement of the Millennium." I would ask, Is not the inference logically drawn? The words are, "The rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." Undoubtedly this language will bear the weight of the inference in the light of the fact that it is said of those who have part in the first resurrection that they are "blessed and holy;" (v. 6), that they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him; that the second death has no power on or over them; that in the preceding chapter they are called the Lamb's wife; all of which affirmations support the inference that the faithful alone are the subjects of the Lord's dealings as set forth here. The inference is as strong as it could be made. I ask, Is there any ground for inferring that the unfaithful, (apostates) are raised and judged at the commencement of the Millennium? Surely not? It is charged that the Church of God wholly neglects one essential feature of the gospel, the judgment as set forth, for example, in Heb. vi. 1, 2; Rom. ii. 5,16; Acts x. 42. We will not plead guilty to this charge. I know I have preached the judgment and so have others; but we have not preached the other view of it, for the very good reason, we think it is not Scriptural.

Lesson for Young Students.

Teacher. What lesson have you selected for this occasion?

Student. While in Conference with my fellow-students, we decided to request you to give us a lesson on "The More Excellent Name," based on Heb. i. 4, 5.

Teacher. Please read the Scripture.

Student. It reads as follows: "Being [illegible] hath by inheritance obtained a more [illegible] than they. For unto which of the angels said he at any time, thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee?"

Student. To whom does the personal pronoun "He" refer?

Teacher. His Son. See verse 2: "Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son."

Student. To whom does the word "they" refer?

Teacher. The angels. See verse 5: "For unto which of the angels said he at any time, thou art my Son?"

Student. What are we to understand by the phrase: "More excellent name?"

Teacher. It is a comparative phrase, showing that his name is more excellent than some other name.

Student. With what other name does it compare?

Teacher. The angels. See verse 4: "Being made so much better than the angels, he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they?"

Student. That much is proven, that he hath a more excellent name than the angels; but may not some other exalted personage, have a more excellent name than his?

Teacher. No. For proof see Phil. ii. 9, 10: "Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name that is above every name." See also Eph. i. 20, 21: "He raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly place, far above all principality and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come."

Student. That certainly is a marvelous name, but surely the name of the Father must excell it?

Teacher. No, it does not.

Student. How can that be?

Teacher. Because he bears that same name.

Student. Please show us that?

Teacher. See John v. 43: "I am come in, (or bear) my Father's name, and ye receive me not."

Student. In what way did he obtain that exalted name?

Teacher. By inheritance.

Student. Yes, I know every son inherits the name of the father which begat him; but sons by adoption never inherit the name of his adopted father, that comes by adoption.

Teacher. Yes, that is true, but our Lord gets his exalted name by inheritance. See Heb. i. 4: "Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they."

Student. What reason did he assign, for having a more excellent name than the angels?

Teacher. That is given in Heb. i 5, 6: "For unto which of the angels said he at any time, thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee. * * * Again, when he bringeth in the first begotten into the world, he saith, and let all the angels of God worship him." That which is worshiped is greater than the worshiper.

Student. Does the phrase, "first begotten," indicate that he may have other begotten sons.

Teacher. No. See John i 14, 18: We beheld his glory as the only begotten of the Father. No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father hath declared him. See John iii. 16, 18: He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. 1 John iv 9: "God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Being the only begotten Son of the Father, he has the exclusive right by "inheritance," to the "name that is above every name," and hence the Son's name excells every name that is named, even in heaven or on the earth.

Student. If he was the begotten Son of some earthly Father, whose name would he bear by inheritance?

Teacher. The name of the Father who begat him.

Student. But suppose the Father had other begotten sons beside Jesus, would they receive the Father's name by inheritance?

Teacher. They would. But seeing that he informs us that Jesus is his "only begotten Son," he alone has the exclusive right by inheritance to his exalted name.

Student. Has God other sons which have been received by adoption, and who bear his name, by right of adoption?

Teacher. Yes. See John i 12: But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.

Student. Believe on what name.

Teacher. Why believe on the name which his only begotten Son received by inheritance.

Student. What name did he give him?

Teacher. See Phil ii 9, 10: God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name that is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow.

Student. Is Jesus, the Father's name?

Teacher. The word Jesus is not a Hebrew word. We must find the Hebrew [illegible], from which the name Jesus is derived, and then we will see, that the Father and Son, both bear the same name. Jesus affirmed: I come in my Father's name. John v 43.

Student. What is the Father's name?

Teacher. The true name of the Father does not appear in the English translation of the Hebrew Scriptures?

Student. Why don't it appear?

Teacher. Because the Hebrews feared the sacred name of the Father would be profaned by its common use.

Student. What does appear then?

Teacher. Substitutes.

Student. What are those substitutes?

Teacher. The word "Jehovah," and also the word Lord, when it is printed in small capitals.

Student. Then " those words are merely substitutes, they cannot be translations from the original?

Teacher. They are not.

Student. What is the original name then?

Teacher. The nearest that we can get at it, from the deep researches of eminent students, and learned men is the word Yahveh, and fifty times in the Old Testament, we have abreviated name, Yah. See Psa lxxxiii 18. That men may know that thou whose name alone is Yahveh, art the Most High over all the earth.

Student. Can you give a Scripture where the word LORD, in small capitals, is used as a substitute for the Father's name?

Teacher. Yes. See Exod vi 2, 3: And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am the Lord (Yahveh); and I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but my name Yahveh, was I not known unto them.

We have another instance in Gen xxi 33: And Abraham planted a grove in Beersheba, and called there on the name of the Lord (Yahveh) the everlasting God.

Student. Will you please quote an instance where the abreviated name Yah occurs.

Teacher. Yes. You will find that in Psa lxviii 4. They use the substitute word Jah for Yah. Sing unto God, sing praises to his name: extol him that rideth upon the heavens by his name Jah, (Yah) and rejoice before him.

Student. Now please show us how the sacred name, enters into the name Jesus?

Teacher. I will call attention to a note in the "Emphatic Diaglott." It says that the name Jesus is a compound of two words, Yahshua. Yah signifies, I shall be, and Shua, powerful. I shall be the powerful one. All power is given unto me, both in heaven and in earth.

Eubius says the name Jesus, means "The salvation of God." This is also what the aged Simeon called him. "Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for my eyes have seen thy salvation. Jesus has a right to the name Yah by inheritance. Sons by adoption also bear this name, it being called upon them in baptism. Not three names, but the one sacred name.

Teacher. The subject of the Name is so large, that it may be profitable to resume it at some future time.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. WILSON.

Miss R., My Dear Friend:

Your card forming a link in one thousand, requesting me to write to ten friends. To join in the prayer that God will bless our missionaries, and raise up young men and women to go forth with the glad tidings to those who have it not.

I cannot comply with your request. I want to explain why I cannot acquiess in a work which seems so good.

The request to join in the prayer that God will send forth young men and women with the glad tidings. The mention of glad tidings, makes it necessary to know what the glad tidings are about.

The Bible teaches plainly and positively, that said glad tidings are concerning the literal kingdom of God, that Jesus preached, See Luke viii. 1; Mark i. 14. The literal kingdom he announced himself the King of. John xviii. 37. Concerning which he said to his apostles, Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations, and I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father hath appointed unto me, that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. Luke xxii. 28-30. The kingdom of Israel overturned, and to be restored by him whose right it is. Ezek. xxi 25; Luke i. 31-33; Matt. xix. 27-28.

The kingdom he preached, and the one he commissioned his disciples to preach. The same glad tidings or gospel, Paul affirms is the power of God unto salvation, Rom. i. 16. The importance of which he declares in 1 Cor. xv. 1, concerning which he says he or an angel from heaven dare not preach any other. Gal. i. 1-6.

The one our Savior affirms is the converting power. Matt. xiii. 15. My dear Miss R., this brings us to the important feature of the request.

Is it not the rule among present day conversionists, that the sinner is to pray for conversion, rest audiences are asked to stand up, asking good people to pray for their conversion.

Now is not this a strange idea, when there is not one single instance in the Bible where any one was ever taught to pray for conversion, and not one place where any one is requested to pray for anothers conversion, Christ says in John xvii. 9, pray not for the world. Then could I in the light of the Scriptures, unite in a prayer for a means to be used, which I positively known to be of human origin. Our Blessed Lord in the Parable of the sower, Matt. xiii. 10-23, states positively the means of conversion. The word itself meaning to turn with, (con) with, conversion to turn. In the 15 verse Christ says, seeing, hearing, and understanding, are the means of conversion, and in the 19th verse he tells definitely what we are to hear, The word of the kingdom. The same message he sent the apostles out with, saying, go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth (believeth the gospel of the kingdom) and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not is condemned, Mark xvi. 15-16. Not just any gospel. This saving gospel is a definite gospel, given for a definite purpose,—The power used for conversion, Rom. i. 16: "The power of God unto salvation, Psa. xix. 7. The Law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul, John xvii. 3. See also 17th verse, sanctify them through thy word, thy word, (word of the kingdom) is truth.

I am aware that it is taught that the Holy Spirit was given to convert sinners, but, it was not.

It was given to converted sinners for a purpose, and that purpose was to confirm his word, Mark xv. 20. In John the 14th, 15th 16th chapters was telling them he would go away, and that he would come again.

He also told them if he went away, he would send the comforter. To whom was he speaking? To baptized believers. Notice carefully the reading of John xiv., xv.; xvi.; If ye love me keep my commandments, and I will pray the Father and he shall give you another comforter, that he may abide with you, even the spirit of truth, whom the world can not receive. Chapter xvi. 7-8, If I depart I will send him, the comforter, unto you, and when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and righteousness and judgment.

Notice the Marg., for the word reprove, convince, Marg. This agrees with the 26, and 27, verses of the 15th chapter which reads, When the comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father even the spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me, and ye shall bear witness because ye have been with me from the beginning. Christ is not addressing the sinner, or the world in general, but his followers. In connection with this, notice Acts i. 8, ye shall receive power after the Holy Spirit is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. See also Acts ii. 1; keep in mind to whom he is talking. This shows conclusively what it was given for.

The birth of the Spirit in John iii. 1-8, is said to mean conversion, and is claimed that the Spirit is what comes and goes like the mind. Read carefully Miss R., and I know you will see the language conveys no such an idea. What is it that comes and goes like the wind? not the Spirit, the person born of the Spirit. The wind bloweth where it listeth, thou hearest the sound there of, but canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth. So is every one that is born of the Spirit.

In 1 Cor. xv., that grand argument of Paul's which shows there is no hope of life eternal, save by a resurrection, or birth of the Spirit, verse 45. The first Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam a quickening Spirit. Read carefully 45-48. In the 20th verse, But now Christ is risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept, for since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead, as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

Every man in his own order, Christ the first fruits, afterward they that are Christs' at his coming, 21-28, read carefully this whole chapter, 1 Cor. xv.

Dear Miss R., does this not prove that the birth of the Spirit refers to the resurrection, and not to conversion.

If I have not made plain the means of conversion, I am willing to try again. There is plenty of evidence that this is correct. In the time of Christ it was the seeing eye, the hearing ear, and the understanding heart, and this is still God's legal plan. If I can say or do any thing to convince any one you may suggest of God's means of conversion, I am willing by sending reading matter, or answering questions. I am yours set for the defense of the truth as it is in Jesus.

No cheating nor bargaining will ever get a single thing out of nature's "establishment" at half price. Do we want to be strong?—we must work. To be hungry?—we must starve. To be happy?—we must be kind. To be wise?—we must look and think.—Ruskin.

The Restitution advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the right-come, and the final destruction of the wicked, eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Plymouth, Indiana, Jan. 16, 1907.

Caring for the sick has taken much of our time of late.

A letter from Bro. George Neill informs us that he began his work in Indiana at South Bend, on Sunday Jan. 13. He had two excellent meetings with the brethren and sisters there, and looks forward to many more still bet'er. He expects to work in Warren and Clinton Counties a part of the time, as soon as arrangements are completed. We most heartily bid Bro. Neill welcome to this State, and pray that the Father will bless him and his efforts to advance the cause where he is called to labor.

Communicated.

A New Year Greeting.

Sunday, Jan. 6, being the first Sunday in 1907, the Church of God in Salem, Ohio, read the following selected verses as a greeting to each other, and to the faithful in Christ everywhere.

By Sister Baker:—"Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ. We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers."

By Sister Ella Knowles:—"Grace be unto you and peace from God our Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ." This is Paul's Greeting to the Church at Phillipi, and all his letters to the Church, are full of exhortations; and Dear Brothers and Sisters, I greet you, this morning, our first meeting in the New Year, with these same words of comfort and exhortation, "Grace be unto you and peace from God our Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ. I thank my God for your fellowship in the gospel, and this I pray that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment that ye may be sincere and without offence, till the day of Christ, and let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ. Stand fast in one Spirit with one mind striving together for the faith; do all things without murmuring and disputing, that ye may be blameless and harmless the sons of God; that ye may shine as lights in the world, holding forth the Word of Life. Finally my brethren, whatsoever things are true, and just, and pure, those things that ye have learned and received, do, and the God of peace shall be with you." I ask the prayer of each one that I may keep the words of exhortation in my thoughts, and that we all may press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, is my prayer.

By Sister Mary Knowles:—"The God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Jesus Christ, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you."

By Sister Crawford:—"Fear not little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

By Sister McCave:—"Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name he may give it you. Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his Lord. These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

By Brother Barber:—"For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

By Brother Townsend:—"As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

By Sister Townsend:—"And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

By Sister Cole:—"I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, and I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

By Brother Buckman:—"Peter said unto him, Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee: what shall we have therefore? And Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall set upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive a hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life."

By Sister Buckman:—"He that is not against us is on our part. For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, Verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward."

By Brother Morron:—"Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. I thank my God always on your behalf, for the grace of God which is given you by Jesus Christ. That in everything ye are enriched by him, in all utterance, and in all knowledge. Even as the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you; so that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

By Sister Morron:—"But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law, and in the prophets. And herein do I exercise myself to have always a conscience void of offence toward God and men.

Sister Neill. Dear brothers and sisters, my heart's desire and prayer to God for you today, the first Sunday in the new year, is in the words of Paul to the saints at Ephesus. "I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, that he would grant you, according to riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled with all the fulness of God.

P. Neill. Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering, affliction and patience, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

Historical Sketches.

A letter was sent to Sister Emma Jackman of Grand Rapids, Mich., and by her referred to Sister A. S. Miller, of Coats Grove for reply, and she sends the following:

I think the work undertaken is a fine thing, one that will be of much interest to the people of that region especially, and to all who were in any way connected with the work there. And I wish I was able to give items of information that would be helpful, but I fear all I can tell will hardly be worth writing.

My first acquaintance in Indiana was in 1850, the year my husband and I were married. My home was in Mendon, Mich., and we settled in Middlebury, Elkhart Co., that spring. Our faith was not a new thing there then, for there were quite a good many bodies of believers scattered about the country. At Mid Nebury I think there were about twenty, a small company but they were true and faithful. Mr. Miller had monthly appointments in four places Middlebury, Lagrange, near there a place called Salem, and the other place I cannot recall. Milford I think. A good brother and sister by the name of Craton lived near the Lagrange appointment and Bro. Craton who occasionally has communications in The Restitution is his son. In thinking over the places where he preached more or less I recall Orland for one. There were quite a number of families there of our faith, one very good substantial family by the name of Hendry. He also had appointments at Angola for some time. There were a few of our faith out on the Vistula, not far from Middlebury. They sometimes met with us at Middlebury. There were also a few believers on White Pigeon in the edge of Michigan. He preached there some too, and they used to come to our Sunday meetings at Middlebury frequently. The two principal families were Rollin and Fieldhouse. There were many other places where he preached some. Be assured of one thing, no opening for preaching presented itself but what he occupied if it was a possibility, and if there was any time not filled he would seek an opening.

We attended Conferences at Otsego, Kingsbury, Antioch and Middlebury and some other places. There was also a family of our faith in Goshen by the name of Matchett, we used to call on as we passed through to go to Otsego. I don't think of any thing more now of his work there, and will close by saying I formed many very precious acquaintances in Indiana and we felt very sorry to leave there, which we did after four years stay in Middlebury. My parents being left alone, my brother having died, they felt we must come and live with them and that Mr. Miller could preach in Michigan as well as in Indiana. Well, what I have written may not be of any account, but it has brought to mind so freshly the times and the pleasant acquaintances of my early days that I am not sorry to have had it called in that direction. I might apologize for my poor memory and my poor writing, but will only say excuse me because of my four score years.

With Christian regards yours,
A. S. Miller.

P. S. I see I did not mention the names of any of the brethren and sisters of Middlebury and I would not forget them for they are some of the excellent ones of the earth. There were Brothers Walker, Duncan, Foster, Rice and Beech, and their wives. They were always ready for any good work.

Lesson for Sunday, Jan. 27, 1907.

The Story of Cain and Abel. Gen. iv. 3-15.

Golden Text. Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer. 1 John iii. 15.

Cain and Abel were sons of Adam and Eve, born after they were driven out of the garden of Eden. Gen. iii. 24. "In the process of time" take notice of this expression, it occurs many times in the Old Testament. It suits the purpose. Many things succeed or fail, or both in the process of time. It is only a matter of time when all present evils will, through or by the Lord Jesus Christ, be banished from the earth. Rev. xxi. 4. "Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering to the Lord." But God had no respect, no regard, no acceptance for Cain nor his offering. What was the reason for God's rejection?

Cain was a tiller of the ground, Gen. iv. 2—a farmer, and brought what he had, which seems without further thought—to be quite reasonable. If the story of Abel was not linked with Cain, we might be at a loss to account for God's action. It is quite safe however to conclude that Cain and Abel had the same religious instruction from their parents, and both knew what would be acceptable to God. Cain was very wroth—very angry, his face showed his great rage. The Lord asked him why he was angry. If he made any answer it is not recorded, it would have been hard for him to give a reason for his conduct. We need not doubt for a moment but that he knew that his gift was not according to God's will. And if he really did not know before, he certainly knew after his plain duty was to repent—change his mind, and his offering. The story shows that he despised government, was self-willed and presumptuous, 2 Peter ii. 10, and like all such would not listen to the advice and entreaty of the Lord who kindly assured him that—if he did well—brought a proper offering—it would be accepted. If he did not, the sin—the fault was his own, he had no right, no need, no cause to be angry.

"Unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him." The sixth and seventh verses seem to be mixed, a thing sometimes found in Scripture. Cain was the elder brother. The reasonable understanding is, that as the younger brother would admire, respect and honor him, looking to him for example, advice and instruction—if he did well—but he did worse, he slew Abel because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous. 1 Jno. iii. 12. To the question, "Where is Abel thy brother?" he said he did not know, and added, "Am I my brother's keeper?" This was falsehood, presumption, insult, rebellion, added to murder, the combination could hardly be worse. The Lord was not asking for information, for there is nothing hid from God. "O God, thou knowest my foolishness, and my sins are not hid from thee." Psa. lxix. 5 and xliv. 21. "Thou art cursed from the earth." It will not after this, reward you for your toil, will not yield—produce, grow for you that which is good, because you made it drink your brother's blood. You will be a wanderer on the earth. Such was the fate of the first-born man. He said his "punishment was greater than he could bear." It was certainly not greater than his sin—crime, which he treated as of no consequence. He not only complained of the severity of his punishment, but also that he was driven from tilling the ground, that God's face would be hid from him, and every one that found out he was a murderer would want to kill or smite him, and not once did he even hint that he himself was solely to blame, nor did he mention forgiveness, ere then God took a little pity on him, setting a mark on him—whatever that might be—so that he would not be killed—as he had done with his brother Abel.

Abel was a keeper of sheep, Gen. iv. 2, a stock raiser, and "In process of time—in due time—at the proper time brought an offering to the Lord of the first of his flock, of the fattest and best, and the Lord accepted his offering—why? because it was according to the will of God. It showed faith and obedience on the part of Abel. His sacrifice was more excellent than Cain's. God's acceptance of it was a proof that he had done what was right in the sight of God. Heb. xi. 4. About four thousand years after the Lord Jesus Christ spoke of Abel, saying that his blood was righteous, and therefore he was righteous. Matt. xxiii. 35. He was justified by faith. Rom. v. 1. His works showed—proved his faith, James ii. 22, the same as Abraham. Abel was the first martyr, the first one put to death for faith in God. Many have shared his fate since. There is no written law concerning sacrifice previous to the offering of Abel. Inference is not always safe, but we may infer something from the statement that God clothed Adam and Eve with coats—garments of skins. Gen. iii. 21. It was afterwards written that "The firstlings of ox or sheep belonged to the Lord, Lev. xxvii. 26, and the law of "the sin offering." Lev. iv. 27-32. "Without the shedding of blood no remission," Heb. ix. 22, no remission—no putting away—no forgiveness of sin. When we believe the gospel of the kingdom, and are baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus our past sins are remitted, washed away. Acts xxii. 16. But the blood of Jesus Christ that speaks better things than that of Abel. Heb. xii. 24. Cleanseth from all sin. 1 John i. 7.

Cain and Abel represent every living man. There are but two classes, the godly and the ungodly. Cain was that wicked one, and his brother was righteous. 1 John iii. 12. It is not necessary to murder, or lie, or even be stubborn. We can be very good—as men call good—kind hearted, honest and respected, but without faith and obedience we are of the ungodly, and classed with Cain. By faith. "In the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, and obedience in baptism, Acts viii. 12, we become sons of God, Rom viii. 14, 15, and are classed with Abel. May every reader of this be—or become—a son or daughter of God. 1 Cor. vi. 18.

Dear Restitution.

Through your columns I would like to say to the dear ones of like precious faith that we have missed your Christmas greetings in the dear old Restitution, it seems to cheer us up to read your testimonies, and hear you say that you are still working for the Master. There are only a few of the one faith here now, but we are still strong in the faith and hope of the gospel, and trying to serve the Lord. We were rejoiced last Sunday to have our dear Brother Groat with us, and he gave us a good discourse. It made us feel encouraged to begin the new year with rejoicing, and a determination to live nearer to Christ this year than we did the past year, to try and grow in grace and in knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who has done so much for us, who gave his life that we might have life and have it more abundantly. We are striving to let our light shine, and to talk and reason on the Scriptures with any one that will talk, but it seems that there are but few that will listen. They think their way is all right, and they don't care to investigate the Scriptures. We expect to have Brother Groat to preach for us once in three weeks until the first of June. If any of the brethren should be coming this way we would be glad to have them stop and make us a visit, or give us some good gospel sermons, and we will pay this extra expence. We are close to the Santefee railroad, get off at Oleander, Cal., and you would have no trouble to find us, and we will do all we can to make your visit pleasant. Now may God bless you all, and help you to endure to the end, and that we may all strike glad hands in the kingdom of God, no more to part. Wishing you all a happy New Year, I am as ever your sister in Christ.

M. A. Calder.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

As promised I beg to say we have received one dollar from the following: Edna Anderson, Mrs. F. J. Powers, Mrs. J. H. McFarland, Alex McFarland, Orphia Fullbright, H. E. Paddock, P. W. Bourk, Mrs. M. F. Cook, Katherine Townsend, Lillian Logan, W. W. Roll, Mrs. B. Coleman, Lizzie M. Johnson, M. D. Morrow, Jennie Page, F. P. Powers, Mrs. C. W. Pettigrew, E. L. Bogden, Mrs. W. P. Gillillan. And two dollars from each of the following: Mary A. King, Jacob Reed, P. H. Bouk, H. L. Hillsbuck. And three dollars from Rena Endsley, Wm. D. Root; and five dollars from Albert Siple and R. S. Waldron. Four dollars from Nelson Hill and seven from G. W. Chalder. Some requested us not to give their names, and if we have, it is a mistake in us. We have done our best under the circumstances. Sickness in our family has kept my husband at home for the last two weeks, but he will start again in a short time. Our own daughter has become obedient to the faith, and four others were baptized at our home, a short time ago. May God bless the helpers and all of like faith. Pray for our work here.

Your sister in the Abrahamic faith.
Mrs. E. C. Daniel.

P. S. If any have ordered the Cargile-Daniel discussion and failed to get it, please write me, as I am anxious for each one to get the book.

A Criticism.

Bro. Underwood:

The indomitable courage with which some correspondents to The Restitution exercise their knowledge of philology causes each lachrymal to precipitate copious quantities of the quintessence of human grief. Our concomitancy leads to a desire for harmonious helpfulness. This cannot exist where scribes exercise themselves in the art of circumlocution. Irrefragible syllogisms that confound the ordinary mind are as lacking in fructification as are chimerical premises, logic, and conclusions. The transmogrification required of us to comprehend the uncognoscible literature of some of our scribes makes the dear old Restitution almost a blank to the man of ordinary erudition.

Very truly,
A Mental Wreck.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed please find $2.50 for which pay my Restitution for 1907, also one dollar to pay for any one who cannot afford to pay for it. I trust all who cannot afford means to pay, would be supplied. The Restitution is a very valuable paper, and I am sure that any one who has been used to it, would be hard to do without it. I bid you good speed on this New Year, and trust all who can afford will do right by you when you ask no more. May God bless you all in your good work is the sincere wish of your sister in the one faith.

Selma Samuels.

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "The Restitution," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

How Much Did He Leave?

How much did he leave? was the question asked when the death of a wealthy man was announced. "He left everything," was the prompt and sad reply. He could take nothing with him. He brought nothing into the world, he carried nothing out. No matter how much time he had spent, how much money he had acquired, how much influence he had heaped up all was left behind.

My friend, you must by and by pass from this mortal state. What will you leave behind you? What will you carry with you? What have your investments been? Where are your treasures laid up? A little while and these questions will become intensely practical. Lawyers, executors, heirs, speculators, and fortune hunters will be looking to find your wealth. Relatives that have never known or cared for you when living may possibly have a great interest in your affairs when dead. Lawyers whose names you have never heard, may preside over the settling up of your estate and may serve themselves right royally out of it. The will you have made may be broken, the plans you have made may fail, the projects you have had in view may be forever unaccomplished, and while you are mouldering to dust others may riot in your dwelling and consume your substance. Treasures laid up on earth are a very poor capital to begin with in another world.

What will you leave behind you? Work done for God will last. If you disperse and give to the poor your righteousness shall endure forever; if your treasures are laid up in heaven, neither moth nor rust can corrupt, nor can thieves break through and steal. Flames may devour, floods may overflow, and wealth may vanish, honors may depart, but those things which are laid up in heaven are sure and steadfast and eternal. Blessed are they who, looking beyond this world of vanity and vexatious uncertainty and disappointment, have made their home and laid their treasure up beyond the storms and tempests, beyond the losses and crosses, beyond the disappointments and uncertainties of this troubled and tempest-tossed pilgrimage.

May the God of all grace help us to lay our treasures up in heaven, to build our dwellings on the Eternal Rock, to make the Lord our trust, our refuge and our all, that in the great day, when earth shall depart and all its pride shall turn to vanity and dust, we may have our heritage, our life, our joy, our treasure and our rest beyond time's stormy scenes, in the kingdom of our God.—Christian.

Dear Restitution:

And those of the household of faith. Another year has gone into the past and God has been very good to us sparing our lives and showering told blessings upon us, for give him thanks, and let us gratitude by doing his wi him more in the coming y with all our might what for the Master.

Your brother and sist
John

Poetry.

The Road to Yesterday.

There is a road to yesterday—
A wondrous thoroughfare,
Where wanton breezes idly play
And blossoms scent the air.
It stretches long and far and straight;
It wanders up and down;
It passes many an open gate
And many a little town.

There is a road to yesterday;
The grasses grow beside,
And trees that spread and swing outlay
And shade the pathway wide.
Its flowers are a goodly sight,
And it goes on and on
And leads to many a starry night
And many a cloudless dawn.

There is a road to yesterday
And we may trace its gleam
In flecking shade or dancing ray
Upon some little stream;
Or we may see it, when, with eyes
Half-closed, we hear a song
That calls up many a glad surprise
And many a twilight long.

There is a road to yesterday,
And each one knows its start—
An portal to this wondrous way
Is held within the heart.
From there the pleasant courses lead
As far as one can see
It rests on many a golden deed
And many a memory.

A Prayer.

Laid on thy altar, O my Lord divine,
Except this gift today, for Jesus sake,
I have no jewels to adorn thy shrine,
Nor my world-famed sacrifice to make;
But here I bring within my trembling hand,
This will of mine—a thing that seems the small,
And thou alone—O Lord, canst understand,
How when I yield thee this, I yield my all.

Hidden therein, thy searching gaze can see
Struggles of passion, visions of delight,
All that I have, or am, or fain would be,
Deep love, fond hopes, and longings infinite,
It hath been wet with tears, and dimmed with sighs,
Clenched in my grasp till nearly it hath grown;
Now from thy footstool, where it vanquished lies
The prayer ascendeth, may thy will be done.

Take it, O Father, e'er my courage fail,
And merge it so in thine own will that e'en,
If in some desperate hour my cries prevail,
And thou give back my gift, it may have been,
So changed, purified, so fair have grown,
So one with thee, so filled with peace divine,
I may not know or feel it mine own,
But gaining back my will, may find it thine.

Vanlyke.

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D, L. L. D., Review of No. 2.

Dr. Strong says chapter 3, p. 25 on "Embodied Spirit:"

All the analogies of the human constitution and, we may add, all the experience of human existence, go to show the essential or native mortality of man."

This is a true statement of fact, in accordance with the whole Bible. Dr. Strong should not have added it, as it will be seen he says, is commonly re- penalty of sin, and pre- is obviously so. Poets Scriptures have been thority for the belief ession of Adam and en of Eden was the as a divine inflic- posterity; but sci- this is certainly

It is clear above statement that Dr. Strong only repudiates as unscientific, but unscriptural the fact that death was the penalty of the Adamic law! His science and the higher criticism led them to reject the words of God to Adam—For in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die; for he says, That act of disobedience was not followed by immediate physical death, even in the case of our first parents.

It is evident that, because Adam did not die the twenty-four hour day he sinned, Dr. Strong believes with the orthodox churches that spiritual death was not only the penalty suffered by Adam and Eve, but the penalty the wicked will suffer by the second death, i. e., the death that never dies! But suffice it for me to here say for I will prove further on what I now assert; that spiritual death is not, never has been, and never will be a penalty for sin, for the unanswerable reason that spiritual death in an absolute state of sin which the wicked are called upon to forsake.

Dr. Strong virtually asserts that physical death is not the penalty of sin, but says, In contradiction of this that premature death is obviously so, i. e., the penalty of sin. But infants who have never sinned die, premature deaths, then it absolutely follows that they die because of the sin of our first parents in the garden of Eden.

Dr. Strong says that even the Scriptures have been adduced as authority, that physical death was the penalty of the Adamic law.

If we go to the Scriptures, as we now will, we shall see that Dr. Strong does not believe what they clearly declare on this penalty of the law; and that the popular churches virtually reject these Scriptures when they assert that spiritual death is the penalty of this law. All Christians ought to accept the statement that God himself gives of this penalty, and what the inspired writers so clearly declare it to be. But the evident reason they do not is that they know it would negate and abolish the hell of King James' Version of the Bible, and endless misery for the wicked!

And unto Adam he, God, said, Gen. iii. 17-19; Because thou hast harkened unto the voice of thy wife and hast eaten of the tree.....cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life, Thorns and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee.....In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return.

These unambiguous and emphatic words of Jehovah have been unwittingly perverted by the friends of God in order to harmonize them with their unscriptural theology. They assume that these personal pronouns refer only to the body of man, and not to man. They also say that it was the body that was formed of the dust of the ground. Well, this is an unintended admission that the body is the man; for Moses says, The Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground. He does not say the body of man as our orthodox friends will have it. And this dust-made man, at death, shall return to the earth as he was; and the ruach—breath, not the spirit as erroneously rendered Eccl. xii. 7, shall return to God who gave it? Moses tells us,—And the Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the neshorno, which is the breath of God, and which becomes the roonkh—the breath of man when he gets it, the breath of life; and man became, not received, but became a living soul.

That Dr. Strong and orthodox theologians are in a great error on the Adamic penalty is further shown by St. Paul in such clear and decisive words that it is marvelous that Dr. Strong, who professes to believe the inspired words of the Bible, should reject them as he has! The apostle says, Rom. v. 12: Wherefore as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all men have sinned; For until the law sin was in the world; but sin is not imputed where there is no law. Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come. But the apostle leaves no loophole to crawl out of the above when he further says, 1 Cor. xv. 21-23: For since by man came death, by man, second Adam, came also the resurrection of the dead. For as by Adam all die, even so by Christ shall all be made alive. Murdoc's Version. But every man under his own banner: Christ the first fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming.

But Dr. Strong says, as before quoted, Poets and even the Scriptures have been adduced as authority for the belief that death came into the world because of the transgression in Eden. It is surpassing strange that a man with such great titles, and professing to believe that the Bible is a revelation from the God of heaven, should reject as he evidently does, the inspired words of Moses and of the great apostle of the Gentiles! But he doubtless saw no other way to sustain the orthodox creed—spiritual death as the penalty of sin, and endless misery for the wicked in King James' papal, hell. But this cherished creed must be upheld even by the virtual rejection of thousands of passages that declare that the wicked shall perish, and be destroyed by being burned up.

On page 27, Dr. Strong says: The human body, we therefore believe, was not originally immortal, perse, but whether it was or not is of little practical moment for our present purpose, seeing as a matter of fact it is not now such. In any case, an essential remodification of it is absolutely necessary before it can be free from the liability and tendency to corruption. There is no surer certainty in the world than the proverb that we all must die.

And yet Dr. Strong does not believe that we all must die; for he only believes that the body of the "we" dies! In continuation he says: That the human soul survives the dissolution of the body we assume on the authority of Scripture. We do not believe that its immortality can be logically proved from its immateriality; for, in the first place, its nature is not absolutely known, and its non-material character is but an inference from certain—not all—of its phenomena; and, in the second place, matter itself is equally indestructable. Nor, again, do we think that the soul's perpetual existence can fairly be deduced from its unity and individuality; for these qualities are rather assumed than known, since it has varied powers, functions, and capacities at least; and furthermore, there seems to be no valid reason why a simple substance might not cease to be as readily as a compound one. Nor yet again do the aspirations and almost universal expectations of mankind afford a sure ground for the opinion that the soul survives the death of the body, inasmuch as the many hopes of the human heart, however fondly and widely cherished, have proved fallacious. Nor, once more, may we depend upon the arguments of theodicy, that this life is insufficient to balance the account of human sin and its reward, and therefore there must be another in order to adjust the full retribution; for, on the whole, natural law does inflict its own penalty even here, and moral rewards and punishments themselves are not without serious difficulty if wholly remanded to a future state. We must therefore fall back—or rather forward—upon divine revelation as the only safe guide in the dark passage; for the close connection between the soul and the body in this state of being, and our total ignorance of their functions, when discovered, would inevitably lead us to conclude that they must perish, what! in endless misery? together with the brutes?

We have given this long quotation in order to show that Dr. Strong rejects as illogical and invalid the common arguments used by theologians and others which are resorted to for lack of Scriptural evidence, to prove the old Platonic, heathen doctrine. Hence he assumes that the soul is immortal on the authority of Scripture. In continuation he says; Nature seems to indicate, therefore, that the mind is but a higher result of animation or vitality, and all metaphysical and philosophical or moral considerations would be powerless to afford a plain, positive and definite assurance of the immortality of the human spirit after life has ceased in its earthly organism. Fortunately, we are not left to vague conjecture or mere corollary on this most important subject; the declaration of Scripture, especially the New Testament, are clear, abundant, and decisive, and their authority is direct and paramount. They lie everywhere upon the surface of the text, and will hereafter come in review; so we need not cite them here.

It is true that the Scriptures, alone, must settle this whole subject. And, we shall further show at the proper time, that it is man that dies, and will be resurrected, instead of the body of man; and, that soul, and spirit, are not synonymous, and are not thus used, and so interchangably in the Bible; as commonly understood and used; and that the soul—spirit is not a living entity in man, as believed and promulgated by the popular churches of the world.

At the Breaking of Bread.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

Matt. xiii. 3, "And he spake many things unto them in parables, saying, Behold, a sower went forth to sow." (A parable meaning a fable or representation of something real from which a moral is drawn for representation). It seemed to be rather difficult for the disciples to understand why Jesus spake unto them in parables, which is the trouble of so many people of today that take parables to mean real representations. The disciples not fully understanding came to Jesus, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables? He answered and said, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given, how true it is. To us it is given to know the Word of God, but to the world it is not. God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit, for [illegible] all things, yea, [illegible] God. For [illegible] revealed it unto thee, [illegible] which is in heaven. But [illegible] receiveth not the [illegible] Spirit of God, for they are [illegible] unto him; neither can he [illegible] them for they are spiritually discerned. The mystery which hath been hid from ages, and for generations, but now is made manifest to his saints; to whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles: which is Christ in you, the hope of glory. That their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding, to the acknowledgement of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ. If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all liberally; and it shall be given him; for the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you.

For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance; but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away, even that he hath. Therefore speak I to them in parables; because they seeing see not; and hearing they hear not, neither do they understand, so it is today, though ever so faithful and hard may we work to teach the world or some dear friends the gospel, yet we cannot make them understand, in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, By hearing ye shall hear and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive. He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their hearts, that they should not see nor understand, and be converted. For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted. Conversion—to turn or change from one state into another; we changed our hearts from enmity to God, and worldly habits to love of God and rejoicing hope of eternal life. What a blessed conversion we have, for others the minds are blinded; for until this day remaineth the same vail untaken away in the reading of the Old Testament; which vail is done away in Christ. But blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear. O Lord, save me, and I shall be saved; for thou art my praise. God shineth in our hearts; to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. For verily I say unto you, that many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them. For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. Here ye therefore the parable of the sower. When any one heareth the Word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. This is he which received seed by the wayside. And this is the condemnation, that light is come unto the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil, for every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the Word, and anon with joy receiveth it.

Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice, like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins, and they seek me daily, and delight to know my ways as a people that did righteousness, and forsook not the ordinance of their God; they ask of me the ordinances of justice; they take delight in approaching to God. Wherefore have we fasted, say they, and thou seest not? wherefore have we afflicted our souls, and thou takest no knowledge? Behold, in the day of your fast you find pleasure, and exact all your labors. Behold, you fast for strife and debate, and to smite with the fist of wickedness; ye shall not fast as you do this day, to make your voice to be heard on high. Is it such a fast that I have chosen? a day for a man to afflict his soul? is it to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes under him? wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the Lord? Is not this the fast that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke? Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? when thou seest the naked that thou cover him, and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh? Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily, and thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall be thy rereward. Then shalt thou call, and the Lord shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am. If thou take away from the midst of thee the yoke, the putting forth of the finger, and speaking vanity; and if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noon day; and the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones; and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not. And they that shall be of thee shall build the old waste places; thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in. If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable; and shalt honor him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words; then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. Isa. lviii.

Now the parable is this: The seed is the word of God. Those by the wayside are they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh away the word out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved. They on the rock are they, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away. And that which fell among thorns are they, which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection. But that on the good ground are they, which in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience. No man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light. For nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid, that shall not be known and come abroad. Take heed therefore how ye hear; for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have. Then came to him his mother and his brethren, and could not come at him for the press. And it was told him by certain which said, Thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to see thee. And he answered and said unto them, My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God, and do it. Now it came to pass on a certain day, that he went into a ship with his disciples: and he said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake. And they launched forth. But as they sailed he fell asleep: and there came down a storm of wind on the lake; and they were filled with water, and were in jeopardy. And they came to him, and awoke him, saying, Master, master, we perish. Then he arose, and rebuked the wind and the raging of the water: and they ceased, and there was a calm. And he said unto them, Where is your faith? and they being afraid wondered, saying one to another, What manner of man is this! for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him. And they arrived at the country of the Gadarenes, which is over against Galilee. And when he went forth to land, there met him out of the city a certain man, which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in any house, but in the tombs. When he saw Jesus, he cried out, and fell down before him, and with a loud voice said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God most high? I beseech thee, torment me not. (For he had commanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. For often times it had caught him: and he was kept bound with chains and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was driven of the devil into the wilderness.) And Jesus asked him, saying, What is thy name? And he said, Legion: because many devils were entered into him. And they besought him that he would not command them to go out into the deep. And there was there an herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them. And he suffered them. Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked. When they that fed them saw what was done, they fled, and went and told it in the city and in the country. Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid. They also which saw it told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed. Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about besought him to depart from them; for they were taken with great fear: and he went up into the ship, and returned back again. Now there was a woman having an issue of blood twelve years, which had spent all her living upon physicians, neither could be healed of any, came behind him, and touched the border of his garment: and immediately her issue of blood stanched. And Jesus said, Who touched me? When all denied, Peter and they that were with him said, Master, the multitude throng thee and press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me? And Jesus said, Somebody hath touched me: for I perceive that virtue is gone out of me. And when the woman saw that she was not hid, she came trembling, and falling down before him, she declared unto him before all the people for what cause she had touched him, and how she was healed immediately. And he said unto her, Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace. While he yet spake, there came from the ruler of the synagogue's house one that said to him, Thy daughter is dead; trouble not the master. But when Jesus heard it, he answered him, saying, Fear not: believe only, and she shall be made whole. And when he came into the house, he suffered no man to go in, save Peter, and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden. And all wept, and bewailed her: but he said, Weep not; she is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn, knowing that she was dead. And he put them all out, and took her by the hand, and called, saying, Maid, arise. And her spirit came again, and she arose straightway: and he commanded to give her meat. And her parents were astonished: but he charged them that they should tell no man what was done. Then he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick. And he said unto them, Take nothing for your journey, neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats apiece. And whatsoever house ye enter into, there abide, and thence depart. And whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, shake off the very dust from your feet for a testimony against them. And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing everywhere. Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead; And of some, that Elias had appeared; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again. And Herod said, John have I beheaded: but who is this, of whom I hear such things? And he desired to see him. And the apostles, when they had returned, told him all that they had done. And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place belonging to the city called Bethsaida. And the people, when they knew it, followed him: and he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing. Then the twelve came, and said unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, and get victuals: for we are here in a desert place. But he said unto them, Give ye them to eat. And they said, We have no more but five loaves and two fishes; except we should go and buy meat for all this people. For they were about five thousand men. And he said to his disciples, Make them sit down by fifties in a company. And they did so, and made them all sit down. Then he took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, he blessed them, and brake, and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude. And they did eat, and were all filled: and there was taken up of fragments that remained to them twelve baskets. And it came to pass, as he was alone praying, his disciples were with him: and he asked them, saying, Whom say the people that I am? They answering said, John the Baptist; but some say, Elias; and others say, that one of the old prophets is risen again. He said unto them, But whom say ye that I am? Peter answering said, The Christ of God. And he straitly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing; saying, The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be slain, and be raised the third day. And he said to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it. For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, or be cast away? For whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels. But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God. And it came to pass about an eight days after these sayings, he took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray. And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistering. And behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias: Who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem. But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him. And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said. While he thus spake, there came a cloud, and overshadowed them: and they feared as they entered into the cloud. And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him. And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. And they kept it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen. And it came to pass, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him. And, behold, a man of the company cried out, saying, Master, I beseech thee, look upon my son: for he is mine only child. And, lo, a spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out; and it teareth him that he foameth again, and bruising him hardly departeth from him. And I besought thy disciples to cast him out; and they could not. And Jesus answering said, O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you, and suffer you? Bring thy son hither. And as he was coming, the devil threw him down, and tare him. And Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and healed the child, and delivered him again to his father. And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God. But while they wondered every one at all things which Jesus did, he said unto his disciples, Let these sayings sink down into your ears: for the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men. But they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not: and they feared to ask him of that saying. Then there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be greatest. And Jesus, perceiving the thought of their heart, took a child, and set him by him, And said unto them, Whosoever shall receive this child in my name receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me receiveth him that sent me: for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great. And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbad him, because he followeth not with us. And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us. And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, And sent messengers before his face: and they went, and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him. And they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem. And when his disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did? But he turned, and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village. Then said one unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest. And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead: but go thou and preach the kingdom of God. And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell, which are at home at my house. And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God. After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come. Therefore said he unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest. Go your ways: behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves. Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes: and salute no man by the way. And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house. And if the son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it: if not, it shall turn to you again. And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give: for the labourer is worthy of his hire. Go not from house to house. And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you: And heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. But I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city. Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would a long time ago have repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes. But it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment, than for you. And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted to heaven, shalt be thrust down to hell. He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me. And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name. And he said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven. Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall by any means hurt you. Notwithstanding in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven. In that hour Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight. All things are delivered to me of my Father: and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him. And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see: For I tell you that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them. Now a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou? And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself. And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live. But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour? And Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead. And by chance there came down a certain priest that way: and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side. And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side. But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him, And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him. And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee. Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves? And he said, He that showed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise. Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village: and a certain woman named Martha received him into her house. And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word. But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me. And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things: But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her. And it came to pass, as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples. And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth. Give us day by day our daily bread. And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen. And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves; For a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him? And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee. I say unto you, Though he will not rise and give him, because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth. And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent? Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him? And he was casting out a devil, and it was dumb. And it came to pass, when the devil was gone out, the dumb spake; and the people wondered. But some of them said, He casteth out devils through Beelzebub the chief of the devils. And others, tempting him, sought of him a sign from heaven. But he, knowing their thoughts, said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against a house falleth. If Satan also be divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? because ye say that I cast out devils through Beelzebub. And if I cast out devils through Beelzebub, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges. But if I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you. When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace: But when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils. He that is not with me is against me: and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad. When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest; and finding none, he saith, I will return into my house whence I came out. And when he cometh, he findeth it swept and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh to himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first. And it came to pass, as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto him, Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked. But he said, Yea rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it. And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to say, This is an evil generation: they seek a sign; and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet. For as Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation. The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here. The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here. No man, when he lighteth a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light. The light of the body is the eye: therefore when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light; but when thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness. Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness. If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light, as when the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light. And as he spake, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him: and he went in, and sat down to meat. And when the Pharisee saw it, he marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner. And the Lord said unto him, Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness. Ye fools, did not he that made that which is without make that which is within also? But rather give alms of such things as ye have; and, behold, all things are clean unto you. But woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. Woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them. Then answered one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying thou reproachest us also. And he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers. Woe unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them. Truly ye bear witness that ye allow the deeds of your fathers: for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres. Therefore also said the wisdom of God, I will send them prophets and apostles, and some of them they shall slay and persecute: That the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation; From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, it shall be required of this generation. Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered. And as he said these things unto them, the scribes and the Pharisees began to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things: Laying wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him. In the mean time, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, insomuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy. For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known. Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the housetops. And I say unto you my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. But I will forewarn you whom you shall fear: Fear him, which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him. Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows. Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God: But he that denieth me before men shall be denied before the angels of God. And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost it shall not be forgiven. And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say: For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say. Then one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me. And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you? And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth. And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully: And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God. And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on. The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment. Consider the ravens: for they neither sow nor reap; which neither have storehouse nor barn; and God feedeth them: how much more are ye better than the fowls? And which of you with taking thought can add to his stature one cubit? If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, why take ye thought for the rest? Consider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. If then God so clothe the grass, which is today in the field, and tomorrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith? And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind. For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: and your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things. But rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you. Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the lord when he cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them. And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants. And this know, that if the goodman of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through. Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh. Then Peter said unto him, Lord, speakest thou this parable unto us, or even to all? And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Of a truth I say unto you, that he will make him ruler over all that he hath. But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to smite the menservants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken; The lord of that servant will come in a day when he loo

The Bereans Column.

Dear Bereans:

As Chairman of the Berean Committee for THE RESTITUTION I wish to say a few words in regard to resolutions for this year. So many have taken hold of the work and have written such splendid letters that our column has become a source of interest to the many readers of the paper, and is looked forward to with pleasure. We can not afford to allow this interest to waver. But it is only by continued energy and untiring efforts on the part of the members that this work can be continued. Do not wait for a personal request to write an article. Make this your column and whenever time and opportunity permit send a letter to any member of the committee and it will be gladly received, and in due time forwarded to this paper. The Ripley Society have been doing this for some time and we wish to thank them for their efforts. "God loveth a cheerful giver." Is this not one way of giving to the Lord? Give a little of your time, some extra thought and some words of cheer and comfort to the hungry seekers of the truth. Perhaps some one may become interested through these letters which are written by the young people who would not at first care for those of the older people. Let us sow the seed and look to the "Giver of all good for our rewards."

Yours interested in the society.

ELIZABETH EATON.

The Antioch Berean Society was organized Sept. 2, 1906, and the following officers were elected: President, Mabel Drummond; Secretary, Grace Williams; Treasurer, Francis Wells. The membership, as yet, is small, but we find our lessons very beneficial. Our meetings are held on the second Sunday, and fourth Saturday of every month. We have held five meetings, and have had an average attendance of five.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD.

We are looking forward to the morning of the resurrection, when all shall come forth, those who have done good unto the resurrection and those who have evil unto condemnation. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God. And the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so we shall ever be with the Lord. We are to comfort one another with these words. Some among us say there is no resurrection of the dead. But if there be no resurrection of the dead then is Christ not risen, and if Christ be not risen then is our preaching and faith also vain. If Christ be not raised we are yet in our sins, then those who have fallen asleep in Christ are perished. This life is full of sorrows, trials and disappointments, and if in this life only we have hope in Christ we would be of all men most miserable. In Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive. Paul's hope was the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust. It leads us to expect the return of Jesus. It is the assurance of our own resurrection, and our own bodies shall be fashioned like his glorious resurrection body.

VENA DENSMORE & PEARL WOODS.

Dear Bereans:

In Paul's second letter to Timothy ii. 8 we read, "Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel." And in the 11th verse, it is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him. In the book of Rev. xx. 6, we read, Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. Let us strive to gain a part in the first resurrection.

GRACE HUTCHINGS.

Dear Bereans:

In Gal. vi. 10 we read, As we have therefore opportunity let us do good unto all men, especially those who are in the household of faith. We should be patient, kind and gentle, not to those only who are kind to us, but to all, for Jesus said, (Matt. v. 44-45), Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you, that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven. For God so loved us, that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us, therefore we ought to love one another. In Eph. iv. 32, Paul says, Be ye kind to one another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

NORA E. CLAYPOOL.

CHRIST OUR FOUNDATION.

We find in Titus iii. 8, "That they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works." But to maintain these works what materials should we use? In Gal. v. 22-23, we read that love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance are good materials for our character building. But how are we to secure these? Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness, and let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in Ps. hns and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him. And "if we heareth the sayings of Christ and doeth them, we will be likened unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock. Matt. vii. 24. We have Christ the rock and our foundation. For "there is no other foundation than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. iii. 11.

FRANCES WELLS.

This letter should have been printed last January but through a mistake in the address the Committee did not receive it until in June. It is just as good now as it would have been then, like many good things. It will never grow old.

PURPOSES FOR THE NEW YEAR.

At the dawn of this new year filled with so many hopeful and happy anticipations, let plans be made to make it one crowded with spiritual blessings. In Proverbs xx. we are told that, "Every purpose is established by counsel;" and in Psalms, "Thou shalt guide me by thy counsel." May we form all our purposes with God's counsel given us through the direction of his Word. During the past year did we do the work Christ intended for us? Why was duty shirked many times? Was it because the foundation upon which we builded was only sand that crumbled away leaving us too discouraged to begin again? Or was it through lack of faith and trust that we allowed the evil one to enter and batter down our frail structure? The foundation must be laid first, and that foundation must be Christ, "for without Christ we can do nothing." Then begin the work in God's temple. Let us fill each nook and corner with kind words, loving deeds, and gentle and patient recipes for helping one another. Bar the back door firmly against the evil one. He is a coward and will not dare to enter except by the back way. Then open widely the front door and let the sunshine come into our hearts. Do not close the door, but leave it open, raise the windows, and let the rays of light be reflected. Let them travel to those who need the sunshine, and may that sunshine be crowned with the rich promises God has given us. Tell to others that "the Lord is ready to forgive; and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon him," and to cast "all your care upon him for he careth for you," and above all, "That whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." And may we not be as the Pharisees who "loved the praise of men more than the praise of God," but may we do all to the glory of him, who "hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee;" and ever serve him whose workmanship we are, "created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." And so in this short life that is compared to the flower of the field that passes so swiftly and quietly away, may we be constantly building for eternity, "filled with the knowledge of his will, in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; that ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God."

ETHEL LOPER.

The Gift of Eternal Life.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner, how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Evangelizing Notice.

The N. W. Conference has selected me again as Evangelist. The Brethren have added Arizona, and California to my field of labor. Any church or isolated brethren that want meetings during the Conference year should correspond with me at an early date so I can plan my year's work for this extensive territory which now includes western Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona.

Hereafter my home will be Scholls, Oregon, and Address, W. L. Skeels, R. D. 1, Laurel, Oregon.

Will all persons interested in the truth, and all isolated brethren within the State with whom we are not acquainted, please write to us? Beloved, we are anxious to locate and correspond with you, that we may impart unto you some spiritual gift.

Address S. J. Lindsay, State Evangelist, or Robt. G. Huggins, Box 67, Oregon, Ill.

All Brethren in Iowa wishing Evangelistic Meetings during the fall or winter will please make their requests to the Conference Board at once.

Brothers T. H. Owens and Killough of Beaver County, Okla., preach at Clive, Lavern and Zelma each Sunday. Any one visiting here enquire for C. A. Starkey, M. A. Starkey or Mrs. Gabriel Rohrback.

WILL all concerned take note, the address of Brother D. C. and Sister N. B. Robinson will in future be 596 South Limestone St. Springfield, O.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Your loving brother.

Prayers should always be characterized by entire submission to the will of God. The undertone of every supplication should be, Not my will, but thine be done. There is a warrant for stretching earnestness up to this point: "Father, if it be possible;" but that must always be combined with the "nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt."

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

Commentaries.

The Resurrection. No 6.

I Cor. xv. 45.

The apostle stated in v. 22, the broad contrast between living in Adam and living in Christ. "In Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive." So was by man that death came and by man the resurrection of the dead. The cause of disobedience is connected with death followed. What a mournful history was foreshadowed by that act of rebellion against the great Sovereign of the universe. What is written on the pages of history overwhelms our minds by its tremendous [illegible] of evil; but how much that was recorded by the rivers, and the seas [illegible] never know;—where millions [illegible] written with unheard of [illegible] astounding proportions. Jehovah has witness of it all. The great ocean of moral evil still rolls on, engulfing every generation of the race as it comes on the scene. Death ends the sinful career of each individual of each generation, but sin survives and thrives as before; like a contagious disease it is enriching. The lesson has been taught, the example set and the new individual and generation are willing to learn the lesson, and partake of the example and are disposed to improve or discover new ways of sinning, unknown to the fathers. Adam [illegible] from Divine warning the consequence of transgression: knew what would befall himself and guilty Eve. But did he stop to consider what would be entailed upon his posterity, a heritage of evil for thousands of years, accompanied by physical infirmities and suffering of every sort terminating in the silence of death? Did he have any idea of the untold misery and wretchedness into which his disobedience would plunge the numerous family springing from him? He surely did not or the serpent would have been shown the way out of Paradise. The apostle keeps up the contrast: at v. 45 the Two Adams are put on opposite planes: So also it is written "The first man Adam became a living soul; the last Adam became a life-giving spirit. The first is of the earth earthy: the second the Lord from heaven." These descriptions were given to show a broad difference between the two Adams. The one brought sin and death into the world "with all our woes;" the other pardon, and peace, and life. By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, Rom. v. 12. The two are different in character and also in nature; the one a sinner, the other without sin, holy, harmless and undefiled. As to nature, Adam was on the plain of animal life with this to his advantage in case he had not sinned—access to the tree of life for the purpose of perpetuating a life that would naturally terminate like that of the animals about him, without such a provision; as it did terminate at nine hundred and thirty years. How much his life was shortened by excessive toil and change of environment we do not know. He was not created deathless by nature. It is not likely that any sentient and moral being was endowed with such a nature to start with. But rather this was to be won by a course of action in harmony with the Divine will. We learn but little from the revelation God gave even to his angels. The allusions are incidental. That they were put on trial, and some of them [illegible] we know from [illegible] 2 Pet. ii. 4. [illegible] the latter. "For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment." Adam could not transmit to his posterity a course different from his own. Having obtained access to the tree of life he lived, and death has been the sad heritage of his children whether righteous or unrighteous. Christ by his mediation has not given us a reprieve respecting sin as to the inherited from Adam. We still bear the image of the natural man. Says the apostle "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly," v. 19. To bear the image of the earthy is to be entirely mortal, as really as are the animals which were called living souls or natures, by the writer of Genesis, before these same terms were applied to man. Both alike are animated by the same principle, the breath of life. Touching the matter of life and death man has no pre-eminence over the beasts. Inspiration ranks them on a level here. Says Solomon: "That which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth so dieth the other; yea they have all one breath; so that man hath no pre-eminence above a beast; for all is vanity. All go unto one place. Eccl. iii. 19, 20. It may be humiliating to those who hold to the doctrine of inherent immortality to be put on a level with beasts, to be like them in so many points; yet they are obliged to here these statements or deny the inspiration of Solomon. Let us enumerate: 1. One thing befalls man and beasts, as one dies so dies the other: 2. They all have one breath; 3. all go unto one place; 4. are of the dust: 5 all turn to dust again." The immortality of the human soul is not in this count, for the very good reason that Solomon did not believe the doctrine; nor did any other inspired writer. If the Wise Man had believed the popular notion concerning the soul, he certainly would not have used the language he did. Neither Wesley nor Watson believed man died like the beasts of the field or forest; therefore they used language utterly at variance with that used by Solomon. They could not speak of man as did Solomon—impossible from their standpoint. Nor could Solomon affirm of man what Wesley and Watson affirmed of him. It is appropriate at this point to again quote their words. The former said, "I am now an immortal spirit, strangely commingled with a little portion of earth. In a short time I am to quit this tenement of clay, and remove into another state." And the latter, "Our organized bodies are no part of ourselves." To refute what is here asserted it is only necessary to say that the Bible nowhere employs such language. These men fairly represented the common view of the nature of man, but how contradictory of God's Word.

The apostle, by saying "we shall bear the image of the heavenly, doubtless the proof of man's entire mortality. The heavenly image or nature is not borne at the same time that the earthy is borne. First the earthy or natural; afterward that which is spiritual, is the divine order. See v. 46. The spiritual is yet an object of hope and promise, to be realized at the coming of the Lord, the Great Head of the church, the captain of our salvation made perfect through suffering. He has had since his resurrection a nature that is deathless. Says the apostle, "Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him." Rom. vi. 9. He said himself, "I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold I am alive for evermore; Amen; and have the keys of the grave and of death." Rev. i. 18. What a joyous anthem of victory for himself, and for those for whom he holds the keys that will unlock the gate of death. Such as he is now, his quality of being, they will be raised from the dead. Says John, "Beloved now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him," I John iii. 2.

"We'll all be like him; O beautiful sight;
Well may the soul unto rapture be wrought;
After the sorrow, the woe and the tears,
We shall be like him when Jesus appears."

To be like him is to be deathless. But dear reader know this that in order to be like him in his physical nature you must be like him in character, be a child of God by adoption into his family. This must be now.

JOHN L. WICKS.

(To be Continued)

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D., L. L. D., Reviewed. No. 4.

Under the head of "Disembodied Spirit," chapter iv., Dr. Strong says: "We propose now to enquire whether there really is or can be such an entity as this title indicates, and, if so, ascertain whatever we may concerning its condition, relations and experiences.

1. If, as above indicated, it be true that the soul is distinct in substance no less than in nature from the body, and that it also survives the shock of death, it necessarily follows that it must subsist in a disembodied state in the interval preceding the resurrection."

We have seen that Dr. Strong's arguments, hitherto, have been predicated on his assumption that it was "the body of man" that was formed of the dust of the ground, when God says by his servant Moses that it was "man" that was thus "formed," and that it is the whole man that returns to dust at death. Gen. iii. 19.

His "enquiry" as to whether man has a soul entity, and the "logical proof" thereof may satisfy a biased mind, but it will not satisfy an earnest seeker for truth. He must give Bible proof of his assertions, or fail. When he says: "It must necessarily follow that [the soul] must subsist in a disembodied state in the interval preceding the resurrection," he founds this argument or assertion on two ifs; if man has a soul-entity and if it survives the shock of death, then it must subsist, etc.

After a long argument against what he calls the development theory of its [the soul's] continued existence, an absurd theory which few believe in, Dr. Strong gives a negative view of the condition of the disembodied spirit, by which he means the Platonic-heathen, or outside of the Bible hypothesis. He gives a very gloomy picture, even of the souls of the good. He says (page 43): "In the first place we may safely say that the disembodied spirit cannot be aware of any sensible occurrences which take place after death, for all the senses which are the only outlets of perceptions from natural things are by supposition absent. This single remark cuts off at a blow the whole world of ghostly imaginings which superstition has conjured up to fill the void of sensation. There is no room for the visionary creations of Swedenborgianism with its sensuous pursuits.....All pain and pleasure such as now reach us through the senses are necessarily excluded.....Every avenue of intelligence is closed; the spirit is absolutely alone, so far, at least, as finite association extends, and can only be aware of what goes on within itself!"

If Dr. Strong had carefully, and without bias, read the Scriptures on this subject, and believed them, he would have found a solid bar against this popular doctrine of a soul, or spirit entity in man, and the condition of which in a disembodied state he is futilely laboring to show. He would have found, as we will elaborately show at the proper time, that the soul dies, is destroyed, goes into the grave, that "the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward," while they are dead, for "the grave cannot praise the Lord, neither does any that go down into silence." If therefore follows that according to these Scriptures there is absolutely no consciousness between death and the second advent of Christ and the resurrection; and, as the first thing the dead in Christ will know after death will be the voice of Jesus calling them to life and their great reward, how much more glorious and more to be desired than to have a part of one's self, of which we know nothing, go to heaven, (of which there is not even an intimation in the Bible) leaving the most important part, and the only part we know anything about, of which we have shown is ourself. And so the wicked ones who have died in Christ and hated God and the Bible, and those who have neglected the great salvation for the sinful pleasures of the world, or for its honors or riches, will also hear his voice calling them 1000 years after "the resurrection of the just" (Rev. xx.) to the condemnation of "the second death," which is an everlasting deprivation of life, and the "everlasting punishment."

"The first positive element which we deem important to name under this head," says Dr. Strong, "is the soul's continued consciousness in the disembodied state. Without this it can hardly be said to have an appreciative or real existence at all."

Ah, indeed! If this be true, why does not the doctor first prove from the Scriptures the real existence of this immaterial—substance—immortal soul or spirit entity. For this would have saved him the time and space in his futile effort to prove the soul's continued existence. And, instead of assuming that the words soul and spirit are synonymous terms as used in the Bible, he had better have proved it true, but did not attempt it, doubtless because he knew it could not be done.

Under the head of Scriptural Evidence Dr. Strong says (page 49), "But we are not left to unassisted reason on this momentous subject; our convictions are corroborated by the powerful authority of Holy Writ.....The state of disembodiment itself is, as we have seen above, often alluded to both in the Old Testament and the New. (?) Without citing the numerous passages that give details which we prefer to reserve to a later stage of this discussion, we may here refer to general statements, some of them already quoted, and others quite ample for our present purpose. For example, the expressions frequent in the patriarchal and royal period alike, "gathered to his people, slept with his fathers," cannot mean simply that they died, for they are usually added to words that properly express that idea (gave up the ghost, etc.); nor that they were buried in the family cemetery; for this, too, is often added specially, and in some places the persons spoken of were interred in a different place from their ancestors as (Abraham, Aaron, Moses, the Israelites who entered Palestine, and others); and for this idea a different phrase is adopted "gathered into the grave; buried with his fathers." They therefore signify a union with their forefathers in the other world, or as David tenderly expresses it with regard to his deceased child, "I shall go to him."

Before replying to the above long quotation, which was necessary in order to give a clew to the evidence he promises to give of the existence of a soul, or spirit-entity in man, we wish to notice a casual expression the doctor made in regard to "soul sleepers." He says, Hence the term soul-sleep is absurd, for it is borrowed from a false analogy." And it is absurd if soul-entity is meant, as doubtless it is, for the term soul-sleepers is not only a term of reproach given to the Adventists, but a culpable misrepresentation of their belief, which is that the saints who have died are asleep in Jesus; so it is saint-sleeping instead of "soul-sleeping." And this is answer to the expression, "he slept with his fathers," but not necessarily in the same place, but in sheol, the state of the dead which all go at death. The expression "he slept with his fathers" means that the person, not the body of the person, as generally believed—"slept," etc. The personal pronouns are never used in the Bible for parts of persons or beings, and were it not for such absurd use of them, Christians would believe what God says when he says to Adam, "For out of the ground wast thou taken, for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return."

When Dr. Strong stated that the phrases were gathered to, and slept with their fathers, could not mean simply that they died, for they are usually added to words that express that idea ("gave up the ghost," etc.), he must have either ignorantly or knowingly stated what is not true, for the Hebrew word goon rendered "ghost" does not mean to die, or death, but "wasted away," [Pick's Hebrew Concordance]. By referring to Gen. xxv. 8, 17, and many other places where these words occur we shall see the correctness of our statement. "Then Abraham gave up the ghost [wasted away] and died [after he gave up the ghost] in a good old age.....and was gathered to his people,"—not in heaven, nor in "hell," but in sheol, the state of all the dead. And what is said of Abraham is said of Ishmael and of many others.

"If the words "gathered to their fathers" mean what Dr. Strong claims, namely, that the soul goes to heaven or hell at death (which is also claimed by the orthodox churches), then it follows that the soul of a wicked king of the Jews would go where his good father's soul had gone; and the soul of a good king would go to the soul of his wicked father! All this would happen among the kings of the Jews, according to Dr. Strong.

The words of David, of his dead child, "I shall go to him," do not mean as claimed, that David expected that his soul would go to the soul of his child in "another world, but to sheol, where all the dead are. But Dr. Strong further says, "The survival of the human spirit after death is definitely told in the book of Ecclesiastes (xii. 7, "shall return to God who gave it"), and that in contradistinction of brutes (iii. 21).

Note the fact that, instead of quoting the whole of verse 7 which shows, from the allusion to the creation of man from the dust of the ground, that it is not a spirit-entity that returns to God at death, but the breath of life which God breathed into his nostrils—he only quotes one phrase which he thinks will serve his purpose as evidence of what he has asserted in regard to the nature, and destiny of the spirit of man when he dies! Every Bible student who has access to the Hebrew language knows the word rooachh, which in this verse is rendered "spirit" is also rendered "air," "wind," and many times "breath," and sometimes "spirit," as in this verse, when it should be breath, and in Eccl. iii. 21, which he refers to without quoting it, should be breath instead of "spirit," as the verse itself shows, which is as follows: "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, or the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" The simple meaning of this question is evidently the following, Who understands the principle of life in the breath of man, which in consequence of his upright position goes upward, and the breath of the beast, which in consequence of his drooping position goes downward to the earth? We shall show hereafter from this chapter that, "that which befalleth the beasts.....as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they all have one breath, all go to one place [where? not to heaven or hell surely], all are of the dust and all turn to dust again."

In continuation Dr. Strong says, "In fine, the Hebrew word sheol and the Greek hades, used to denote the state of the dead, are in themselves a standing testimony at least to the Jewish writers and readers in human [soul] existence after death."

But how can this be when the inspired wise man says—"There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in sheol whither thou goest." These words are in palpable contradiction to what the doctor says above of the "Jewish writers and readers," and, so far from being a "standing testimony of future existence after death," they present a dark and gloomy prospect for the Jews, if they believe with the doctor, that the Old Testament is silent in regard to the resurrection! They are also in absolute contradiction of all that Dr. Strong has thus far asserted, and what is so generally believed as to the consciousness of man, or "the soul or spirit of man" between death and the resurrection.

To Be Continued.

Who Will be Gathered?

Isaiah xlix. 12, Behold, these shall come from far; and lo, these from the north and from the west; and these from the land of Sinim. Mr. Stead quotes the above as proof that the natural Jews will be gathered back to Jerusalem.

But Paul says, Rom. ix. 6-8, They are not all Israel, which are of Israel. 7. Neither, because they are the seed of Abraham are they all children; but in Isaac shall thy seed be called.

8. That is, they which are the children of the flesh; these are not the children of God; but the children of the promise are counted for the seed.

Chapter xi. 20, Well, because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not high minded, but fear. 21. For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee. 22. Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God; on them which fell, severity; but toward thee goodness, if thou continue in his goodness; otherwise thou also shalt be cut off. 23. And they also, if they abide not in unbelief, shall be grafted in; for God is able to graft them in again.

Galatians iii. 26. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. 27. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. 28. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. 29. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to promise.

Peter charged the murder of Jesus upon the Jews and demanded that they repent, so did Paul.

No promise to any man in sin; but to all men alike on repentance. "No difference," the council at Jerusalem said. Acts xv. They must get the "new name," and that is "Christian."

The Mohammedan Little Horn (Dan. viii.) controls Jerusalem, and will till he is "broken without hand."

If the poor human heart is full of cares and troubles such as come to every life, if the soul is crushed almost to the earth by the heavy burdens, if every nerve and fibre groans with agony, there is no sweeter and surer relief than to fly to the sacred presence of him who never fails to lift the load of sorrow from the suffering one. If the path of duty is lost to the tear-blinded eyes, if the wanderer is bewildered amid the shadows of the way, how oft has all been made plain by the sweet soul-communion with Jesus! Oh, ye who are "weak and heavy burdened," ye who are sick and wounded in life's great battle, ye who with bleeding feet are journeying up life's rocky steep, seek for this holy privilege of communion with God's blessed Spirit, and he will bear the burden for you.—M. A Holt.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEBRUARY 6, 1907. NUMBER 5.

The Restitution advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Plymouth, Indiana, Feb. 6, 1907.

We did not issue a paper Jan. 30, which makes the one of Jan. 23, and this week consecutive issues.

Brother John Foore has issued a little tract entitled "The Great Divine Healer vs. Last Day Healers." We have not had the opportunity to read it carefully yet, but no doubt it gives the Divine Healer the proper place and sets the false imposters in their true light. Send to the author at his home 2012 W. Corning Ave., Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents.

The following clipping is from the Chicago Tribune, and tells its own story.

Kokomo, Ind., Jan. 27.—Probably the most peculiar will ever filed for probate in this state is that of the late George W. Deffenbaugh, who left the church of his faith $50,000 on condition that his spirit be elected a member of the board of trustees of the church and consulted at every meeting. The money is left to the Swedenborg church here. In his will Deffenbaugh also provided liberally for his wife and children. The will is a long involved document. It stipulates that Deffenbaugh shall be a member of the board of trustees after his death and shall be consulted in all things relating to the church. A plan for the government of that church is contained in the will. The trustees are to meet often and consult with Deffenbaugh's spirit regarding details. In the event that the trustees appointed by the will fail or refuse to act, then a convention of church members is to be held, and they are to select a board of trustees and proceed as though the parties selected had accepted the trust. Children of Deffenbaugh are contesting the will on the ground that their father was insane."

It just happens that the Editor of the New Church Messenger, published at Chicago, sent us the issue of Jan. 23. This paper is the organ of the Swedenborg Church, and contains a "statement of the New-Church Faith, as set forth from the Word of God in the writings of Emanuel Swedenborg." This man Deffenbaugh who died as above stated, evidently had studied this statement, and believed it. His acting on its teachings in this literal, consistent common-sense manner, now causes his children to claim he was insane. Not a bit of it. He was a very sensible man. The most reasonable man we have heard of for some time. One section of this statement of his faith says, "Man is an immortal spirit, having an earthly body which is laid aside at death; after which he awakes to consciousness in the spiritual world, and dwells in heaven as an angel, or seeks an abode with his like in hell, according to the character he has formed on earth." This statement further teaches that men after awakening in spirit form can associate with angels and with the Lord. Inasmuch as this theory is held by thousands of members of so-called "orthodox" churches, and is taught by pastors, and teachers in churches and Sunday schools, in funeral sermons, and on every occasion stated by those who devote all their lives to disseminating the doctrine, what wonder if a man now acts rationally and sensibly, and demands that men who have not yet passed to that "spirit land," shall listen to his directions regarding the use of money he has given to further propagate these ideas. There is no occasion to question his sanity. If the pastors, and teachers and members of the popular churches of the day are sane, then this man is just as sane, and acted in accord with the teaching of those whom he trusted to tell him the truth. The trouble is that God's Word teaches no such stuff. It plainly says that this man and all others like him, are "dead." They have no life. They have lost their life. God's Word teaches that no man can get life again till Jesus comes, and the man is raised from the dead. Man is nowhere in the Word of God said to be "an immortal spirit." No terms that indicate this are used to describe man. Man is possessed of life—mortal life—is mortal and liable to die. When he dies, he ceases to live. No sense that he had when alive is in operation. He is simply dead. A dead man—opposite to what he was when he was alive man. A future life—immortal life—is promised him on certain conditions, and the way to get this future life is to comply with the conditions laid down. Friends, be sensible—like the man who has just died. Read the terms God has given in his Word, and act,—not on the say so of Emanuel Swedenborg or any of the promoters of like false theories, but on what God has said.

Historical Sketch of the Church of God at Union Chapel, Jasper County, Illinois.

Until about A. D. 1885. I had never heard a gospel sermon. The first one I heard was preached to me alone at the old saw-mill in Jasper Co. Ill., by George Rollings, a tile-maker from Greenup. He talked in the Union Sunday School, and wherever he could get a hearing. I think about August of that season he got Brother Hook to preach about ten sermons in the grove at the Galloway School house. None obeyed, but the seed was sown. Bro. Hook came again and Brother and Sister Rogers, who are at Fair Dealing, Mo., now, were the first to become obedient. Later on Brother Rollings preached and four more became obedient and organized a church and we began to follow the early Christian example of meeting from house to house and had preaching as often as we could; for we were all poor in this world's goods but rich in faith. Brother Hatch was main preacher, and we grew to a church of 27 members, and of all of my life these were the happiest to me, to meet every Sunday with the dear ones of like precious faith, and I did commune in partaking of the emblems and singing and exhorting one another to good works. But, alas! today there is not one at that place. I do not mean that they have gone to the world, but are scattered from Indianapolis to Colorado. I hope that from every one there will be some good done.

This may not be interesting to all, but it will let the dear ones know that I have not forgotten the good times gone by and am looking for the good time when Christ comes.

Your brother, in hope of eternal life.

1 Corinthians ix. 1.

Paul is showing his liberty to the Corinthians where he openly says, Am I not an apostle? am I not free? have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord? are ye not my work in the Lord? He knew what he was, he knew he was a chosen vessel, a servant of Jesus Christ. Called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God. If I be not an apostle unto others, yet, doubtless, I am to you for the seal of mine apostleship are ye in the Lord.

Hear what he says in the same chapter, 17th verse, For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward, but if against my will (or freedom) a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me. But Paul was stronger in the work of the Lord.

Again, he says, as the truth of Christ is in me, no man shall stop me of this boasting or this act in the regions (or country) of Achaia. I believe this was the name of that country where Paul mostly preached. He was a bold brother. It was his work to do and he feared nothing. He put on the whole armor of God and went about preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and he was faithful unto the end. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered ship-wreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep, in journeying often, in perils of water, in perils of robbers, in perils by my own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren, in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. 2 Cor. xi. 25, 26, 27.

Beside those things which cometh upon me daily. What a Christian soldier he was, to battle daily for the gospel of the kingdom. He put his trust in God, and with the sword of the spirit he fought the good fight of faith. He has won many a battle, and saved many from death. Showed many how to escape death through the gospel promises by which he has been chosen an apostle of God through Jesus Christ our Savior.

May we all who have joined that army do good work unto the Lord, put on the whole armor of God and fight the good fight of faith, with that blessed hope of believing that when Jesus comes we shall receive that great reward, eternal life, in that kingdom which was promised to all them that believeth. To see Jesus as he is, to be made like him, see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the holy prophets and apostles. May we all be faithful unto the end, and reign with him in glory.

John Grier.

Dear Restitution.

I come to tell you good news. On the morning of Jan. 23, 1907, there came a rap at my door and when I answered the call there stood a young man who introduced himself as William Barber, who said he wanted to be baptized. He had come 340 miles to be baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God. He had learned from the Bible that there was no other name under heaven whereby we must be saved, neither was their salvation in any other. His father and mother both belonged to the Church of God, and took The Restitution [illegible] they lived. He learned the truth from his parents and through The Restitution, which he also takes. We have been corresponding for some time, although we were strangers. He could have been baptized by some one nearer home, where his expenses would have been almost nothing, but he was so strong in the faith that he could not make up his mind to have any one that did not believe what Peter said to Christ, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And the Savior answered Peter, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven."

In the afternoon in company with Brother R. M. Brisco, we went to the water, where we buried him in baptism. We rejoice with him in hope of the glory of God.

In the evening we gave to him the parting hand, and he went on his way rejoicing.

I am afflicted some with rheumatism, but if there are any others who see this notice that want to be baptized, come and do as this man did.

May God be with you all to the end, is my prayer. Amen.

Lesson for Sunday, Feb 12, 1907.

Abram called to be a blessing. Gen. xii. 1-8.

Golden Text, "I will bless thee, and make thy name great, and thou shalt be a blessing." Gen. xii. 2.

The Sunday School lessons are all important, but none more so than this.

In the first verse a command from God to Abram.

Second, four promises.

Third, three promises.

Fourth, Abram's obedience, his company, his age, and leaving Haran.

Fifth, the journey and entering Canaan.

Sixth, arriving at Sichem, and the inhabitants.

Seventh, one more promise, and worship.

Eighth, a removal, the place and worship.

Abram called to be a blessing. He was called out of Ur of the Chaldees. Gen. xvi. 7. He traveled northward about 500 miles to Haran, and about 300 miles southwest to Sichem, some 40 miles north of Jerusalem. The Canaanite—descendants of Ham, Gen. x. 6, were there. It is certainly interesting to know that Abram descended from such men as Seth, Gen. iv. 25. Enoch, Gen. v. 24, Noah, Gen. v. 29, Shem, Gen. vi. 10, Terah his father, Gen. xi. 31.

There is some conflict in accounts of places, conditions, and distances. Latest information is that Ur when Abram lived there, was a large busy city on the shores of the Persian Gulf. Highly civilized, and in a very fertile country, famed for wheat and choice fruits. A city of magnificent temples full of idols, a fine library, and with all very wicked. Haran was a fine pasture country, so was Siphrim.

Space forbids much general explanation.

We will now consider the promises.

"A land I will show you"—all the land thou seest. Gen. xii. 14, 15. "A great nation"—what nation is there so great. Deut. iv. 7. "I will bless thee"—the Lord blessed Abraham in all things. Gen. xxiv. 1. "And make thy name great."

Abram—Abraham is mentioned some 300 times, and linked with the name of Christ, who is called the seed of Abraham. Gal. iii. 16

"And thou shalt be a blessing." Let us carefully consider this promise. "In thee SHALL,"—in process of time, in due time, "shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Every living man and woman knows that there never was a time in the history of the world when all the families of the earth were blessed, therefore, "Abram was called to be a blessing" In the future, and still future, the blessing was to come through Jesus Christ. Gal. iii. 14.

In Gal. iii. 8, we are informed that the gospel—good news—glad tidings—was preached to Abraham, in these words, "In thee shall all nations be blessed"—through and by Jesus Christ as the seed—the Son of Abraham, Matt. i. 1. We all know that Jesus Christ has not as yet, blessed all nations.

Let us further carefully notice that at the best, the promises have had only partial fulfillment.

The Israelites were a great nation, but when the Lord Jesus Christ establishes them in their own land again, Ezek. xlviii, they will be much greater, Jer. xxxiii. 9, and a new and [illegible] covenant will be made with them. Jer. xxxi. 31-34. This will be the Kingdom of God—the Kingdom of heaven that Daniel talks so much about, so gladly, and so plainly about. Dan. ii. 44. The Lord Jesus Christ—the Seed of Abraham—will not only be King of the Jews, Matt. ii. 2, but King over all the earth in that day. Zech. xiv. 9.

Jesus throne—the seat of government—will be on Mount Zion. Psa. ii. 6 The throne of David, Luke i. 32. The headquarters of the kingdom of heaven. Abraham will be there. Matt. viii. 11, and so blessed—his Son—Christ blessing all the nations, and he himself busy helping, for the "Saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever." Dan. vii. 18. "They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom." Psa. cxlv. 11. "When the kingdom is restored to Israel." Ezek. xxxvii 22, and the land is like the Garden of Eden. Ezek. xxxvi. 35. The surrounding nations will be astonished. Micah vii. 16. In the process of time they will say, "Come, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord—Mount Zion—he will teach us, and we will walk in his ways." Micah iv. 2. "Yea, all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him. He will break the oppressor. His presence will be like refreshing showers. The righteous shall flourish. There will be abundance of peace. He will have all dominion, enemies will lick the dust. Kings will do him honor. He will deliver the needy, help the poor, save their lives, redeem them from deceit and violence, and they will be precious to him. Men shall be blessed in him, and all nations shall call him blessed." Psa. lxxii., read the Psalm carefully, make yourself thoroughly familiar with it. It contains a condensed account of how Abraham was called to be a blessing through his Seed, Jesus Christ.

It is impossible to do justice in a short lesson to the fact that "Abram was called to be a blessing" on account of his unwavering faith. Rom. iv. 20. God promised that he should be heir of the world. Rom. iv. 13, and if we belong to Christ, we are Abraham's seed—children—and heirs of the same promise. Gal. iii. 29. We belong to Christ if we have been baptized into him, Gal. iii. 27, believing the gospel, Mark xvi. 15, 16.

From first to last—from Gen. xii. to Gen. xxii., Abraham received from God about thirty promises. The last in Gen. xxii. 17, 18, Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies,—that is kingdom and dominion, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed,—that is Christ, and glad tidings, because thou hast obeyed my voice,—that is faith and obedience.

May we all be the seed of Abraham, and be called to be a blessing.

Home Department.

Dear ones of the Home Circle:

Do not become discouraged because our work is conducted under difficulties. You will soon learn the co-operative plan of work, systematic study, and the Home Bank system of contributing to the Bible School work.

Our aim is to work unitedly and systematically, although separated by distance, isolated from other workers and shut in by sickness. If Sister Woodward will put her number on her Home Bank as was suggested, she will become familiar with number 6, for Paul says, On the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store. Each first day of the week place your offering in your Home Bank. At the end of each quarter send your offering to Sister Woodward, Treasurer of the Bible School Association, with your number marked on your offering.

Remember the Home Circle prayer. Jesus said, "If two of you shall agree on earth touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven." If Jesus should ask the same of us today, that he did of the rich young man, would we also go away sorrowful?

Give as you would to the Master
If you met his pleasant look.
Give as you would to an angel
Awaiting your gift at the door

How can we work unitedly?

Let every member try this plan and note how soon our work will grow. Begin with the Home Department, let each member secure another member and pledge that one to secure another. This plan will work anywhere. Our membership should be doubled in two weeks. Let every member of our Bible Schools try the plan. Every member invite a friend to your Bible School or Bible Circle study.

If every member of the church should try this plan of work, every one win one for Christ, how long would it be before you could say with Paul, "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation." We must become connected with this power of God. God works through his people, but there is no compulsion, we are free moral agents.

The trolly car will run when connection is made with the source of power, so with the people of God, as soon as we work with God, his power will be manifested in us, but not until we are willing workers.

In the words of the apostle, "We pray always for you that our God would count you worthy of this calling, and fulfill all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith with power; that the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ."

We are exhorted to purge ourselves from all that is unclean, to be vessels unto honor, sanctified (i. e. set apart) meet for the Master's use, prepared unto every good work. Set apart for what? For the Master's use. Yes, this is what we were cleansed and sanctified for. This vessel must be filled. With what? Filled with all the fullness of God, till we become perfect men and women unto the measure of the statue of the fullness of Christ.

Dear ones, followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, this means much. We are called with a high calling. God is able to do for us more than we think or ask, if we will let his power work with us and in us.

Teacher's Training Lesson.

Hindrances to Home Study.

1. Indifference.

(a) The parents and teachers are too little concerned about home study of the Bible.

(b) The teacher not expecting it and parents not requiring it.

2. Method.

(a) The method of teaching in which the teacher does all the thinking, reducing the scholar to a mere listener.

(b) The failure to assign definite advance work to scholars as an incentive to home study.

(c) The lack of a definite plan of study adapted to the several grades.

Questions.

Who will send suggestions on "Helps to Home Study."

1. If children are ignorant of the Bible whose fault is it primarily?

2. Is it less important that children should be taught the Word of God in this Gospel dispensation than it was under the Law dispensation?

3. How may teachers and parents co-operate in securing home study? Who will answer?

Harriet E. Boice.

On account of illness, I did not respond when my number appeared. "A multitude of the heavenly host praising God, saying glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace good will toward men." What better song could have been sung by the holy angels? Not only a day of rejoicing to the shepherds, watching their flock by night but to the whole sin cursed world. Let us look up with rejoicing to the time when the Prince of peace shall come and reign with judgment eternally as we read in Isaiah ix. 6-7.

From a shut-in.

No. 9.

All that God has to give he gives to those who do all he gives them to do. Obedience shows men to be in harmony with the order of God, and in that order and harmony are to be found perfect peace and strength and joy. Obedience is the supreme law of all life.

Obituary.

Sister Janet Elton, wife of Brother David Elton, in the 69th year of her age, died at her home in Nottingham, O., Jan. 13, 1907. Her maiden name was Campbell. She was born in Columbiana Co., Ohio, and always remained a citizen of this State. She was united in marriage to David Elton, to which union two daughters were born and grew to womanhood. In 1904 the family circle was broken by the death of one of the daughters, and on the above date the enemy claimed the beloved mother. Sister Elton was a very exemplary Christian woman. She was exceedingly quiet and unassuming in disposition, yet cheerful and alert to the questions of interest to the disciples of our Lord. By years of study and devoted service of our Master she had developed the rare qualities, meekness and true piety to a rather marked degree. She walked meekly yet firmly in the footsteps of her Lord, whom she loved and served so well, until she fell asleep in full assurance of securing a crown of life when our King comes.

On Friday just preceding her death the writer was a visitor in her home. She then appeared to be in the enjoyment of her usual health, but at about four o'clock P. M. she was stricken with apoplexy, from which she was unable to recover sufficiently to converse with her loved ones, and two days later she died, leaving, other immediate family her husband, and daughter Mary, to labor on in the Master's vineyard without her wise counsel and encouragement and assistance with her unselfish love and ever willing service. But they sorrow not as those without hope, for they are living and laboring in the Lord, knowing that their loved ones are sleeping in Jesus. Funeral services were conducted at the late home by the writer.

Give the Bible its rightful place in your home. Let it not be crowded out by the magazine, the newspaper, or the novel. The standard author is a poor substitute for God's Word. Countenance no teaching or custom that would treat it as if it were of subordinate or secondary importance; but let it be first and last in your affection and interest. It is needful for instruction, for counsel, for reproof, for comfort, for direction, and for spiritual culture and refreshment. It is the best of books for parents as well as for children. Let it, then, be read, reverenced, and obeyed. Prize it above rubies. Show your love for it and appreciation of it at all times and under all circumstances.

A cannon ball of the enemy, plunging into the ground at Sevastopol, opened a spring of water for the soldiers there. A block of granite, placed in the way for a stumbling-block, may become a step upward. The Jews' persecution of Paul was the means of his getting safely to Rome and preaching the gospel there.

It is not difficult to get away into retirement, and there live upon your own convictions; nor is it difficult to mix with men and follow their convictions; but to enter into the world, and there live firmly and fearlessly according to your own conscience, that is Christian greatness.—F. W. Robertson.

Be Strong.

"Quit you like men; be strong."—1 Cor. xvi 13.

If you walk your way with a fearless tread,
You will find some shade on the weary road;
If you go your way, neither forced nor led,
You may toil again toil, but will feel no load,
And will gather strength as your hour your load.

If the cup is filled it is yours to drink,
Though the brim be touched by a bitter draught;
There are gifts for you if you seem to shrink,
And the trembling jest and the living shaft
Are the need of him with true penetrated.

And the word is this: That the man who knows
Of the sparkles about of the cold or heat,
Or the joker reels in the hard at times,
For to drown the sound of the music sweet
That is meant for all the trudging feet.

But the one who knows where the bitter is
Will one day come to the cup again
And find more wine in that draught of loss—
That draught of his, which was bitter, then—
For he is not alone who never like men.

And the greatest deed that a man may do—
Though he work with running thought and plan;
Though its acts be a mem all things enough;
Though he walk behind—though he lead Or son—
It is this, that he make himself a Man

If you quit yourself as a man ought,
There will be no one who will widely read
Or will wag the tongue with a word to write—
But wit, heed reject you may well discard
In the love of mankind and your God.

The Child's Resolve.

I will do as he tells me,
The little child said.
I will go to my Savior
And be born to bed.

I believe in his Word:
The Gospel is true;
It tells of a time,
When the cents shall be new.

I want to live then
And never more die,
Feel no sorrow at all
And never more cry.

QUESTION BOX.

[Interested readers of the RESTITUTION who desire to have Scriptural questions answered in this department, should address Robert G. Huggins Box G, Oregon, Ill. No anonymous communications will be noticed.]

THE KINGDOM IN MEN, OR MEN IN THE KINGDOM?

Dear Brother Huggins:

I think brethren should be able to satisfactorily explain all difficult texts of Scripture to the interested inquirer For this reason I want you to give an exposition of Luke xvii. 20, 21, in our "Question Box."—A. Brother.

REPLY.

Luke xvii. 20, 21 reads as follows: "When he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within (among mar.) you." It is important to note 1. that the kingdom of God had not "come" when the Pharisees made the "demand." Then it is not true that the kingdom was established in the days of John the Baptist. And 2. Since "the Pharisees" demanded when the kingdom was coming, and Christ said, "The kingdom is within you," he must have meant by the word, the pronoun "you," the Pharisees. Of the Pharisees the Savior says: "Ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess." Matt. xxiii. 25. And again: "Ye are like whited sepulchers, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness." v. 27. "Within," right where our friends try to make us believe the kingdom of God was, is "extortion and excess." "Dead men's bones," and not the kingdom, was what was "within" the Pharisees Now if you will notice the text you will see without an effort that Pharisees is plural, and that, therefore, the pronoun "you," to agree with its noun, is likewise plural. Had Christ said to one man, "The kingdom of God is within you," the pronoun "you" would have been in the singular number, and then the language would have put the kingdom "within" the individual spoken to! But since Christ was speaking to a number of the Pharisees, he must have meant "within" or "among" the circle of persons to whom he was speaking. A parallel text to this one is found in John i. 26: "There standeth one among you whom ye know not." Christ as King of God's kingdom, was the most important and essential of its component parts and using language of synecdoche could affirm that the kingdom represented by himself, was truly [illegible] among the Pharisees, wicked as they were, for he was standing among them. But to say that the kingdom was in the heart of those abominable Pharisees, is only to exhibit an ignorance of the Word which makes an enlightened believer of the gospel of the kingdom, shudder.

Had the Pharisees been righteous it would still be unscriptural to say the kingdom was within their hearts Such a theory would put the kingdom in men, whereas the Scripture always puts men in the kingdom. Christ says the kingdom is for men to enter; he lays down the conditions by which we are to get admission to it: "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John iii. 5. If the kingdom is in man, how can men enter into the kingdom? A man would have to enter into himself to get into the kingdom! Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the prophets are to be "in the kingdom of God;" the saints are to come from the four points of the compass, and "sit down" with them "in the kingdom of God." Luke xiii. 28, 29. Observe, the kingdom is not in the prophets and saints, but they are "in the kingdom of God."

RIGHTEOUS AND GOOD MEN.

In reading Rom. v. 7. I always get confused, for Paul seems to make a difference between a righteous and good man. A. M.

REPLY.

Paul says that for a righteous man one would "scarcely" (hardly) die, but for a good man "someone even dare (be willing) to die." Rom. v. 7. Paul here certainly makes a difference between a righteous and good man. We can easily understand the difference, and when comprehended, the difference brings out the beauty of the apostle's argument, and gives power to his line of reasoning throughout the 5th chapter of Romans.

Righteousness is right-doing; the man, that "doeth righteousness is righteous." 1 John iii. 7. A man who does right is righteous. A man who exceeds right, who does more than is required of him, becomes a "good man." A "good man" is better than a "righteous man." For a righteous man no one would likely die; for a good man "some" might dare to die. "But God commended his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners (neither righteous nor good), Christ died for us," Rom. v. 8. "Christ died for the ungodly." v. 6. It is common for the good to love the good, the beautiful, and the upright; and to give life—the mother for her child, the father for his children; but it is uncommon and heavenly for Christ who was both righteous and good to die "for us while we were yet sinners," while we were "without strength," while we were indiscribably deformed in sin. How great the love of God, and what a commendation of his kindness, that while unloving and unlovable, God loved us, and sent his Son to die for us! Blessed be God, "from whom all blessings flow"

IS THE HOLY SPIRIT AN INTERCESSOR?

If not, what does Paul mean in Rom. viii. 26, 27? A. T. B.

REPLY.

In 1 Tim. ii. 5, Paul says: "There is one God, one Mediator between God and men." The "one Mediator" he affirms is the "man Christ Jesus." If the Holy Spirit intercedes; if it is a Mediator between God and men, there are two Mediators; and Paul made an unpardonable blunder when he said there was "one." If there is but "one Mediator" and that "one" is Christ Jesus," the Holy Spirit is not an intercessor.

The "Man Christ Jesus" was born a "natural body," 1 Cor. xv. 46; his nature was the same as ours. Heb. ii. 24. The Spirit of God at the resurrection of the Lord Jesus "quickened his mortal body," Rom. viii. 11; and it became a "spiritual body," 1 Cor. xv. 44. Being then a "spiritual body," or a body of Spirit like God, John iv. 24, and the angels, Heb. i. 13, he is called a "quickening (life-giving) Spirit." 1 Cor. xv. 45. Death has no more dominion over him, Rom. vi. 9; and having been exalted to God's right hand as a prince and Savior to give repentance and forgiveness of sins, Acts v. 31, he is there a "quickening spirit"—"The Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered" (by mortal man) "He makes intercession for the saints according to the will of God." Rom. viii. 26, 27. Once understand that Christ is called a "quickening spirit," and then you can easily see that when "the Spirit" is said to intercede, Christ is meant. Indeed, there is only "one Mediator," and the "Man Christ Jesus" is the "one."

Had you carefully read the 8th chapter of Romans you would have found this expressly taught there. After saying the "Spirit helpeth our infirmities," and that it "maketh intercession for the saints," the Apostle says in the 34th verse: "It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us." "It is Christ that died" and that makes "intercession for us"—not the Holy Spirit. But since Christ now has a "spiritual body," and is a "quickening spirit," he is sometimes spoken of as "the Lord the Spirit." 2 Cor. iii. 19 With "groanings which cannot be uttered," and with pleadings "for the saints" which are according to the will of God," we have, in our "One Mediator," a High Priest of great influence and power with God. To say that the Holy Spirit is an intercessor not only denies the Word, but robs Christ of his glory, in that in "all things" he is to have pre-eminence" Col i. 18 And to say that the Holy Spirit makes intercession for sinners when they gather round an "anxious seat," is to deny the divine atonement. "He makes intercession for the saints (not sinners) according to the will of God." Become a saint, dear reader; and you will have "the Lord the Spirit," "the Spirit itself" to plead for your sins, and he will do it with "groanings which cannot be uttered." With so powerful an intercessor you can ask, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth." "Neither life, nor death, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature (created things) shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." vs. 33, 38, 39.

ROBT G. HUGGINS.

Hindering.

"Lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ." How careful we ought to be in conduct and conversation, lest we hinder the gospel from taking effect on the hearts and consciences of men. We can hinder it in so many ways, though we may be unconscious of the fact. The minister may be very much in earnest; he may himself feel the force of every truth he utters and the responsibility he is under to God to carry out that truth in his life; he may be logical and pointed and serious, but—if he forgets,—and shows irritability at home when dealing with his little ones,—if he gets vexed at his brethren when in some trivial matter they go contrary to his wishes,—if he shows not a brave front "when pressed out of measure, above strength" and "the sufferings of Christ abound in him," but showing "the white feather" backs down and will not be worried, who will have faith enough in him to follow him to Jesus? Who will believe the gospel that he presents?

If it has not power to keep him sweet and strong and patient, how can it keep others?

And we lay members—if we worry over disappointments, fret and murmur at the providence of God, scold because it rains, and growl because it is dry; never expressing thanks to God for our abundant blessings, can we expect others to learn from us to be humble and trustful and full of faith, relying ever on God?

And if we say unkind things of the dear children of God, if we hold up their faults before the cruel world, will God work through us to save people out of that wicked world?

Let us look at ourselves as God looks at us, tearing down every curtain of subterfuge, putting away every excuse that we have used to set in better light our wrong-doing. I have known dear ones, kept out of the church, just because the members said hateful things about each other. My own brother was one of these. And yet, those who were guilty, were utterly unconscious of the mischief they were doing, and are so to this day.

"Lest we should hinder!" "Speak evil of no man." "Laying aside all evil speaking." "Let bitterness and evil speaking be put away from you." "Let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against your neighbor." "Charity thinketh no evil." "Take not up a reproach against thy neighbor," lest thou be debarred from the tabernacle of the Lord and come not into his holy hill!"

"Lest we hinder."—"Let us make straight paths for our feet" turning none back that are about to enter in. If we do wrong even in little things our Christianity will be doubted, and others will be led to do greater wrongs. "Abstain from all appearance of evil." Do not put a foot over a dropped piece of money and keep it, nor refrain from paying for a car-ride, because you have been overlooked by the conductor. God wants honest Christians.

"Lest we hinder the gospel of Christ" —Let us be careful, not to darken the light, when in the company of those who are out of Christ. How do we know but they may be longing for the waters of life?

Our pleasant conversation as we walk with them from the house of God, may turn them away from serious things forever. This very thing, has happened many and many a time, just when the "Word spoken in season" would have saved.

MRS. S. R. WISE.

Special Meetings.

For the past three years, just after New Year, the Church in Salem, Ohio, has held a series of meetings, presenting [illegible] and discussing subjects [illegible] that religious people are not familiar with, and it may be added, subjects that we seldom make a direct effort to speak upon. Program just carried out was:

The Nature of Man.
Where is Abraham's Bosom?
Where did Jesus prepare a place?
Will God have the wicked tormented forever?
Where do we go when we die?
Is Sunday the Sabbath Day?
Was Moses and Elijah on the Mount?
Is baptism necessary?
Can we give a reason for our hope?
What spirit goes back to God?
Who has been saved?

All questions except the first, all answers given from the one authority —the Bible.

The special services have always been interesting and productive of some good. This year more satisfactory than usual. The attendance was good, notwithstanding there was extra service and revival meetings going on in town. Some came who had never been before, that was a surprise, but the satisfaction was in the close, earnest attention given, and the interest manifested. The chief pleasure was in the delight the church took in the topics discussed. Some had not before heard sermons on such subjects, to others the thoughts expressed, the Scripture reasons given were new and conclusive. The whole series was much enjoyed by all. The climax was reached Friday Jan. 18, when Mrs. Farmer asked to be baptized—of which notice is given elsewhere.

The writer had the unusual pleasure of being a listener, as Mrs Neill delivered six of the eleven sermons.

May the Lord find hearts and minds to bless, and give the increase where the good seed was sown for the first time.

A Baptism.

We have much pleasure in introducing to the Church of God in Ohio and elsewhere, our Sister, Mrs. M. A. Farmer, Salem, Ohio.

Mrs. Farmer is the mother of our Sister, Mrs. Buckman. She has attended nearly all our meetings for a considerable time, and given much earnest attention to "The things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." She has steadily gained in the knowledge necessary to salvation, and of course, gradually lost interest in the prevailing traditions and superstitions, realizing that remission of sins, and a promise of salvation to eternal life, by a resurrection, through Jesus Christ, could only be secured by faith and obedience she was anxious to be baptized. After an examination on precepts and commands necessary to know and confess before immersion. The Scriptures pointed out to, and read by Mrs. Farmer were not only familiar to her but well understood by her. This was followed by exhortations and experiences by those present, all being satisfactory Mrs. Farmer was immersed in the name of the Lord Jesus.

The baptism took place on Saturday, Jan. 19, 1907. The following day she received the right hand of fellowship, and there was much joy in the church in Salem, Ohio.

Who Told an Untruth?

In Genesis the second chap., seventh verse, the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul, the man, the clay, became alive. Adam became alive 10 verse, "And the Lord God commanded the man saying, of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat, 17 verse, But of the tree of knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." 3 chap. 4 verse "And the serpent said to the woman, ye shall not surely die," now here is a lie surely; who told it? This is the strongest evidence in the Bible of the immortality of the man that the Lord made out of the earth, if the serpent told the truth. God said "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Adam lived 930 years after he ate of the tree, then he did not die the day he ate, notwithstanding the Jews and the Fathers all believe that he did, and it was never questioned by any of the writers of the old Bible. About four hundred years before Christ, a Greek philosopher, Socrates, discovered, or thought he did, that matter was indestructable, and that the life principle was composed of matter but that the particles were so infinitely small that no magnifying power could bring them into view, nor ever has to this day, and that this life principle at death went into anything that was coming into life, it might be a horse, cow or any thing else. He was put to death for teaching this doctrine, they afterward raised a statue of brass to his memory, and the doctrine spread and is the foundation or the corner stone of the Pharisee doctrine that is taught today. About, or at the same time that Socrates was teaching this doctrine, Malachi wrote the last Prophecy of the Bible, 400 hundred years before Christ. Malachi 4 chap. 1 verse: "Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven: and all the proud, yea and all that do wickedly shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Well that looks like destruction, ceasing to be. Now there is a way out of this, that God did not mean that Adam's body, that is the clay part, but be died, spiritually or a spiritual death, the part that God breathed into Adam, commonly called soul, no that won't do because the soul that sins shall die and then the Bible speaks of dead souls and souls being put to death. Eight souls were saved from drowning in the ark, all the other souls drowned. We had better stick to the spiritual part, then we see how that will harmonize. God breathes into Adam a part of his own nature, part of himself. God is immortal and the part he breathed into Adam must be spiritual or immortal, then that day he sinned his spirit died. No that won't do because if it is immortal it could not die, then God did not breathe into Eve and she did not have an immortal part, she was made out of one of Adam's ribs and that was made of clay, then again God said to Adam, "Because thou hast eaten of the tree, cursed is the ground for thy sake. In sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life, thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee, and thou shalt eat of the herb of the field, in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground: out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return." This is the sentence pronounced on Adam and in it the word thou is used eight times and every time applies to all that there was of Adam, no spirit, soul or immortal part spoken of or referred to, then again if he had an immortal part or principle it must have been a part of God, and there is nothing said about its being punished in this sentence, nor any where in the Bible, then again if Adam was of two parts, part God and part clay, then the clay part or man part is punished here in this world and the spiritual or God part is punished in the other world, fire and brimstone forever and ever, and this fire is as much hotter as any fire we can make is hotter than a painted fire on paper, and the pain is increased in proportion. Think of it, we are punished with having to labor to live, that is the clay part, and 120 years is as long as it can last and suffer, and our enjoyment with the labor and difficulties is such that we want to stay here as long as possible, but God will send a part of himself, the spiritual soul or immortal, that can never die into a lake of fire. Now is is not this reasonable and logical? The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. Rom. vi. 21. In the day thou eatest, the very moment death entered, time commenced. There was an end then again, the word, in the day, does not mean literally 24 hours and is used in a number of places in the Bible an indefinite time. 2 Peter 8 verse, Beloved be not ignorant of this one thing that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years and a thousand years as one day. Now how does this agree with the Bible? From Adam to Noah the average life of man was 900 years, but no one lived 1000 years or ever has. Adam had eternal life on condition, so long as he obeyed the Lord there was no death, failing to do that he brought death on himself and all his posterity. Heb. ii. 14. Christ came into the world and took part of us on himself, flesh and blood, so that through death he might destroy him that hath the power of death, that is the devil. Now we have the same chance to live always, that Adam had. Christ has died and arose from the dead and promises to raise all who accept him to everlasting life. There is no place in the Bible where it says the wicked will live forever, but any number of places where it says they will be destroyed, burnt up, perish. I forgot there is one place in the Bible where it says, if you call it Bible, the devil said to Eve, "You will not die." Hundreds of places in the Bible have been twisted and misrepresented to prove that the devil told the truth and that man had something in him that would have a conscious existence through all eternity, whether good or bad. Paul says in 1 Cor. 15 chap. 46 verse, "Nowbeit that was not first which is spiritual but that which is natural and afterwards that which is spiritual," then Adam was not a spiritual man, then he had no spirit to die, and died a natural death and is dead. Cor. xv. 22, For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order. Christ the first fruits and afterwards then that are Christ's at his coming. Now here is three classes. Christ is the first that ever rose from the dead to eternal life, the second class those who are Christ's at his coming, the third those that are not Christ's to destruction if they ever rise. The 26 verse, 15 chap. Cor. says the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. At the grave of Lazarus, John 11 chap. 26 verse, Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me though he were dead yet shall he live: and whosoever believeth in me shall never die, believest thou this. If a man has a soul that is immortal it will live always whether he believes in Christ or not. Lazarus had been dead four days, where had his soul been while he was in the grave?—J. E. Donaldson.

It is the greatest delusion in the world for a boy to get the idea that his life is of no consequence, and that the character of it will not be noticed. A manly, truthful boy will shine like a star in any community. A boy may possess as much of a noble character as a man. He may so speak and live the truth that there shall be no discount on his word. And there are such noble Christian boys; and wider and deeper than they are apt to think is their influence. They are the king-boys among their fellows, having an immense influence for good, and loved and respected because of the simple fact of living the truth. Dear boys, do be truthful. Keep your word as absolutely sacred. Be known for your fidelity to Church and Sabbath School. Be true in every friendship. Help others to be and do good.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. Last Tuesday morning, I made a trip to Janesville, Wis., sitting just ahead of me on the train were two gentlemen, who were criticising the Bible, much after the style of our Colorado lawyer. Our Colorado critic reminds me, somewhat of a Presbyterian pastor, at Austin Station, Chicago, Ill. A Mr. Dunn, a man who was suffering from consumption, was a member of his church. I visited Mr. Dunn, and held a brief talk with him. This pleased him, and he insisted on my repeating my visit. I did so, and also at his request I continued my visits, until he came to a knowledge of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus the Christ; and at his request, I baptized him into the all-saving name. After this, the Presbyterian Pastor visited him, and reproved him for his act. Bro. Dunn then asked him if he could prove the Immortality of the soul from the Bible? He replied that he could. Bro. Dunn then asked him where such proof could be found? He replied, "almost anywhere." Bro. Dunn said to him there is a Bible on the stand, please find me one text, that is all I want. At this request, the Pastor lost his temper, and said, "The Bible is like an old fiddle, you can play any tune on it."

Our Colorado lawyer, in a letter to Bro. Hogarth, said: "You cited a large number of texts, and Scriptural statements about the mortality of the wicked, and the immortality of the righteous. I could go through the same Scriptures, and cull as many more against your position. I could spiritualize a lot more, as some do, and prove most anything. Hence I cannot make myself believe that the book which will admit of so many contradictory proofs, is reliable, much less that it came from an Omniscent Being as a revelation for man's guidance."

Teacher. This reminds me of Dr. Abott, a learned Chicago physician, who said to me, Mr. Wilson, I can prove from the Bible, two opposite sides of any proposition, you can name. He urged me to test him.

George. Did you test him?

Teacher. I surely did.

George. What proposition did you test him on?

Teacher. I said, Dr. Abott, please prove to me the proposition from the Scripture that man, at the present time has an immortal soul, and then prove to me that he has not?

George. Did he attempt to do so?

Teacher. He did.

George. What Bible text did he quote to prove the present possession of an immortal soul?

Teacher. He quoted from 1 Cor. xv. 52-54: "The dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."

George. What did you say to him after making those quotations, as proof of present immortality?

Teacher. I said: Dr. Abott, those are very unfortunate proof-texts by which to prove present immortality, they prove immortality to be a future acquisition, at the resurrection.

George. How did that affect him?

Teacher. His arrogant boasting left him, he did not ask for any more test propositions.

Ella. That is almost like the statement of our Colorado lawyer. When he wrote to Bro. Hogarth, saying: "You cited a large number of texts, and Scriptural statements, about the mortality of the righteous. I could go through the same Scriptures, and cull as many more against your position."

Teacher. What would be the best way to prove to him his mistake?

Ella. The best way to show to him his mistake, would be to urge him to do what he has said he can do. For instance, let him cull out as many texts to prove "the immortality of the wicked," as Bro. Hogarth can for "the mortality of the wicked." If he will only try to do what he says he can do; he will never again repeat his rash statement. He will find to a practical demonstration, that the Bible is not like an old fiddle, upon which any tune can be played.

He seems to be of the opinion that the Bible can be made to suit any teaching that may be desired. He says: "Hence, I cannot make myself believe that the book which will admit of so many contradictory proofs, is reliable when I hear any one making such statements as the above, it is proof positive to me, that the maker of the statement, has not properly tested what he says, personally; but is simply repeating rash statements of others. The honest thing to do is to make personal tests and then he will know whereof he affirms. If he used the statute books, the same as he does the Bible, he may prove his case before the court, if such proof would be considered legitimate.

Arlon. If he thinks the Bible is so elastic, that it can be made to fit anything desired, I want to give him a test, and if he is honest in his convictions, he will test it. There is a genuine offer of a $500 reward to find the following words and phrases, in the Scriptures, in the English, Greek or Hebrew: "immortal soul, deathless soul, deathless spirit, glorified spirit, spirit world, the brighter home above, the upper and better kingdom, gone to the spirit land, is safe in heaven, has gone to be an angel, the death that never dies, death is the gate to glory, death is another life, the body is only a cage, go to heaven at death, eternal hell, never-ending torment, endless misery, ceaseless anguish, eternal sorrow, everlasting torment." If he can find Bible texts for both sides, let him try the above.

Now, sir, if you can "cull out" as many texts on one side as the other, the above will furnish you with a wide scope; try it, test it, as an honest man should, and you will never again make such rash statements. Practical experience is the best teacher.

Bessie. But you must recollect that he has reserved a mouse-hole by which he can contract himself, and creep out.

Teacher. Please explain.

Bessie. He says: "I could spiritualize a lot more, as some do, and prove most anything." In other words prove most anything by corrupting the Word. If he really did spiritualize the texts, he would use the texts just as the Spirit gave them. He probably means that he would humanize (not spiritualize) the texts. If he humanized the texts, that means that he would use them illegitimately, by twisting them to suit his purpose, away from the intent of the Spirit. That would be handling the Word of God deceitfully, and hence, would not be legitimate proof.

Lucy. I want to ask him if that would be considered legitimate proof at law? Suppose as a lawyer he had a case to present to the Supreme Court. He goes to work and prepares his brief and abstract to present to the Court. Tell me, suppose you take the evidence, or proof, as given in the lower court, and use it the way some people use the Scripture evidence, when they are said to "spiritualize it;" that is, try to make it mean something else quite foreign to the sense the words convey; would that be considered proper and legitimate practice at law? If the judges should detect that in your printed argument you had used the evidence in that manner, you would probably lose your case before the court.

Many people when they find the Scripture evidence is against a theory they wish to maintain, they at once seek to break the force of the evidence by the baneful practice of what they call "spiritualizing the evidence," which is nothing more than another word for corrupting the evidence.

Lud. I want to ask, if wicked men contrived and wrote the Bible, would they not make it to suit their own tastes, convenience and desires?

Teacher. They doubtless would do so. What do you think, Carrie. Does the Bible cater to the human desires and practices? You know it would likely do so, if the Bible is a fraud, pretending to be the Word of God, when it was not in fact. It would be a tremendous fraud, and it would be seen to be such upon its very face?

Carrie. The Bible is very unfavorable to wicked practices, passions and appetites. It pronounces penalties and very severe judgments upon evil and sinful practices.

Now, men who perpetrate fraud are wicked and immoral men. Now if would be a fraud if they wrote a book, and then claimed they did not write it, but that it was of divine origin. If they were conscious in their own hearts that they were both liars and cheats, what would be their conduct in life? Would they have been jealous of the honor of God? Would they insist on piety, goodness, virtue, love, purity of life, truthfulness, and honesty? Such is very far from the practice of liars, cheats and frauds.

Q. Does the Bible insist on those virtues?

A. It certainly does.

Q. Is it in the heart of conscious frauds, to suffer the loss of worldly possessions, give themselves over to a life poverty, privation, suffering, and hazard their lives for that which they were conscious was only a pious cheat?

A. It is quite unlikely. Frauds do not act in that manner.

Q. Whom do Bible writers claim is the author of the Bible?

A. They say: "The Word of the Lord came again unto me, saying." "Thus saith the Lord God." "Hear ye the Word of the Lord." "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit."

Hence, the writers of the Bible were not its authors, any more than a telegraph operator is the author of the message, which he receives for some one else. If the Bible writers did not receive their messages from a divine source, as they claim, then they could not be good men, but liars.

Q. Did the Bible writers suffer on behalf of the messages they received?

A. They did.

Q. What did they suffer?

A. They sacrificed ease, pleasure, the loss of property, were persecuted, had no certain home, dwelt in caves and dens of the earth, were clothed in animal skins, were whipped, scourged, imprisoned, bound in chains, mocked, stoned and slain by the sword.

Q. Is it conceivable that they would thus suffer for a pious fraud?

A. It is perfectly inconceivable.

Q. What is the Bible in its make up?

A. It is practically a library of sixty-six booklets.

Q. By how many writers?

A. About forty.

Q. About what space of time elapsed between the first and last writer?

A. About fifteen hundred years.

Q. Then there could not be much of a chance for collusion, could there?

A. None at all.

Q. Did the first and last writer harmonize with each other?

A. They did.

Q. Does the same story permeate the different booklets between the first and the last?

A. The same story is told.

Q. Name one, which all agree on?

A. The Christ, beginning with the seed of the woman in Genesis.

Q. Please name another.

A. The covenants of promise made unto the fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in Genesis.

Q. How do you account for the harmony running through each book as complete as if written by one man?

A. Because the holy men of old simply wrote as moved by the Holy Spirit. One Master mind controlled the whole. These lessons will be continued next week.

Joseph Hume, the skeptical philosopher, was once twitted for his inconsistency in going to hear Dr. John Brown, the Scotch preacher, when he made reply; "I don't believe all he says, but he does; and once a week, at least, I like to hear a man who believes what he says. Why, whatever I think, that man preaches as though he felt the Lord Jesus Christ were just at his elbow."

When you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Pa. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

The Gift of Eternal Life.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner, how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail, matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send wisely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the notice you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When you make a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be filled promptly and correctly.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they respond as I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. No New Thing.

"The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done; and there is no new thing under the sun."—Ecclesiastes i. 9.

Who has written the things you write?
Who has spoken the words you speak?
You but look with another's sight;
Others sought what today you seek.
Others, ages and ages gone,
Knew the thoughts that today you think.
'Neath the ground that you tread upon
Work of others must slowly sink.

What? You clutch it, and hold it fast,
Thinking it is entirely new?
Some one, there in the ages past,
Held to it as today you do.
All our dreamings are bauble old,
Freed from stainings and marks of rust:
Not a tale that was ever told
But rose up from the mother dust.

Who has cherished the thing you make?
Who has deemed it all virtue and use?
Does it pretend it would never break,
But must firmly for aye endure.
All the past is heat-worn with these—
Heaped with wrecks of the work men wrought;
Nothing lives through the centuries
Save the flame of eternal thought.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY, FEB. 17, 1907

LOT'S CHOICE. GEN. XIII. 1-13.

Golden Text.—"Take heed and beware of covetousness." Luke xii. 15.

As a rule the Golden Text is very appropriate—very much in line with the lesson, if in time it is a good warning—good advice, but has nothing to do with the lesson.

"Abram went up out of Egypt."—Because of famine in the land of Canaan he went down—south—into Egypt. Lot was with him, they came up from the north of Egypt to the south of Canaan. Near to Bethel where he had before built an altar to the Lord. Gen. viii. 12. He worshiped God from whom all blessings flow. God had blessed Lot, he had flocks, herds and tents. Their flocks had grown so large that there was not pasture enough for both at one place—in one locality, their herdsmen began to strive—to quarrel—about the best places, or room enough. The Canaanites and Perizzites were there also, that would add to the crowding. When Abram heard of it he made haste to end the trouble. He said to Lot, Let us not strive, nor our herdsmen, for we are brethren, "Behold how good and how pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity." Psa. cxxxiii. 1. "Be all of one mind, sympathizing, loving as brethren, compassionate, humble," (Dia.) 1 Pet. iii. 8. While Abram and Lot could not dwell together, they could and did "Keep the unity of the Spirit, in the bond of peace." Eph. iv. 3. Abram said, Is not the whole land before thee,"—all the unoccupied land. The Canaanites and Perizzites were on the west and north, the right and left would be the east and south. Lot took his uncle's advice and as we say, looked round, and saw that the plain of Jordan was well watered everywhere—even as the garden of the Lord—likely referring to the garden of Eden,—like the land of Egypt,—for instance Goshen, "the best in Egypt," Gen. xlvii. 6. It was rich pasture land; that was what Lot was looking for, and he journeyed east and south towards Sodom. "The Sodomites were exceedingly wicked in the sight of the Lord." And not only before the Lord, but also before Lot. By the Word of the Lord, through the Holy Spirit in Peter we are informed that Lot was just, and was vexed and grieved with the filthy talk, and shameful conduct of the wicked Sodomites. The lawless behavior of his neighbors was a daily distress of mind to him, but being godly he was kept from the temptation, and the Lord delivered him. 2 Peter ii. 7-9.

It is a grief to every child of God, at the present day, to know that when the Lord Jesus Christ comes again that the same condition of wickedness will prevail. Luke xvii. 28 30.

It is very unwisely charged against Lot—by those who say they believe God's Word—that he was selfish, greedy, worldly, unwise, foolish, because he chose the best land. Lot might go where he liked, but it was the will of God that Abram should stay where he was, in the land of Canaan. Let us charge our minds earnestly and seriously with the great fact, that men's writings are sometimes valuable for general information, but the Word of God, the Bible, is the only correct and safe instruction concerning God, the Lord Jesus Christ, and the people of God.

Lot believed, and had faith in the good news of the seed of the woman, Gen. iii. 15,—Christ the Messiah, or he could not have been justified and called righteous. The gospel of Christ was and is the power by which God has promised to save. Rom. i. 16.

Let us briefly follow the history of Lot as found in the 14th, 18th and 19th chapters of Genesis.

The king of Elam, and others captured Sodom, taking Lot with them. Abram pursued them north to Hobah, and brought Lot back. Some time after the Lord decided to destroy Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities of the plain, for this purpose two angels came to Sodom. Lot hospitably and kindly entertained them. That night the Sodomites demanded of Lot that he put them out. Lot tried to reason with them. That enraged them, they would have done him harm but one of the men—angels pulled him in and shut the door, blinding and bewildering the Sodomites so they could not find the door, as the Lord did to the Syrians. 2 Kings xviii. The angels told Lot they had come to destroy the city, telling him to warn his family. His sons-in-law thought he must be joking or worse. He was loathe to leave them, the time was passing, the angels took Lot, his wife and two daughters and led out of the city, saying, Flee for your lives. They did, the mother looked back and perished, Lot and his daughters reached Zoar and were saved.

We get a very important lesson from the story of God's people. When made rich there was no boasting and great display, and when made poor no complaining, no grumbling. "The Lord gives and takes away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Job i. 20.

P. NEILL.

The Resurrection. No. 7.

THE ABSOLUTE NEED OF A PHYSICAL CHANGE.

"Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." 1 Cor. xv. 50.

The kingdom of God is to be an eternal kingdom. Says Daniel, "It shall stand for ever," (Dan. ii. 44), "an everlasting dominion that shall not pass away—shall not be destroyed." vii. 14; see also 2 Pet. i. 11. So those who shall inherit this kingdom must live for ever to enjoy its blessedness. Paul's statement that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom, is misunderstood by many Bible readers. These, knowing that Christ had flesh and bones after his resurrection and guessing that he had no blood (?) say flesh can inherit the kingdom, but blood cannot. This view does not remove the difficulty. It is in fact a contradiction of what the apostle states, for he as plainly says "flesh cannot," as he does that "blood cannot inherit the kingdom." What he predicates of the one he predicates of the other. Both alike are barred out of the kingdom—and this by strict adherence to the grammatical rule governing the use of the capulative conjunction "and." Flesh and blood, in the passage, are not used in their primary sense of mortal nature, or human nature as derived from Adam—the very condition the apostle has been discoursing about under other words and phrases as "living soul," "natural," "earthy," "corruption," "weakness" and "dishonor." The four verses from 51 to 54 inclusive furnish an additional illustration of his meaning. "Behold, I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed." The apostle reveals some things in this passage not made known to the Corinthian church before. "We shall not all sleep." Sleep is used here by figure of speech because of resemblance in the condition of waiting unconscious, to those who sleep and all bears to death. The similarity may be only in a single point. This would be sufficient to warrant the use of the figure. Taking off the figure we have —we shall not all die. A remnant of the church will be alive when the Lord comes. The writer has all along indulged the wish—not to say hope—to be one of that number, and so be exempted from the pains of dying. Some who now sleep the sleep of death I heard say with a good deal of assurance that they hoped to see the Lord come before they died. The advent was postponed too long, so death foreruled their hope. It matters but little, for the issue is the same. Death may claim its victims as captives for a time but the release is certain. Then the liberated captives will shout, O death where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory? The dead shall be raised incorruptible. The action expressed by the Word raised begins with the dead as its object. There is no hint of an immortal soul and its reunion with the body. It is the raising of personalities in incorruption, which implies a change in harmony with what the apostle says in verse 53, "We shall all be changed," referring to the dead, and to the living remnant; and this change wrought by the quickening spirit is said to take place "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," We are not informed of stages in the process. The resurrection does not include the ascension to meet the Lord in the air. This is another act or event following the resurrection. This distinction is shown in 1 Thes. iv. 16, 17. It is affirmed here that "the dead in Christ rise first, i. e. before any action takes place touching the living. After the raising of the dead, they and the living are caught up together to meet the Lord in the air. So raising the dead is the one thing and being "caught up" another thing or sequence. The logical conclusion is that the raising of the dead incorruptible is a completed act preceding the ascension to meet the descending Lord; and just so of the putting on of immortality or the deathless nature; and as a further conclusion, the rendering of eternal life precedes the meeting in the air. How well this accords with the Lord's words in John v. 24. He that heareth my Word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into judgments; but is passed from death unto life. The question of life is a foregone decision at the epoch of the resurrection. The very face that none but the approved have part in the first resurrection shows this.

A marvelous change awaits the believer. I never think of this change without a mental effort to grasp its full import, to fathom its depth of meaning, but the finite mind of man is not adequate to the task. The realization of it will demonstrate how much it means. Youthful health and vigor, and buoyant spirits of the springtime of life furnish but a faint conception of the reality. There will be a vivid sense of relief from all that was painful, a feeling akin to that of laying down a weight or burden, after we have borne it until tired and exhausted; especially will this be so in the case of the sick, the aged and infirm; and this difference coming on so quickly, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, must by reason of contrast with the mortal condition cause an ecstasy of joy surpassing anything of the kind in past human experience. That headache that racked the poor tired brain of the invalid mother as she taxed her little remaining strength to perform her household duties, has been cast out like the demons of old, never more to return. That distressing cough of the emaciated consumptive laboring hard for the vital air that sustains life, has ceased with the first touch of the quickening spirit. Old age, bowed with the weight of years, and tottering on feeble limbs at the brink of the grave, has been exchanged for eternal youth and vigor. That martyr at the stake, with the flame curling about him, and consuming the last vestige of life in his body, [illegible] harm, to meet his descending Lord in the air. What joy! what transport of praise will well up from every unburdened heart

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEBRUARY 13, 1907. NUMBER 6.

The Bereans Column.

"THE DAY OF OUR LORD'S COMING."

It is the day of our Lord's coming. He was here not long since, travelling upon the earth, and about our business, which done he went away to heaven upon an errand for his saints. He is now sitting at the right hand of God, his Father interceding for them. He is their advocate and is preparing a kingdom for them. When all is ready, and he has prepared this kingdom, will he not come again, has he not left a letter to that effect? I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also. John xiv. 3. Why is he so long coming? Why does he tarry? It is the day of his revealing. 2 Thes. i. 7. But at the day of his revealing, he shall be unfold, and the saints shall see him less to him, they shall be with him for ever more. does he not tell us to comfort one another with these words? 1 Thes. iv. 18. When he was on earth he appeared in our dress; many then saw him, who then said of him, "there is no beauty in him that we should desire him." Isa. liii. 2. It was said to see him crowned with thorns, and scourged with whips, and nailed to the cross; but in his next appearing, dear Bereans, if we are ready, we shall see in him his best attire, arrayed in white, with glory, smiling upon his saints. Oh! let us strive hard, dear ones, to attain to this desirable place. May we all be among his jewels that shall see him face to face, and be with him forevermore.

LILLIE MAY FISHER.

To the Bereans:

Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. Gal. vi. 7. We cannot expect to reap what we have not sown; therefore we should be careful to sow nothing but good seed. Our blessed Savior set the example of doing good wherever he went, we should follow in his footsteps. Though we cannot do great and noble deeds as some do, we all have the opportunity of doing many little deeds of kindness. We can often speak a kind word of encouragement, in time of trouble, and so make some one's burden lighter. "And let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Let us sow to the Spirit, that we may of the Spirit reap life everlasting.

JESSIE CLAYPOOL.

Dear Bereans:

Having been requested to write an article for the Berean column I have chosen for my subject, "Forgiveness." Forgiveness, I believe, is of all Christian virtues most essential to our salvation. How can we expect our Father to forgive us if we do not forgive others? In Luke xvii. 3 4 we are told to forgive those who trespass against us as often as they repent and ask it. Is that too much? Don't we ask the same of our heavenly Father? In the Bible we are taught never to hold a grudge, however small it may be.

How much has God forgiven us? How many times have we disobeyed his holy commandments and asked him to forgive? Think of what we ask if we repeat the Lord's prayer with an unforgiving spirit. "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." Then if we do not forgive we cannot expect to be forgiven. What an example we have in Christ's forgiving spirit. Even while dying he could forgive his accusers. With such a leader we should be willing to do our best.

GRACE M. WILLIAMS.

PATIENCE.

Behold I stand patiently at the door and knock—dear Bereans, may I cross the threshold and draw my chair within the circle? What is patience, and is it an important part in the building of a Christian's character? Webster says patience is long sufferance, forbearance, and let us, in kindness, add charity and love. In considering it in all its bearings, we will, for convenience, divide it into three heads: (1) Political power; (2) Personal power; (3) As a Christian's need. No decisive battle of the world was ever fought and won by chance, but by patience and perseverance; no great country was ever long controlled by an impatient ruler; our master pieces of literature were produced, not by a few hurried, spasmodic impulses, but rather by years of patient and laborious effort.

It matters not how lowly or how prominent our daily walk of life may be, there will come times in which discouragements must be met, when the threads of our work have apparently matted themselves together beyond human power of untangling. Yet if we work with all patience there is some thread that holds the key to unlock the door of enchantment. Heb. xii. 1, Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race that is set before us.

Rev. iii. 10, Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, etc. Jas. iii. 7, Repatient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. These are only a few of the many examples that show patience as a necessary virtue, taught through all the pages of sacred history.

JESSIE GRAY.

The Berean Society at Adeline was re-organized Thursday evening Jan. 24th, at the home of Mrs. Carrie Tinmer. That evening was the last of a Bible school held by Brother Huggins, and while the interest was at its height, fourteen young people gathered, and we started our society anew. A president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer were elected, the place and time of meetings were decided. The first meeting was held on Saturday evening, Jan. 26th, at Walter Miller's and all took an active and earnest part in it.

There are quite a few among our number who have not yet learned the truth, and we want all your prayers for wisdom and strength in showing them God's precious truth revealed in his holy Word. Pray for us also that the interest now so manifest in all the members may be maintained and the obstacles, which always arise may be surmounted, and that each one of us may be the means of bringing one other to believe and obey, and accept the gospel in all its simplicity and beauty.

Yours striving for an entrance into his kingdom.

MARY A. GESIN.

MARGINS.

Three young men were working in an office. One of them spent his spare time in studying the Spanish language. The other two spent their time in training a dog. An office was to be opened up in Cuba and one of these young men stood a chance of obtaining this position. I do not need to tell which one was selected.

If we read the pages of history we find many men who have become experts in the fields of investigations by spending their spare time in reading not idling.

Moments are little things, yet upon them much of the future depends. Horace Mann, the great educator, once said, "Lost somewhere between sunrise and sunset, two golden hours each set with sixty diamond minutes. No reward is offered for they are gone forever."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief in the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and as holy life as essential for final salvation.

How often we hear people say, "Oh, it's only ten minutes till dinner time; there's no use doing anything," or use similar expressions. It is in just these spare bits of time, which most people throw away, that men who have risen have gained an education.

Every one should form the habit of utilizing the moments. As success in business depends upon the small margin of profit secured and retained, so success in life may depend upon our ability to save the moments, the precious margins that are left after we have discharged our daily duty.

Some people think that a liberal education cannot be attained without a college education, but this is wrong as we may attain cultured minds by spending our spare time in reading and studying. A man is educated who is trained in faculties and powers to the best. Lincoln was not a learned man, but would anybody today think of speaking of Lincoln as uneducated!

Reading is one of the great means of education. Whether it shall be a blessing or a curse depends upon what is read. By reading one communes with the mightiest and wisest of men. Our great men have usually been readers of the best literature.

Elihu Burritt acquired mastery of eighteen languages and twenty dialects in his scattered moments stolen from his daily occupation of blacksmith.

The brains of Martin Luther, the poor German miner's son flashed fire over the dark ages. We do not need to mention the hosts and hosts of his fellow men eminent in religion, in science, in art and in literature, who whether they had the advantages of school or not, fed their minds with knowledge gained in their moments of leisure. Many lives run to waste for lack of self development. Many a man pines for an education, but still will not take the trouble to educate himself, as he might in odd moments with persistent inquiry and careful study. Many a man wastes enough of opportunity in dwadling and trifling to make him a power and then wonders and murmurs at the success of others, and complains at his own lack of prosperity. Using well or wasting the fragments of time, the nooks and corners of life, makes all the difference between success and failure. Often the best results are gained from the systematic use of fragments of our business or daily life, the by products of living. We have no right to waste the fragments of our life; to let them slip by while we are mourning because we are not great, for it is true that

The heights which great men gained and kept,
Were not attained in a sudden flight;
But they while their companions slept
Were toiling upward in the night.

Literally, thousands of men whose names blaze on the world's roll of honor have done the same and have risen by saving the time which others flung away. Numerous are the opportunities of the higher education which may be acquired while earning a living. If we grasp these opportunities we will become rich in stores of wisdom.

"Father Forgive them."

LUKE XXIII. 34.

Dear Restitution:

Only Luke records this prayer, but it is in harmony with Matt. v. 44; Acts vii. 60; 1 Cor. iv. 12; Isa. liii. 12. And we can judge from his introductory remarks to his gospel, that some things at least, concerning our Savior's life and teaching, were not made as explicit, by the former writers, as they should have been. And that he understood what was said on the cross better than Matthew. Hence the difference.

I am pleased with the "Question Box."

Yours in hope of life everlasting.

Word comes that Brother and Sister B. W. Woodward are both sick with the grip.

We have an article from the pen of our beloved Brother Joblin which will appear next week.

Brethren and Sister D. C. Robison are now at Bowling Green, Ohio, at the home of Brother Armitage, holding meetings. We trust they will give report of their labors in Ohio soon, so the brethren may know what has been done.

Brethren D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1 50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 596 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

Brethren Geo. Neill writes that he has just closed a very successful series of meetings at Hillisburg, this State, lasting from Feb. 2 to Feb. 7. The weather was good and the attendance splendid, with good interest. The brethren and sisters there expect to start their Sunday school again as soon as possible. He is to go to this place again March 17. Brother Neill preached at South Bend over Sunday the 10th, and goes to Warren County for the 17th, after which he expects to move to South Bend. We pray the Father in heaven will give strength to our brother, and that the brethren will encourage his efforts by the proper support in all ways. Give of your substance, attend the meetings, take part in the various departments of the work, and the result is safe in the Father's hands. Your reward is sure.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. We will still further consider the sceptical objections of our Colorado lawyer. I will now quote from his letter the following objections:

"Evil and suffering exist, this everybody admits. Now, God must have foreseen this before the creation of the world, or he cannot be Omniscient. But if he foresaw it, he must either have been able or unable to prevent it. But if he saw it though all-powerful, he cannot be all-good, or if all good, he cannot be all-powerful. To think of God, then as at once all wise, all powerful, all good, is an impossibility, and theology has never been able to extricate us, or themselves from this dilemma."

Teacher. Wherein does the difficulty of our Colorado critic lie?

Lad. While we must admit that the gentleman is a good reasoner, and a capable man, yet his reasoning must of necessity be faulty.

Q. Why so?

A. Because of his failure to properly conceive of the design and plan of God's creation, which is quite evident from his conclusions.

Q. Wherein does he fail to grasp the design and plan of creation?

A. He evidently looks upon what is called "The six days work of creation," as being the finished and completed work of creation.

Q. Was it not?

A. No, sir; it was not. "It was good," as far as it had progressed, but it did not reach perfection, at the end of the "Six days."

Q. Has it yet?

A. No, sir; the work of creation is still going on, gradually taking form that will finally end in perfection.

Q. Suppose that some mechanic was at work on the production of a machine of intricate design, would it be fair to criticise and condemn his work before its completion?

A. It would not.

Q. Would it be fair to fault the work of the Creator before the work of creation is perfected?

A. Certainly not.

Q. Does the Bible say, That at the end of six days, "Thus the heavens and the earth was finished?"

A. Yes, sir; finished as far as it was his design to finish it at that time, but not perfected.

Q. Can there be perfection where evil exists?

A. No, of course not.

Q. Is that which is evil necessarily sinful?

A. Not by any means; that which may be evil to one man, may be another person's good.

Q. Did God create sin?

A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Did he create evil?

A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. What proof have you?

A. See Isa. iv. 7: "I form the light and create darkness; I make peace and create evil: I the Lord do all these things."

Q. Will evil exist when creation is perfected?

A. It will not; the design of the creation of evil will no longer exist. Rev. xxii. describes the perfection of creation, and says: "There shall be no more curse." If evil existed it would be a curse to some one.

Q. Does evil serve a good purpose toward developing perfection?

A. It does.

Q. In what way?

A. We are taught by contrasts: there could not be any knowledge of good, if evil did not exist.

Teacher. You will notice that our critic refers specially to the existence of "evil and suffering," and that "God must have foreseen it before creation," and that he either had, or had not the power to prevent it; and if he had the power, and did not use it, he could not be all-good.

Q. Has God the power to prevent "evil and suffering?"

A. He has.

Q. Does he intend to use his power and blot out "evil and suffering?"

A. He does.

Q. When?

A. When creation is perfected.

Q. Why does he not do so now?

A. Because "evil and suffering are necessary agencies," he uses to develop perfection.

Q. Why is suffering necessary in order to the perfection of character?

A. As a disciplinary agency.

Q. Would suffering have been necessary, if God had created man in the first place a mere automatic machine?

A. Why no; he could have made him a perfect, senseless, automatic, irresponsible machine, without any power of choice, or free will agency which could not do anything else than run in the same monotonous rut of a machine, by having no power to develop merit, or character. It was not the design of God, in creation, to fill the earth with perfect machines, which could not be anything else, but good, if they wished to, because the machine was constructed and designed to run in that rut.

Q. What was God's design in the creation of man?

A. It was his decision to make man like himself as a pattern. See Gen. i. 26: "Let us (Elohim) make man after our image (person) after our likeness" (person and character.)

Q. What evidence have you that it includes the person?

A. See Heb. i. 3 Speaking of Christ, we read: "Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person," if Jesus is the "express image of his person," then the personal form of the Creator, and that of man, is the same.

Q. What does our critic say about personality?

A. He says: "Personality implies limitation. To speak of God as an Infinite person, is to make him at once Infinite and finite, unlimited and limited, which is of course absurd."

Our friend gives us no reason why his being a person would make him finite, unless it is a personality must have location.

Q. Do the Scriptures speak of God as having location?

A. Yes. We are instructed to pray: "Our Father which art in heaven."

Q. Does that fact of having locality, make it possible for any one to hide from his presence?

A. No, sir; he is Omnipresent by his spirit.

Q. What proof have you?

A. See Psa. cxxxix. 7-12: "Whither shall I flee from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall thy hand lead me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee, but the night shineth as the day. The darkness and the light, are both alike to thee."

A writer once said: "If a man was imprisoned a thousand feet below the surface of the earth, God could see him as distinctly, as we see each other at noon-day, above ground."

Q. What reason did he give for his assertion?

A. Because of his spirit nature, "which is like unto condensed lightning, glowing with such an intensity, that its radiation is felt throughout the boundless universe, penetrating through all substances, and developing life and motion in all things."

Teacher. Now, coming back again to "evil and suffering," which our friend seems to think, limits both the power and goodness of God. Does it do so?

Arlon. It does not; "evil and suffering" exist by willful disobedience and are now used as agencies for the purpose of developing character in man, whom he created as free moral agents having the power of choice. Now if God had created man simply as perfect, irresponsible machine that could not be anything else but [illegible] could not develop character good or bad, because he was nothing but an automaton, then he might have dispensed with the agencies of evil and suffering. Now our first parents were not created with perfected characters, nor with perfected bodies. Both perfected characters, and perfected organisms, are results to be attained by enduring tests of obedience satisfactory to the Creator, who gave the tests.

Q. Were Adam and Eve placed on trial, and given tests of obedience, by which characters may be developed, as free moral agents, with power of choice?

A. They were. Command was given them not to do so and so, and they were also informed that disobedience would bring them evil.

Q. Then suffering and evil, resulted from wilful disobedience, after being previously informed of the result of disobedience?

A. It did. They deliberately disobeyed after being informed of the result.

Q. Now, if our sceptical critic, has a child, and he commands his child, not to do such a thing, and informs the child, that the act will bring suffering, and yet the child deliberately disobeys, and the suffering results, who is to blame for the suffering, the parent or the child?

A. I am of the opinion that the father would not consider himself at all responsible for the suffering.

Q. Then, why does he charge God with being responsible for the suffering?

A. It is inconsistent. But he says God could have prevented it, being "all-powerful." The only way he could have prevented it, would be by denying man free moral agency, with power of choice. He would, then, amount to nothing more than a senseless, irresponsible machine.

Q. Is it God's purpose and design when creation is completed, to eradicate evil and suffering from the world, and do this, on the basis of free moral agency and the power of choice?

A. It is.

Q. Please show us where the power of choice comes in?

A. See Rev. xvii. 14. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life (from which Adam was excluded) and may enter in through the gates into the city."

Verse 3. "And there shall be no more curse."

See also Rev. xxi. 4, "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; (suffering) for the former things have passed away."

The above describes the work of creation completed, with sin, sorrow, suffering and death, entirely eradicated, on the basis of free will agency, character, and right of choice. This is far more ennobling and preferable to filling the world with good machines, even if it did take the fires of affliction to develop character.

Q. Then God never designed evil and suffering should be a part of his perfected creation?

A. Never. It was introduced into the creation, while undergoing the process of formulation, not by the design of God, but by man's willful disobedience, while knowing the result. The design of God was not to permit it to remain, however, but seeing man did introduce it, God has used it as an agent of discipline, for the purpose of trying, and developing character.

Q. Please show a case where suffering was used for the purpose of perfecting character?

A. See Heb. ii. 10: "For it became him, by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation, perfect through suffering."

Q. Do other Scripture confirm the above?

A. Yes. See Heb. v. 8, 9, "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered."

Q. How does he bring "many sons unto glory?"

A. See Heb. v. 9: "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." They must also come in along the line obedience. Obedience implies right of choice, and free agency.

Q. Then the trial of faith must come before the crown?

A. Yes. See James i. 12: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life." Suffering and trial are necessary, in order to develop characters worth preserving in the perfected creation. See Heb. xii. 6-8: "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." "Then ye are without chastisement, whereof all (true sons) are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons."

2 Tim. ii. 12: "If we suffer, then shall we also reign with him."

1 Pet. iv. 12: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing had happened unto you."

1 Pet. iii. 14: "If ye suffer for righteousness sake, happy are ye."

Teacher. Because God permits suffering in the world, our critic thinks that he cannot be "Omniscient," and must also lack either "goodness," or "power." In what does he err?

A. He evidently errs in supposing that the condition of things which now exist, represent the perfected creation of God.

2. He errs in finding fault with the Creator, for not making man a perfect machine, in place of a free moral agent.

3. He errs in attributing suffering to the act of God, in place of the disobedience of man.

4. He errs in supposing the Creator was either not good or lacked power, because he elected to use suffering as an agent of discipline, in testing, or proving, or developing characters suited to inhabit God's perfected creation. He errs in supposing a personality cannot be Infinite.

These are the principal errors which make him a skeptic. This lesson will be continued next week.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Lesson 2 Peter i. 2-4.

Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus Christ. According as his divine power has given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue. Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye show forth the praises of him who hath called you out darkness into his marvelous light. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh, and in spirit perfecting holiness in the fear of God. And by so doing the will of God with diligence and patience; we have hope of receiving these great and precious promises and everlasting life in the kingdom, through our Lord and Savior Jesus the Christ.

Matt. xi. 7, 8, John the Baptist was remarkable for a couple of characteristics which Christ here negatively describes. He was not a reed shaken with the wind; and he was not a man clothed in soft raiment. I never read these words without wondering admiration of their expressiveness, and of the splendid character they portray. We must have firmness and fortitude. And we must not be too careful lest we soil our clothes, "Behold they that wear soft clothing are in king's houses." And the door has not as yet been opened in these heavens for men of John the Baptist's stamp. "Thou therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ."

QUESTION BOX.

[Interested readers of the Restitution who desire to have Scriptural questions answered on this department, should address Robert G. Huggins Box G, Oregon, Ill. No anonymous communications will be noticed.]

A LETTER.

Dearly beloved brethren greeting:

I get questions on all kinds of subjects, and as a matter of course, some of my answers you do not agree with. When we agree on a doctrine it often happens that we disagree on the proof-texts used to establish the doctrine. We may all hold "the one faith" and yet you may quote a text to prove, for instance, that Israel will be restored, and I will look at your proof-text, and decide it has no bearing on the subject, and will explain it as having reference to some other subject. Because I cannot see that your text proves the restoration of Israel, I do not, for this reason, deny their restoration. There is a difference then you see between denying an element of the truth and showing the impertinence of a misapplied text.

Some brethren get frightened when a passage of Scripture is explained differently to the way they have always viewed it, and without investigation they pronounce it "new," and therefore untrue. It is the duty of Bible teachers to bring out of God's great treasure-house—the Bible—not only "old things" but "new" ones as well. Matt. xiii. 52. Because an idea is "new" it does not follow that it is heretical. Let us have both religious toleration and religious investigation. Before long an article will appear in the "Question Box" entitled, "Did Enoch die?" We take the position that he died—a view that will be "new" perhaps to some of our readers. Study the article when it appears. If the preponderance of evidence shows that Enoch never died, stay by the "old" theory. If, however, prayerful study of the Holy Oracles convince you he died, accept the "new" view, and thank God for clearing away the mists which have obscured this subject in the past. We are humble students of the Word, we are willing to learn from any teacher of the blessed Word. When we advance something you cannot accept, write us brotherly and sweet-spirited as did our dear Bro. Woodward when he gave strictures on the baptism of the thief. We apologize for using awkward, and sometimes ungrammatical sentences in our writing. We were raised in Dixie, Southern environment has fastened on us a full stock of provincialisms, solecisms, and improprieties. Deal kindly and truly with us along this line; and do not loose your temper when the compositor makes typographical errors, and blunders, though they are of a serious nature. A printer does not intentionally make contributors appear unscholarly. He regrets the errors he makes fully as much as you do. And now a question. An esteemed brother has asked a question—a practical question. I want the readers of The Restitution to answer it. I will give a prize to the one who sends the best answer. Write on one side of the paper only. Write not less than four and not more than ten pages. Send your answers to me. Here is the epigrammatic, practical QUESTION. Is it right for believers of the truth to identify themselves with an orthodox church for the sake of having a "church home"?—C. E. W.

Robt G. Huggins.

It is a truth at once sublime and comforting that he who believingly accepts the Lord Jesus Christ, and thus comes into vital union with him, is in harmony with God, with the universe, and with himself. He dwells in love and dwells with God, and God dwells in him. He loves his neighbor—his brother-man—as himself, and so all the law is fulfilled in him. So true is it that "on these two great commandments," or laws, two which are really one, being eternally united and co-existing; neither of which could by possibility exist without the other, "hang all the law and the prophets;" and science adds, on this one law of love, "hang all the laws of the physical world." It says it but feebly and faintly now, but it will say it bye-and-bye in songs as of a "great multitude, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings. Alleluia! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!" And the law of his illimitable empire is the law of love.

Present trials may be severe and unpleasant, but there is an afterward—there is a blessed and glorious afterward in all of God's dealings with his children. Afterward they will yield the peaceable fruits of righteousness.

Obituary.

Early in the morning, of Saturday, February 2nd, 1907, our dearly beloved Sister, Sarah C. W. Rothe, wife of Brother William G. Rothe, fell on sleep. She was buried in Cedar Grove Cemetery, and now awaits the trumpet call, that shall sound at the coming and appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus the Christ, to awaken those who shall be counted worthy to be part of the Lamb's wife and to enter with her Lord into his kingdom and glory. "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly."

Sister Rothe was a consistent Christian, always ready and able to "give a reason for the hope with in her," she was a fond mother, and her children, although all grown to maturity, shall miss her wise counsel and kindly advice. She was a devoted wife, and it is in this connection she will be missed the most, for she was strong and true, with love unfeigned, in her wifely duties, and we pray our heavenly Father that he will give our bereaved brother divine strength to be able to stand this great affliction that has befallen him. She was a staunch friend, and those who knew her best, loved her most, her life was so consistent, loving, kind and true that we not only loved her, but we respected her.

Sister Rothe was born in Newark, New Jersey, 63 years ago, and for many, many years has been an obedient servant of her Lord, letting her light brilliantly shine, so that others would be brought to glorify the Master. She was just and liberal in the giving of necessities to the needy, and in every way we mourn her loss in a way, knowing that her place will be hard to fill, still we mourn not as those who have no hope, for we know our Sister shall be among those who shall have an abundant entrance into God's everlasting kingdom.

Brother Samuel Wilson, the speaker at the funeral services, spoke at length on the second coming of Christ, the resurrection out from among the dead, and through these, life everlasting. He said he dwelt on these for they were our Sister's hope, she had none other, neither was there any other, for it was through Jesus alone we had hope of life beyond the grave.

Oh, that there were more such disciples on earth who are not ashamed to be known as a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus, but who will stand forth, boldly proclaiming the love of God who sent into this world a Savior who is Christ the Lord. Friends, pray for our esteemed, bereaved brother. Sincerely in hope of a coming Lord.

Alex D. Donaldson.

Mary E. Grant, daughter of Brother and Sister W. H. Bernard of Oxford, Kansas, was born January 20, 1882; died January 23, 1907, aged 25 years and 3 days. Was united in marriage to William Grant, July 12, 1900. At the age of sixteen she embraced the faith of the gospel of the kingdom of God and was baptized by Bro. Isaac Miller and united with the Church of God at Oxford, Kansas of which she ever remained a true and faithful member, always manifesting a kind and loving disposition. After a lingering sickness with that dread disease lung trouble she calmly fell asleep in Christ. She often told her folks not to worry for her, she had no fear of death, fully conscious of the fact that "when Christ, who is our life shall appear" then she shall "appear with him in glory." She leaves a husband, one son, a little boy three years, her father, mother, one brother, three sisters and a host of friends to mourn her loss. After a few words of comfort being spoken by the writer, showing our hope in the re-living of the dead, we laid her in the Mount Vernon cemetery to rest in the peaceful slumber of death until he comes who said, "I am the resurrection and the life," then our sorrow will be turned into joy. In that time "all tears shall be wiped from all eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

We would say to the sorrowing ones, put your trust in the God of all the earth, draw near to him and take his blessed Word for your counsel, and strive to live that upright life, that you too, if you fall asleep, may rest in that blessed hope and be worthy to meet Sister Mary and with her enter into that glory that God has in reserve for those that love him.

"Thy dead shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead."

Poetry.

The Day of a Thousand Years.

"For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night."—Psalm xc. 14.

And one star calls to another
The full strains of a song
Till the deeps of space glow with its grace
And echo it full and strong;
And whirling out of the silence
A world of worlds appears
In an onward rush through the endless hush—
And a day is a thousand years.

And one star sings to another,
And sun holds speech with sun,
While the drifting veil of a vapor pale
Shows another world begun.
But we count time by a dawning
Or mark by a twilight fall—
Yet the stars sing on when the years are gone,
And what are we, after all?

The words and the hopes and doublings,
The joy and the drama and dread,
And the puny lives in the puny lives
Where toil is done for bread;
A day, a night, and another—
A round of the spinning ball;
A sigh and a smile for the briefest while—
And what are we, after all?

And one star calls to another
A song we may not know;
Calls a distant sun to a dying sun
As the ages come and go.
And we mark time by a minute,
And groan over smiles and tears—
But the stars sing on when the worlds are gone
And a day is a thousand years.

The Reasons Why I Cannot Reject the Testimony of Matthew and Luke Concerning the Divine Begettal of the Christ.

First, the record itself, in the language employed, is in perfect harmony with the teaching of the New Testament as a whole. It is more like inspiration than forgery. The testimony of Gabriel (see Matt. i. and Luke i.) "That Holy One which shall be born of thee shall be called 'The Son of God.'" It does not say an adopted son. He was to be the "only begotten" of the Father—a born son; that is, he was conceived by the power of the Holy Spirit. It is admitted by all—God's power is sufficient; for we read in connection with the record, "For with God nothing shall be impossible." To show the pre-eminence given "this Son," we give a few testimonies as proof (you know them all). The whole New Testament is a confirmation of the record as it stands; thus you will see why I cannot consider them as spurious. In fact this divine record of the nativity is a basis or key of what follows in the New Testament writings. The promise that "the Seed of the woman should crush the serpent's head," is a very old promise. God is faithful in fulfilling it in its due time. "When the fullness of the time had come God sent forth "his Son"—born of a woman—under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." "This Son" is frequently represented as the only begotten of the Father;" and furthermore, the Father acknowledges him as such when he was made manifest to Israel, viz., "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Is there nothing suggestive in this miraculous voice from heaven? It ought to have some weight in confirming the record of his conception and birth.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "And I saw and bear record that this is the Son of God." "God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved." "He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemned already." Why? "Because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." "We have beheld and bare witness that the Father hath sent the 'Son' to be the Savior of the world,"—whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God abideth in him and he in God." "Herein was the love of God manifested in us, that God hath sent his only begotten Son into the world that we might live through him." 1 John iv. Who is he that overcometh the world but he that believeth that "Jesus is the Son of God." For the witness of God is this, that he hath born witness concerning "his Son,"—the witness is: He that believeth on the Son of God—hath eternal life. "These things have I written unto you that ye may know that ye have eternal life—even unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God. Grace, mercy and peace shall be with us, from God the Father and from Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, and that he is the "Son" given, spoken of by the prophet Isaiah." Don't you see we have line upon line in proof of his heavenly origin?

Paul among the first things preached "Jesus as the Son of God." He that spared not "his own Son," but delivered him up for us all. How shall he not with him also freely give us all things? "What the law could not do, God hath done—in sending "his own Son" in the likeness of sin's flesh. When Jesus came into the coasts of Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I am? Mark viii. 29. And they (the disciples) answered, Some say that thou art "John the Baptist," some "Elijah" and others "Jeremiah," or one of the "Prophets," etc. "He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?" Simon Peter (the spokesman, the foreman of the jury) answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." (He did not say he was the son of Joseph). Jesus himself said, "I am the Son of God." Jno. x. 36. "Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the world: Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God."

The first verse in Mark's gospel corroborates the testimony, "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God." Jesus said of the twelve on one occasion, "Will ye also go away?" Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life, and we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God." Twenty years later Peter had not forgotten his good confession, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. i. The whole life of Jesus corroborates all these testimonies.

In the closing of John's gospel we read, "Many other signs Jesus performed in the presence of his disciples which have not been written in this book, but these have been written, what for? "That you may believe that Jesus is the Christ the "Son of God," and that believing ye may have life through his name. God who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by "his Son," whom he hath appointed heir of all things, and on account of whom the ages or dispensation were arranged. "Unto the Son" he saith, "Thy throne, O God, (given to thee by God) is forever." Thus we see the pre-eminence of God's only begotten and well beloved Son.

All these testimonies go to corroborate the truth of Gabriel's record of the nativity of the Christ as given in Matthew and Luke. The whole New Testament would be an enigma, if they were ruled out as spurious. We can go on and multiply testimony on this subject, although we think enough has already been said. The disciples are in unison on the heavenly origin of Christ, e. g., And they that were in the boat worshiped him saying, "Of a truth thou art the Son of God." Even the unclean spirits, whensoever they beheld him, fell down before him and cried, saying, "Thou art the Son of God." The centurion in witnessing his death (the miraculous phenomena attending it) says, "Truly this was the Son of God." Nathaniel's testimony is also to the point. Hear what he says, "Thou art the Son of God—thou art the King of Israel." What about Martha? John xi. 27, after hearing what Jesus had to say concerning the resurrection, "I am the resurrection and the life," she saith unto him, "Yea, Lord, I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God." The eunuch's confession is disputed, still we will not leave that out of the innumerable testimonies bearing on this important subject. "I believe that Jesus Christ was the Son of God," was his confession. This confession is not out of harmony with the general tenor of New Testament teaching concerning the divine origin of Jesus the Christ and which has been a subject of discussion, and may continue, from all appearances, till God's Son returns from heaven; and for which the Church is anxiously waiting.

Have not I quoted enough from the inspired Word to conclusively prove that the divine record of his begettal is genuine and can only be explained on the basis of the language as it reads in Matthew and Luke (which is too plain to be misunderstood). There are things in the Bible hard to be understood. The ordinary mind cannot grasp the infinite. "God manifestation" is a mystery most all will admit. There is, however, no necessity of dictating to Infinite wisdom, and so carry out our own fleshly thinkings on the "deep things of God." We will see eye to eye when the Lord returns to Zion. When the promise came to Abraham that he should have a Son of promise when he and Sarah, his wife, were past age. To them it might have appeared an incredible thing. Sarah laughed at the idea, and said, Shall I of a surety bear a child which am old? "Is any thing too hard for the Lord?" Gen. xviii. This is similar language to that we find in Luke, viz., "With God nothing shall be impossible." Don't let us limit God's power. The language of inspiration as contained in the record, viz., "With God nothing shall be impossible," and also, "Is anything too hard for the Lord." Gen. xviii. 11-15, and Luke i. 37, harmonize with the miraculous conception as given in the above passages of Scripture.

About the last question Jesus asked while the Pharisees were gathered, "What think ye of Christ? Whose "Son" is he? They say unto him, "the Son of David," "He saith unto them, how then doth David call him Lord? etc. If David then calleth [illegible] Lord, how is he his Son? And no man was able to answer him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask him any more questions, "He was the root and offspring of David."

In the parable of the vineyard and the husbandman (see Matt. xx.) After sending out servants at different times, who were beaten and sent away empty and shamefully handled; and in meditating what he should do, I will send my "beloved Son." It may be they will reverence my Son. You know the sequel. It is not necessary to go outside of the Bible to prove its authenticity.

Now, my dear brother, you will not blame me for not taking much stock in any theory, which requires the rejection of a goodly portion of this Book as spurious, in order to maintain its footing. In the next place the repeated endorsement of the New Testament writers ought to be enough to satisfy any reasonable mind or Bible student. I am aware there are those who try to prove the genealogies are contradictory. But when we remember that Luke takes the line through Nathan while Matthew through Solomon, (the problem is solved). The New Testament begins very appropriately. "The book of the generations of Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham, etc. "'s genealogy which Matthew gives that of Joseph, who became the son of Heli; and the reputed father of Jesus through his marriage with "Mary," the mother of Jesus. In this genealogy we find the name of Jechonias (verse 12) and of this same Jechonias, or Coniah we read in the book of Jeremiah the terrible prophecy, "Thus saith the Lord—write this man childless (as far as the royal line was concerned), a man that shall not prosper in his days; for no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David and ruling any more in Judah." Jer. xxii. and so the throne was overturned, and will be until he comes whose right it is, and I will give it him." Is it any more absurd that the second Adam should have a divine origin as well as the first? He was called the Son of God by creation. Christ the Son of God by begettal and Son of Man by birth. "For as much as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, Why? That through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." He was tried in all points as we are, yet without sin." Jesus was an overcomer. Flesh in the abstract contains no sin; neither is there sin in the God given "propensities," the appetites and passions, etc., they all have their place, and were given for a wise purpose. It is only when they are not under control that sin comes in. "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God cannot be tempted with evil, and he himself temptath no man." "Each man is tempted when he is drawn away by his own lusts, etc.

All responsibility is taken from God as being the author of sin. "Who among you convinceth me of sin? Jesus not being a sinner, death had no legal claim upon him (?) His death was a voluntary affair. He died for our sins according to the Scriptures. He who knew no sin was made sin offering for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." Thus "He was made a sin offering in being treated as a sinner. A love substitute if I may so speak. It is testified, "we are bought with a price, ye are not your own," etc. Let us be careful not to deny the Lord who bought us. The buyer and the price paid for us, are all plainly revealed in the Word. He gave "himself" for us, "the just for the unjust," that he might bring us to God," without strength and ungodly. "Thus God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." Herein is love, not that we loved God—but that he loved us. We have line upon line and precept upon precept of the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Have we reciprocated that love? The cross (love) is the drawing power. "We love him because he first loved us." "God is love"—personified (if I may so speak) in the person of Jesus Christ. "The grace of God which bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly desires we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present kosmos—looking for the Blessed Hope and the appearing of the glory of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purchase to [illegible] people, zealous of good works. These things teach and exhort and rebuke with all authority. Let no man despise thee." "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking be put away from you, and be ye kind to each other, tender hearted, forgiving one another even as God for Christ's sake, freely forgiveth you. "And be ye followers of God as beloved children; and walk in love as Christ also hath loved us and hath given "himself for us" an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savor." "I am crucified with Christ, (says Paul) nevertheless I live, yet not I but Christ liveth in me, and the life I now live in the flesh, I live through faith in "the Son of God," who loved me and gave "himself for me."

Grace and peace be to you from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ, who gave "himself for us" —our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world,—according to the will of God and our Father to whom be glory forever." Amen. Thus we see the price paid (or "Ransom") was "himself;" and ought we not to give ourselves away to him? and glorify God in our bodies and spirits which are his." Yes, and all we have belongs to him and we should be very careful how we use God's property. The pre-eminence the Bible gives to the Christ, proves conclusively that, as the "last Adam," he is the "Son of God" on a higher plane than all others. To which of the angels said he at any time, "Thou art my Son; he has a "name above every name." The time will come when every knee shall bow to him. This will be in the coming "age," which will be an age of sight. It will be the consummation of all prophetic declarations. Many things will have their fulfilment in that age—which were supposed to belong to the present dispensation. Death will not be a necessity. "As the days of a tree, so shall be the days of my people." No sin permitted. "Sentence against an evil work will be executed speedily." The rulers will be of divine appointment. Conspiracy will be a thing impossible. It will be emphatically a reign of righteousness."

We have only given a tithe of the prominent characteristics of the "only begotten Son of God," "the last Adam," "a life giving Spirit;" the first born from the dead; and "in whom dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." In view of the plain testimony of the angel Gabriel, concerning the Savior's origin, as revealed in Matthew and Luke, must we destroy the harmony of the whole New Testament teachings by blotting out the record of his nativity as revealed, and consider it spurious, to suit the caprice of certain ones who so earnestly contend that Joseph was his paternal father. Surely I have given testimony enough to prove the contrary; and I that he was the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth

The Church is in a waiting position, waiting for "God's Son" from heaven—not Joseph's son; no, no. I have yet to find the place where Jesus acknowledged Joseph as his paternal father. His wonderful works all prove his pre-eminence.

Dost thou believe on the "Son of God?" was a question Jesus asks the (born blind) man whom he cured. He answered and said, Who is the Lord, that I may believe on him? Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him, and he it is that speaketh with thee; and he worshiped him." Jesus was always ready to confess the truth concerning his Sonship. The New Testament as before stated, confirms his heavenly origin; no one denies that God manifestation is a mystery; there was no other way to reach our finite capacities—infinite wisdom does every thing right. Now "he that hath seen me hath seen the Father." Under such a weight of testimony I cannot be a Josephite. From a seeker for the truth on all subjects.

JOHN O. WOODRUFF.

Separated.

FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

There is in the minds of young persons, when deliberating as to whether they shall take the side of the Lord or no, a dread of the separation that must inevitably follow. Their gay young companions must be left behind. They can no more go with them to the dance or to the play. The evening frolic must be forsaken, the enchanting ditty be no longer sung. Cards must be laid aside; all questionable games, all foolish talk and merry jesting be forsworn forever. It seems hard to be shut off from all these delightful pleasures, that seem so innocent, so harmless in themselves. How can they give them up, and make themselves a laughing stock for all the rest? Alas! how many measure the cost and find themselves unable to go out to battle. They cannot forsake all that they have, and cannot therefore become disciples of Jesus. It matters not that "Restoration can only come by re-establishment of the connection with almighty power and infinite wisdom that has been sundered by sin," and that this at-one-ment, this restoration of the connection of man and of themselves to God, can only be brought about by acceptance of the offered Savior; they cannot endure the thought of the "separation" of broken friendships and shattered loves. To the maiden—

> Comes there one with flaunting feathers
> And she follows where he leads her.

Would you like to know where? He looks all right as he stands with her at the altar; he is well dressed and his manners are faultless. But wait—a dozen years have gone by. You would not know that young man now. He looks old, his hair is uncut, his clothes ragged, his gait distressingly slow. The couple live on a little farm, but the place is as unattractive as the man, save for the flowers and shrubbery that the wife has planted.

No pretty new house has taken the place of the crowded cabin. There are children, but in what squalor they live. The poor wife cannot care for them as they ought to be cared for; she must spin, she must weave, she must plant, she must hoe, that they may have something to eat, while her husband

> Sits by the chimney lug,
> Dozing and grumbling o'er pipe and mug.

She was warned, but she would not heed, though friends would sooner have followed her to her grave, than to have gone to her wedding.

He was a Universalist—the first one of that faith to appear in the new country. He led her away from the faith of her parents. He taught her to scoff at and reject the doctrine of the near advent of Jesus. He sowed the seeds of his baleful faith in the whole community where he lived. He led two of her dear brothers away from God and into lives of down-right sin. He influenced the chum of one of these brothers so that he too went far astray. Wherever the devil had any work to do there were his devotees. There was no restraining force in the doctrines he taught, and savage tempers, unchecked appetites and destroying passions had their way.

> He sowed the seed—
> O what in the judgment will be the gain?
> O what will the harvest be?

That young girl would not be "separated" from her friend; she would not be "separated" unto God, and so she reaped the consequences.

The beautiful intellectual and spiritual life that she might have lived, she never entered. The high forehead, the finely constituted brain, availed her nothing. Her histrionic talents, her keen perceptions were useless in the environments into which she had thrown herself.

Clothed more like a gipsy than the daughter of proud New England forebears, with no care and little love from her husband, this woman lived and died—died, e'er the noontide of life had been reached.

The tale is a true one. It is drawn from actual life. What a fearful work that man did, and it is not yet finished! Whole families ruined by his teaching, unrepentant, unregenerate; untouched by the crimson flood, and yet hoping for salvation. And their children and children's children will follow in their steps, and will influence hundreds of others outside of their homes to trust in the same "rope of sand."

How much better to be "separated" from the things that Jesus calls us to leave, for instead of wisdom's way being the hard way, it is the other road that is hard. We give up some things but we get things that are incomparably better. We shatter such loves as the one the lady of my tale would not give up, but we gain a royal friendship. We drop "the beggar's acquaintance," and win the friendship of Jesus; throw away the brass and gain the gold of the eternal years.

"We lose people," as Miss Havergal says, "but we find 'brethren' with all the love and pleasure and freedom of intercourse—yes, and even with mirth—which that relationship brings."

We find treasures hid in a field and we buy the field, selling everything that we have to secure its possession, and finding such joy in its ownership that we "count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus our Lord."

Pleasures that we counted pleasures before, seem vapid and worthless now. We feel the purposelessness, the uselessness; the senseless waste of the life that is spent in the halls of mirth, be our companions ever so gay. How unsatisfying their conversation. How like husks the food they set before us is.

I cannot but contrast the hours spent in the company of the worldling with the hours spent with the lovers of Jesus. Foolish jest, sinful gossip, fretful murmurings at the providences of God, and wearisome business details—these fill up the time of men and women who are out of Christ. On the other hand, the little bands of God's "separated" ones talk joyfully of the coming kingdom, and of the riches and the glory that will be theirs "over there."

"Separated unto the gospel of God" —"chosen vessels unto the Lord to bear his name before the Gentiles," they know that "some sweet day" "with gladness and rejoicing they shall be brought and shall enter into the King's palace."

They are servants and yet they are friends of the Lord himself. They are "separated" from the world that they may be brought near to him, be "his inheritance," and his "peculiar treasure."

Therefore, my dear young friends, do not hesitate to be "separated unto the Lord" and touch not the unclean thing, and the Lord will "bless you with favor and will compass you as with a shield," and in the day of trouble will save you.

The Gift of Eternal Life.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner, how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

The Log of Life.

"They that go down to the sea in ships."—Psalm cvii. 23.

Now, you set sail and I set sail upon the sea of life—
And times there are when comes a gale that cuts us like a knife.
When comes a blast that shudders past and shrivels up our souls—
It blows from off the barren rocks where sorrow spreads her shoals,
Where bitterly the billows break and clatter of defeat;
Long after we have struggled by their solemn homely beat.

Some of us set sail but where the sea in silver spray is curled;
Some of us beat beyond the rim that bounds the rounding world;
Some of us ride upon the tide that in the moonlight gleams
And sighs of peace and happiness within the port of dreams;
And some go blindly up and down across the silent sea
To find the vaunted harbor in the land of good to be.

But every here and there in our ships may moor or sail
There is a call for one and all—a wholesome, friendly hail.
It may be in the port of dreams, or off of sorrow's shoals,
Or when in misery's pleasures the vessel idly rolls.
Wherever, on or off our course, we will but pause to hear,
There comes to us a hail that rings with fellowship and cheer.

So you go down and I go down into the sea of life—
To feel the bite of angry winds along the reefs of strife,
To hear the sirens of dire calculus from off some singing coast,
But through it all the friendly call is what we count the most.
The sea of life is long and wide, but we will to the end—
Through shine and fog we write the log: "This day we hailed a friend."

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D., L. L. D., Reviewed. No. 5.

"In the New Testament, as we have repeatedly remarked," says Dr. Strong, "proof-texts so abound that it is superfluous here to adduce them, especially as we shall presently have occasion to cite some of them for a more definite purpose.

2. For detailed statements as to the circumstances of the human spirit [which is breath], after death, we therefore return to the Scriptures, which so often touch more or less especially upon this point. Of course, we are not to expect this information to be conveyed in set form [i. e. in clear and direct testimony] and scientific and philosophical phrase [no, indeed, it should be in clear and decisive language]; but we are enabled, nevertheless, to gather from the various hints [what! only "hints" on such an important subject?] and incidental communications [which may be of doubtful interpretation] of divine revelation, a tolerably clear idea of the surroundings and experiences of what is now generally known of "the intermediate state."

(a) The direct Biblical testimony is contained in comparatively few passages, and the most important and conclusive of these are not purposely didactive [i. e. properly teaching], but exemplary! Of formal statements; in addition to the texts already adduced, we may especially mention the repeated declarations of the book of Ecclesiastes, which all go most decidedly to confirm the views we have advanced as to the negative or isolated condition of the disembodied spirit.... It is not merely or chiefly ignorance of the exact time when we shall individually die that depresses and torments us;.....but the most aggravated and tormenting feature of our imperfect knowledge, and that which affects our destiny most permanently is our lack of positive items, at least from natural sources, concerning the life beyond the grave, except that it will be an absolute end of all mundane pursuits and avocations. The living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything; neither have they any more a reward [while dead and unconscious]. In the same vein it is affirmed that there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave [sheol] where thou goest. Now, the main point of these and numerous other passages that might be quoted from this and similar Scriptures is not the mere quiescence and solitariness and beggary of the tomb, for the bodily condition [!], for the bodily condition is comparatively insignificant."

Thus it is very clearly seen that Dr. Strong, in his elusive and delusive argument, placed the wise and inspired king of Israel with the heathen philosophers, and outside of the wisdom and revelation which Solomon received from Jehovah, the God of Israel; and all this too, in order to nullify the meaning and drift of the inspired words he quotes, which explicitly declare that "there is no knowledge in sheol" where all go at death; and, that "the dead [dead persons] know not any thing."

In this connection (p. 55) the doctor states what he must, or should know is not true in fact, when he says: "The doctrine of the Hebrew preacher exactly tallies with that of a modern evangelist." This simply means that Solomon has taught in the above passages what the popular church believes, namely, that the souls of saints go to heaven, and the souls of the wicked to Gehenna—"hell," the valley of Hinnom south of Jerusalem at death! But "the Hebrew preacher" never even intimates that man possesses a soul or spirit entity. He does say that the breath—breath of man goeth upward, and the breath of the beast goeth downward to the earth; and that "the breath" [of man] returns "to God who gave it." Dr. Strong continues and says:

"As to the New Testament we do not need to adduce many formal proof-texts concerning the theological nature of the departed soul and its environments [but he will "need" them, and not find them], of which the gospel writers are proverbially and purposely chary [if he had said silent, it would be true], as they prefer to hasten [they had no preference, for they wrote under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit] forward to the glories of the resurrection state; for we have something more plain and lucid [than direct proof-texts?] by way of illustration yet in reserve. We will, nevertheless, call attention briefly to certain doctrinal passages which are in entire harmony with the foregoing, and which may serve to fill out the picture [which is attempting to color without even one "thus saith the Lord"] to some extent. First we notice the beautiful figure of sleep borrowed from the Old Testament writers (1 Kings i. 21; Job xiv. 12; Dan. xii. 2; etc.) and adopted in the New Testament as the characteristic for the repose of the saints [why did he not say the bodies of the saints, as he believes, and which belief is contradicted by all the passages he cites on this point, and all others in the Bible] after the cares and trials of this life (spoken of Lazarus, John xi. 11, of Jairus's daughter, Matt. ix. 24; of lately deceased friends Matt. xxvii. 52; of Stephen, Acts vii. 60; of Christians generally (Cor. xi. 30; xv. 20, 51; 1 Thes. iv. 14) in place of the older and more natural phrases noted above, expressing a reunion with forefathers."

Dr. Strong's Scripture citations above, in regard to the sleeping saints, as proof of his view are all against him, and conclusively show, as we shall see, that the saints sleep in the dust of the earth until awakened "by the voice of the archangel and the trump of God." We shall also see by reading these Scriptures that the doctor is mistaken when he says "the beautiful figure of sleep" in these passages "is borrowed from the Old Testament." Christ's words to the disciples in regard to the death of Lazarus settle the question of a "borrowed figure," for it was not necessary for Jesus to borrow his idea of death! nor was it for the inspired apostle, for many things were revealed to him, of which there is no intimation elsewhere.

We will now examine some of the above cited passages, and first the death of Stephen. "And they stoned Stephen, he calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus receive my spirit." Dr. J. J. Griesbach renders "to pneuma mou, the breath of me." We have already seen that the corresponding Hebrew word ruakh is often rendered "spirit" when it should be breath; and we will further show that this is true of the Greek pneuma. That the Scriptures have been culpably perverted in the interest of the doctrines of the State church of England at the time of translation is easily shown; and, we will now show that the last words of Christ on the cross, and the words of the evangelists connected therewith are egregiously perverted. We find the following account (Luke xxiii. 46) as in the common version, and also in the revision. "And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father into thy hands I commend my spirit, and having said this he gave up the ghost."

Here the Greek word exepneusen, which means "breathed out," i. e. gave up his breath, they made it say up the ghost." Dr. Griesbach renders it—"Father, into thy hands I commit the breath of me, and having said this he breathed out." "And he (Stephen) kneeled down and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep." Does the personal pronoun "he" here refer to Stephen, or only to an "insignificant" part of Stephen as the doctor thinks? The most of his citations merely state that the dead saints are asleep, which he does not believe, as we have seen. He cites 1 Cor xv. 20, 51, but we will look at the connection. Verses 17, 18: "And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also who are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." The doctor, with the popular churches believes that the word "perish" as used in the Bible, means endless misery, but it will not be affirmed that it means that here. But it absolutely [illegible] according to the doctor's and the common belief, that if the souls of the dead saints are in heaven, and are conscious and immortal anywhere else, it would make no difference if there were never any resurrect on, for the resurrection is not for the living, but for the dead; it is for the dead, or sleeping saints. But the apostle further says (verses 32): "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? Let us eat and drink for tomorrow we die." It is certain from these words of the apostle that he knew nothing of disembodied souls anywhere. And he knew more about it than Dr. Strong. His last citation on "sleep" is 1 Thes. iv. 14. We will begin with verse 13, as follows: "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them who are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others who have no hope. For if we believe (verse 14) that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him (Jesus) from the dead, as he "brought again our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead, that great shepherd of the sheep," Heb. xiii. 20). For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not precede them who are (in heaven? no, but them who are) asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air."

In view of the above inspired statement, the question naturally arises, what about the "souls or spirits" of these resurrected saints who are thus caught up to meet the Lord in the air? Is it possible that the great apostle forgot to reveal "the glorious reunion" of souls and bodies? It will be in "the resurrection of the just" as it was when Jesus called the dead Lazarus from his grave—his soul, if he had such a one as is claimed was left somewhere! So we can see in the light of the above, and shall further see that man is not a dual being as generally claimed, but one being, and that he cannot be dead and alive, and in two places at the same time.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call, I am yours in the one faith.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents, Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. A Prayer.

Lold on thy altar, O my Lord divine,
Accept this gift to-day for Jesus' sake;
I have no jewels to adorn thy shrine,
Nor any worthy sacrifice to make;
But here I bring within my trembling hand,
This will or purpose thing that seemeth small,
And thou alone, O Lord, canst understand
How when I yield thee this, I yield my all.

Hidden therein, the sorrowing gaze can trace
Struggles of passion, visions of delight,
All that I crave, or sin, or fain would be,
Deep love, fond hopes, and longings infinite.
It hath been wet with tears, and dimmed with sighs,
Clenched in my grasp till beauty it hath none;
Now from thy footstool, where it crucified lies
The prayer ascendeth, may thy will be done.

Take it, O Father, o'er my courage fail,
And merge it so in thine own will that even
If in some desperate hour my cries prevail,
And thou give back my gift, it may have been
Sweetened, purified, so much love-grown,
So one with thee, so robed with grace divine,
I may not know or fear it more mine,
But gaining back my will, may find it thine.

One Hour to Come.

The sounding of the seventh trumpet, the reappearing of the Lord Jesus and the resurrection of his saints, introduces what is termed the hour of Judgment. The following appears to be the order of events:

1. The rising up from the death state of the one body, and their gathering together unto the Lord.

2. The setting in order the house or tabernacle of God, involving account giving of its individual members, and the necessary organization for the future work of executing the will and purpose of Jehovah concerning the establishment of his kingdom and rule in all the earth.

3. The raising up of the anti-typical tabernacle, and its anointing with Holy Spirit, as shadowed forth in the work of Moses setting up the tabernacle at Mt. Sinai. See Num. vii. 1, and anointing, and sanctifying, the same will be completed when all that is unclean and dishonorable is purged out, and only vessels of honor and glory remain. The elements represented by hay, wood and stubble will disappear, and the one body will become the perfected, glorified tabernacle of God among men.

4. The saving of the tents of Judah first, in smiting the northern Gog upon the Mountains of Israel. This will be the darkest hour in the history of the Jew—the time of Jacob's trouble, but he will be saved unexpectedly out of it, for the Lord Jesus will come to the rescue, when there was no help from any earthly source. "And I looked and there was none to help. and I wondered that there was none to uphold; therefore, mine own arm, brought salvation, and my fury it upheld me, and I will tread down the people in mine anger, and make them drunk in my fury, and I will bring down their strength to the earth." See Isaiah lxiii. 5-6. When the events of this prophecy occur, large numbers of the Jewish race will have settled in the midst of the land, having accummulated wealth in the way of cattle and goods, and silver, and gold, apparently exciting the cupidity of the Russo Gog of the north, who comes down upon them like a whirlwind and a cloud to cover the land; that is he will come so swiftly and unexpectedly and with such an immense military multitude that there is at the time no other power prepared to resist the forces at his command. This is one reason why it is written "I looked and there was no one to help." Again, it comes within the range of probability, that the Jewish people will have succeeded in establishing an autonomous state in the land recognized and guaranteed by the concerted action of the great powers of Europe. It hardly seems possible for the Zionites to accomplish this work and purpose contemplated without some such stipulated guarantee on the part of the European powers. A condition of this kind having obtained would certainly justify the statement, "I wondered that there was none to uphold."

The desire and ambition of those in the land of the Zionists is no doubt in the right direction, to bring about the condition that must obtain in the time of the end, and the hour of judgment. There is no rest or peace for Israel until the time appointed. In fact, his trouble will no doubt be greatly intensified from this time forward. At the present moment the Jew in Russia is the active leader and advocate of revolution, and even assassination. He is, so to speak the leaven or yeast that keeps the Czar's subjects in a state of fermentation, but it will not alleviate or better his condition politically or otherwise. There may be temporary periods of respite, but no more. Russian autocracy will be on top in the end, and its hatred of the Jew will be none the less bitter and unrelenting.

The Northern Gog's invasion of Israel's land at the time of the end, is not necessarily the ultimate purpose of his ambition, but rather incidental to his going forth to battle for the Empire of the East, which will necessitate his breaking any stipulation favorable to the Jew. All continental Europe will be at his back, as outlined in the description of the prophet. See Ezek. xxxviii., but he in the mean time thinks no "evil thought" saying "I will go up to the land of unwalled villages. I will go to them that are at rest that dwell safely, all of them dwelling without walls, having neither bars nor gates, to take a spoil, and to take a prey; to turn thine hand upon the desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods that dwell in the midst of the land." The invaders' career however will be cut short and his disaster such as will astound the world, as it is written "I will call for a sword against him in all my mountains, saith the Lord God, every man's sword shall be against his brother, and I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood."

The world of mankind in the present day feed upon the tragical and sensational. The daily papers are dry and uninteresting if lacking in a sensation of some kind, or other. Just think for a moment of the sensation that will occur when the daily press in flaming headlines print the news of Gog's disastrous, yea, miraculous overthrow. Indeed, it is graphically described by the inspired penman. "In that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel.....and all the men that are upon the face of the earth shall shake at my presence, and I shall be known in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am the Lord." And again, he says "that the Gentiles may know me when I shall be sanctified in thee O Gog, before their eyes."

To think seriously of the hour of Judgment to come, will impress upon the mind the truth, that the present state is a vain show, that is passing away.

More in my next.

GEO. MOYER.

The Doctrine of a Future Life, By James Strong, S. T. D, L. L. D., Reviewed. No. 7.

Dr. Strong, after writing some four pages of general remarks, commences the fifth chapter by referring briefly to what he had previously stated on the subject of "pure or unembodied spiritual beings such as God, the infinite Spirit, and angels (of various orders, whom we suppose to have no bodies, although they and Deity have assumed temporarily what we presume to have phantastic forms) and mixed or embodied as men."

In our reply we showed that the doctor was inconsistent in stating that spiritual beings were "immaterial" and without bodies, but "it [spirit] can only be a substance distinct in nature and attributes from matter"—which is a palpable contradiction for "substance" is material and matter, but pertaining to spiritual things it is not gross, but spirit-materiality is the exact opposite, or immaterinlly, and is therefore just nothing at all. There cannot be, consequently, such a thing as an immaterial soul, or an immaterial body.

Dr. Strong, in introducing the subject of the resurrection of the body says: "Our present inquiry relates to the corporal embodiment which the human spirit [when in the breath of man, as we shall further show] is hereafter to be re-invested, especially in its nature and capabilities."

This ridiculous idea of the "spirit" being invested with a resurrected body reminds me of a similar paragraph of the "soul" in that good man's "Faith Papers," Dr. S. A. Keen, page 51, which is as follows: "But when the contest is ended, and the soul [person] has made up its [his] mind to trust the sure Word of the Lord, it [he] becomes just as confident that it [he] believes as that it [he] sees, or hears, or lives." (!!!)

Any person of unbiased mind, reading the two statements of these eminent men of the "spirit" and of the "soul," would, doubtless, be perplexed to know which were right, and would probably conclude that both were wrong.

After giving his view of the future resurrection of the "body"—not recognizing the fact that it is the man who is to be resurrected—that the sleeping saints are to be awakened—Dr. Strong refers again to the resurrection of Lazarus and other saints, as not affording "a fair pattern for comparison with those (we suppose he means) who will be resurrected at the last day. He knows that Lazarus, with others, was called up from his grave, where he was unconscious, to life again—and that without any "reunion" of soul and body. Hence, he thus attempts to avoid the great Scriptural truth that "man"—who was "formed of the dust of the ground," "and unto dust shalt thou return"—should be resurrected.

We believe that thinking persons outside the church are in advance of the great majority of Christians on this point, for they believe, with physiologists, that man thinks by means of his brains just as the animals do—and that our bodies are ourselves. The new-born infant knows nothing but to instinctively, as the animals, take nourishment from its mother. But where is the thinking, "immaterial soul" at this stage of existence? Does it grow in thought or stature as the child grows? Let the soul or spirit-entity theologians explain these puzzling questions!

Before concluding his remarks on the resurrection of the "body," Dr. Strong says, "We perceive reason for believing that the glorified body will actually be etherialized or sublimated or refined in its very constitution—"transfigured," we would say, but for the metaphorical aspect of the term—that it will become a fitter vehicle for the soul than it had been before." (!!)

According to this crooked theology, the glorified saint would be a dual being in that eternal life state, as is assumed of man in this state! and if Dr. Strong were asked to tell which would dominate, and be the most happy—the "soul" or "body"—in the future state, the reward being according to what each had done in this state, we think it would puzzle his brains to give a consistent and satisfactory answer.

In discussing the final abode of the "re-embodied spirit" Dr. Strong says: "Where this sphere of the re-embodied and rejuvinated and re-enforced spirit is to be located is a mystery—rather a profound secret; but that heaven (for that, in fine, is the name for it) abode) will be [if so, then why does] so puzzle his spirit or brains as to its location in the regions of infinite space?]—nay, is—a place [indeed] as well as a state is certain not only from the nature of the case, but likewise from many and clear indications [is that all?] of Scripture."

Dr. Strong's "spirit" is greatly mystified and unsettled in regard to the final abode of the saints and their everlasting inheritance (and thinks that God has kept it a secret) simply because he virtually rejects (as do the popular churches) the clear and emphatic enunciations of the inspired Scriptures on this point. The Bible is just as explicit on this subject as on any doctrine therein taught, as we shall clearly show. The fact is that, [illegible] it for centuries, namely, that "heaven" is the final abode of the saints, and where they go at death, and that "hell" is the place where the wicked go, the Scriptures that we shall quote which clearly contradict all this, have been, and are still ignored and thus rejected as above charged.

The covenant that God made with Abraham that he and his seed should inherit the land of Canaan, and the scope of which is explained by St. Paul, and the nature of the promise and time of fulfilment, etc., by the psalmist, the prophet Isaiah, Daniel, Christ, Stephen, Paul, Peter and John should settle this question without the least doubt, and will with every unbiased minded person who believes the Word of God. The covenant is found, Gen. xiii. 14-16.

"And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art northward, southward, eastward and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth; so that if a man can number the dust of earth, then can thy seed be numbered."

This covenant is confirmed in chapter xvii. 8, in which chapter Abram's name is changed to Abraham. This covenant is also confirmed to Isaac and Jacob, and to David. Verse 8 reads as follows: "And I will give unto thee, and unto thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God."

That this promise embraced more than the literal land of Canaan (as bounded in the statement, Gen. xv. 18, where Canaan is promised only to Abram's seed after the flesh) is affirmed by the apostle, Rom. iv. 13, 14, as follows. "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. For if they who are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise of no effect."

The apostle also tells us that Abraham's seed is Christ (Gal. iii. 16) as follows: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He does not say, And to seeds, as of many, but as of one, And to thy seed who is Christ.....For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise..... Wherefore then serve the law? It was added because of transgression till the seed should come to whom the promise was made.....And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." That this promise was not fulfilled in this world is shown by the inspired testimony of Stephen (Acts vii. 5) as follows: "And he gave him [Abraham] no inheritance in it [the land of Canaan], no, not so much as to set his foot on; yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child."

But the apostle tells us when this promise is to be fulfilled, for the promises of God never fail. He says (Heb. xi. 8-10): "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out to a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." This, as all can see, is the holy city, "New Jerusalem," which John saw in vision, coming down from God out of heaven upon the new earth.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY MARCH 24.

WOES OF DRUNKENNESS. ISA. XXVIII. 7-13.

Golden Text. Wine and new wine take away the heart." Hos. iv. 11.

The woes of drunkenness have been the theme of the powerful and eloquent orator. The more humble speaker has used his most earnest efforts upon it; the poet has woven it in heart rending strains; even the painter has portrayed it with distressing vividness, but the sordid selfishness of the drunkard is seldom touched by either eloquence, solicitude, pathos, or the life-like picture.

It is believed to be a fair statement, that the drunkard is getting more kindly consideration now than ever before. There is more effort made now than ever to reform the drunkard, however latest reports show that drunkenness is on the increase, therefore the woes of drunkenness are increased. By the many and wide spread efforts of reformers the tide of woes may be somewhat stemmed in certain locations, but in others it surges more powerfully than ever. According to the Word of God drunkards are classed among those that cannot enter the kingdom of God. 1 Cor. vi. 10.

Who hath woe, sorrow, contentions, babbling, wounds, redness of eyes?—the drunkard. Prov. xxiii. 29, 30. While this is positively true, let us not forget that God has presented both sides, or both effects of drunkenness. The golden text informs us that wine and new wine take away the heart—the sense, reason, intelligence, judgment, and makes men senseless, foolish, unreasonable, shameless, without conscience. And so while the woes of poverty, wretchedness, shame, misery and disgrace falls as a crushing weight on parents, wife, children, relatives, friends and even neighbors, and the burden of expense comes on the public for judges, juries, lawyers, courts, jails and insane asylums. The drunkard has his good time with music, wine and feasting. Isa. v. 12. This was noticed in the world's temperance lesson for November 25, 1906. The woes of drunkenness are many, and it is much to be regretted that they do not recoil on the drunkard only.

We will now consider the lesson verses. They also—most likely including Judah and Israel have erred, sinned, gone astray, done that which was wicked in the sight of God.

Through strong drink—It was indulged in by all classes, even the priest and prophet—drunkenness had become so general, they were said to be swallowed up, or plunged in wine. Drunkenness was error for the people, but gross error for the priests, they were in a sense mediators between God and the people. If one of the common people sin, he shall bring a kid of the goats.....the priest shall burn it upon the altar.....the sin shall be forgiven. Lev. iv. 27-31. They were to be joined with the high priest to keep the charge of the tabernacle, that there be no wrath on the children of Israel. Num. xviii. 4. It was of the utmost importance that they should not be under the influence of wine or strong drink that they might teach the children of Israel all the statutes of the Lord. Lev. x. 8-11.

The prophets acted as God's messengers to make known his will to the people, as revealed to them, to denounce sin, to foretell of punishments, to warn and exhort the Israelites to reform. Hosea vi. 1; Amos v. 6.

Through drunkenness there was no distinction, no marked difference between people, priest and prophet. This was the condition or state of affairs when Isaiah was sent among them, to endeavor to get them to hear, to understand and realize that if they kept on in their rebellious and disgraceful conduct, they would be severely punished. Isa. vi. 9-12.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, the prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Isaiah had the same success as modern reformers have; the more plans and efforts to suppress or check drunkenness, the more it grows. The priests and prophets could not see, think nor judge correctly, this added to the woes of such as sought good counsel.

Let us know and remember that although drunkenness debars from the kingdom of God, sobriety, without faith and obedience, obtains no favor from God. God wastes no sentiment on drunkards. If his law as given through Moses, Deut. xxi. 18-21. was in force today, the woes of drunkenness would hardly supply a topic for pulpit or platform.

Among other things men have tried to frighten the drunkard by showing the destructive nature of strong drink on the liver, kidneys, heart, arteries, lungs, bronchia and brain, producing lingering, painful, distressing diseases, dragging to the grave, even this has failed. With stammering lip—with people of another tongue God would speak to them, and punish them because they did not heed his warning. This was fulfilled by the Assyrians. 2 Kings xvii. 6.

When the Lord Jesus Christ comes to Mount Zion with his saints, Ob. 21, and punishes the nations, the people will learn righteousness, Isa. xxvi. 9, and the woes of drunkenness will cease forever.

Obituary.

Ruth Huggins was born in West Virginia, Jan. 9, 1846. Came to Illinois in 1861. Married W. C. Nowlin, Mar. 30, 1862. Came to Iowa, Oct. 1863, and spent most of her life in Iowa. Died at Humboldt, Iowa, Feb. 24, 1907.

In 1872, while sojourning for a short time, near Liberty, Kansas, she and her husband heard the good news and glad tidings of the kingdom preached by Uncle John Foore, and both became obedient to the faith, and united with the Church of God. She leaves a loving husband, a family of thirteen children, all grown, three of which have become obedient to the faith. It was her desire to see all her children become obedient to the faith.

She was a loving wife and devoted mother, and her life was an example worthy of emulation.

She fell asleep in the glorious hope of a resurrection from the dead, when Jesus comes. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from 1 Thess. iv. 13, after which we laid her away to await the call of him who said, "I am the resurrection and the life."

Charity is not an action; it is a life.

Procrastination is the thief of eternity.

If the Lord sends trial, he goes with it.

Sow good services; sweet remembrances will grow from them.

The great steps of the Infinite are not to be measured by our childish walk.

All the scholastic scaffolding fall as a ruined edifice before one single word—faith.

Let our lives be pure as snow-fields, where our footsteps leave a mark, but not a stain.

The best society and conversation is that in which the heart has a greater share than the head.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAR. 13, 1907.

BROTHER D. C. Robison writes Mar. 5, from Monroeville, O., where he is holding meetings near Sandusky, at the home of Brother B. F. Smith. He writes that Bro. Smith is in earnest in his defense of truth, talking and distributing literature as he has opportunity.

THE last one of the original founders of the Scientific American, Mr. Orson Desaix Munn, died at New York, Feb. 28, aged 83 years. This journal has been at the head of all scientific matters for many years, and a recognized authority. Mr. Munn leaves the work in the hands of competent successors, and the publications will not depreciate in value, though the active mind of the founder no longer guides.

IN spite of the pretensions of John Alexander Dowie, and contrary to the expectations of his blind dupes, this pretended prophet and apostle went the way of all humanity, and died at Zion City, March 9, 1907. Many persons have an idea from pictures that he was an old man, but he was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, May 25, 1847, making him less than sixty years old. He refused to have the aid of a physician, and as the organization he founded is disrupted by contending factions, and he has had difficulty with his wife and son, he died attended only by a half-dozen who remained with him. The world knows that John Alexander Dowie was a man of considerable ability, and if he had used it in a right way would have been a useful member of society, and a help to his fellows. But he simply chose to go wrong, and by false pretensions he won to himself foolish dupes all over the world. The collapse came with exposure, and Dowie died almost forsaken, a wreck. We can only add "I told you so."

Man's Soul has Weight.

From a dispatch dated at Boston, Mass. March 10, and published in the Chicago Tribune we call the following information:

"Five Massachusetts physicians of the highest professional standing have just attained what they believe to be decisive results in a scientific investigation to determine the existence or nonexistence of a soul in the human body, and to determine also whether flight of life is attended by any manifestation of a nature that can be made evident to material senses.

"The investigations, which extended over a period of six years, were conducted in a sanitarium. The results obtained, according to Dr. Duncan MacDougal, one of the physicians who undertook the investigation, shows that when the soul flits from the body it diminishes the weight of the body by a certain measureable amount.

"This weight has been found to vary between one-half ounce and one ounce, after all known scientific deductions, such as loss of respiratory air, of moisture, and of all excretions and secretions of the body had been taken into consideration.

"The method of finding this result, as followed by the doctors, was to place dying patients in a bed upon one of the platforms of specially made expressly for the experiments. These scales were so delicately adjusted as to be sensitive to weight of less than one-tenth of an ounce."

Dr. MacDougal says "During my practice among hospital patients, and in being present at the bedside of many dying persons, my curiosity was aroused as to whether there might be some material change discoverable by actual tests which would throw scientific light upon the mystery of the flight of life.

"When a person dies, the current belief is that his spirit or soul continues to live. My first thought was, Has continued consciousness and personal individualism an existence? Can it exist in space as nothing? It is known as a force—as a personality, real and actual. It is impossible to think of it as not occupying space. With that granted, the next query was, Has it weight? Forthwith I began my experiments."

After telling about the weighing of several persons, and noting the variations just as death occurred, and the astonishment of the doctors, the account goes on to tell about a certain phlegmatic case, a man of large frame and sluggish temperament. "When life ceased there appeared to be no change in weight. The physicians waiting in the room looked into each others' faces silently, thinking their test had failed. Then suddenly there came a diminishment in weight. I believe in this case, of a man slow of action and thought, the body held the soul after death during the minute that elapsed before it came to consciousness of its freedom.

"Thus it appears that the soul must be some space occupying body, either of gravitated or some other form of matter which has weight."

We give this account that our readers may see how completely these scientists have upset orthodox theology. It is currently believed by immortal-soulists that the soul is without substance, or at least so small that "ten thousand of them could dance on the point of a needle." If so very small they cannot possibly weigh one-hundredth part of an ounce, to say nothing of a half ounce or an ounce. Then again, as in their last case when "the body held the soul after death" for so long a time—suppose some old hardened body should hold on to a soul for an hour, a week, a year, or a thousand years. Or suppose a soul was so comfortable and satisfied in a body that it failed to realize the "consciousness of its freedom," and did not get out.

Brothers and Sisters, science and learning are most excellent in themselves, but when used in such senseless ways as this they are sure to result in "higher criticism" and the next step is "new thought" infidelity. Be warned it time, and do not become entangled in the wily spider's web.

Selected.

The Silence of Scripture.

It was said by one wise man of another, that more might be learned from his questions than from another man's answers. With yet higher truth might it be said that the silence of Scripture is oftentimes more instructive than the speech of other books; so that it has been likened to "a dial in which the shadow as well as the light informs us."

For example of this, how full of meaning to us that we have nothing told us of the life of our blessed Lord between the twelfth and thirtieth years,—how significant the absolute silence which the gospel maintains concerning all that period; that those years in fact have no history—nothing for the sacred writers to record. How much is implied herein!—the calm ripening of his human powers, the contentedness of his wait, the long preparation in secret, before he began his open ministry. What a testimony is here, if we will note it aright, against all our striving and snatching at hasty results, our impatience, our desire to glitter before the world: against all which tempts so many to pluck the unripe fruits of their minds, and to turn that into the season of a stunted and permanent harvest, which should have been the season of patient sowing, of an earnest culture, and a silent ripening of their powers.

How pregnant with meaning may that be which appears at first sight only an accidental omission! Such an omission it might at first appear, that the prodigal, who, while yet in a far country, had determined, among other things which he would say to his father, to say, "Make me as one of thy hired servants," when he reaches his father's feet, when he hangs on his father's neck, says all the rest which he had determined, but not this. This desire to be made as a hired servant, this wish to be kept at a certain distance, this refusal to reclaim the fullness of a child's privileges, was the one turbid and troubled element in his repentance. How instructive then its omission that, saying all else which he had meditated, he says not this. What a lesson for every penitent—in other words, for every man. We may learn from this, wherein the true growth of faith and humility consists; how he that has growth in these can endure to be fully and freely blest—to accept all, even when he most strongly feels that he has forfeited all; that only pride and surviving workings of self-righteousness and evil stand in the way of reclaiming of every blessing which the sinner had lost, but which God is waiting and willing to restore.—R. C. Trench.

The Best Stimulant.

The best possible thing for man to do when he feels too weak to carry his work through, is to go to bed and sleep for a week if he can. This is the only true recuperation of power, the only actual recuperation of the brain; because during sleep the brain is in a state of rest, and in a condition to receive and appropriate particles of nutriment from the blood, which take the place of those which have been consumed in previous labor; since the very act of thinking consumes, or burns up solid particles, as every turn of the wheel or screw on the splendid steamer is the result of consumption by fire of the fuel in the furnace. The supply of consumed brain substance can only be had from the nutritive particles in the blood, which were obtained from food previously eaten, and the brain is so constituted that it can best receive and appropriate itself those nutritive particles during a state of rest, of quiet and stillness—sleep. Mere stimulants supply nothing in themselves; they only goad the brain—force it to a greater consumption of its substance, until that substance has been so exhausted that there is not power enough left to receive a supply;—just as men are near dead by thirst and starvation that there is not enough power to swallow anything, and all is over.

Not Good Enough.

Nothing is good enough that can be as good as it can be. The verdict "good enough" says a well known writer, which in boyhood pass the defective task, will become "bad enough" when the habit of inaccuracy has spread itself over the life.

"You have planed that board well, have you, Frank?" asked the carpenter of an apprentice.

"O, it will do," replied the boy, "it don't need to be very well planed for the use to be made of it. Nobody will see it."

"It will not do if it is not planed as neatly and as smoothly as possible," replied the carpenter, who had a reputation of being the best and most conscientious workman in the city.

"I suppose I could make it smoother," said the boy.

"Then do it. 'Good enough' has but one meaning in my shop, and that is 'perfect.' If a thing is not perfect it is not good enough for me."

"You have not made things look very neat and orderly here in the back of the store," said a merchant to a young clerk.

"Well, I thought it was good enough for back there where things cannot be seen very plainly, and where customers seldom go."

"That won't do," said the merchant, sharply, and then added in a kinder tone, "You must get rid of that kind out of your head, my boy. If you hope to succeed in life. That kind of 'good enough' isn't much better than 'bad enough.'"

The girls who do not sweep in the corners or dust under things, and the boys who dispose of tasks as speedily as possible, declaring that things will "do" if they are not well done, are the boys and girls who make failures in life, because the habit of inaccuracy has become a part of their character.

The old adage, "What is worth doing at all is worth doing well," is as true as it was when first spoken, and it will always be true.—Youth's Companion.

Straight Paths.

The best railroads are made at great expense for right of way, bridging, grading and cutting, and the best material is used for cross-ties, trestles, etc., and laid with heavy steel rails. When completed, large engines pull heavily loaded trains over them at great speed with safety. Cheap roads are built, with poor material, and go curving around hills and other obstacles, up hill and down over shaky bridges and dangerous trestle work, and when done it is quite dangerous to run trains at all fast, and good engines can't go up the grades with what ought to be an ordinary load. So it is in religion. There is a cheap, twisty kind that doesn't cut down the mountain of unbelief, but curves around every disagreeable duty, and is destined not only to be a failure here, but to wreck those who have it for all eternity. It curves around the hill of repentance, runs over the valley of humiliation on a trestle work, scarcely comes in sight of restitution, the ties are worldly interests, the rails self-righteousness; the engine a phantom of Christ, run by good resolutions and self-righteousness. It stops at all the towns of worldly pleasure, and never has time for works of charity, except to be seen of men, and has its head quarters in worldly conformity and sensual pleasure. It is a cheap route, and popular with poor deceived souls, some of whom think they are serving God, and will reach the kingdom by and by.

Obituary.

Ellen F. Noyes was born at Lanoff, N. H., Aug. 12, 1827. Died at Manchester, Iowa, Feb. 17, 1907. Married to Jas. Snow, May 21, 1859. Five children were born to this union, only one surviving her, Mrs. Josephine Marsh of Marshalltown, Ia. Mr. Snow died July 16, 1870, and a few years later she married Israel Bowcomb of Manchester, Ia., who died 9 years ago. Since the death of her son Oscar Snow six years ago, she has made her home with her daughter. In early youth she united with the Baptists but in later years united with the Methodist church at Manchester, Ia. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer at the family home at Manchester after which we laid her away to await the call of him who said, "I am the resurrection and the life." Deceased was the grandmother of Mrs. Eldred Marsh, of Marshalltown, Iowa.

O. J. ALLAND.

[illegible] N. Aldrich was born in Sullivan Co. New York, April 12, 1821. With his parents he moved to Erie Co., Ohio, when seven years of age. Was married Oct. 31, 1843, to Jeannette K. Mills. Eleven children were born to this union, 8 of whom survive him. In 1868 the family moved to Tama Co., Iowa, on a farm 3 miles east of Gladbrook. In July, 1885, his wife was stricken by the grim reaper. In 1892 with his daughter Mrs. L. J. Wilson and family, he moved to Gladbrook, where he resided at the time of his death, which occurred Feb. 19, 1907. He was a man of exceedingly generous nature, a loving parent and a kind neighbor. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer to a large concourse of neighbors and friends at the Gladbrook church setting forth the hope of the resurrection as recorded by the apostle Paul in 1 Thes. iv. 13. Interment at the family burying ground 2 miles east of Gladbrook. Deceased was the father of our beloved Sister L. J. Wilson.

O. J. ALLAND.

On the evening of Sunday, Jan. 27, at the home of his niece, Mrs. Louisa Bradley, occurred the death of Jacob J. Durr. Deceased had made his home with Mrs. Bradley and family since Aug. 1905. His illness was brief and resulted from an attack of pneumonia complicated with heart disease.

Mr. Durr was born in Wittenburg, Germany, Aug. 31, 1821. Came to America with his parents in 1830. He was a devoted Christian from early childhood but had never heard the Gospel of the Kingdom until he came to make his home with Mrs. Bradley, and after hearing the gospel and plan of salvation, he said, "I believe, and I want to be baptized." So we lost no time but sent for Brother Wilson, and on the 12th of August, 1906, he was buried with Christ in baptism, at the age of 85 years. O how our hearts rejoice to know that he is asleep in Jesus, and when our blessed Lord appears he will hear his voice and come forth clothed with immortality. Those left to mourn are an aged sister, Mrs. Mary Jaeger and the members of the family. We should have liked very much to have had Brother Wilson to conduct the funeral services, but on account of his being away from home, it would be impossible to reach him in time. The funeral services were conducted at the home on Tuesday afternoon, by W. D. Wells, a Baptist minister. He was laid to rest in the Eureka cemetery, to await the resurrection morn.

LOUISA BRADLEY.

Early Friday morning, Feb. 15, our dearly beloved Sister Mary A. Vermillion, fell on sleep. She was buried in Bath Branch Cemetery, and now she awaits the trumpet call that shall sound at the coming and appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, to awaken those who shall be accounted worthy to be part of the Lamb's wife, and to enter with her Lord in to his kingdom and glory.

Sister Mary was a consistent Christian, always ready to give a reason for the hope within her. She was a staunch friend, and those who knew her best loved her most. Her life was so consistent, loving, kind and true, that we not only loved her, but more than respected her.

Sister Mary A. Seaver was born in Cumberland County Pennsylvania 76 years ago, and at the age of 25 years moved with her parents to Ft. Scott, Kansas in Nov. 1857. On June 10, 1880 was married to E. R. Vermillion. To this union there were no children to bless their home. Her husband died 13 years ago, and Mary lived all alone on her farm east of the city where she discharged all the duties pertaining to the farm.

All her brothers were at her bedside when she died except James, who resides in California. She leaves six brothers and two sisters to mourn her death. The funeral was preached by Mr. Newlin, of the Church of God.

W. A. SEAVER.

Dear Brother Seaver:

Your letter received giving the sad news about our dear Sister Mary A. Vermillion. She is not dead, but sleepeth. Mary passed through the rebellion of the south against the north. Surely that was a great trial. They did not know what moment they would be attacked by the bushwhackers. She again had to pass another trial of persecution when with her husband and Sister Chapman she was baptized by the writer into the name of Jesus Christ. Then the trial of persecution began which no one knows excepting those who have lived a frontier life.

But her trials are over. She could say with Paul, I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith, I have finished my course. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also who love his appearing.

In conclusion I will say to her sisters and brothers, if you want to see Mary in the kingdom of God you must become an heir of God, a joint heir with Jesus Christ. Read Romans viii. 17; Gal. iii. and as soon as you get ready to obey the gospel, write to me and I will come and assist you to put on Christ.

Now brethren and sisters, let us so live that whether we wake or sleep when Jesus comes, that we may meet him with joy and not grief. One more reader of THE RESTITUTION laid to rest, sweetly sleeping in the embrace of our Savior who will watch over his chosen ones.

JOHN FOOTE.

In Troublous Times.

When the angel Gabriel foretold to Daniel the restoration of Jerusalem, he said: "The streets shall be built again, and the walls, even in troublous times."

Days of peace and prosperity are favorable to the accomplishment of important enterprises; but it is not always safe to wait for prosperous and peaceful days. Though times are troublous, yet the necessity is urgent; the work cannot be postponed, and so the walls must be built, "even in troublous times."

Ezra, Nehemiah, and the other Israelites, found this to be the case. They could not delay the work. To wait for peace might be like waiting for the river to run by. They needed walls, and must have them, and they must be built, and so in spite of Sanballat, Tobiah, and Gashmu, and all the opposing throng, they built the walls. The times were troublous, and they were prepared for trouble. They girded on their swords and grasped their trowels, and they were prepared any instant to hear the trumpet of alarm, and, obeying the signal, make haste to repel their foes. They were building against their own houses. Enemies were numerous and homes needed protection, and every man would naturally see to it that the wall was strong over against his own houses, so that no breach could be made there. So the walls went up in troublous times, and when they were completed they helped to bring the peace the people had longed for.

In security and safety are the elements of quiet and rest. We must not be deterred by troublous times from doing the work which needs to be accomplished. The walls must be built. Duties must be done. And if there are dangers and troubles there is so much the more need for active, earnest effort to accomplish the needed work without delay.—Christian.

WHEN you buy a money order see that it is made out for the amount you wish to send—that it is in favor of "THE RESTITUTION," and that the right State is named. When an order is drawn on Plymouth, Pa. or Ill. we cannot cash it, but have to send it back. Be careful and see that your post master gets it "Indiana." Don't send a lot of stamps; they get stuck together, and we cannot use them. Sometimes a person buys stamps and then has the letter registered. An order is cheaper and safer, but if you cannot get an order and must register, then put the money in, and it will be as safe as the stamps could possibly be.

The Bereans Column.

Dear Bereans:

"The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." In the beginning God created Adam "and as in Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive." We are looking for that day when Christ shall come and the dead in Christ shall rise to everlasting life, and those of us that remain shall be caught up to meet him in the air. So shall we ever be with the Lord. To attain that end we must ever be watchful that we enter not into temptation; but we have an advocate in the Lord and if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us.

RUTH ANDERSEN.

Dear Bereans:

In John xviii. 30, Pilate said to Jesus, "What is Truth?" The Savior said in addressing the Father, "Thy Word is Truth." Then, if the Father's Word is truth we shall see God on the resurrection morning, not when we die, shall we see God, but on the last day when the trumpet shall sound and the dead in Christ shall be raised incorruptible.

Job expects to see his Redeemer upon the earth at the last day. Job xix. 25, 26. "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." This is certainly one good proof that we do not go to heaven when we die.

"If ye continue in my Word, then are ye my disciples indeed, and you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." John viii. 31-32.

So Bereans let us study the Word, so our faith may be known by our works.

LILY LINDSAY.

Dear Bereans:

I think the words found in Eccl. xi. 9, mean that we are to accept the Lord and take pleasure in doing his will. We cannot all be great, but our lives can be filled with love. The Good Samaritan was the Master's ideal of the working of love in the human experience. Continually men close beside us are needing sympathy and love which we have in our power to give, but which we do not give, letting them pass on unhelped. Take, for instance a Christian young man in the factory. I think he has a good opportunity to prove himself a Christian, because there are not many in those places who are Christians. If a young man cannot talk much he can preach by his actions. Young men need help in the factories. I think the shop meetings are excellent plans that are being held in some places. We should distribute some of our good tracts, and wherever a young man that is timid is found we should go to him and tell him something of Christ's love. It may be discouraging at times, but we may by our patience and continuance in prayer succeed in helping some man to be Christ-like. These are some of the things we should find pleasure in. Let us lay up knowledge. Prov. x. 14, and always take heed to the Word of God, for the time is near at hand, I think, for the Savior's return.

"Life were not worth the living,
If no one were the better
For having met thee on the way,
And known the sunshine of thy stay.
Give as thy deed is giving;
To no one be a debtor!
So hearts shall faster beat for thee,
And faces burn thy light to see."

CHAS. ANDERSON.

Dear Bereans:

A greeting of love to all. If in this life we had more of the pure love, or the love of God, how different a clime this old earth would be. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart," is a divine command. Shall we obey it? We have no time to waste. All the elements of evil seek our destruction. We should contend earnestly for the faith. Contend for it out of gratitude to God for our own deliverance from the errors that surround us; contend for it out of love for those whose minds are darkened by false doctrine and teaching of men. Thus we are bound by the strongest obligations of love to God and to our fellowmen. By this we know that we love the children of God. When we love God and keep his commandments and his commandments are not grievous.

Thanking all Bereans who have remembered us by letter and the sending of literature, I beg to remain,

Yours, in Christian love.

MRS. MITTIE CHANDLER.

Poetry.

If Christ Should Come Today.

If Christ should come today!
If we could find Him on the broad highway
Or city street;
O, would we crowd to touch His garments' hem
Or kiss His feet?

If He should come today!
If the All-Searching One should find us out,
And call our name;
Would we utter forward toward the nail-stretched hand,
Or sad, in shame?

If He should come today!
The Prince of Peace sandal the clang of war
And battle beat;
O, would we haste to lay our weapons down
Before His feet?

If He should come today!
Above all honors and the paltry things
That men call great,
In the enshrined, and have we kept our faith
Inviolate?

O, poor and weak and blind!
Living for self, we make our petty plans,
Map out each year;
Forgetting in an hour we know not of
The next appear.

Our Christ, pitying Christ!
Coming to the weary soul,
Sick of sin;
Whose Thy words of love until his heart
Shall take Thee in.

Then come at noon or eve!
Whether in manhood, youth or feeble age,
Thy visit fell,
To him who loves Thee all is well, since Christ
Is all in all.

Random Thoughts. No. 23.

Dear Restitution:

I have not got through yet with Random Thoughts, but sickness and other things have prevented my writing for some time, nor do I yet feel much like writing. But in RESTITUTION for Feb. 6, in question box, I notice some queries and answers, which interested me, and suggested to me other thoughts in addition to the thoughts there given. I have no wish to criticise what is there given, but would like to express some different thoughts. The querist asks, "Is the Holy Spirit an intercessor? If not, what does Paul mean in Rom. viii. 26, 27?" Then follows Bro. Huggins' answer. As I said, I do not wish to criticise what is said, but to express a few thoughts of my own. The querist takes it that the Spirit mentioned in Rom. viii. 26, 27, is the "Holy Spirit" or Holy Ghost as many say, but Bro. Huggins understands it to refer to our Lord Jesus, as "the Lord the Spirit." Now for myself I do not think it refers to either, but that the spirit referred to is our own spirit or the spirit of the saint. But I will not say I know or I believe it, but only that it is my opinion. I think so. There is room for difference of opinion on many things, especially on spirit. Even our Bible, common version, frequently puts a capital H. S. or G. for holy spirit or ghost, when it should not be a capital but a small letter. Thus leading the reader to think the Holy Spirit is referred to, when it should be simply holy spirit, and the spirit of the Christian should always be a holy spirit.

Thes. ii. 13 reads, "But we are bound to give thanks always to God for you, brethren beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning (when Paul first preached to them) chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the spirit and belief of the truth, whereunto he called you by our gospel," etc. Now this is generally understood to mean that the Holy Spirit sanctified them, but I do not so understand it. It was the spirit that was sanctified and that believed the truth, the saints having heard Paul preach the gospel, believed it and yielded obedience to it, thus setting themselves apart, their spirits, hearts, minds, or as Paul puts it in Rom. vi. 17, But God be thanked that though you were servants of sin, yon have obeyed from the heart (mind, spirit, etc.) that form of doctrine which was delivered you, being then (not before nor after but then) at that particular time being made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness." It was not the Holy Ghost that was sanctified—that is set apart and that believed the truth, but the heretofore sinners, who at that very time and place became saints or holy ones. 1 Pet. i. 2 teaches the same things. Says Peter to these saints "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God, the Father (so God beforehand had determined just how he intended to save men namely) through (not to) the sanctification of spirit (their spirits not God's) unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ."

Now certainly the Holy Ghost (Spirit) was not sanctified, or set apart to obedience, nor did it need any sprinkling of the blood of Christ; but sinners in order to become saints, must first hear the gospel and believe it, then obey it, which they must do from the heart—the whole heart, mind or spirit, they thus became God's chosen ones. Now God did not choose them in order that they may become his elect, but they became his elect through, by or on account of them having been obedient, or having been sanctified or set apart in obeying the truth from the heart or spirit. God will only accept such as his elect or chosen. True many are called, invited, but those only are elected or chosen who accept the call or invitation by obeying the truth. This he must do in his heart, heartily in his spirit, mind, wholly.

Another passage is often misquoted thus (Eph. vi. 18), Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the holy ghost, etc.; but the passage does not read that way, but praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints, and for me, etc. Now the spirit referred to is the spirit of the saints. They could not always be praying in the meeting house or closet even, but in their spirit they could pray anywhere at any time. And they must always pray in the spirit or heart anyway, but they can only pray in the spirit or heart sometimes. And when they pray for blessings, they should be watching thereunto, expecting to receive what they prayed for, or that God would open to them the way they should go.

I now turn to Rom. viii. 26, 27. The Diaglott reads, "And in like manner also the spirit assists our weakness, for we do not know what we should pray for as we ought; but the spirit itself intercedes with unspoken groans. And he who searches the hearts knows what is the mind of the spirit, because according to God it intercedes on behalf of saints. Now what spirit is it that intercedes for the saints with unspoken groans? Many think it is the Holy Spirit of God, others that it is our Lord Jesus, as the Lord the Spirit. But in my opinion it is the spirit of the saint or child of God. True there is one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who will be the Mediator of the New Covenant with the house of Israel and Judah after he comes, and he is also an Intercessor for his saints or disciples, as per, Jon. xvii. where he intercedes not only for his apostles, but also for those who would believe on, or into him through their word. And all the disciples may be intercessors as we see, 1 Tim. ii. 1, I exhort, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions and giving of thanks be made for all men, for kings, and for all that are in authority, that we may lead a quiet peaceable life in all godliness and honesty, for this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior. Also especially for Paul, Rom. xv. 30 32. Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the spirit, that you strive together with me in your prayers to God for me that I may be delivered from them that do not believe (are disobedient) in Judea, etc. Paul wished them to join in their prayers, pleadings, intercessions, etc., with him. 2 Cor. i. 11, And their prayer, etc., must be always in or with a holy spirit, their heart, yes a pure heart must be in it, or God will not hear them. But sometimes, especially in cases of severe afflictions or terrible calamities, the distressed one does not know what to pray for or how to express himself or herself, but can only sigh, or moan, or cry and groan, and here the spirit itself without the bodily organs, only the spirit maketh intercession with groaning that cannot be uttered by the tongue or mouth, just the spirit itself helps or assists our infirmities or inabilities, and he (God) that searches the heart, knows what is the mind of the spirit that (mar.) maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God. Even Jesus, our Lord, when he saw the dear ones weeping he groaned in the spirit and wept with them, etc. How often is it in those dreadful calamities where our dear ones are killed or mangled that we do not know what to pray for, or what to say to the suffering or friends. We can only join in weeping with them and often in their groaning and crying, and moaning and sighing.

Much more may be said, but I think I need say no more, but my readers will see, that in my opinion, the spirit mentioned in Rom. viii. 26, 27 (and in some other places) is not what people in general suppose the Holy Ghost, but the spirit of the saint. More anon, if I am able, but I have entered my 80th year.

Catechism on Death and the Resurrection.

Job was sorely afflicted, so he prayed, "O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave; that thou wouldest keep me secret until thy wrath be past." Job xiv. 13. Why did Job think that the grave would relieve him from his troubles? "There the wicked cease from troubling, and there the weary be at rest." Job iii. 17. "So man lieth down and riseth not: till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep." "His sons cometh to honor and he knoweth it not; they are brought low and he perceiveth it not of them." Job xiv. 12, 21. "For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything." Eccl. ix. 5. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to the earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. cxlvi. 4.

Did Job expect to remain forever in a state of oblivion? O no, for he says, "That thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and remember me! If a man die shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come. Thou shalt call and I will answer thee." Job xiv. 13, 14.

Did Job expect that God would call him into existence again at his appointed set time? He did. Jesus says, "The hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." John v. 28, 29.

Did the prophets teach that there will be a general resurrection of the dead? Yes, all of a certain class, both of the just and of the unjust; but it is not clearly understood just what people will constitute that class, but it is very certain that all who have been called, or begotten of the Spirit, will be included, some to a resurrection of life, and some to a resurrection of damnation.

David says, "Man that is in honor, and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish." Psa. xlix. 20. "He shall go to the generation of his fathers; they shall never see light. But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave; for he shall receive me." Psa. xlix. 15.

Isaiah says, in regard to other lords who had dominion over them, "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise: therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish."

Isaiah xxvi. 14, 19, but he says, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead."

Daniel says, "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Dan. xii. 2.

Ezekiel says, "Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel." Ezek. xxxvii. 12. Is this "land of Israel" the land that God promised to give to Abraham and his seed for an everlasting possession, and that the Israelites or house of Jacob got possession of when Moses led them through the wilderness out of the land of Egypt, and where David had his throne over which Christ is to rule as King? Is it the same land. The angel Gabriel said to Mary, "Thou shalt bring forth a son, and shall call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 31-33.

Will Christ's kingdom be a literal kingdom, and those who inherit it live as they do now? It will be a reality just as now, but before we can inherit it, Jesus says, "Ye must be born again." "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John iii. 3, 5. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." Jno. iii. 6. "Christ was the first born from the dead," therefore the first born of the Spirit. Col. i. 18. Why the first born of the Spirit? Because, "It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body," (1 Cor. xv. 44); therefore the birth from the dead must be the spiritual birth.

Does not the Bible say that God has already given eternal life to them who are Christ's? Yes, he has given them eternal life in the person of Christ, for John says, "He that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son." And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." 1 John v. 10, 11.

If he that hath the Son hath life, is he not then in present possession of it? No. Christ is the life, and as a guardian, he holds it in trust to give to the faithful at "that day," or the day of his coming.

You will see that in all these quotations, life, eternal life, everlasting life, crown of life, crown of righteousness, and crown of glory, all mean the same thing.

Christ says, "I am the resurrection and the life." John xi. 25.

Paul says, "For ye are dead (to sin), and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 3, 4.

"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. iv. 8.

Christ says, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10.

Will he give the crown of life at death? No, it will be at his coming, for Paul says, "As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive, but every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." 1 Cor. xv. 22.

"And they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Matt. xxiv. 30.

"For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then shall he reward every man according to his works." Matt. xvi. 27

What great power will the Son of Man have, and what will be the reward of the righteous? Jesus said in his prayer, in regard to himself, "As thou hast given him power to give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him." John xvii. 2.

"Ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging (ruling) the twelve tribes of Israel." Matt. xix. 28.

"Know ye not that the saints shall judge (rule) the world?" 1 Cor. vi. 2.

"He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth." Psa. lxxii. 8.

"And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Dan. vii. 22, 27.

2 Cor v. 8.

In the question box in THE RESTITUTION of Feb. 27th, Bro. Huggins gives an exposition of the above Scripture. I would suggest the following explanation of the first four verses which I think to be the key to the problem. In verse number 1 the apostle is contrasting two things—our earthly house and our house from heaven. To understand this verse is to be able to solve the four verses and verse 8 of this chapter. Mcknight in his translation gives us this. "For we know if (or that) our earthly house which is a tent is dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

It is very evident from verse 2 that this earthly house of ours cannot mean our human or animal body. The apostle says, "In this (earthly house) we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house from heaven." The pronoun we does not stand for a part of the man but the whole man. In verse 4 he says, "We that are in this tabernacle (house or tent) do groan, being burdened." Again the pronoun must stand for the whole man and not a part of him. We groan, desiring a deliverance from our surroundings.

In verse 4, Paul reaches the climax when he desires that mortality might be swallowed up of life. This can only take place in the resurrection. We therefore conclude that this earthly house of ours does not mean our human body. For we cannot groan in ourselves. When we take this position we place ourselves in a very dangerous position toward those who believe in the immortality of the soul. This earthly house which is a tent means the unsubstantial things around us. It means this cosmos or political arrangements, these human governments and the curse that now rests upon the earth. In this we groan desiring deliverance. And can only hope for it when mortality is swallowed up in life. When this cosmos has passed away or is destroyed we have an house not made with hands. One that God will build. Abraham looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. Heb. xi 10. Abraham hoped for this kingdom of God. In Heb. iii. Paul calls attention to the fact that Moses was faithful over his house as a servant and Christ as a Son over his own house; whose house are we (the ecclesia) if we hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of the hope unto the end. This house of Christ over which he was faithful as a son, to our mind means the church of which he is the head. This is no part of our earthly house, and is the body spoken of in verses 6 and 8 of the above named chapter (2 Cor. v.) We are at home in the body (ecclesia) of Christ and are absent from the Lord. Our desire is that we may be absent from this body and to be present with the Lord. In this ecclesia we are mortal but when Christ who is our life shall appear we shall appear with him, and have our glorified bodies.

The hope that Paul expresses in these verses is that Christ may appear and change our vile bodies and make them immortal. In this political arrangement we (God's people) do groan and are burdened, desiring a deliverance from mortality and to become the possessor of that house from heaven, which is the kingdom of God.

These lines are submitted not with a view to criticise, but to present what we consider to be the truth on this subject. We have enjoyed Bro. Huggins in THE RESTITUTION.

Pacific Coast Evangelizing.

I wish to again call the attention of all that are interested in the proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom on this coast, to the fact, that last June the Northwestern Conference added California and Arizona to the Conference work; and that the Conference field reaches from the British possessions on the north, to Mexico on the south and stretches back from the coast into Arizona. "Too big an undertaking for one man." Of course it is! but "The harvest is great, and the laborers are few." A few believers are scattered through California and Arizona. The design is to make such brethren nucleus, around which others may be gathered; with the hope that laborers may be added, as the interest increases.

I am now at Wolf, Cal., where nearly a year ago a lone Bro. and Sister Cook called me. A few names were added. They are becoming established by this visit, and the meetings we are holding. "My Word shall not return unto me void," will be verified when the gospel is told in its purity. The anxiety of the messenger is always, that it may prove not the savor of "death unto death, but life unto life."

I have done what I could in Washington and Oregon, and wish to be kept busy during the remainder of the Conference year in this State and Arizona. I will depend on the brethren to inform me, where new fields may be opened, or old ones canvassed. I need not tell the brethren that traveling expenses, and local expenses must be considered. I am poor, and although it is a task to call attention to the expense of gospel work, I feel that means for prosecuting this work will be furnished without any begging. It is much harder work for an evangelist to wait for the work to be arranged, and published, than to be constantly engaged in it.

My plan is to go on to Pomona, and canvass localities as I return to Oregon. Localities on or near the S. P. R. R. can be taken into the work without much additional railroad expense. The railways share the expense with you, by allowing half rates during the year. Meetings are offered to different localities, without placing a heavy burden on the brethren. I will gladly respond. Address me in care of W. O. Stella, Pomona, Cal., at present.

I closed my meetings at Wolf Sunday night, March 3. I parted with my congregation with regret—made more intense, because I felt that some were persuaded that they ought to obey that were rejecting the call. Warm expressions of interest were expressed after the meetings had closed. I gave twelve talks. The weather is unfavorable to meetings. But after consulting with Bro. Cook, we have decided to wait till the weather clears up, and resume the work at this place. This will postpone my trip south for a period of time. Friends and brethren at this place have been very liberal with their donation, considering their ability and means.

QUESTION BOX.

(Interested readers of the RESTITUTION who desire to have Scriptural questions answered in this department, should address Hubert G. Huggins Box G, Oregon, Ill. No anonymous communications will be noticed.)

CHATS WITH CORRESPONDENTS.

Lizzie M. Johnston.—For an explanation of your question see THE RESTITUTION of Feb. 27, 1907.

G. W. Smith.—I am always delighted to hear from veterans in the truth. The brethren will no doubt be glad to have your views on the subject you speak of. Your question will be answered, but there are so many inquiries ahead of yours, you will have to wait patiently.

John Sanford.—The address of Bro. John L. Wince is Pierceton, Ind. He is, I think, a good writer. Perhaps he can give you a helping hand. Your question is a good one, is placed on file, and will be answered.

Mrs. M. Satterfield.—The original word for replenish is male. It occurs in Gen. i. 28; ix. 1; Isa. xxiii. 2; Jer. xxxi. 25; Isa. ii. 6; Ezek. xxvi. 2; xxvii. 25. Lexicons define the word male. translated "replenish" in the above texts, "to fill, be full, make full." They never define the word to mean "fill again." The two letters "re," do not repeat unless used as an affix. For an explanation of your question see an article in THE RESTITUTION, Jan. 2, 1907, entitled, "Did Angels Marry?"

C. W. Willey. Your letter, dear brother, was full of helpful suggestions. Blighting criticisms are injurious; brotherly advice helpful. My duties prevent me from corresponding with anyone, much to my regret, I assure you.

Several.—We have received answers to C. B. W's question from the following brethren and sisters: E. R. Hawley; A. A. Johnston; H. Juergensen; A. C. Stephens; C. W. Willey, Minerva Gibbs; C. W. Tompkins, and Lucy W. Horner. All these contributions have been sent to Brother Underwood, and all of them will appear in THE RESTITUTION, if space will admit. The best ones will be printed at least. I thank you, dear ones, for your interest in this practical question. If others intend to write let them get their answers to me not later than March the 20th.

R. L. Zug.—Many others are very anxious to know what the "Question Box" has in store for its readers. It seems some get in a hurry and can hardly wait for their questions to be answered. For the satisfaction of such I will say that the following subjects will be discussed in the Question Box, and in about the order named: "On the other side of the flood," "Tithing," "Not able to kill the soul," "An apparent contradiction harmonized," "Christ's brethren," "Forgiveness," "Feet washing," "The closed door," Two kind of sins," "The way of holiness" and "Woman's position in the church."

G. N.—After the reply to Brother Woodward is printed, entitled "An apparent Contradiction Harmonised," I will not again notice strictures on my writings unless sent to me. If I err I am the one to tell (Matt. xviii.) and then it becomes my duty to rectify the mistake.

God bless you, dear brother, and make you useful.

ROBT G. HUGGINS.

Show me a man who has absolute control over himself, and I will show you a powerful man. The most powerful man in this life is he who has himself under control. Every man is "in a sense a 'tamer of wild beasts, and these are the passions.' The question is ,not how shall be imprison them, but how shall he effect their expulsion. When this is accomplished, he then has indeed achieved one of the grandest of victories. What does Christ say in regard to this? 'He that ruleth himself is greater than he that taketh a city.'"

Communicated.

Bro. Huggins:

Your question in THE RESTITUTION of Feb. 13, 1907, has very forcibly impressed me to reply with an answer, based both on my actual experience and what I found out to be Biblical also. One day in the year 1896, I was reading the words of our Master, when my mind was especially attracted to the words found in 33rd verse of the 6th chapter of Matthew, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

Seeing at once the importance of the first step or thing to do was to find out or seek out what was meant by the "kingdom of God" and his righteousness," which was of more importance than "food and raiment," as they came in as a secondary matter.

Now being so enthused over the above, I felt it was best to affiliate myself with some church, so I could have the assistance of a minister or teacher who I supposed at that time were the only ones I could get any spiritual advice from, so I was taken in on probation for six months, and during this period of time I was reading the gospel of the kingdom of God that Jesus preached. Mark i. 14, 15. And had become thoroughly persuaded in my own mind that the kingdom was yet future, etc. Then I was taken in as a full member of the First Methodist Episcopal church of this city. So as a full member I felt as though I could be more at home and ask more questions. So as the beauties of the coming kingdom and the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets," Acts iii. 19, were coming before me I questioned the minister as to why he did not teach his congregation these truths so as to inspire them with a future hope. I noticed he became very agitated at times, and finally he advised me that with the light I had and views I maintained I could live better out of the church, or home than I could in it. Now I cannot explain my feeling at this advisement, but I and wife with three children withdrew with a question of what shall we do? Then remembering that the word was a light to the wayfarer's path we opened it to read, and found that while we had been put out, as advised us to "Come out." 2 Cor. vi. 14-18, was what we read, and in following the references from this, we found 1 Cor. v. 9; Eph. v. 10 12; Rom. i. 21-25; 2 Thes. iii. 13-15; Rom. xvi. 17-18; 2 Thes. iii. 6. So in obedience to these instructions we have been cast out as evil by the orthodox or so-called Christian world. When asked by different societies in late years to join them and telling them our reasons for not doing so. As we did not want to be unequally yoked or joined together with unbelievers, as they did not believe in the coming kingdom, the resurrection of the dead, nor the restitution of all things which God hath spoken, and many other like truths which they deemed as false and spurious. So I don't see how any one could make a home in any company who ignore the simple gospel of the coming kingdom, which Jesus preached and instructed his disciples to teach, commencing at Jerusalem, and to be carried to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Your brother in hope.

E. R. HAWLEY.

Brother Huggins:

In THE RESTITUTION of Feb. 13, 1907, I notice you make a request that the readers of THE RESTITUTION answer this question: Is it right for believers of the truth to identify themselves with an orthodox church for the sake of having a "church home"?

My answer to this question is, No, it is not right or best for one holding the truth, and striving to be obedient to it by yielding up his will to the will of God. Such an one would find any of the sectarian denominations a very inharmonious and unpleasant place for a home. It could hardly be otherwise than a hindrance to growth in the knowledge of the truth. Besides he would be standing in a false position before the world, posing as a believer in the truth, and at least a passive advocate of doctrines which he must regard as utterly false.

I know whereof I speak in this matter. I made my home for fifteen years with a denomination which held to doctrines which to me were entirely foreign to the truth as taught in God's Word. The congregation with which I associated, and where my name was enrolled, knew where I stood, for I thoroughly explained wherein I differed from them when I offered myself for a home with them. They accepted me notwithstanding my belief was adverse to theirs. So to them I did not stand in a false position; but to others who did not know the conditions, when we would be conversing on Bible teachings, would tell me I was not what I professed to be by the associations with which I was identified. So I withdrew that I should no longer hold a false position. And also I saw it was God's expressed will that all who have learned and accepted the truth and consecrated themselves to his will, must come out of Babylon. He says, "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Rev. xviii. 4. If we believe, as do nearly all, even of sectarian denominations, that this city Babylon, the great harlot, is the great apostate church, the Catholic church, then her daughters would be the churches of Christendom. Can we find anything anywhere that fits the description, daughters, but the sectarian organizations? The harlot, this vile woman—sat on the scarlet colored beast, having seven heads and ten horns. And in her hand a cup of gold filled with abominations and filthiness of her fornication. Rev. xvii. 3. The cup of gold indicates that the cup was all right—could not be faulty—for gold is the material that in Bible symbols is always used to represent purity, perfection. In this text I believe it represents the Word of God. The filthiness with which she had filled it, must have been the false doctrines, the God-dishonoring theories, she taught and handed to the people. This same filthiness to a large extent is handed out by the orthodox churches, her daughters.

"Come out of her, my people." Why? "That ye be not partakers of her sins." If we remain in her we will in an indirect manner advocate her errors, and teach others who are weak to become partakers of her filthy errors, even though we may not believe them ourselves. Paul says (1 Cor. viii.) if eating meat caused his brother offence or made him weak, he would eat no meat. If we who understand the truth join one of the sects to have a home, to us it would be sin. I do not say it would be a sin to attend their meetings sometimes, but this only when there is no meeting of believers to attend at the time. Let us present the truth in the spirit of love; never use harsh epithets when showing errors. Let us show the contrast between truth and error in a mild and loving spirit, else we may prejudice the mind we wish to enlighten.

C. W. WILLEY.

Brother Huggins:

With the spirit of love for all who may read these lines, I will send you my reasons why I do not believe it is right for believers of the truth to identify themselves with an orthodox church for the sake of having a church home. I do not write this for the sake of the prize which you have offered, but to exchange ideas on this important question which I presume you will have printed in THE RESTITUTION. In the first place having been identified with the Methodist church, for a number of years as a teacher in Sunday school and class leader, and after hearing what I now believe is the truth according to the Scriptures of course my former beliefs and teachings were in error and after exchanging error for truth, there is not any one or anything that could induce me to again teach error for truth. It would be exchanging God's sunlight for the darkness of sheol. Yea, it would be more than that, it would be exchanging the truth concerning God's only begotten Son, the King of all the earth, for the harlot daughters of Rome or the scarlet colored beast. For me to now identify myself with an orthodox church or people, it would not be right for the Church of God to teach the devil's lie for truth, it would not be right to exchange the Bread of life for the swine's husks. It is not right for a believer of truth, if he is isolated to identify him or herself with the orthodox church for the sake of a home, because you are or ought to be a peculiar people, called out ones, for a special work. It is right to enter the stronghold of Satan or an orthodox church and let your light shine by proclaiming the truths when you have a chance, in whatever means you have, by scattering tracts of truth. One can go in and out, and even teach if called on among people of other denominations, without joining or identifying themselves with them, but always preach the Word, it may be the cause of your persecution. I would rather die a martyr, if need be, than to knowingly proclaim error for truth. When I denounced Methodistism and all other isms for truth I could no longer hold the pitcher of water for the orthodox minister in sidling him in the sprinkling of babes, that would be assenting to error. I cannot sing the Satanic songs that are sung in popular churches of today. If you have the truth that was once delivered to the saints, speak and sing with an understanding, for you cannot identify truth with error. I have no church home here at present. I remember we are pilgrims and strangers here, we seek a city to come, for the Son of Man had no where to lay his head, yet he is heir to the throne. It is all very good to have a church home here in this age, and the assemblings of ourselves together is a heavenly calling, as we see the day approaching, it is a grand thing, but if you are an enlightened one as I am, you cannot afford to swallow the Satanic lie for truth by identifying yourself with some orthodox church. I have been shunned and spoken evil of and even been denied the right to speak, for I never would for one moment tolerate error. There are many other reasons which I could give for not identifying myself with other churches for the sake of a home.

BROTHER D. C. ROBISON has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelope and can be had for 2 cents each, 5 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 590 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

The Gift of Eternal Life.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner, how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent to either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both our old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can leave some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magnaline, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

IMPORTANT.

All persons subscribing for should give their name, post office, and state, plainly and distinctly. We know a great many names and addresses, but we may not remember yours.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Indiana."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, post office money order, or express order, NOT by personal checks. Money sent to either of these ways is safe, and without risk of loss. [illegible] at the risk of the sender. Money [illegible] is usually detained and at the leisure of a dishonest clerk always. Money sent in a registered letter is not guaranteed by the government.

Always examine your money order and see that it is drawn in the name of "The Restitution," and that it is payable at "Plymouth, Ind." Look and see that the most matter has written but not Ill. or Pa. or Ohio.

When you wish your address changed give both old and new address.

In sending renewals always give the exact name in which it has previously been sent, and state if you wish the name exchanged and as well gladly do so. The reason why this is urged is because it is readily seen. For instance, if [illegible] is sent by Mrs. S. Jane Williams, and her husband C. Sage, gets a money order to renew his own name and send it, saying he wanted the paper one year. We have no reason to suppose that Sarah is his wife—he did not give the name under his name and send him the paper, consequently a mix-up is apt to and when we receive her about it both become troubled. So stupid as we are, we know Sarah and George are husband and wife.

Set the last issue on the paper when ordering books, and it acts, and order from that. If a work is advertised as supplied only by the author, send to him—please not to us.

SPECIAL TO AUTHORS.

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

An author frequently spends considerable of time and labor on an important subject and when it is ready puts up an envelope that has to be strained to hold it, addresses it, puts on a single stamp and drops it in the box. He has labored hard to produce his finished work, then neglected three important points—he did not enclose it in sufficient wrapper, he failed to fully pay the postage, and neglected to put on his return address. A bird in the wire is enough.

Poetry.

Paradise.

Is it a dream, to be dispelled at last,
That when the time of waiting here is past,
And all the errands of the flesh are spent,
The Lord returning to us His regretted saint?
O, dream delicious! O, illusion grand!
That pictures visions of the Heavenly Land,
And wafts the fragrance of its fields of lilies
Across the deserts of a world like this!
Be still, oh soul, that gives to mortal eyes
A passing glimpse of its resplendent skies,
And rolls away the clouds that rule the night
Hearing on hope that all will soon be light!
Tramp o'er the desert, that lifts the sore-shorn
To worshipers regions of eternal love;
O, dream divine! Upon all the cares of God;
By thee allured, I seek His grand abode!
But where, O dream, them hast not told me where—
Lies this bright land of rest from toil and care?
Where is the sphere celestial, on whose shores
No thunder tarts, no surging tempest roars?
Where the resplendent firmament, that hears
No sigh or grief, no sound of falling tears?
Where may the pilgrim's drooping eye behold
The crystal river, with its sands of gold;
The living waters, on whose banks of green
The Tree of Life with mellow fruit is seen?
The gates of pearl, the throne of dazzling light
And the immortal words of white?
Where the abode of angels, and the place
Where ransomed men behold their Saviour's face?
Where the vast immensity, unawed
By mortal thought, resides the Immanuel God?
To questions such as these, the answer given
Is clearly this: To be with Christ in heaven.
His presence makes the glory and the home,
And all creation calls unto Him "Come"
For Paradise is in no distant sphere;
The Second Adam makes His Eden here.

God's Love.

"For God so loved the world that he sent his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." John iii 16.

The above passage reveals God's love for man. Unlike man's limited love, it reaches out to, and comprehends the world as the object to be the recipient of the divine love and favor. The statement that "he so loved the world," is the language that includes, within its scope, both the animate and inanimate creation. We find in Rom viii 20, that the creature was made subject to vanity. The apostle Paul here refers to the transgression of God's law by our first parents in the garden where they had been placed. They by violating the divine command given them while in their sinless condition, made themselves subject to vanity. Bringing, [illegible] pain and death, but these direful consequences were inflicted upon all to their posterity, which condition it is needless to say still exists. The word of inspiration teaches very plainly, that the earth also, was a recipient of the divine chastisement inflicted upon the original transgressors. The language used by the Almighty in addressing Adam when he pronounced the penalty upon him, saying, "Cursed be the ground for thy sake, thorns and thistles shall it bring forth to thee," shows very forcibly that the earth was also involved in the divine sentence pronounced upon man in the garden. Thus both the animate and inanimate creation has been defiled and disfigured by sin and its fearful and demoralizing effects, since Adam's fall down to the present time. Hence we can see the necessity of the restoration or the "restitution of all things" under the curse or sentence pronounced upon it back to its original condition of perfection, beauty and purity, before God can again look upon it, and call it good. This is just what God's plan, as revealed in his Word, contemplates. Not the lifting up of "mansions in the skies," as is popularly believed in, but the removing of ignorance, wickedness, sin and its defilements from the earth, wherein [illegible] righteous or redeemed shall dwell. When we ponder upon the magnitude of the work and the energy and power required in the undertaking of such a universal crusade against sin and all manner of wickedness in order to overcome the works of Satan, remove the curse and usher in a righteous government. It is then that we realize that this transforming power must come from a supernatural source. Those belonging to the true faith understand that the restitution of all things is to be wrought or accomplished through Christ, who is called the "beginning of the creation of God." God love for the world was so great that he sent his Son to ransom from its sin-cursed condition. His work of regeneration has already begun in those who are of his Church, namely the Church of God, or those who are called according to his plans and purposes. God's regenerative power during his present epoch, of favor and love is being exhibited through those who shall finally constitute the Christ Body, as a disciplinary, refining and constructive principle, which if followed will ultimately constitute them inheritors of eternal salvation. This transforming power which is being manifested during this age, is inherent in the "gospel of the kingdom." Paul calls it "the gospel of Christ," which "is the power of God unto salvation." Rom i 16. "The power of God unto salvation," will be exercised only in behalf of him, who heartily believes in the gospel of the kingdom, accepts it, repents, and is then baptized into Christ. It is through this process that we are brought into a covenant relationship to God, and by being baptized into the Abrahamic seed we thus become heirs to the things which Christ is an heir too, through the promises made to him. All who are looking forward to the fulfillment of God's promises to Abraham and his seed, realize that until that consummation takes place we are heirs only. That before that event transpires in God's own time and way, the law of regeneration or the law of the Spirit of Life shall have so left its impress and effect upon our minds and characters as to work out a complete change both morally and mentally in our lives, qualifying us for the greater change from the natural to the spiritual at the first resurrection. When we are raised spiritual beings no more to turn to corruption the new creation shall have been wrought out in us, making us perfect and completely equipping us for the reign of Christ which immediately follows. The restitution is accomplished through Christ, who is called The First and The Last, The Alpha and Omega, an appellation referring to the prominent position God has given him in the redemptive work of his plan of salvation, from its inception by a [illegible] the Gospel, until we attain unto a full and perfect union upon the Spiritual plane of his creation.

The Great Commission.

In this "age of doubt" and theological revolution, when the flames of unbelief and destructive investigation are consuming the accumulated dross of centuries; when dogmas and creeds, for ages considered as indestructible as granite are melting like snow under the burning rays of advancing truth; when foundation principles having withstood the ravages of time, are crumbling to dust before the billows of "reason" and "prudence" hurled against them by "Higher Critics" and modern infidels, it is time for the friends of revealed truth and those that "follow after righteousness" to awake, shake off their lethargy and indifference, clothe themselves in the whole armor of God, and grasping the shield of faith and the sword of the Spirit, enter the lists in defense of the throne and standard of their King!

"In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of life,"—

we soon discover that we not only have our recognized foes to meet an [illegible] but traitors and sneaks disguised in "the stolen livery of heaven," skulking within our lines and seeking to give help to Satan's forces by pointing out the weaker places in our defenses. These enemies within our borders are the ones the most to be feared and the ones the most difficult to overcome; for, while they come to us in sheep's apparel, inwardly they are ravening wolves.

Then, there are men and women earnest and conscientious in their convictions, who really love the King and desire to serve him, and number themselves among his most devoted adherents, who, through a mistaken sense of duty, and possible failure to consider the consequences of their acts point to the rest on the sword [illegible] by themselves and their fellow soldiers, and, gloomily shaking their heads declare that because the keen bright blade has become slightly corroded from contact with human hands the weapon is not to be wholly relied upon at all times, and even him [illegible] in the stress of battle it may break.

By these depressing suggestions many a promising young soldier who might otherwise have enlisted and bravely and successfully fought "the battle of the Lord," has turned back discouraged, or still worse, has been driven into the ranks of the enemy!

The blame of it all lies in the fact that the man that caused the greatest trouble is frequently so insignificant that it would pass entirely unnoticed was it not pointed out and magnified by its discoverer, and generally the defect, or alledged defect, is acknowledged even by its discoverers to be so unimportant that it cannot possibly effect the final outcome of the conflict in one way or the other.

At the beginning of the civil war the real issue between the north and the south lay in what was known as "The Question of State's Rights." At the commencement of the struggle the north was a unit in the belief that the doctrine of "State's Rights" was absolutely unconstitutional, and that its supporters must be put down with an iron hand. This unity of opinion, however, did not extend to the question of slavery; for at that time many men, even in the northern army, believed that if the south desired to hold slaves they had every right to do so. Now suppose, that instead of unanimously marching to the front and exerting every effort to overthrow the religion, the northern states had spent half of their time, money and energy in contending among themselves as to the merits or demerits of human slavery, how long would it have been before the stars and stripes again floated peacefully over the sunkissed hills of "Dixie?"

Let us, therefore, not spend our time and substance in "vain jangling" over questions not essential to salvation, [illegible] which is to burn." The world is rapidly nearing the final consummation of human authority in the [illegible] The rumble of the approaching storm of divine wrath already echoes and re-echoes in the distance. The time is at hand. Our duty now is to warn men everywhere to "flee from the wrath to come," to preach "the gospel, the kingdom of God," to try and induce them to come to Christ that they may have life!

Two thousand years ago the Captain of our salvation delivered to his followers the "great commission," [illegible] the only orders they were to observe until he returned to claim his throne. Impressive, indeed, were the circumstances under which this important command was given. A few days had elapsed since his glorious death upon the cross. Three days of silence in the tomb, the season of inexpressible anguish for his disciples, and his glorious and triumphant resurrection from the dead. In compliance with instructions received prior to his crucifixion the faithful eleven assembled on the mountain where Jesus had appointed them.....and Jesus came and spoke unto them saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy [illegible] Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. —Matt. xxviii. 18-20.

Thus was the "Great Commission" given and the gates of the world thrown open for the advancement of Truth and Righteousness, and Love! Ever since the gospel was preached to Abraham (Gal. iii. 8.) had the plan of human redemption been [illegible] to the Gentile nations of the world. But now the joyful message was to be carried on faithful witnesses over the mountains, valleys and plains, and across the rolling billows of the deep to the heathen lands before the end. For this gospel of the kingdom must be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations before the end shall come. Onward! Onward! to the uttermost parts of the earth, until from every clime a ransomed thousand voices breathe the prayer "Thy Kingdom Come!"

The Master said in substance—"Go ye therefore,—you cannot fail,—for power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.....and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

No longer confine your labors to "the lost sheep of the house of Israel," but [illegible] every sorrowing sin-sick heart your words of hope, and love, and life. Tell them of him who gave his life upon the cross for their transgressions. (1 Cor. xv. 3.) Tell them of his resurrection. (1 Cor. xv. 4.) Tell them of his nail pierced hands out stretched to receive. (Matt. xi. 28-30; Rev. iii. 20-21.) Tell them of his soon return to raise the sleeping saints to immortality. (1 Cor. xv. 20-23; 1 Thess. iv. 15-18.) Tell them of his coming kingdom of glory, peace and truth,—the kingdom that shall never pass away. (Isa. ix. 6-7; xi. 1-5; Dan. vii. 13-14; Matt. x. 7.) "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."—He was speaking to the apostles. Whatsoever he had commanded them to observe and teach they were to carry to the world as their message. No authority was given them to add to, omit from, or in any way change in the slightest degree the instructions they had received from him. It was not what Moses had commanded, or what God had commanded through him; nor yet what the prophets had said, or even what Jesus had told some one else to observe; but only the things he had commissioned the apostles to teach, had they the authority to preach to the world. And what had he commanded them? To observe the philosophy and vain reasoning of men? To enter the arena of politics and try to reform the governments of the world? Had he instructed them to seek for "new truth" to darken and obscure the blessed hope? Had he required them to establish his genealogy, and by this means prove to the world his right to the throne of his father David,—a right which his followers have always acknowledged? Had he told them to observe and teach the law as delivered to Moses? No! But he had commissioned them (Mark xvi. 15-16) "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." He had taught them (Matt. x. 7)—"As ye go preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand!" He had told them (John xiii. 3, 4,) "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another: as I have loved you, that ye also love one another."

O that the trumpet might send forth no uncertain sound! That the "heralds of the kingdom" would cling close to the text of the "Great Commission," and "preach the Word"—the blessed Word of the kingdom and coming King; for it is only by faith in "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ," and obedience to that faith that we may be saved.

G. EDGAR MANSH.

Dear Restitution:

On Easter Sunday, April 20, 1908, the Church of God at Guthrie Grove, South Carolina, enjoyed one of the grandest meetings ever held in the south. The Program for the day was as follows:

Song Service at ten o'clock A. M. by the Singing Class, led by Prof. P. A. Guthrie, after which five minutes was given for recreation.

At eleven o'clock we again came together for preaching and for one hour we listened to a noble sermon by Brother John Anderson, his subject being The Resurrection of Christ. After this one hour was given, and everybody was invited to spread dinner together which they did, upon a long table prepared by the brethren for the occasion. The table was laden with almost every good thing necessary for the nourishment of our mortal bodies. The writer has never enjoyed a more beautiful scene than that, when the table was spread, I looked around it and saw there in the circle a goodly number of the true Church of God. It reminded me of the time when our Savior, with us, shall eat and drink together in the kingdom of our Father.

After dinner the congregation was again called together by a song, after which an hour was spent [illegible] Brother S. J. Foster, occasioned by Sister Sarah Durham. This was followed by a very able sermon by her father, Brother Newton Durham and concluded by the Pastor, E. M. Anderson. We then partook of the Lord's Supper and sang a hymn and went out.

The only thing that darkened the enjoyment of myself for the day was the absence of my father and mother who were not permitted to be present on account of the ill health of my mother who has been sick for the past five months. I want every child of God to join with me in prayer to our heavenly Father, who is our only help in time of need, that he may in accordance to his will restore my dear mother to health again. Oh that the time may come when all troubles shall cease and there shall be no more sickness and death for the former things have passed away.

Your Sister, in hope of eternal life,

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, the requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

QUESTIONS.

1 Why could Christ teach original doctrines?
2 Was his originality of himself?
3 Which is the more effective, the law of love or the law of penalty in making true Christians? Why?
4 From whence did Christ get his authority?
5 What condemnation did his authority bring upon him?
6 What use did Christ make of the objective method of teaching? Why?
7 Why did he teach in parables?
8 Define "fulfil" in Matt v 17-18.
9 What great difference between the old and the new law?
10 Was Christ's teaching intended to convert the world in this age?
11 Has his teaching accomplished all that God purposed it should?

Dear Restitution:

We wish to announce that on Sunday afternoon, April 19th, 1908, that those of the faith of faithful Abraham at Antioch, Illinois, were made to rejoice in the fact that Mrs. Cable of Chanan, Illinois, made an open confession of her faith in the promises of God, by putting on Christ by baptism, being "buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God who hath raised him from the dead."

Sister Cable was brought to a knowledge of the truth through the instrumentality of Brother E. J. Huggins, who [illegible] her in putting on the all-saving name of Christ, "for as many of you as have been baptised into Christ have put on Christ."

May the grace and favor of God, and of our Lord Jesus Christ, abide with her in all her trials and temptations is our prayer.

Your Brother, in hope of a resurrection from the dead.

JOS. H. WILLIAMS.

A New Conference.

I am requested by brethren in Missouri to take the preliminary steps toward organizing a State Conference in Missouri this coming summer. I wish all baptized believers in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, in Missouri, to send their names and address to Miss Sadie Morse, at Valles Mines, Missouri. (Josephites are not wanted.) Kindly send in your names as soon as convenient, so that we will have time to work up the details. All sending in their names will be posted about the organization work.

Yours in the blessed hope,
W. H. WILSON.

Plymouth, Indiana, May 6, 1908.

Last week we were informed that Sister Foore had died on Sunday before, but have no particulars. She was the mother of Bro. L. E. Conner's first wife.

Brethren J. H. Willey returned and preached for the Plymouth Church on April 26. He reports that on April 19 he visited the Church at Oregon, Illinois, and spoke for them twice to good audiences. He enjoyed his stay with the friends there very much

A letter dated April 21, from Sister Matilda Woodbury, at Springfield Ohio, gives the good news that Bro. D. C. Robison was holding meetings there, and that on Sunday following three were to be immersed. We re- [illegible] and pray that these new babes in the Christ may be kept by the Father in the right way. And may Brother Robison, seeing thus some manifest results of labor, be thereby greatly encouraged to work on with renewed energy.

It will be remembered by all who have been interested in reading the reports made of late by both Brother W. L. Skeels and Brother W. H. Wilson, that they mention the kindness and generosity of Sister G. Ruhrback, of Stillwater, Okla. While they give this Sister praise for her efforts to provide a place for holding meetings and for providing entertainment for them, she in turn wishes to extend thanks to others who assisted her in various ways. To certain Christian Advents who opened their homes, to J. W. Butler for cash contribution, to J. S. Riley minister of the Methodist Church for opening his Church for the meetings, and all others who assisted in any way toward making the meeting pleasant and profitable.

Editor Restitution:

I sincerely thank the dear one or ones for sending me The Restitution free. I should love to renew my subscription, but I am old, and very feeble and poor and it takes all I have to get medicine.

May God bless all the Household of Faith is ever the prayer of

Your Sister in the one Hope,

This letter is from one who has been supplied by our Helping Fund. We give it to show how the gifts of our friends are appreciated by those who receive them. We always send as far as possible. If we were rich we would gladly supply all, but our funds are limited, and the Helping Fund is now overdrawn several dollars. All gifts are free will offerings, and if any one wants the credit for supplying this aged widowed Sister, the opportunity is yours.

Sunday School Lesson.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY, MAY 17.

JESUS BETRAYED AND DENIED. JOHN XVIII. 1-27.

Golden Text.—"Jesus said, unto them, The Son of Man shall be betrayed into the hands of men." Matt. xvii. 22.

This is not a review, but it is well worth our while to remind ourselves of the import of the last few lessons. For instance, "Humility." Real humility is a rare thing among men of [illegible] profession.

There are few things more plainly taught in both the Old and New Testaments, than that the "Heavenly Home" of the saints will be on the earth.

And there are few things more plainly written than that the "Mission of the Holy Spirit" was to witness to the truth of the gospel as preached by the apostles.

We have discovered, in the lessons of the past that the apostles did not all write notes of the same events, but all write freely of Jesus being betrayed and denied.

We may read of many cases of cowardly, cruel betrayal, but among all there is none just like the betrayal of Jesus.

From the standpoint of Jesus we cannot say that he was betrayed, because he knew that Judas was scheming to betray him.

To his disciples he said, "Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of Man is—will be betrayed to be crucified."

At the passover supper he said, "Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me." Matt. xxiv. 22.

Jesus said, "Verily I say unto you, One of you which eateth with me shall betray me." Mark xiv. 18.

Again we read, "Behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table. But woe unto that man by whom he is betrayed." Luke xxii. 21, 22.

We see from these records that Jesus was not like others that have been betrayed. He was not surprised nor taken unawares. This does not in the least excuse Judas. He was the meanest of all betrayers.

Referring to Matt. xxvi. 21, 25, we read, "It had been good for that man if he had not been born."

Then Judas—with what seems like child-like innocence—asked, Master is it?

From all the circumstances previous to the betrayal, one might be led to wonder why Judas did not forego his purpose, knowing as he did that his Master knew of his treachery. It is the observation of observers that when a man goes wrong "religiously"—When they turn away their ears from the truth, 2 Tim. iv. 4, it is next to an impossibility to induce them to reconsider and repent.

God the Father knew that his Son would be betrayed, and moved David, by the Holy Spirit, 2 Peter i. 21, to prophesy, "Let Satan—the adversary—stand at his right hand—let his days be few, and another take his office." Psa. cix. 1-20. It was this prophesy the apostles referred to when they cast lots for one to take the place of Judas among them. Acts i. 16 26

In connection with the betrayal and other events we read "All this was done that the Scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled." Matt. xxvi. 56.

From what is written let us not conclude that Judas—or some one—HAD to betray Jesus. He was naturally bad, but no man ever had a better opportunity to reform than he. Jude informs us that some turn away from the grace—favor—of God. Jude 4. and Paul tells us that such are fit only for destruction, Rom. ix. 22.

Moral cowardice is not a part of the make-up of every man, but every man is liable to have an attack of it, a spasm as it were. This was the case with the apostle Peter when he denied all connection with, or knowledge of his Lord and Master Jesus Christ. He loved his Lord, and his Lord knew it. John xxi. 15 17. Paul says, Charity—Love—never faileth, 1 Cor. xiii. 8. This is true, absolutely true in the case of God and Jesus Christ. it was true also in the case of Peter, as far as could be true of a man. The love of Peter did not utterly fail when he denied the Master. It was a slight break in his life of affectionate devotion to his Lord.

The story of the denial in the lesson is that Peter followed Jesus to the door of the palace of Caiphas the high priest. The apostle John was inside, and through his influence Peter was allowed—by the girl doorkeeper—to come in. The imagination or still better, the recollection of those who have been really over-awed by unusual surroundings will help such to understand Peter's state of mind when the young woman doorkeeper asked him, "Art not thou also one of this man's disciples?" Had he been outside his answer would not the least likely have been a denial, but the over-powering impression on the simple honest-hearted Galilean fisherman by the great hall, the so-called place of justice and judgment, seemed—for the time being—to completely frighten him, and he denied his Lord. Satan was trying to hit him, Luke xxii. 31, At his third denial his Lord turned and looked at him. That look brought him to himself, he went out and wept bitterly. Luke xxii. 61, 62.

If we have in any way denied our Lord Jesus, let us confess our sin. He is faithful and just, and will forgive us, 1 John i. 9, as he forgave Peter.

Next Lesson, Jesus' death and burial. John xix. 17-42.

P. Neely.

Report of Meeting.

At Stillwater my meetings were continued four nights at the little hall that Sister Rohrback has seated at her own expense in her home in this city. If you think of or repeat this name in connection with field work pronounce the name Roe-baw. It is a German name and you need a pronouncing directory. I find by years of experience that strangers will mispronounce a name that should be spelled by the form of the orthography and by observation that we are hopelessly stalled with names like [illegible] ter Rohrback's.

What I wish to say about this se[illegible] one action of this lady away in th[illegible] new country, "away" whether you [illegible] the east, or we of the Pacific think [illegible] the locality. The hall has been free[illegible] offered to all "soul-sleepers." It we[illegible] our first meeting-place, but as [illegible] stands some distance from the clu[illegible] of orthodox church buildings and h[illegible] been used by the different Advent pa[illegible] suasions that have visited this tow[illegible] it had not become a popular reso[illegible] for the multitude, either the religion[illegible] or irreligious. No one of the mos[illegible] singular events happened in m[illegible] evangelistic work. I changed to a [illegible] church building. The Methodist min[illegible] ister Smith invited me to hold m[illegible] meetings in his church. Our hall wa[illegible] large for our little audience, but t[illegible] church would surely bring a goo[illegible] hearing.

I began my work in the new hous[illegible] by speaking from 1 Cor. xii. 13. Whe[illegible] I speak from a text this is my favor[illegible] ite, because it brings to my hearin[illegible] the leading principles of Christ[illegible] The attendance was good, and the a[illegible] tention persist at this meeting. I wa[illegible] hopeful. This was on Sunday ev[illegible] ing. I gave four discourses on "[illegible] Truth of the Bible," during the we[illegible] On Friday night I closed abruptly.

The minister had received a t[illegible] gram that his father was dying; t[illegible] members of his church were not at [illegible] meeting, and though about sixty [illegible] that do not belong to the Methodis[illegible] church were present. I did not think [illegible] had authority to continue in the ab[illegible] sence of the minister, or assumed right.

I am now at Brother Hollenbaugh's home, near Avery, Oklahoma. Meetings are announced to begin here Friday night, April 24th.

From here I expect to go on to Texas on my homeward journey.

W. L. Skeels.

Dear Restitution:

To those of like precious faith these greetings are sent. It was our good pleasure to close a very interesting and profitable meeting with the church at Springfield, Ohio, April 26. We left them rejoicing over the addition of three worthy ones. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to the readers of The Restitution the following sisters, viz: Jessie Flab, Jessie Kauffman and Ora Beck. Sister Flab is a sister in the flesh of Sisters Woodbury and Kauffman, and Nellie Sister Jessie Kauffman is a daughter of Brother and Sister Kauffman. Sister Beck is a daughter of Brother and Sister Beck, also a sister of Brothers David and Frank Beck, and Sisters Staley and Poole.

We spoke on first day morning on the Trial of our Faith. Our subject was well fitted to the occasion and all enjoyed it. Our purpose was to show them that our heavenly Father invites all who come to him. "That the trial of your faith being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter i. 7.

This meeting will be remembered by all as the best for many years. The brothers and sisters of the occasion are greatly strengthened and will now renew their vigor. May they continue to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith they are called.

My prayer is that our sisters may make their calling and election sure.

Your brother in hope of eternal life.

D. C. Robison.

Report of Labor.

Brother Underwood,

We wish to say through The Restitution that Brother [illegible] Portland, Oregon, is here holding a series of meetings. He is awakening up a fine interest. It is a place where the orthodox could not get a hearing and if they did the order was so bad that you could not hear what the speaker said. Now, under Brother Skeel's preaching you can almost hear a pin drop. He makes it so plain that little children can understand him. He has had a large attendance all through the meeting, and it is still increasing. Some are coming ten miles although the roads are muddy and the nights are dark. They respect him so well that they place bouquets on the stand, until he has hardly room to lay his Bible. He thanked them for this respect and said it made him think of the time when the desert will blossom like the rosa.

One of my neighbors said he did not intend to take any part in the meeting although he came and he and his wife have attended every night, and have had Brother Skeels make his home with them part of the time.

The Price is Quiet Forces.

All great forces work quietly. The light, the frost, gravitation, electricity—the greatest natural powers—all work silently. Great effects, great revolutions, follow the action of these forces; but they act noisily. So it is in spiritual things. God's Holy Spirit works silently—nothing works so powerfully. It is the still voice, it is this voice, unheard by the ear of sense, that wakes the sleeping soul and calls the dead man to life.

Look at the sun, the moon, the stars; consider with what amazing velocity they move, and behold their calmness. Great men are the calmest men. Bustle is not power. Noise is not true energy. The deepest thoughts, and those that move us to the greatest deeds, come in the quietness of our chambers. Thunder may frighten, but the lightning kills. Great revivals of religion are calm. It is awful to see a great congregation in tears, and so silently that you hear only an occasional sob and the clock ticking on the wall. The hardest hearted are still [illegible] where there is confusion and they only laugh and look, "Not [illegible] by power, but by my [illegible] saith the Lord."

Happy.

"Sometime since," says Dr. Payson, "I [illegible] a letter to a young minister, "I [illegible] up a little work purporting to [illegible] the lives of sundry characters, re[illegible] ated by themselves. Two of these [illegible] characters agreed in remarking that [illegible] were never happy until they [illegible] aimed striving to be great men. This [illegible] mark struck me, as you know the [illegible] but simple remarks will strike us [illegible] heaven pleasant. It occured to [illegible] at once that the most of my sufferings and sorrows were occasioned by [illegible] unwillingness to be nothing, which [illegible] am, and by consequent struggles to be something. I saw if I would but cease struggling, and consent to be any thing or nothing, just as God pleases, I might be happy. You will [illegible] it strange that I mention this [illegible] a new discovery. In one sense it [illegible] is not new; I had known it for years. But I now saw it in a new light. My heart saw it and consented to it; and I am comparatively happy. My dear brother, if you can give up all desire to be great, and feel heartily willing to be nothing, you will be happy, [illegible]."

[illegible] Christian for the sweet fruits he bears to God and men, is compared to the vine. Now, as the most generous vine, if it be not pruned, runs into many superfluous stems, and grows at last weak and fruitless, so doth the best man, if he be not cut short of his desires, and pruned with afflictions. If it be painful to bleed, it is worse to wither. Let me be pruned that I may grow, rather than be cut up to burn.

Brethren, if you have not yet renewed your subscription to The Restitution for this year, will you please do so now? We thank you for the favor.

Those having occasion to write to Brother James C. Thompson, Sec'y of the Ohio Conference will note that his address is now 1397 East 124th St. Cleveland, Ohio.

We have loaned a copy of Brother J. M. Stephenson's work called "God's Plan of Salvation," and do not remember who has it. We freely lend books that we have to brethren who ask, and several have been out a long time. Please send them in.

SOMETHING NEW.

Brother J. L. Wince wrote a series of articles that were published in The Restitution some months ago, on the subject of the Resurrection. At the solicitation of some of the brethren, he has had the matter printed in tract form. It makes a very good appearance, and the ability of Brother Wince as a writer is so well known that no words of praise from us are necessary. The tract is now ready, and can be ordered from Brother J. L. Wince, Pierceton, Ind. or [illegible] rest from this office, as you wish. The price is 10 cents single copies postpaid or 12 for $1.00.

Brethren, this whole edition of this work ought to be in the hands of the readers in the next sixty days, and if proper energy is used this will be accomplished. Send orders in this very day

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, [illegible] ren in Ohio, Indiana, or elsewhere who was in or know any thing of the '43 and '44 movement, we especially desire their presence or a paper prepared by them. Who does not wish to be present at this gathering and enjoy this religious feast. Remember friends, we are not making this extra effort because the people of Dutton alone need this spiritual uplift, but for the general good and advancement of Christ's cause, not only in Michigan, but in sister states. To this end we hope there may be a general rally to the standard of truth. We would like to have representatives from every state in the union and Canada. They will be received with a hearty welcome. If there should happen to be so many present that improvised floor beds become a necessity—why, the more the merrier. You will enjoy the good gospel truths better the next morning.

We are expecting F. L. Austin, of Foothill, Canada, as one of the speakers, and we hope other able brothers and sisters will come, determined to give much good, as well as receive much. The board and lodging will be free.

Brother D. Paine, of Mendon, is the Chairman of Committees; six others to fill different committees to be chosen by him. We trust these committees will be [illegible] at work, for there is certainly no time to be lost now in preparation. Will these committees, especially the one to arrange program for meetings, please correspond with me, as it will be necessary to announce it a little later in The Restitution.

No one will wish to miss the able sermons and Bible instruction given by Brother Lindsay. Come one and all.

The Illinois Bible School will convene this year at Oregon, August 10-19, and the Annual Conference from August 19-23. When answering questions of lesson 8, please say if you will try to attend. Please send the names of any others who may be persuaded to come. Let us try to make this year's School the best we have yet had.

S. J. Lindsay.

The yearly meeting of the Church at Foothill, Ontario, will (D V) begin on May 22, and continue over the following Sunday. The principal speakers will be Brother Austin of Foothill, and Brother Huggins of Oregon, Ill. An invitation is given to all who may desire to be with us on that occasion. We expect an enjoyable meeting. For further information apply to me at Foothill, Ont. Box 105.

To the Household of Faith in Virginia and other Eastern States: The brethren in the Shenandoah Valley of of Virginia have taken the necessary steps toward the organization of a Conference to be held some time during the latter part of August. It is especially desired that we make this Conference a season of rejoicing in the Lord, and thereby strengthen our faith, and spread the good news of the gospel to others.

Furthermore, we are deeply interested in any isolated brother or sister. We want to hear from you, and if it be possible induce you to attend; so write to S. E. Boyar Pelton, Va. or to me at Dilbeck, Va.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

If any of the brethren have statistics, facts or figures, showing the good that conferences have accomplished, I would be glad to have you communicate with me at Woodstock Va. I would like to secure a copy of same. Perhaps Brothers Lindsay, Allard, Wince, Wagoner, Brother and Sister Woodward, Brother Cramer or Sister Emma Jackman and others who have been active in Conference work can help me out. Also in regard to the claim of the orthodox churches that the world is growing better. Can any of the brethren tell me where I can secure facts showing that the world is not growing better.

George Neff.

To the Household in Texas.

I shall soon be in Texas. If there are others in Texas and Louisiana who desire me to hold meetings in their neighborhood, they can arrange for the same by addressing a letter to my home address immediately. Write to 120 N. Willow ave, Austin station, Chicago, Illinois, and my family will forward them to me.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

W. H. Wilson,

THE LAST CHANCE.

We have a number of books published by our late lamented Brother John C Woodruff. We have both kinds "Bible Themes on miscellaneous subjects," and "The Word of the Kingdom." During the last years of his life Brother Woodruff issued these books at great expense. Many were supplied through his generosity. The remainder ought to be out doing the good he desired they should, and to enable you to get one we will send them to you post paid for 75c each.

An Exposition of Isa. vii 14-16.

A booklet by Robert C. Huggins, Oregon, Ill, designed specially for the brethren. Plain, brief, true, thoughtful, logical. Price for those who want to pay 10cts, for those who want to pay the postage only, one two-cent stamp, for those too poor or who do not want to pay anything free. On such terms every brother and sister in the United States and Canada should read it. Send as above.

We have received a new edition of the tract A Letter to a Friend, from Brother Woodruff, and we can supply them at five cents each postpaid. No tract ever issued by our people has done the good this has, and the pleasing and convincing style in which it is written makes it worth much as a medium for advancing the truth of the gospel. Get a number of them and give to friends. You never can tell how much good a few nickels will do used in this manner. Try it.

We wish to avoid the labor and expense of mailing statements to our patrons. If each one who has not as yet paid for this year would send in his renewal at once, we will appreciate the favor.

What others read in same Bible neighbors do,
I see how long 'twill take to read it through.

Some read the Book of Book, they don't know why;
It somehow lay, gets in the way to die;
While others read it with uncommon care,
But all to find a contradiction there.

One reads with ardor's eyes upon the head,
And sees the thing exactly as he did:
Another reads — reads through it or through
Scott,
And thinks it means exactly what they thought.

Some read to prove a pre-adopted creed,
Thus undertake all but what they read;
And every passage of the book they bend
To make it suit that important end.
Some people read, as I have often thought
To search the Book, instead of being taught.

Editorials.

When you hear a man praising himself, depend on it he is doing it because no one else will.

Son.—Father, what is the difference between a skeptic and "higher critic?"

Father.—A sceptic, my son, is an unbeliever out of the church, and a "higher critic" is an unbeliever in the church.

Not long since we were greatly surprised to hear a friend remark that the world is getting better. In justice to him, however, it be but right to explain that he is very old and feeble, in fact a "shut in," and that he has not been out in the world for many years.

A little error mixed with truth is like a little poison in good food. The food looks nice to the eye, and is palatable to the taste, but it will kill you if you eat it. The pabulum of truth to be wholesome and life-giving must be entirely separate from error.

The last Quarterly Meeting of the Illinois Conference for this year will be held with the Antioch Church, near Chana, Saturday evening, May 16th. All intending visitors are requested to write Brother Jos. H. Williams, at Ashton, Illinois, and he will make all necessary arrangements for your care and comfort during the meeting.

The brethren in Oregon, Ill. had the pleasure of hearing Brother J. H. Willey preach two sermons on Easter Sunday. Bro. Willey was in our city on business, but made it a point to remain with us and preach on the First Day. The Lord bless our brother in his ministry. Come and see us again, Bro. Willey.

In Tom Paine's time the church believed and taught that every word in the Bible was true. Since his day it has been proven false in its cosmogony, false in its astronomy, false in its chronology, false in its history, and so far as the Old Testament is concerned, false in almost everything.—Lecture on Tom Paine by R. G. Ingersoll.

To these eloquent but lying charges against the Bible the "higher critic" shouts a hearty "Amen."

Easter Sunday was our regular appointment at Antioch Church, near Chana, Ill. Mrs. Mary Jane Cable, mother of Sister Melissia Drummond, formerly a Methodist, confessed her belief in the first principles of the gospel, and was clothed in the righteousness of God, as provided in Christ, through baptism into his death and name. All of our brethren were glad to extend to Sister Cable the right hand of fellowship, but her daughter, Sister Drummond, was a trifle happier than the rest of us, if that were possible.

They Wrote Letters. Acts xv 23.

Dear Brother:

We would like for you to preach the funeral of Sister Richard Appleyard, who died today, and whose funeral services will be held at Northfield at

Brother Huggins:

It has been so long since I have written to you that you may think I have forgotten you are on earth. This is not the case, however, but for a number of weeks I have been very busy getting our new Church building finished, furnished, etc., so that I have taken very little time for any thing else. We dedicated our new building March 29th, and we are now getting settled and adjusting ourselves to the new conditions. We have a neat and comfortable house of worship, with new auditorium for preaching services, and basement with Sunday school room, etc. It will be known as the "105th Street Church of God," and is located at corner of 105th St. and Columbia Ave, Cleveland, Ohio. I trust we may be able to build up a nice little congregation in this apparently good field.

L. E. Conner.

Brother Huggins:

It is unprofitable to spend time in writing, in printing, and in reading matters of opinion apart from the recorded testimony of Holy Scriptures. Opinions or "views" about this or that are only sources of controversy and contention, frequently ending in envy and incessant wrangling.

"The Birth of the Spirit," Word and Work, vol. 2, No. 12, serves to illustrate my meaning about speculative "views." A few words from Scripture near the close of Brother Corbuley's letter on the next page, is of more value to the student of Scripture than any amount of mere human reasoning and indiscriminate quotations from Scripture, having no reference to the point under consideration. I quote from his letter: "What was the mystery which Paul would reveal? Was it not, 'We shall not all sleep'—something given as an exception to the general rule laid down by Moses and all the prophets?" Better still if the brother had confined to emphasize the immediate succeeding context, giving the disjunctive "but" its full force, thus, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed." Our various opinions about this statement leaves the statement itself unchallenged. It matters little to the believer what I may think about this or that. We have something believable, reliable, trustworthy, and termed by Paul "The testimony of God," 1 Cor. ii. 1. He did not come with what his "views" were, but he came with a message from God, and demonstrated as such by manifestations of spirit power, verse 4, 5. But I must close for the present. I remain as ever in the hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord, Redeemer and Advocate.

C. W. Tomkins.

Brother Huggins:

I am sending you copies of ——— in which you will be interested, especially the marked paragraph relative to your reply to a question. Keep the good work going; and may your strength be as your day. While others are busy "sifting out the error," occupied with endless eulogies and strivings "about the law," busy with "foolish and unlearned questions, whereof comes strife," "the man of God" will eat the bread and drink the water of the Word, not despising the blood, for by it his past life of sin is washed clean, Rom. v. 10; Eph. v. 26.

Fraternally yours,

Jos. Wil——ams.

Brother Huggins:

We were glad to hear that you were well. We are still in the faith, and are stronger in it even than when you were here. If we never meet again in this life, we hope to see you with all the redeemed in the coming kingdom.

V——ron, read, "Went forth into the world." "They went out from us," writes John in his first epistle, ii 19, and then gives this reason for their segregation. "They were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us; but [they went out, that they might be made manifest that they are not all of us." They are called "deceivers" and "antichrist" because they transgressed "the doctrine of Christ." 2 John ix. The Greek word translated "transgresseth" in verse 9, literally means to "go beyond." Their transgression took the form of being wise above what is written; and they not only "went forth" from the faithful brethren, but they "went beyond" the "doctrine of Christ" which he had revealed from the Father during his personal ministry in the days of his flesh. In fact they denied that he had come in the flesh at all. This was an prominent plank in their platform or creed. The word "come" in verse 7, is "coming" in the Greek. To deny Christ's coming in the flesh formally denied God's manifestation in his person; and to deny that God was manifested "in the flesh" (1 Tim iii 16) in the person of his Son, denied the "doctrine of Christ" in one of its most clearly revealed and important features. The Greek present participle implies both the first and second coming of our Lord. He is called emphatically the "Coming One" in the Greek (see the Greek Testament and Diglott in Matt xi 3; Heb x 37. Those who deny the incarnation of God in Christ at his first coming, and his personal coming again, as do the Russellites, are more than "deceivers;" they are Antichrist.

Faith in the Messiah of Jesus.

"Our salvation hinges on faith—faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Why God requires faith rather than works alone I do not know." These words, or at least their substance, occurred in a Scriptural and forceful discourse delivered last summer by Brother A. J. Eychaner while engaged in evangelistic work in Iowa. A careful study of the Bible reveals the fact that the speaker's statement is undeniably true—our salvation depends on a belief in the promises of God.

At this time when higher criticism, human-paternityism, Universalism, Sabbatarianism, and many other "isms" are occupying the minds of Bible students and investigators, frequently to the exclusion of more important matters of faith and Christian conduct, the question to which those who "seek for glory, honor and immortality" should direct their careful attention should no longer be "What must I do"—but "What must I believe in order to be saved."

We agree that "without faith it is impossible to please God." In other words we cannot be saved without faith; for it is plainly said, "By faith are ye saved."

No one will dispute Paul's definition that "faith is the substance of things hoped for; the evidence of things not seen." Therefore our eternal salvation depends on belief in the promises of God unsupported by visible evidence. We must believe without knowing.

This being true must we not accept the Messiahship of Jesus—his right to David's throne on the basis of faith and not knowledge? If we knew that Jesus was the son of David would it require faith for us to believe in his right to occupy that throne? Let us again insist that salvation comes by faith, not by knowledge. It is he that congregation, therefore, that determine itself from fellowship unworthy is an enemy of and the faithful are warned to not of it. Rev xviii 4; Acts xx vi 17.

The congregation of God is composed of saints of Jesus Christ (1 Cor i 2) who walk in the light as God is in the light (1 Jno i 7), who continues (chiefly in the apostles' doctrine (Acts ii 42; Rom xvi 17; 2 Jno v 11), who speak the same thing, having no divisions among them, united in the same mind and the same judgment (1 Cor i 10; Phil i 27; ii 2, 3. It is he and they of the truth (3 Jno iii 15); it teaches the "way of truth" (2 Pet ii 2), hence it is opposed and is opposed by, the seats of error. 2 Pet ii 1-3.

Gold Dust.

Honest work for Christ is the best kind of spiritual culture.

When a man tries to hide his religion he is wasting time covering up invisibility.

He who has God's work to do needs to live in the light of God's companionship.—Humbut.

If we would reap life everlasting in the world to come, we must sow to the Spirit and manifest its fruit now.

Our religion is no Sunday dress; he expects us to wear it every day in the week and especially in business relations.

The unadulterated gospel by men whose life work is to destroy all confidence in men, is like tendering water in a dirty cup; it disgusts, rather than refreshes.

Go to the root of things. The gold mines of Scripture are not the top soil. You must open a shaft. The precious diamonds of experience are not picked up in the roadway, their secret mines are far down. Get down into humility, the divinity of the Word and seek to possess with it the inward work of the blessed Spirit.

The body of Emmanuel Swedenborg the famous mystic and writer, was exhumed in London, April 7th, and was started on its journey to Sweden for final burial in Swedish soil. The remains were taken up from the vault in front of the communion table in the Swedish church in Princes square, where they were deposited in 1772. Services were held over the body in the afternoon, after which it was placed on a train for Dartmouth, where it was embarked on the Swedish cruiser Fylgia for transit to Sweden. The Swedish government formally requested the exhumation and surrender of the body, and the British government assented.

Hiding in Christ.

It is said that the deeper waters of the great ocean are never moved by storm or tempest. Though the outer surface may be in the wildest commotion while the terrible storm is raging, yet the deep waters never feel the least thrill of the stormy scene above them. Eternal calm holds them in its strong arms and they rest as peacefully upon their coral bed and long seaweed as though no fierce tempest were beating upon their outer surface.

This is a fitting emblem of what our spiritual lives should be. While our outer life must feel the lashings of sorrow and misfortune, the great silent depths should never be moved by these "light afflictions" which work out everlasting glory. There are golden milestones all along the Christian journey, and if we are guided by them we shall soon [illegible] the quiet, [illegible] "Rock of [illegible]

And if we cling to our hiding-place we are forever beyond the reach of danger. Upon Alpine heights there is a sweet little flower which clings so tenaciously to the crevices of the stony rocks, that it blooms on regardless of the fierce, wild storms which sweep over the grim old mountains. After the tempest passes by it is sweeter and lovlier than ever and one would never guess it had felt the breath of the hurricane's power upon its face of sweetness. The secret is, it is shielded by the everlasting rocks—something stronger than itself.

Thus is the life hidden with God and safe in eternal arms; for nothing can ever tear it from its secure hiding-place.

Oh, blessed faith that holds the soul hidden away from the power of this world! Let us in life's blessed morning seek for this dear hiding-place. Then shall we be safe forever while clasped in infinite arms.—Unknown.

Smokers and Voters.

Each year the people of the United States smoke nearly 8,000,000,000 cigars, cheroots, stogies and all-tobacco cigarettes, 3,500,000,000 cigarettes with paper wrappers, and consume 3,000,000,000 pounds of smoking and chewing tobacco and snuff. Every day we smoke 22,000,000 cigars and 10,000,000 cigarettes, and nibble smoke or chew 500 tons of tobacco, all of which costs $860,000. Every minute of the 16 hours a day that we are awake we make ourselves poorer by $800—for 28,000 cigars, 10,000 cigarettes and a half a ton of plug and fine cut. It is estimated that there are 18,000,000 devotees of the weed, or about as many smokers as voters. This estimate is based on the assumption that one person in each six of our population is a puffer of smoke.—Ogle County Republican.

The First Use of Firearms.

The use of firearms in battle, must, necessarily, date from that of gunpowder. Although there is but little doubt that a compound of nitre, charcoal, and sulphur was well known to the Chinese as early as the ninth century as an explosive agent, and had been heard of in Europe about the time of the first crusade, it does not appear from history that it was well known in Europe until introduced by Roger Bacon in the twelfth century. It is alleged that firearms, in the shape of cannon, were first employed by Edward III., King of England, in 1327, in his campaign against the Scots. The first well-authenticated use of cannon in battle was by Edward III., in the battle of Cressy, A. D. 1346.

Questions on Sunday School Lesson May 3.

OUR HEAVENLY HOME.

John xiv 1-14.

Golden text: In my Father's house are many mansions, John xiv 2.

Read between the last lesson and this, so as to get the circumstances under which this lesson was spoken.

1 Verses 1 and 27, What troubled the disciples?
2 What was Jesus going to leave with them?
3 Why do we need peace?
4 Does the world give any peace?
5 Will believing in Jesus give peace?
6 Verses 2 3 4. Is it necessary to have knowledge of the future?
7 Do our experiences in this life make us long for the hereafter?
8 What does Jesus assure us of in these verses?
9 What is God's house?
10 Is it a place?
11 Where is it located?
12 We hear people talk of Heaven, of going to heaven, etc. If this be a place where God has his throne, have we a promise of going there?
13 Where is the promise recorded?
14 Do you think the words "my Father's house" used here mean a large place in heaven, where there is room for all, and that Jesus is now there arranging a "mansion" for each of his followers?
15 Going back to ancient times, whose was God's house, and who built it? 2 Chron iii 1, vii 11 12. Matt xxi 12 13
16 What was to happen to this old "house of God?" Mark xiii 1 2
17 Does history prove that this actually occurred?
18 Where is God's house now?
19 What does Paul say in 1 Tim iii 15 about God's house?
20 What does Eph v 29 30 Heb iii 1 to 6 teach?
21 See Mark xvi 14 15 and tell who are now in the Father's house.
22 Do we have a right then to say that God's house—or the Father's house—is his household, his family, his people, his children, his church?
23 Who is the Head of the Father's house or family?
24 Where is Jesus now?
25 What is He doing now?
26 Where is his family or people now?
27 What is the condition of God's people or house now? 2 Cor v 2
28 What do they desire? 2 Cor v 2
29 When will this be realized? 1 Thess i 10
30 What will happen when God's Son, the head of his house, returns from God's throne? 1 Cor xv 53
31 All things now change. How will it be when Jesus returns? 2 Cor v 2
32 Tell what Paul says about changing from the earthly to the heavenly condition. Thess iv 15-17
33 Tell what the prophet says will occur at that time. Zech xiv 4
34 Judging from Psa xvi 11, xxxvi 8 what will be its condition?
35 Do you think all will be like David then? Psa xvii 15
36 Who guides us to our heavenly home? and how?
37 What does Jesus say he is? verse 6
38 Is there any other way but his?
39 Jesus is in heaven now preparing for his people—do you think he will come back before his work is done?
40 If the ones for whom he is preparing places fail to make themselves ready, but disobey his commands, refuse his truth, do not follow in his way, have they a right to expect he will furnish a place for them?
41 Are you ready to enter the Heavenly home?

LESSON FOR MAY 10.

MISSION OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

John xv 26 to xvi 24.

1 What were the circumstances under which Jesus was talking?
2 What great truth had he just taught his disciples?
3 Tell the meaning of "offended."
4 What dangers would the disciples be exposed to?
5 Could people persecute others, and think they were doing God service?
6 What was it Jesus told his disciples that caused sorrow?
7 What had Jesus promised them? John xiv 16
8 Why was it expedient that he go away?
9 What does comforting mean?
10 Who is the Comforter?
11 When was this promise fulfilled? Acts ii 4
12 Why would the Comforter not come till Jesus went away?
13 What is the meaning of the world?
14 Webster says "reprove" means to refute, contradict, to blame, or to censure, etc. Is this the meaning of the word here?
15 The Diaglott and Syriac both say "convict." Is this a better word?
16 If the Holy Spirit was to reprove or convict the world of sin, etc. has it accomplished this?
17 Why did Jesus not tell all the disciples ought to know?
18 What does "guide you into all truth" mean?
19 If an instructor guides or leads his pupil to see the truth, does this imply more than merely telling him the truth?
20 What things to come, or coming things, does the Holy Spirit show?
21 What was the mission of the Holy Spirit? John xiv 15 to 17, 26
22 What did the Holy Spirit enable those who received it to do? Acts ii 4 vi 5 to 8, viii 5 to 7
23 What was the object of these demonstrations of power? Mark xvi 15 to 20
24 Do we get the idea from all this that the mission of the Holy Spirit was to confirm, to establish, give assurance of, to render certain, to verify the truthfulness of what these men preached?
25 What were the persons who were anointed of the Holy Spirit told to do? To go and preach?
26 Did they do as they were told?
27 Did the Holy Spirit accomplish the mission for which it was given?
28 Have these persons who were given the Holy Spirit left any record of their words and deeds?
29 Are these records of their words and deeds sufficient for us?
30 Do we need any other guiding or leading to enable us to understand, believe and obey all that is necessary for us?
31 Are any persons now possessed of the Holy Spirit so that they can do as the apostles did?
32 If any one should claim to have the Holy Spirit now, would we have a right to expect them to be able to do as the apostles did?
33 How can the Holy Spirit guide us now?
34 Are you following the Holy Spirit's guidance in ways of truth?

Indiana Bereans, Greeting:

Brother Neill's resignation has made me your President. I wish to express to you my willingness to help you in any way that I can.

Let me urge you to continue your study and the holding of regular meetings. Great good has already been accomplished, and we must not let this work retard. Let us understand and be about our Father's business, ever keeping in mind his promise to the Little Flock.

Address me at 515 E. Pennsylvania Ave. South Bend, Ind.

May God bless and prosper your meetings.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved."

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address Mrs. M. Joblin, 5302 Woodland Av, Cleveland, O.

Beautiful drops on the sacred rain,
Tapping against the window pane
Once ye to bless our earth again!

Lips that seldom are tuned to praise
Turn [illegible]
And every heart its tribute pays.

And hill, and valley, and sounding plain
Swell the notes of the glad refrain.
Bountiful, beautiful, blessed rain.

Weak and helpless, we children call
Upon our Father who heareth all,
And into his sheltering arms we fall.

The crumbs from his table it is withheld,
Or a moment leaves us without his fold,
We faint with hunger, or grieve withheld.

He holds the sea in his hollow hand;
The mountains arise at his command:
We pitiful children help see and stand.

But his tender mercy doth never wane,
He sendeth the early and latter rain,
And our barns are filled with golden grain.

ENOCH IN TYPOLOGY.

Is Enoch a type; and if so, of what is he a type?—Wm. Hardesty.

REPLY.

We are told that even Adam was a "figure of him that was to come." Rom. v. 14. "Figure," from tupos, means "a type, impression." Read 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22-29; Psa. viii.; Heb. ii. 6-10, and you will see that "the first man Adam" was, in many ways, an "impression" of "the last Adam," the Lord Jesus. 1 Cor. xv. 45. Since we have a type so early in antiquity, we are led to expect types more elaborate and perfect as we come nearer the realities of the new dispensation. That Enoch was an "impression" to be antitypically exemplified, is suggested by his name which means "teacher." He was a prophet; and Jude records one of his prophecies, and shows that while it is primarily applied to the antediluvians, its ultimate fulfilment will be at the final judgment when the Lord comes. Jude 14, 15.

Enoch in typology is an interesting study. Many precious truths are embodied and embedded in him as a typical character. "It is the glory of God to conceal a thing; but the honor of kings (the saints) is to search out a matter." Prov. xxv. 2. The following "concealed" truth can be "searched out" in regard to Enoch: I. He pleased God by faith. Heb. xi. 6. II. Enoch—"teacher." He prophecied or taught the truth. Jude 14. III. He "walked with God." Gen. v. 24. IV. He was "the seventh from Adam." Jude 14. V. And he was "translated that he should not see death." Heb. xi. 5.

Jude is careful to tell us that Enoch was the "seventh from Adam." v. 14. This statement, made just before giving Enoch's prophecy, is full of meaning. The Lord "finished" the work of creation and "rested on the seventh day." Gen. ii. 2, 3. Here seven is associated with completion and rest; God "finished" and "rested" from his work. From the beginning seven has been a number which signified completeness, fulness. In the Mosaic constitution, every week when "finished" brought the seventh day, a day of "rest," to the Israelites. Seven is a complete cycle, a round number, a totality of parts. In Enoch the sacred number seven, and his freedom from death, are combined. Six thousand years of sin and death will be followed by a thousand years of "rest" and peace (Rev. xx). This is spoken of as a "Sabbath keeping for the people of God." Heb. iv. 9. We "enter into rest" (Sabbath keeping) (Spar. Heb. iv. 4-12) when the Lord comes. 2 Thes. i. 7. "Enoch the seventh from Adam," as a "teacher" in typology, preached the coming of the Lord "with ten thousands of his saints." Jude 14. "Enoch the seventh from Adam," intimates that he, as a typological character, prefigures antitypical realities proximate to the "sabbath keeping" or "seventh day" of six thousand years, introduced by the Lord's advent. Divinely guided by God's instruction, as to the time when he was typically represented, will be duplicated in the antitypical realities. The struggles of God, as [illegible] ensure that the following truths are beautifully illustrated. I. When the Lord comes "with ten thousands of his saints," there will be a people on earth who please God by faith. They will have the same "testimony" Enoch had that they please the Lord. Heb. xi. 5, 6. II. They will not only have faith, but they will "walk with God," as Enoch did. Gen. v. 24; Rom. iv. 12. III. They are alive when Jesus comes, "with his saints" (angels), and they "shall not see death," being "translated" as Enoch was. Heb. xi. 6: 1 Thes. iv. 15, 16, 17; 1 Cor. xv. 50; Jno. xi. 26.

There is one mistake you must avoid in Enoch and all other types, namely, making types realities. Because it is said Enoch was "translated that he should not see death," many have made the mistake of concluding that he never died. Skin means "a shade, shadow," and is translated "shadow" in Acts v. 15: "The shadow (skia) of Peter * * might overshadow some of them." You must discriminate between "the shadow of Peter" and Peter himself. His shadow cast on the ground or in the water would perfectly represent Peter; it would be a good photograph of the apostle; but still it would not be a reality. Now the entire Mosaic economy was an enigma, "a shadow (skia) of things to come." Only flitting "shadows" in the panorama, flimflam; Christ and his saints being the "heavenly things," "the body" (soma). Col. ii. 17; Heb. viii. 5. So when it says Enoch did "not see death," do not conclude that he was physically exempted from death; that epilogue would make a reality out of a "shadow." The word "translated" (Heb. xi. 5), metatheesis, means to "pass over." The first born of Israel, when they had applied the blood of the "passover" lamb, according to the commandment, were, like Enoch, "passedover" by the angel of death. Ex. xii. 13. Not that they never died. But in the shadowy representations of the Levitical law, which illustrated in a "figure" and "impression," "good things to come" (Heb. x. 1), they were "translated," "passed over" by death in "shadow," "in a figure," like Isaac whom Abraham slew. Gen. xxii.; Heb. xi. 19. Isaac did not literally die, and neither was he literally raised from the dead; it was only "in figure." Enoch's translation "in a figure" will find its reality in the "body" of Christ's brethren when the Lord comes, as Enoch prophecied he would, "with ten thousands of his saints." All of them alive then will "not see death;" one of the "good things to come," typologically taught by "Enoch the seventh from Adam."

DID ENOCH DIE?

In Genesis 5th chapter Moses gives the genealogy, age and death of the patriarchs from Adam to Noah. Of them all he says, "And he died" until he gets to Enoch, and of him he says, All the days of Enoch were 365 years * * * and he was not; for God took him. Verses 23, 24. Instead of saying of him as of all the others, And he died, he says, And he was not. Did Enoch die?—Lillis Filson.

REPLY.

That Enoch did not die has been a postulate with the learned for many years. However, in his Homiletical Commentary on the Book of Genesis, the learned Rev. J. S. Exell, M. A., confessed that Enoch died. On page 100, when speaking of the longevity of those days and comparative shortness of Enoch's life, he says: "We should have thought he (Enoch) would have lived longer than the wicked around him." On page 101 of the same book he says: "The life of Enoch was a comparatively busy one; he died in the prime of manhood." The prevalent idea that Enoch did not die is [illegible] beset with difficulties. The [illegible] mystics, always on the lookout for something with which to play; always ready to darken counsel by words without knowledge, Job xxxviii. 2, rejoice exceedingly because the [illegible] think in Enoch they have found [illegible] which [illegible] natural law [illegible] nation. "And they have if he did not die. The hypothesis contains us with inexplicable difficulties, and what is worse, the theory carried to its logical upshot, obscures, and even denies some of the plainest elements of divine revelation. Among the inexplicable difficulties of which I speak, I will mention these: I. Death has passed upon all men. Rom. v. 12. Enoch was one of the "all men" upon whom death passed, and equally with them was under condemnation. II. The testimony of inspiration is that all men (Christ not excepted) have died Psa. xlix. 8; Eccl. viii. 8; Psa. lxxxix. 48; Job xxx. 22. III. The veil which divided the Holy from the Most Holy place finds its antitype in mortal flesh. Heb. ix. 3; x. 20. Christ is our forerunner within the veil. Heb. vi. 19, 20. Forerunner means one who runs before or goes ahead. Christ is the first born, the forerunner; the first to pass from the Holy to the Most Holy; from the veil—the flesh—to the spiritual nature. But if Enoch was immortalized before Christ, Enoch was the forerunner—he ran before Christ into immortality!! IV. Christ died for all—every man. Heb. ii. 9. If Enoch never died—was immortalized hundreds of years before Christ died, he did not die for Enoch! V. Christ is the Savior of all who will be saved. 1 Tim. iv. 10. But he cannot be the Savior of Enoch, since he has already been immortalized!!

And he died, was said of them all, Enoch excepted. Then to create the impression that something different happened to him, that he did not die, the words, And he was not, are quoted. Let us understand phrases, not jingle them. It is unwise to make a distinction when there is no difference. Read Gen. v., and you will see that in recording deaths, Enoch's with the others, identical phraseology is employed. All the days that Adam lived were 930: and he died. (Verse 5) All the days of Seth were 912, and he died, (verse 8) All the days of Enos were 905 years; and he died. Verse 11 Coming to Enoch, Moses uses exactly the same language he used when speaking of others; And all the days of Enoch was 365 years: and so far the writer speaks of Enoch just like he did the others; he comes to where you expect him to say, And he died. You do not have to use the same words to express the same thought. And he died, and he was not, are synonymous terms. This is evident from the words, All the days of Enoch were 365 years. If he is alive yet; if he never died, 365 years falls short of expressing all the days of Enoch's life. All the days of Enoch, is a phrase which indicates, like the words addressed to the serpent, (Gen. iii 14). limitation of days. 365 years states all the days Enoch lived. He died comparatively young for those days of longevity.

So much for inferential evidence. Let us now examine evidence that is cognoscible and positive. After stating that all the days of Enoch were 365, we are told, And he was not. What is meant by this statement? Some people understand it to mean he was not longer on the earth; that he was translated to the skies! This view our Lord flatly denies. Jno iii 13 Ia Lam v 7 we have this statement: Our fathers sinned, and are not. Does this mean, Our fathers sinned and went to heaven? Enoch walked with God; and was not; the fathers sinned, and are not. Whatsoever happened to Enoch when he was not, happened to our fathers when they are not. Enoch if the words, and he was not, means that Enoch did not die, then our fathers, that sinned, never died!! If Enoch was immortalized, so were they; if he was translated to the skies, so were they. The Bible links death with sin. Rom. v 12 As the wages of sin is death, (Rom vi 23) the decree has gone out, "The wicked shall not be," Prov xxvii 10. Our fathers have sinned, are not, must mean, Our fathers sinned and have died. Indeed, it is said that they did not live forever, that they died Zech i 5; Jno viii 52; Heb xi 13. Here is proof that as they sinned and died—are not [illegible] days of Enoch. And he was not, it must mean, And he died.

All doubts as to the meaning of this statement are removed when we examine its occurrence in the book of Genesis: for it must be admitted that a writer has the right to interpret his own writing; and that the words, And he was not, as used in the 5th chapter, must mean the same as used elsewhere in the book. Every time Moses used this expression, he means death every time. When Joseph's coat was dipped in the blood of a goat, his brethren presented it to his father and said, "This have we found; know now whether this be thy son's coat or no. Gen. xxxvii 32. Convinced that it was, Jacob said, An evil beast hath devoured him; Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces. Ver 33. Thinking that Joseph was without doubt dead he said in great sorrow of heart to his children, Me have ye bereaved of my children; Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away. xlii 36. Like Reuben, to express his death, Jacob said, The child is not. Gen xxxvii 30 That he means he was dead is positively stated: My son shall not go down with you for his brother is dead. xlii 38 One time Jacob says Joseph is not; and then telling the same thing later, says he is dead. In the same way Joseph's brethren speak of his death. At one time they referred to it as, One is not. (Gen xlii 13): at another time they said, We have a father, an old man, and a child of his old age, a little one, and his brother is dead. xliv. 20. And he was not, always means death: I do not think it can be shown to mean anything else in the Word of God. I feel strong on this point, incited as I am by the words of the infallible Book. When Herod slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, he killed them, of course Matt ii 16. This fulfilled a prophecy of Jeremiah (verse 17) about Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not, verse 18. When Jacob was convinced that without doubt Joseph was dead, he said, Joseph is not. When Herod slew the children they were dead, and of them it is said, They are not. When the wicked are swallowed up in the second death they shall not be (Psa xxvii 10)—they are dead. Now I claim that in Gen v 23, 24, the words, and he was not, means what they mean everywhere else in the Bible; and that therefore Enoch's death is plainly recorded. All the days of Enoch were 365 years * * * and he was not—he died. And this is just what Paul thought. To make his death doubly sure the great Apostle records Enoch's death with all the "worthy ones of whom the world was not worthy." Heb xi 38. These all died in the faith. ver 13. How many does he mean by these all? Though he includes many not mentioned by name (verse 32), he certainly means all he has named. Beginning with Abel (verse 4), he names Enoch, (v 5) Noah (v 7), and others, and then says: These all died in the faith. verse 13. When the kingdom comes (Rev xi 15) the time of the dead (for those who died in the faith) will have come, and God will wake up his servants the prophets (Enoch was a prophet, Jude 14), and reward them with all his saints, whether they be small or great (as Enoch): all will be glorified and rewarded together. Rev xi 18; Rom viii 17. Amen and amen.

Kind words produce their image in men, and a beautiful image it is. They soothe and comfort the hearer. They shame him out of his unkind feelings. We have not begun to use them in such abundance as they ought to be used.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the month of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LVI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 20, 1907. NUMBER 11.

Bible School Department.

The annual meeting for Bible school work will convene at Torch Lake, Antrim Co., Mich., in August, 1907. It is important that every member of the church should do all in their power to continue and develop the work already begun.

It is not only desirable but essential that the workers from all the states be brought into association with one another. We need the encouragement that comes from the communion of earnest souls engaged in a common effort, and a conference of workers is absolutely essential to the success of the Bible school work. This convention is the place to decide upon courses of action with regard to the work, and it is urged that each state be represented in this gathering. There must be united, persistent action, a coming together of our scattered forces, if the gospel work shall receive the support, that it should. Come, let us put shoulder to shoulder, and become "workers together;" learn to keep step, and sing as we march,

"Onward Christian Soldiers," and join heartily in the Bible School work. It is stated that eighty-five per cent of all church members and ninety-five per cent of all preachers come from the Sunday schools. The church without a Sunday school is loosing its greatest opportunity. Let us awake to this fact, and shake off that feeling that "It can't be done," "It is too big a task." Let us not say "we can't" take up the gospel work and make it as successful as we do our worldly business enterprises.

Let us put the same amount of energy into the gospel work, that we put into our daily business affairs and the work will prosper. There is strength in co-operation, the business man knows it and the saloon keeper too. Every person who will plan to be present at this convention of workers, and can assist in the work in any way, are asked to communicate with the writer or P. Neill, corresponding secretary. Do not delay, do it now. We would like a report from every Sunday School in connection with our churches before this meeting, which will include both convention and institute work. The convention is designed to awaken interest, to arouse enthusiasm, to bring workers together, to discuss and devise ways and means of promoting the work and to receive reports from the work already established.

The institute is for educational purposes, to instruct and to fit for the largest fulness in Bible teaching. No institute can be successful unless it really instructs. There must be solid thought and careful preparation for the work by both teachers and pupils.

It is for the purpose of giving sufficient time to prepare for the part each is to have in this work that this notice of the Bible school work is given. If you will co-operate in any way to make the work profitable, let it be known at once what part you can take. It is desired to use as much talent as possible, and especially to cultivate the talent for teaching in our young people. Music has become a great factor in Bible school work and any who can assist in this accomplishment will please let it be known. We must give to our young people a chance to become leaders in the Bible school work and to become trained workers for service.

The teacher who tells his pupils to be good and not good for something, is loosing his opportunity, and the Bible school is our opportunity to train for service.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Our motto—work, pray, give. "Go work today in my vineyard." Labor is the upbuilding element in the Christian life and success lies in our submission and confidence in God. "In everything by prayer and supplication let your requests be known unto God." With the prayer let us make the offering a sacrifice acceptable and well pleasing unto God for "God loves a cheerful giver."

HOME CIRCLE STUDY.

Reading the book of Genesis. Are you reading the book? Please report, do not neglect this.

I am now on the sick list, so will ask number 50 to please prepare a Teacher Training Lesson for our next paper. Also give the chief characteristic of the book of Genesis for the Home Department.

A good report comes from No. 31, it says, "We have repaired our building here. Next Sunday preaching." This is good, do not neglect the children. Open up the Sunday school work. More later.

Yours in hope.

HARRIET E. BOOK.

Somethings Christians Should Avoid.

But foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strife. 2 Tim. ii. 23. Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. But shun profane and vain babblings, for they will increase unto more ungodliness, and their word will eat as doth a canker of whom is Hymenaus and Philetus, who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is passed already; and overthrow the faith of some. Their mistakes would have been considered a very small matter in our time, nevertheless the apostle considered it fatal. But avoid foolish questions and genealogies and contentions and strivings about the law, for they are unprofitable and vain, and yet there is generally some one close at hand to insert the dividing wedge and divide the flock if possible; and when they talk you would almost think the apostle made a fearful mistake when he said, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Gentile;" and you would almost think the law was that power, but Satan has accomplished his object and gone his way looking for new fields. There are questions that have been under discussion for at least fifty years to my personal knowledge, which are no nearer settlement today than they were then; look at the results, havoc and shipwreck to a great many. Would it not have been far more profitable to have spent that time, talent, ink and money in trying to instruct some one in the way of life. O that we might learn lessons from the past, and make a general effort even now to teach people the gospel that will save them from their sins, and provide a home in the kingdom.

Some of the things we should diligently practice.

Now I beseech you brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment. 1 Cor. i. 10. Let this rule be thoroughly practiced, what a power the Church of God might be in the world. Love is the crowning grace and by this rule shall all men know that you are my disciples, because ye have love one for another, and it must be pure and true without dissimulation or hypocrisy.

Again, Be kindly affectioned one toward another with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another, distributing to the necessity of the saints, given to hospitality. Be of the same mind one toward another, and be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good. 2 Pet. i. And besides this giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity. If these things be in you and abound they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, but he that lacketh these things is blind and cannot see afar off. Wherefore the rather brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure. For if ye do these things, ye shall never fall, for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Dear ones, avoid the switches and side tracks, and keep the straight and narrow way, for it promises to lead to eternal life.

Yours striving for the kingdom.

B. W. WOODWARD.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead: the immortalization of the saints, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 20, 1907.

SISTER M. A. Woodward is to be at Plymouth and preach for us next Sunday, as they have both recovered from their recent illness sufficiently to be able to get at the work as soon as the weather will permit.

BROTHER George Neill called on us Monday on his way home from Clinton County. He reports good audiences at all points he visits, and the prospect for work is encouraging. He is to visit the Church at Rollover next Sunday, and we trust the brethren will give him a good hearing.

THE Bible School Association of the Church of God, which was organized last year has the following officers, who will answer all questions regarding the work—Miss Harriet E. Peter, General Superintendent, 1003 Church Wright St. Champaign, Ill. P. Neill Corresponding and Recording Secretary, 300 W. Main St., Salem, Ohio. Mrs. Mary A. Woodward, Treasurer, Dutton, Mich.

Bro. Underwood.

Mr. Lindsay came home Monday night from the field of labor sick and bed. The doctor says he has congestion of the lungs brought on by overwork. He will need to keep in doors for some time. Please publish so that the members of his correspondence Bible class, and others who are expecting to hear from him may know the reason for delay. Your Sister.

MRS. NELLIE LINDSAY.

The foregoing letter explains itself, and any one who is expecting to hear from Bro. Lindsay will please wait patiently until he is able to attend to your wants. Bro. Lindsay attended his debate in Illinois, came to Burr Oak, Ind., and started meetings, which has ed some time longer than intended at first. Three were immersed there. He then went to a point a few miles out of Argos for three nights, then to Argos over Sunday March 10. He had planned to go home on Monday following, and there were five to be immersed at Argos. As it is some distance to the water, it is easy to see the task our brother had to perform. Then on Sunday a telephone message called him to preach the funeral of Sister Coffin at Champaign, Ill., on Tuesday, March 12. Bro. Lindsay reached Chicago, intending to answer this call, but was taken sick, and had to hasten home, where he is suffering, as is stated in Sister Lindsay's letter. Our prayer is that our beloved brother will speedily recover, that he may go forth with the message of life to other fields, for he is a worthy workman in the vineyard of the Lord.

One Hour to Come.

The hour of judgment is a period of time intervening the presence or personal appearing of Christ and the beginning of the millennial era of one thousand years. It is specially designated as a time of war and conquest. Of course this is quite a different view from that entertained by those who are looking for and predicting the conversion of the world by peaceable and what they term spiritual means.

The popular impression that the world of mankind is continually growing better, and that eventually all will become Christianized is not only contrary to the teaching of the revealed Word but also irreconcilable with the general trend of human affairs, and unsupported even by the facts and figures of current history.

Christendom at the present hour is morally no better than the idol worshipers of the oriental world. There is doubtless more of knowledge with reference to things material, yet at the same time it cannot be truthfully affirmed that Christendom has increased or grown in the knowledge and fear of God, or anything like an intelligent appreciation of his work and purpose as revealed in the holy oracles. The discourses of modern science—the mastery that men have gained over the forces of nature may conduce to a betterment of material conditions, but does not appear to abolish or neutralize the moral delinquencies, and impurity that everywhere prevails corrupting and demoralizing both rich and poor, old and young alike. The spasmodic efforts of the church to stem the tide of corruption and crime is more an evidence of its irresistible increase, and uncontrollable force than it is a cure. The reformers and pulpits may preach against intemperance and denounce corruption and crime in both low and high places, but their proclamation reaches comparatively but a small number, while the masses of the people are both deaf and blind to the voice of the religious prophets, and reformers, who are regarded more as hirelings earning their bread, than as teachers of truth and righteousness.

Indeed there is no cure for the worlds ills this side of the Gear of judgment. When the indictment is read God is in the earth, then will the people learn righteousness as not before. Though knowledge has increased and the comforts and luxuries of life have run riot, the struggle to maintain existence and supply the things that gratify man's sensual wants, appears to be as difficult and as exacting as in the ages that are past. The people are restless, inconstant, and discontented, even as the force is exploiting and clamoring for more and more of the things pertaining to this world. The world appears to be out of joint, disjointed and perverted. The good things that men crave appear to be unequally distributed, great wealth on the one hand, and extreme poverty on the other,—ignorance and squalor on the left, refinement and luxury on the right, embittering and disturbing the conditions on all sides. In vain the world struggles to set itself right and make itself contented and happy. I repeat again there is no cure for this unhappy condition this side of the "hour of judgment."

My last article concluded with the overthrow of Gog's armies upon the mountains of Israel, and the subsequent announcement that the Lord's Anointed had established his authority in Jerusalem. It must not be supposed however that all the world will known momentarily that it is really Jesus of Nazareth that has returned to Zion and saved Israel in this dark and critical hour of distress. When we pause to consider how momentous the darkness that prevails concerning the prophetically revealed purpose of God, it is in no way difficult to see that the nations and their rulers will be slow to believe or credit the announcement that the Son of Israel's God is actually the one that has crushed the invading army of Gog, and proclaimed to the world that he is king by right divine. This appears evident from the fact that the kings and emperors of the Roman world make war against him, seeking his overthrow. As it is written the Gentiles will rage tumultuously, and imagine a vain thing: the kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord, and against his Anointed..... The Lord shall have them in derision, he will speak to them in his wrath and vex them in his sore displeasure, yet have I set my King upon my hill of Zion. See Psa. ii. 1-12. The hour of judgment incarcerates a suspension of education, and discipline, to teach the nations and peoples righteousness supported with adequate authority and power to punish the obstinate and rebellious. The judgments executed in this trying hour are not for the purpose of destroying the earth's inhabitants, but to bring them into subjection to what is right, good and just, that all may equally share the good things promised as a "feast of fat things to all people." Isa. xxv.

This work begins with the Jew, Israel is my son, my first born, and it is through the first born that the process of renovation and the knowledge of God is extended and made manifest among other nations. Among the first things that transpire in the prophetic hour to come, is the sealing of the 144,000 out of all the tribes of Israel, 12,000 from each tribe. That this work may be accomplished without interruption or hindrance, the four winds are held in check by the four angels represented as standing on the four corners of the earth. The winds of strife and war are not permitted to hurt the earth nor the sea nor any tree, until these servants of God are sealed in their foreheads. To be sealed in the forehead, is to become intellectually instructed, and made to understand the things pertaining to the knowledge and wisdom of God. In the 11th chapter they are again brought to view, and said to have been "redeemed from among men, and styled the first fruits unto God, and unto the Lamb." That is they are the national first fruits. The order of God is first the Jew, afterwards the Gentile. This order was observed in the preaching of the gospel individually, and will be repeated nationally. Most expositors appear to think that the 144,000 sealed ones symbolize the one body redeemed—the church or congregation of God. I however regard their exposition as little more than guess work, even though it has the support of standard authors and great names. The 144,000 constitute a perfect square, that surrounds the tabernacle. Under Moses in the wilderness the twelve tribes encamped in a square in the midst of which stood the tabernacle of God, the holy and the most holy. The antitypical tabernacle of the future is the glorified, one body of Christ. The house of God wherein he will dwell in his spirit. The square of the Urim of the future is thus foreshadowed in the Mosaic order of things in the wilderness. Israel stands next and nearest to the tabernacle of God. In another place they are represented as the 12 gates of the holy city through which the nations bring their "honor and glory into it."

I escape for [illegible] reasons revealed concerning the 144,000. The hour of judgment will more naturally be a trying ordeal for the nations who know not God, and who will be disinclined to take kindly to the new order of things that will follow the establishment of Jehovah's kingdom on the earth, but will result eventually in great good to all people in filling the earth with the knowledge and glory of God.

The Power of the Gospel.

Paul says in Rom. i. 16. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

From the language in the above text, it would imply that we are required to believe something, in order to get the benefit of the salvation that is promised in the gospel.

In the first place we must find out what the word gospel means before we can hope to receive any reward from it.

Paul calls it the "Gospel of Christ." Now if it is the "Gospel of Christ;" it must be something that Christ taught his disciples to believe, and in order to find out what we are to believe, we must search the Scriptures to find out what the gospel was that Christ preached. First we find in Matt. iv. 24, "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." And again in chapter ix. 35, we find that "Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." Before the gospel of the kingdom can be of any power to us we will have to become acquainted with the message that God has dealt us.

Paul says in Gal. iii. 8, "And the Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, in thee shall all the nations be blessed; so then, they which are of faith, are blessed with faithful Abraham. Gen. xxii. 17, 18, and Gal. iii. 16, tells us how the blessing is to come to us through Abraham and his seed, which Paul says is Christ; so then let us take heed to the gospel of Christ. Jesus tells us in John iii. 16, "That God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Do we believe this saying? can mortal man comprehend such love as this? Who is there among us that would be willing to sacrifice a son that we loved, to save the life of a friend, to say nothing of our enemies. I verily believe there is not one. It was through faith and obedience more noble, are necessary: And those members of the body, which we think to be less honorable, upon those we bestow more abundant honor; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness. For our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honor to that part which lacked: That there should be no schism (margin, division) in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it. Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." 1 Cor. xii. 14 27.

"Believers of the truth" are members of the body of Christ, "which is the church," Col. i. 24. And he (Christ) is the head of the body, the church. Eph. i. 22, 23.

Having been baptized into Christ, we belong to the body of Christ, the church, and our "church home" is in his body, in contradiction of Bible authority that, "the dead praise not the Lord." Psalm cxv. 17; that "the dead know not any thing." Ecc. ix. 5. "The earth has he given the children of men." Psa. cxv. 16. The righteous shall never be removed; but the wicked shall not inherit the earth. Prov. x. 30. Paul urged his followers to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, and made this emphatic declaration. Though we or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached let him be accursed. Gal. i. 8. Are not the orthodox preachers [so called], preaching another gospel? Then let not those who know the truth follow their teaching or give of their means to support error. We should cease to hear instruction that will cause to err from words of knowledge. Prov. xix. 27.

I have been a believer of the gospel of the kingdom for forty-seven years, isolated from those of like faith, but have never felt any desire to find a home in a popular church.

LUCY W. HORNER.

Question: "Is it right for believers of the truth to identify themselves with an orthodox church for the sake of having a church home?"

The question is a deep, far-reaching one, and there is scarcely a limit to what might Scripturally be said upon the subject. Before taking up the question properly, we wish to notice the term "orthodox church." The true meaning of the word orthodox is: "Sound in the Christian faith; believing the genuine doctrine taught in the Scriptures." (Webster.) We understand orthodox as used in the above question to mean the so-called orthodox, or sectarian churches, and in this sense we use it.

We wish to call attention to the following Scriptures:

"For the body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear shall say; Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it not therefore of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling? But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. And if they were all one member, where were the body? But now are they many members, yet but one body. And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you. Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be the one body, or church. "For the body (church) is not one member, but many." Jesus said, "I will build my church." And again, "The Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." Notice he did not add churches, but added to the church, "Many members, yet but one body," or church. Is Christ divided?

The questioner might find a "church home" in some orthodox sect, but not in some other church, or body of Christ. What would it profit him? "Come out from among them," and be not "partakers of other men's sins" is the Scriptural way.

"No man can serve two masters." Jesus does not say that man will not or shall not serve two masters, but he cannot. So no man can serve the church of God and an orthodox sect at the same time. On one side the meek and lowly followers of Christ, on the other antichrist. You cannot serve God and mammon.

A Christian cannot, Scripturally, identify himself with a people who deny the facts of the gospel, the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, just to find a "Church home." One would not feel very much at "home" with them when their preacher said "All who know they are saved, and on their way to heaven rise while we sing, Heaven is my home." The "church home" would give you an abundant entrance into society but not an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of God. The lodges extend just as good, if not better, fraternal courtesies than the sectarian churches.

Again, if one identifies himself with an orthodox sect, he would be in honor bound to help support it, or else be a parasite. There is but one gospel, or glad tidings, of the kingdom of God, and "though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." Gal. i. 8, 9. This would apply just as forcefully to the one who spent his time and money to send out a preacher to preach another gospel, "than that ye have received." If orthodox churches are saved, they are saved by another gospel, as many of them never heard the gospel of the kingdom. Is it right for "believers of the truth" to work in mourners' bench revivals, and shout as though God's hand was shortened that he could not save, and his ear was heavy that he could not hear? The great commission is "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost," Matt. xxviii. 17. God's way to save sinners is, faith by hearing, hearing by the word of God, and remission of sins by obedience. "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Acts ii. 28. The sectarian way is via the mourners' bench, calling on God to leave his throne in heaven and come down and save sinners. Thus they reject the Word.

Members of a family bear at least some family resemblance. But this cannot be said of "believers of the truth" and the "orthodox churches." I think the Scriptures will bear me out in saying these churches are fulfilling "last days" prophecy. "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." 2 Tim. iv. 3, 4. I think we could safely say that we do not hold one point of doctrine in common with sectarians or so-called orthodoxy. Not even the one true and living God as they teach, "Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, three in one, and one in three." Like Israel of old, they have turned away from the holy commandment; "Thou shalt have no other Gods before me." They are serving three gods instead of one. They deny that the real Christ died according to the Scriptures, and say it was just his body that died. All of Christ that was alive died or else he was not dead, and there was no sacrifice for sins. But we have neither time nor space to enumerate the things those who have believed and obeyed the gospel of the kingdom would have to renounce or compromise as making no difference in order to find an orthodox "church home." To such we say, "It was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that you should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Jude 3. "Be ye separate, saith the Lord.....and I will receive you," 2 Cor. vi. 17. "Turn ye not aside; for then should ye go after vain things, which cannot profit nor deliver; for they are vain." 1 Sam. xii. 21.

MRS. MISHUVA GIBBS.

Obituary.

Ebenezer Helms was born in Jefferson Co., Ind., near Madison, July 31, 1826 and died March 18, 1907, at the home of his daughter Mrs Kinney, near Harris Station, aged 80 years, 7 months, and 18 days.

In 1829 his father moved to Hamilton Co., where he grew to manhood.

In 1848 he entered land in Howard Co., where he decided to make his home.

In 1851 he was married to Hannah Bradshaw, daughter of Rev. J. W. Bradshaw, of the M. E. Church, to whom were born eight children. One daughter and one son are dead. Four daughters, Lettie of Warsaw; Mrs. Hamman of near Nappanee; Mrs. Kinney of near Harris and Mrs. Miller of Washington, and two sons, John of California and William of Plymouth, Ind., are still living.

In 1862 he purchased a farm in Kosciusko County where he lived until 1882 when he sold this farm and bought near LaPaz, Marshall Co.

In 1857 he became a member of the Church of God, his wife uniting a short time after. It will therefore be seen that he was a pioneer in the faith, for which he always contended earnestly. He was a subscriber to the first church paper and as far as the writer knows took THE RESTITUTION from the time it was established until the time of his death. Until he became too deaf to hear preaching he took an active part in church work, since which THE RESTITUTION and the Bible have been his preaching, and he was reading in the New Testament when the chill which resulted in death, came on.

Funeral services were held by Geo. Neill, of South Bend, on Thursday afternoon, and on Friday he was buried at Stony Point, in Kosciusko County, by the side of his wife who died Aug. 18, 1877.

David Cole died with pneumonia at his home near Dutton, Mich., Feb. 11th, and was buried from the Church of God in Dutton, Feb. 14th, Elder R. W. Woodward officiating. Mr. Cole had passed his 78th birthday on Jan. 1, 1907. He leaves an aged wife who is nearly blind, one son and two daughters. He was born near Naples, N. Y., but has been a resident of this community more than fifty years. He and his faithful wife braved the hardships of pioneer life, but by persevering industry carved out a comfortable home for their old age. We sympathize with the family in this affliction, especially with Sister Cole, who is very feeble, being very sick at the time of her husband's death. They were both tenderly cared for by their children during their sickness.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foore.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 1-5. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Send orders to John Foore, at 2012 W. Corning Ave. Parsons, Kan. The price is 10 cents each.

BROTHER D. C. Robison has issued a small 16-page tract on the subject "Man is Mortal." It is of convenient size to enclose in an envelop, and can be had for 2 cents each, or 15 cents for 12, or $1.50 for 100 copies. Bro. Robison is so well known as a clear and lucid writer that no words that we can pen would commend his work, more than will the bare announcement of his name. If you are in the mood to do a little missionary work send to Brother Robison at 596 So. Limestone St. Springfield, O. and get a supply of these tracts.

Poetry.

Just to ba Tender.

Just to be tender, just to be true,
Just to be glad the whole day through.
Just to be merciful, just to be mild,
Just to be trustful as a child.
Just to be gentle and kind and sweet,
Just to be helpful with willing feet.
Just to be cheery, when things go wrong,
Just to drive sadness away with song.
Whether the heart is dark or bright,
Just to be loyal to God and right,
Just to believe that God knows best,
Just in his proud service to rest.
Just to let love be our daily key,
That is God's will for you and me

LESSON FOR SUNDAY MARCH 31.

Easter Lesson. 1 Cor. xv. 12-21; iv. 58.

Goided Text. "Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." 1 Cor. xv. 20.

As a rule there are several things in every lesson worthy of notice, our efforts should be directed to the main topic. It is somewhat difficult to "Stick to the Text," let us at least try it.

The quarterly review can be made very interesting, but the subject of resurrection is more important, and should receive our best attention, for that reason the Review is left out.

Among remarks in the notes for March 17, there was one that should be more fully stated, as follows:

Any one writing on Bible subjects are apt to make mistakes, but those who do not know the Key do make very many serious errors that are taught in Sunday School for God's truth.

"The things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ," Acts viii. 12, is the KEY to the Bible.

In the lesson verses Paul, an apostle is writing to the Church of God in Corinth. 1 Cor. i. 2. He had preached to them that Christ rose from the dead, not only had he preached to them, but the Holy Spirit had proved his words by a demonstration. 1 Cor. ii. 1-4, by signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds. 2 Cor. xii. 2.—The best of proof is no proof to those who do not want to believe, some such rose in the Church speaking perverse things, Acts xx. 29, saying there is no resurrection of the dead, which is contrary to sound doctrine.

Verse 13. If there is no resurrection, Christ is not raised.

14. If Christ is not raised, our preaching is vain—useless, worthless, profitless,—so is your faith.

15. And we are false witnesses of God.

17. And ye are yet in your sins.

18. And the dead—in Christ—have perished.

A more conclusive fact—or facts—was never put in words that men can understand. How true that some will not be persuaded though one rose from the dead. Luke xvi. 31.

If Christ be not raised his own teaching was vain—false—he said—I will be killed, and rise again the third day, Matt. xvi 21.

If Christ be not raised, his promise to believers is false. "I will raise him up at the last day." John vi. 40.

Faith in this promise is certainly vain if there be no resurrection of the dead. And Paul the chosen apostle of Jesus Christ, Acts ix. 15, is truly a false witness, and the comfort he gave to the church in Thessalonica concerning the faithful who had fallen asleep in Christ was false. He testified that the Lord himself would descend from heaven and raise them. 1 Thess. iv. 16.

Peter was also a false witness, if Christ is not raised. He testified that God raised up Jesus. Acts ii. 24, and those who believed and repented and were baptized were counted sinless. Acts ii. 38.

If Christ be not raised. Those who have believed and been baptized, Mark xvi. 16, are yet in their sins, and are of all men most miserable, because they have been duped—fooled, and cannot even eat, drink and be merry. And the dead in Christ have perished. They died in faith, but if there be no resurrection of the dead, their faith was vain, they will never rise again.

Verse 20. It is now time to turn the seals. Christ is risen from the dead. One of his last messages to John about 60 or 60 years after his resurrection—was. I live and was dead; and behold—take notice—I am alive forevermore. Rev. i. 18.—The first-born of the church, from the dead. Col. i. 18. The first one born of the Spirit. John iii. 5-8. He proved what he said to Nicodemus, he stood among his disciples when the doors were shut, John xx. 19—they did not know where he came from.—They were terrified, thought he was a ghost, Luke xxiv. 36. He vanished out of their sight, Luke xxiv. 31,—they knew not where he went to. He is not only raised himself, but he is the resurrection and the life to all who have believed his message; and obeyed from the heart. Of such he said, when talking with Martha about the resurrection. He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live—by a resurrection, and he that lives and believes on me—when I come—shall never die. John xi. 24-26.—Because at the resurrection the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and the living changed from mortal to immortality. 1 Cor. xv. 51-54. This fully and clearly informs all the simple-minded, how Christ will give to his saints eternal life, the gift of God. Rom. vi. 23. Death is no barrier to the love of God. Those who have turned away from the traditions of men, and are waiting for God's Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus. 1 Thess. i. 10, will be the children of the resurrection—the children of God equal to the angels—and can die no more. Luke xx. 36, and can truly say, O death, where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory? Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection—they shall reign with Christ a thousand years. Rev. xx. 6. On the earth. Rev. v. 10. Over the nations. Rev. ii. 26-27. To execute the judgments written. Psa. cxlix. 5-9. They shall judge the world. 1 Cor. vi. 2.

This gives us an intelligent understanding of the necessity and value of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ and his saints. May we all so believe, repent, obey and live, so that asleep or awake we may hear the Lord say, Well done.

Selected.

"My Kingdom is Not of This World."

The Beatitudes are the Magna Charta of Christ's kingdom, and whoever considers the character of its citizens as therein delineated can readily believe that it is "not of this world," for "then," said Christ to Pilate, "would my servants fight," which is just what no real Christian can do, because he is too much like his Master to cherish a vindictive or resentful thought. Christ describes the inheritors of his kingdom as a multitude of poor, meek, hungry and thirsty mourners, who are pure in heart and merciful peacemakers even while they are persecuted for righteousness sake—people who feel their need of Jesus, and are conscious of their unworthiness of such a glorious inheritance as he has promised to reward them for all they might do or suffer for his sake.

The Jews, however, to whom Christ offered himself as their King and his kingdom as their inheritance, thought they were lords over the Gentiles, whom they called "dogs." They were the porcelain of human nature, the favorites of high heaven, and expected Jesus to confirm their convictions and gratify their pride by telling them of their leadership and inalienable greatness; whereas he showed them that they were utterly destitute of the first claim of heirship to the kingdom of heaven, which is promised only to "them that love him at his coming." Jas. ii. 5; Matt. xxv. 34. They were looking for higher honors in the kingdom because they were "Abraham's children," whereas Jesus knew the doom impending over Jerusalem and those who despised and rejected him, and was seeking citizens for his kingdom who were poor in spirit and contrite for sin. Its King was meek and lowly hearted, and such must be every one of his subjects; whereas the Jews were exasperated against the Roman power that held them in vassalage, and thought Christ had come to crush it and enable them to retaliate, while his was a "kingdom of righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." They were hungering and thirsting for deliverance from the Roman yoke, and longing to exalt as the lords of creation over the whole world. Conformity to God's will was not what they wanted, but the gratification of their pride, vanity and selfishness. They were selfish and unmerciful to the Samaritans, and cruel to all Gentiles. Jesus showed them that they must become like him, if they would reign with him, or hope for mercy at his barbarian he is kind even to the unthankful, and merciful to the evil and unjust.

The Jews were so sodden in their own corruptions that they could see no beauty in Christ that they should desire him to rule over them. The vile see only blackness where the sun shines, and if we are not like God we cannot see him even now, much less when he shall appear. The Jews were great pretenders to superior sanctity outwardly, but inwardly full of rottenness and all uncleanness. Jesus knew that they neither loathed sin nor loved purity. The love of God makes us pure, and purity makes us see him more and better, just as the sunshine opens the petals and tints the flower with its own colors the more deeply the wider it opens.

The citizens of Christ's kingdom are children of "the God of peace," and brethren of "the Prince of peace." The Jews were so contentious that they had to have a garrison near their temple to quell their frequent riots even during their religious feasts. They were continually manifesting their unfitness for Christ's peaceful kingdom, because of their self-conceit and corrupting prejudice. They were always inclined to persecute those who would not bow down to them, as Haman wanted Mordecai to do. If a Jew served a Gentile he was at once scorned and boycotted by the proud, selfish and arrogant. Hence Jesus told them that their victims would enter the kingdom before them.

Christ came to his own, but was rejected by them; but to all that did receive him he gave the privilege of becoming the children of God. Anticipating Jewish reviling and maligning he pronounced them happy who should endure it for his sake, and told them to "rejoice, and be exceeding glad, for their reward was great in heaven."

What good suit is for the preservation of food, and light for preserving temporal happiness, that Christians are for saving the human race from total putrefaction and keeping spiritual happiness in the world. As men light lamps to banish darkness, so Christians must shine forth in good works, by which men may see that God's children are like him, and that they belong to a King whose kingdom is "not of this world," because they can neither "fight" nor be contentious.

How a Bible is Made.

In this age of education and culture, books have become such a part of our lives that few people think of the labor necessary to produce a single volume.

The first step in the making of a Bible, after the stereotype plates are made, is the printing of sheets. A sheet is printed on both sides, thirty-two pages of the Bible on each side of the sheet, so that when folded each sheet represents sixty-four pages of a Bible in consecutive order.

American inventions are equal to all emergencies. The blank sheets of paper are piled on what is technically known as the "Iron Man," or mechanical feeder. This automatic device feeds the blank sheets into the printing press. The paper passes around one cylinder and is printed on one side, and then around another cylinder, and is delivered printed on both sides of the sheet. Each one of these sheets represents sixty-four pages of a Bible.

When sheets leave the printing press they are perfectly flat, and the next step toward making the finished product is to fold these sheets. Here again American invention asserts itself. These printed flat sheets are fed into the folding machine and are delivered folded in signatures of thirty-two pages each.

The signatures are laid down in piles of 500 high in their proper order, so that the pages when the bible is completed will follow consecutively. These signatures are then gathered, making the Bible ready for the sewing machines.

Great precaution is taken in the binding of Bibles, and before the signatures are sewed they are examined carefully to see that each page is in its proper place.

In order to produce a well-made, solid Bible, the sheets before they are sewed are put in an immense machine under heavy pressure. This forces the air out from between the pages. The signatures are sewed firmly together, making the Bible ready for the large improved cutting machine, where the edges are trimmed. The Bible is at this stage ready for the finishing touches before being bound into its beautiful leather case.

To many people the effect produced in a Bible by what is commonly known as a red under gold edge seems wonderful. This rich, beautiful effect is obtained by a somewhat unique and yet simple process. After the edges of the Bible have been trimmed, about a dozen Bibles are clamped securely and very tightly in the gilding press. The edges are then sand-papered, and a specially prepared chemical carmine is applied to the edges. This is allowed to dry and is polished. Then a thin, albumen-like substance is applied merely to hold the pure gold-leaf, which is laid on the edges of the Bibles very carefully. After the gold-leaf has been laid on, the edges are highly polished by the use of a gilding onyx burnisher.

After a Bible has been golded it is placed in what is known as a rounding and backing machine. This bit of mechanism gives to the Bible that rounded back which not only adds beauty but makes the Bible more flexible.

The contents are now ready for the cover. "A good book is the precious life-blood of a master spirit," and the [illegible] of the ages. The cover, therefore, must be befitting this valuable and well-loved contents.

From morocco skins the covers of the Bible are cut over a zinc pattern. The edges are then pared down to a certain thinness, so that they may be easily turned in over the lining. Leather with the edges not pared could not easily be worked.

When the case or cover is finished, the Bible is most carefully placed in same, and the result is a finished product of the highest order. The Combination Red-letter Bible is, indeed, a credit to the manufactures.—Philadelphia Evening Telegram.

What Blackens.

There is an old story about a Greek maiden named Eulalia; she wanted to be friends with Lucinda, a very gay and worldly woman. One day she said to her father, Sophronius: "I would like to call upon Lucinda; may I go to-day?"

"I cannot allow you to do that, my daughter," replied Sophronius:

"But, father, you must think me exceedingly weak if you suppose I should be injured by going," said Eulalia, crossly.

Her father stooped down and picked up a piece of dirty coal and held it out. "Take that in your hand, my child; it will not hurt you."

She did, and her fingers became smudged. Eulalia did not understand. "Why," she said, "did you give me this? It blackens."

"Yes," came the reply. "Coal, when it does not burn, blackens."

Do you see the lesson of the old Greek? Bad company will blacken, even if it does not burn.

A Wrong Notion of Progress.

Progress is not movement, but improvement. Its measure is not the ground passed over, but what has been gained in passing. There are people who imagine that so long as they are going from one to another they are progressing; and there is probably no greater hindrance to advancement than the modern habit of dropping the latest method, or idea or machine, for the next that comes in sight. Many persons who have all the latest methods on their fingers' ends are making no more progress than did the little girl who tried hard to gather a bouquet, but dropped a flower every time she reached out to pluck a new one. True progress consists in bringing forward from yesterday, and adding to the store the good of today.—S. S. Times.

Speak kindly in the morning; it lightens the cares of the day, it makes the household and all other affairs move along more smoothly. Speak kindly at night, for it may be that before the dawn some loved one may finish his or her space of life, and it will be too late to ask forgiveness. Speak kindly at all times; it encourages the downcast, cheers the sorrowing, and very likely awakens the erring to earnest resolves to do better, with strength to keep them. Kind words are balm to the soul. They oil up the entire machinery of life, and keep it in good running order. Always leave the house with loving words, for they may be the last.

Courtesy is the cheapest advertisement of a man's business. Courtesy is never a mistake. Courtesy saves us from lands and enmities. Courtesy is the well-spring of friendships. Cultivate it—not as a duty if you are insensible to the authority and beauty of that solemn word—but on every ground of worldly wisdom and practical expediency.

Kindness in a Street Car.

One warm spring morning a poor woman entered a heavily-laden down-town cable car in one of our large western cities. Besides her large basket, she had two small children, hardly more than babies. A glance at her careworn face and the shabby, although clean attire of herself and the children, told at a glance of many a struggle with poverty.

She was evidently on her way to market, and, having no one to leave the babies with at home, had been forced to take them with her. Perhaps this had been the case before, for with a glance at the "rules and regulations"—all fares five cents cash, and only infants in arms free—she put her basket on the floor in front of her and took both the children in her arms for the long, weary ride.

Shortly afterward there entered the car two daintily-dressed school girls, as fresh as the June morning. Their merry faces sent a thrill of pleasure to the hearts of the other passengers, so much of youth's buoyancy and happiness did they seem to bring with them.

They found seats next to the poor woman, and after a minute or two the one nearest said to her, "Let me hold your little boy for you," at the same time transferring the warm little bundle of humanity from the overcrowded mother's lap to her own.

The words were spoken so gently, and accompanied with a smile so winning, that the little fellow made no objection, but was happy and contented all through the ride; especially when a rosy cheeked apple from the pretty lunch-basket found its way to his tiny hands.

The woman's grateful "Thank you," as she left the car, showed that not only were the weary arms rested, but the heart cheered, by the little act of thoughtfulness.

"What made you do that, Ruth?" asked her companion. See how he has mussed your nice, clean dress. It would have been so much easier to have paid his fare and let him have a seat."

"Yes," said Ruth, "it would have been easier, but I don't think it would have been a kind."

"God bless her!" exclaimed an old gentleman with white hair and gold-rimmed spectacles, as the corner was reached where the girls got off to go to school. "God bless her, and may she long live to make the world brighter and better by her kind acts!"

The Curfew.

"The curfew tolls the knell of parting day."

"Did you ever wonder what the word "curfew" meant? Its origin is this: When William the First conquered England he enacted a law, in imitation of a French and Spanish custom, that every poor person should put out his fire and go to bed at dusk, when he heard a bell rung for the purpose, which was called in Norman-French couvre feu, corrupted by the Saxons into "curfew," and means "cover up the fire." The law in a few centuries ceased to be enforced; but the habit of ringing the bell continued, and in some parts of England and America is still continued.—S. S. Visitor.

The gospel is a plant which is not affected by earthly changes. It is the same in the temperate as in the torrid zone, and the frigid. It does not seem to be scorched by heat or benumbed by cold. Age does not diminish the freshness of its bloom; soil does not affect its nature; climate does not modify its peculiar properties. Among the frost-bound latitudes of North America, and the burning sands of Africa, or the plains of India we find it shooting up the same plant of renown, the same vine of the Lord's right-hand planting the same "tree of life," raised up from the beginning of time, "whose leaves were for the healing of the nations," and under which all kindreds the tribes and tongues and people shall one day rejoice.

There are two ways of doing work. One may go about it with a clouded brow, a lagging step, and a general expression of disgust and weariness; or it is possible to be alert, energetic, bright of countenance and elastic of step, as if the labor were really enjoyable. The work is done in either case, of course, but there is something in the latter manner that inspires confidence in the worker and assures him of a reward that would not crown his efforts were they put forth in the other way. This is just as true of selling goods as it is of any other labor. It is the clerk who appears to delight in his vocation that wins.

The Red Man's Lecture.

In the dense forest along the banks of Black River, in Northern Michigan, foxes and wolves are numerous, and occasionally a bear or deer may be seen.

One day a sportsman, after a long chase, succeeded in shooting a deer, and as he was a long way up the river, he decided to call at the nearest Indian hut and borrow a boat to take his game to Sheboygan. He found an Indian working in the woods peeling birch bark, and thinking to ingratiate himself, he drew from his pocket a flask of whiskey.

"Me no drink whiskey," said the Indian.

"You don't drink whiskey?" asked the sportsman in astonishment; "I thought my red brothers all liked whiskey."

"Yes, me like it," said the Indian.

"Like it and don't drink it!" exclaimed the sportsman. "If you like it, why not drink?"

"Me like it and drink little, brother drink little, he want more; himeby heap drunk injun. Ugh! me no drink any," said the Indian.

The sportsman looked at the Indian, then at the whiskey, and finally dashed the flask against the stone, breaking it, and emptying the contents upon the ground.

He stood gazing at the broken flask, while repeating: "Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." I have been a brute, but the red man's lecture shall be remembered.

He then told his errand, and the Indian rolled up his bark, went to the river with the sportsman, helped to get the deer into a boat, and took them to Sheboygan. At parting, the sportsman grasped the red man's hand, and said: "Thank you for your temperance lecture; I shall drink no more."

The Indian smiled, seated himself in the boat, and rowed back to his hut.

An Endless Story.

The story of Jesus Christ, from the manger to the cross, from the Jordan to the Mount can be dwelt upon perpetually and not be exhausted. It is, as the apostle says of our Lord, "the same yesterday, today, and forever." It is a spring that never ceases to flow; an ocean always full. If we select any one event in the Savior's history, any vital doctrine of the gospel, and begin to dwell upon its substance its connections, and its lessons, how the lines of thought and duty and interest stretch away; reaching from the depths of a sinful heart to the final inheritance of the saints; sweeping perhaps from one eternity to another; now ranging in the footsteps of Jesus, in the places where taught, or dwelt, or suffered: and now hearing his parables and witnessing his miracles; and then lingering at the sacraments of the church and then contemplating the world to come, the Judgment, and the final awards. Sometimes we are alone and sometimes in a crowd; sometimes with demons; and sometimes with angels; sometimes on earth, sometimes in heaven; but always with Christ.—Christian Secretary.

For the Boys.

The best side of a saloon is the outside.

Never tease anyone. Teasers never like to be teased.

A distinguished teacher says he can pick out a boy who uses tobacco by his absolute inability to draw a straight line.

Don't take the easiest chair, put it in front of the fire and forget to offer it to mother, or to some other lady, or to some aged or sickly or lame person.

The greatest duty is the present one.

Our Helping Fund

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Communicated.

A Suggestion.—Matt. vii. 22.

There is probably no subject in the Word of God of such universal importance to the church as prophesy. For this reason there should not be great objection to its discussion in any age or day, even admitting the probability of unavoidable errors. Prophecy is a matter of many aspects, requiring peculiar application and steadiness. Very few persons possess the abilities and balance to handle its ramifications perfectly. It is not like a big charade or riddle. It is not at all like theology. It is eventual. Its time is divinely secreted, hence any reference to time or attempts to locate its chronologies, must be extremely involved. Jesus' caution is timely here, and should always be studiously and reverently observed. Read again Matt. vii. 22, remembering that "good intention," is no excuse here. I have studied the Prophetic Word since my youth, beginning by almost disbelieving it in toto; thinking a trifle better of it; then going at it staunchly, more and more determined to protect myself from such manifest errors of the past as were often laughable. With years of patient sifting and a more perfect divine guidance (as I trust) I have learned its vast consequence, especially in these "last" and "evil" days.

Looking over some recent RESTITUTIONS and noting the very small and disjointed advance that has been made over the old standing mistakes, and recalling my own particular experience along that line, I was wondering whether the fruitful source of failure does not lie (as did mine) in unwittingly setting the buck against the literal letter, or, in plainer speech, persisting in wandering eternally down the same old lane, to find a structure that never did or can stand there! One trip over that species of route should suffice forever. God does not "hide" truth that way, at least. I propose these thoughts in the conviction that no authoritative writer in our ranks (The Church of God) feels obligated to any particular prophetic theory or view, but is wholly concerned with the one grand purpose of getting at the facts: "line upon line, here a little and there a little" There can be no surer way, and no disrepute can arise through occasional misconceptions, as must arise through mistakes in theology. For, observe that prophesy is not "doctrine." Theology is our way to God. Prophecy is God's way to us. Doctrinal truth says: "Come, unto Me." Prophecy says "Behold, I come"—to you. This sweet distinction gives us much room to study, forbear, and progress. Doctrine is not thus flexible in its study, because ever present and apparent.

Accumulating about all human research there is always much (or some) debris. I have by the most painstaking examination found no use for the following very old factors in my prophetic studies:

1. Millerism (every whit of it.)
2. The year day Theory.
3. The 70 weeks in the past (instead of all literal, consecutive weeks of days, in the "times of the end," yet future.)
4. The Romish church as "Mystery Babylon."
5. Mohammedanism, in toto.
6. The anti-christ as a system.
7. The "little horn" as a system (instead of one, solitary king.
8. The revival of the Roman Empire.
9. The Ottoman empire (Turkey) in toto.
10. "The man of sin," and the scarlet harlot of Rev. xvii. as identical.
11. The coming of Christ for His "Body" and the visable coming as the same.
12. Any of Revelations (of John) as in any but "the last (the Lord's) Day."
13. The 2nd and 7th of Dan, as identical.
14. Any of Dan. xi. from verse 5 to end, as in the past.
15. That there is any significant prophetic event or personage, between the Ascension (or say the apostolic Day,) and "the time of the end," except the general phrase "the mystery of iniquity," (not "Mystery Babylon.")
16. That any but a faithful "remnant" of Israel, (that is out of "all Israel,") or some out of each of the 12 tribes, from dead and living, shall be "saved," and restored to their land in the present age. By rejecting these and all assumptions and "plausibilities," I (we) assured we will be amply rewarded, as I have been, with unspeakable glimpses of the divine purposes, far exceeding anything that can be expected in these present trying and disruptive seasons.

I would like to say briefly as to Wm. Miller, that he was not (as is pretended by those who sneer at Conditional Immortality) "a Second Adventist!" as their general misnomer goes, but one of their own dear "orthodox" selves—ever! He was not one of us. Not for a moment. His views were gathered largely from Elliott's (English) Horae Apocalyptice, and, as are most of the partialist views, totally subversive of the literal letter. It was not until after the '43 failure, that the present conditional immortality movement was born. There was not and could not be a "midnight cry" then, for the reason that that feature of Jesus' words apply to his "immediate" (not "soon" —there is no such word,) coming, "with" his "Body." The tarrying period is before the midnight cry; and none of these "virgins" could be "the Bride," but brides-maids!

I do not think that any fact is more clearly defined than that the prophetic periods are nearly all short, sharp and decisive occurrences, lying in very brief lapses of time. I can find few of the fulfilled prophecies expanding, like a panorama, over long reaches of time, as is claimed by the year-day theory. Results may be far-reaching, but the prophecy distinct is never protracted. The crucial idea of prophecy is suddenness. Though the bondage was 400 years; the Captivity 70 years, etc. their passing enclosed no prophetic significance. It was as events, only, that they fulfilled their prophecies. Between Dan. xi.—5 and 6, there is a hiatus, clearly marked, to the end of the present dispensation, an interregnum of some 2200 years, to date. Between Malachi and Christ, 400 years, or less. Between the Apostolic times and "the time of the end," yet future, there is a hiatus, or interregnum of some 2000 years, during which nothing is indicated that is all inherently prophetic. In a sense, the whole course of the world is a working out and up to prophetic data; but I am remarking only upon the grand, direct subject of straight prophecy, as marked events, which, only, the student has to do with. Every attempt to fix the papacy (Romish) and Mohommedanism in the prophetic chart has been futile. Not a line of Rollin's Ancient History (as to the Epiphanies and Ptolomies) is of the slightest prophetic import.

All the panoramic prophetic "expositions" expose a weakness to "hurry up" things. They are what I term "lo, here; lo there!" shifts, which Jesus plainly warns against. Then, again, they do not materialize. They remain figures—never progressing out of the symbolic stage of coma. For instance, Mohommedanism does not fulfil or effect anything—it is not even effective history. At best it can only symbolize a bad symbol. It is preeminently barbaric. It touches nothing in civilization. Like all the ethnical (heathen) matters, it belongs to the next age—the "gospel" age. Rev. xiv. 6. Turkey has had no bearing upon Judah and Jerusalem, and not for one instant in hundreds of years has it been a "power." It is entirely in the clutch of the other powers of Europe, whose business with her is purely strategical and mercenary. It has had no hand in the destiny of Israel, one way or the other. Its demise is very problematical. I fully expect Jesus to find it exactly as it is today; when the King comes to take a high hand in the affairs of men! But even if it shall go down, we may be assured that Dan. xi. 45 will not be affected by it. Compare the prophecies of the first advent of our Lord. Observe the instant, clear-cut fulfillment. Perfect, at once. The appearance of Christ among men was not to be a standing symbol, but a sudden fact, with an effect as far reaching as sin, past and future.

It is plain enough to the close student that anti-christ (the apostate Jew,) of Dan. viii. and xi., will come out of one of the Alexandrian divisions of the old Grecian empire, for Dan. viii. 23 says so, but that is quite another matter from Mohommedanism. It is not likely that he will come out of Turkey, and it is sure he will not be a Turk.

There is danger in handling the prophecies that we habituate ourselves to a certain line, as we habituate ourselves to a drug, and ramble mentally up and down a beaten path. If the papacy is the anti-type of "Mystery Babylon, the Great," etc., and the seals, trumpets and vials, etc., are spread over the past, then there has been no Climax, and the matters in Revelations have wheeled about, and shown palpable and visible improvement. There is no "waxing worse and worse" at all, but a plain betterment. To be on the verge of a climax and suddenly pulled off, is prophecy with "a string to it;" and the very best divine intimation that something is wrong. All these long-range, panoramic expositions are involved and weak, here. Compare the Deluge, Sodom, etc., and note the "rapid-fire, disappearing" method of those prophecies. Read Rom. ix. 27, and Matt. xxiv. 22.

The subject is much too extensive for this kind of an article, which I had no intention to oursue so far. But I love the subject, and I love my church affiliation with (I believe) a reasonable people, who are mainly in dead earnest, and who, unlike any other branch of the conditional immortality belief, are not afraid to go the whole length of the Divine Word! My concern is not to assert myself on certain ideas, but that not one jot nor tittle of the faith shall be missing when we [illegible] "No not one." It is not presumption, but a privilege to look into the Prophetic Word. He has invited us. Let us go on. Not with vain boasting, but fearlessly; with humility, sweetness and brotherly love. It is good exercise for the spirit. Let us find the Truth among ourselves, if we can. Let us do the work, and let God do the directing.

Obituary.

Dear Restitution:

The Church of God, at South Bend, Ind. sorrow over the death of Sister Eva Conner. We had not had the pleasure of her association for nearly a year, ill health compelling her to leave the city. She succumbed to a stroke of paralysis, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Lake, 1508 South Bend, Ave., South Bend, Ind., on Saturday, March 9, 1901, at the age of 67.

She and her husband, (who died three years ago,) were baptized into the name of Jesus with a full understanding of the things concerning his name and of the kingdom of God, many years ago. They lived for some time at Knox, Ind.

Although unknown to her personally the writer was much pleased to hear expressions of commendation concerning her life and character. After singing by several of the sisters of the church and a brief address by the writer, Sister Conner was interred at Bowman Cemetery.

She leaves two sisters and four daughters with their families to mourn her loss.

The Gift of Eternal Life.

The gift that rises supreme over all other gifts, is the gift of eternal life. The season when it is the custom to exchange gifts, is near at hand. In making a gift, the greatest good to the recipient of the gift should be considered in the selection of a gift. Would it not be wise to make a gift that may lead the one receiving the gift to receive also the gift of eternal life? Then, give your friend a copy of The Pine Woods Bible Class. It points out the way in a clear and simple manner how the gift of eternal life may be secured. It would make the giver happy also, should it lead to that happy result.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Editor Restitution:

Some of the brethren in this part of the country are anxious for me to take the field as an evangelist, but are so few and so poor, they are not able to support one. After much study I have decided to enter the field, provided I can have some assurance of support for my family. It has been the desire of my life to devote my time to the cause. The thought came to me, that if the brethren east, north and west knew it, they would gladly give one dollar each for this work. So I decided to write them through THE RESTITUTION and make the proposition to them, and if they responded I would enter the field. I will report my work through THE RESTITUTION. The brethren can send the money to Sister E. C. Daniel, Magazine, Ark., and she will report it through THE RESTITUTION, and if enough is not sent in to justify me in entering the field, she will return it to the senders. Brethren this is the Macedonian cry. Help us just one dollar each, and we assure you, you will never regret it. I will solicit subscribers for THE RESTITUTION, and report my work promptly. Hoping you can see your way clearly to respond to this call. I am yours in the one faith.

Notice.

The discussion between myself and Elder John A. Cargile, one of the ablest Adventist preachers in the south, on the restoration of Israel, is now ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages, and contains the photo of each writer. The question discussed is, "The Scriptures teach, that the same Israel that has been scattered and dispersed among all nations will be restored to their own land." Dr. T. J. Daniel affirms, Elder John A. Cargile denies.

A few years since we were struggling to build a house of worship in this town. We had no brethren here and myself and wife, with a little outside help built the house. She donated eighty odd dollars out of her own private purse towards this building. She took boarders at a very reasonable rate to raise the money. As an appreciation of her untiring efforts along this line I have made her a present of all the profits from the sale of this book. Every lover of truth ought to have this book to read and loan to his neighbor as it teaches, and defends, the truth upon this subject. I therefore hope every reader will order one and thereby help to some degree a poor woman who has done so much for the cause we love. The house is the nicest house of worship in this town and belongs to the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith. The price of this book is only 15 cents. Address Mrs. Dr. Daniel, Magazine, Ark. Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Dear Hands.

Rough-used and worn with needless toil and care.
So patient-grave, so dainty-skill that dear
They earned for whose hands a jewel to wear,
And kept their scars unloved for their share.
Patient and slow. Dear hard the way to bear
The whole world's burdens, but no power to save
The flying pageantry, the gilt that pales
The gold and gems that others find or grab.
Dear hands, dear hard. Upon each scar a stone.
Whereon her lover's kiss was ever pressed,
Crossed in unwonted quiet on the breast,
Love, through tears, wears glory newly won.
The golden circlet of life's work well done,
Set with the shining pearl of perfect rest.

An Hour to Come.

The regathering of Israel, and the sealing out of Israel's tribes the undefiled virgins in the hour of judgment, necessarily transpires before the execution of judgment upon the nations of the Gentiles. The Jew first is the order of God in his dealings with men. In the future as in the past, it is through Israel the first born as the instrumentality by which his work is carried forward among the nations. The 144,000 sealed ones are said to follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth, and by another they are described as being the virgin companions of the bride. David in spirit gives a very nicely drawn pen picture of the bride queen, and her companions as follows: "The king's daughter is all glorious within; her clothing is of wrought gold. She shall be brought unto the king in raiment of needle work; the virgins, her companions, shall be brought unto thee, with gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought; they shall enter into the king's palace." Psa. lv. 13.15.

It is really refreshing to see how the Word of the living God will interpret itself, if the reader with patience will diligently search for the hidden treasure. There is no necessity for guessing at the mind of the Almighty concerning those things of which he has spoken through the prophets and apostles.

In connection with the 144,000 sealed ones, the bride's virgin companions, the parable of the 10 virgins, 5 of whom are wise and 5 foolish can I think be more satisfactorily interpreted than anything that I have seen in the writings of prophetic expositors. It is said the 10 virgins all slumbered and slept, may this not be simply another way of saying, "blindness in part has happened to Israel, as it is written God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear unto this day." The startling cry at midnight, behold the bridegroom cometh, arouses the virgins from sleep and causes them to set about trimming their lamps, a work of preparation for a meeting of the bridegroom. The parable appears to be Israelitish in its make up, being founded upon a custom in common practice among the Jews, which apparently indicates that it was designed to illustrate a certain aspect of the situation with reference to Israel at the time of the kingdom's restoration. The thoughtful student of the Word will doubtless find his effort in the direction indicated to be more satisfactory than the expression given by Adventists and others. The wise virgins enter the king's palace with gladness and rejoicing, they sing as it were a new song before or in the presence of the one body glorified and no man could learn that song, but the 144,000 which were redeemed from the earth, being the firstfruits unto God, and to the Lamb, "and in their mouth was found no guile, for they are without fault before the throne of God."

A bountiful harvest will follow these firstfruits, from among all nations and tongues, of which we cannot speak in this article. The spirit of slumber and blindness that has come over Israel cannot be removed by man. There have been great efforts mode to convert Israel, large sums of money have been spent to open the eyes of the Jew, but very little has been accomplished. Indeed, a Jew in the church, is more a pervert than a convert. Just think of a Jew renouncing the sublime and fundamental doctrine of Monotheism and embracing the trinity. Is it possible for the Jew to give up the hope of a promised Deliverer in the line of David, and accept in lieu thereof the pre-existent Son and second person in the trinity of Gods? Or what is still more abandon his long cherished faith in the testimony of Moses and the prophets concerning the restoration of the kingdom to Israel in the land promised to their fathers, and take kindly to the doctrine of the church kingdom advocated from the pulpits of the apostasy? Judaism may not have much whereof to boast, but it is certainly in no way inferior in its influence for good either in doctrine or practice, to the names and denominations of the Gentiles, while in spirit and practice it is more progressive in the betterment of material conditions than the church. Of course Judaism has no ear for the voice of the church, and thus providentially they have been kept clear and free from the strong delusion that has overtaken the Gentiles. Quite recently I have been reading of one, who entertains the desire and ambition to convert the Jew, but who has not been able to make a beginning because of an empty treasury; but something more than money is required, and which has not been taken into account. Before a man starts out to convert Israel, he should ask himself the following questions:

1. Can I cause the deaf to hear?
2. Can I give sight to the blind?
3. Can I cleanse the leper?
4. Can I raise the dead?

Now if he cannot do all these things it is useless for him to think of converting the Jews. But admitting that he has the ability to perform these wonders and more, it would then be ten chances against one in his favor, but if he entered some populous ghetto and preached Jesus and him crucified as the promised Messiah of the prophets, that he would be beaten, and perhaps stoned to death, at any rate he would have cause to be thankful if he escaped with his life. Before you can convert a man you must get his ear and understanding. But if he will not hear it is impossible to reach either his head or his heart, for both the mind and the affection must be secured as the necessary steps to faith and repentance. In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, father Abraham in response to the rich man's request that his five brethren be warned is made to say "they have Moses and the prophets, if they will not hear them, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." What was true then as to Israel, still continues. It is worthy of remark that in this parable we see the number 10, 5 wise ones in Abraham's bosom, and 5 foolish in national torment. The five wise ones were the lost sheep of the house of Israel, whom Jesus had searched out and enlightened in the truth, the five brethren, those who refused to hear and understand in the day of their visitation. The reader will notice that the two are brethren, and therefore strictly Israelitish as illustrative of a condition obtaining at the close of the Jewish age. Even as the parable of the ten virgins illustrates a condition at the close of Gentile times. In the hour of judgment to come Israel will hear the voice of one that they can understand, even as Paul was made to understand, and instead of being a pervert in some Gentile church, will be truly a convert, saying blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, nationally acknowledging that the Stone the builders rejected, has indeed become the head of the corner, it is marvelous in our eyes, but it is the Lord's doing.

Judgment of the Nations. No. 3.

There were national judgments in the past, and the language and imagery employed to describe these are very similar to that employed to describe the judgment scenes at the close of this dispensation. Some of these judgment eras are called the "days of the Lord;" as for instance the time of Babylon's overthrow by the Medes and Persians. In chapter 13 verse 6 we have: "Howl ye for the day of the Lord is at hand; it shall come as a destruction from the Almighty." Also the 9th v. "Behold the day of the Lord cometh cruel with wrath." When Egypt was invaded by the Babylonian army it was called, "The day of the Lord." Anciently punishment was visited upon nations by other nations being sent against them by the Almighty. Assyria is called the rod of God's anger sent against Israel, and Babylon the hammer of the whole earth. With these for a time God punished other nations and these in turn were similarly punished: both rod and hammer were broken. Of Babylon it is written, "How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations!" Jer. l. 23. Such was God's way of dealing with nations anciently—with a few exceptions—will he thus deal with them in the future by employing Israel to inflict punishment upon the nations that refuse allegiance to his Son? Of Jacob or Israel it is affirmed, "Thou art my battle-ax and weapons of war; for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms." Jer. li. 20. It is predicted of Joseph that "his glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horn of the wild ox: with them he shall push the peoples together to the end of the earth." Deut. xxxiii. 17. And of Jacob it is predicted by Micah "The remnant of Jacob shall be among the nations in the midst of many people as a lion among the beast of the forests, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep: who if he go through, both treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver." Micah v. 8. This prediction was made just after Ten-tribed Israel had been carried into captivity, consequently it would meet its fulfillment subsequent to the time they dwelt in Samaria. These prophecies (and others might be quoted) show what was, in the purpose of God, to be part of the mission of Israel. She was to destroy as well as to bless. The writer believes that Ephraim—Israel as a military power has, in the last days been doing a part of this work of destruction; but what has been done by no means exhaust these prophecies: Israel remains to be God's battle-ax in the impending crisis or judgment of the nations.

THE JUDGMENT OF GOG.

Through their writings I am acquainted with quite a circle of prophetic expositors, all of whom, with one exception, regard the power brought to view in chapters xxxviii., xxxix., of Ezekiel, as modern Russia, and that the invasion of the land of Israel by the army of Gog is still in the future. It is not to my purpose in this brief paper to give a detailed exposition of this prophecy. The extensive military preparations made by this power, the alliances formed with so many "peoples," (R. V.) and the thorough equipment made for war, show that this power meditates something else than a tilt with an insignificant foe. A foe worthy of his steel is in sight. It is true, Gog contemplates no conflict with the Almighty, but it is equally true that he is to be such a one: for it is written, "Thus saith the Lord God; Behold I am against thee, O Gog." It will be a justifiable war on the part of the power or powers having on their side the God of hosts. The call to arms is primarily made by Jehovah, for it is written, "I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains." Chapter xxxviii. 21. This language means the summoning of an army to meet the invaders. Mountains in the passage is not used literally to denote high elevations of land but by figure or speech denoting states or governments having power to levy soldiers; and equip them for war. The Babylonian kingdom is called the destroying mountain; and after God inflicted punishment on it, it is said to be a burnt mountain. This of course is not the usual meaning of mountain, in the Scriptures.

It is commonly understood by statesmen, and prophetic students as well, that England is Russia's inveterate foe; and this is rendered all the more probable by the fact that England holds a protectorate over Palestine, and Arabia, and is in possession of Egypt, countries embraced in the land promised to Abraham and his seed. It is also very likely that England will take the lead in the restoration of the Jews to the land of Palestine, to share with them the ownership of the soil, and swell the aggregate of wealth, which at some future day, not very distant, will tempt Russia to plan the invasion of the land brought back from the sword, for the purpose of taking a spoil and a prey, of carring away silver and gold, cattle and goods, of taking a great spoil. Will the Anglo-saxon nations or peoples, England and her colonies, the many nations, and the United States muss their military strength to oppose this Gog power of the North? According to the prophecy the result will be the utter defeat of Russian arms, "Woe to him that striveth with his Maker." When the conflict is past God says "Behold, it is come, and it is done.....; this is the day whereof I have spoken." Chapter xxxix. 8. It may be a question as to to what extent the supernatural figures in this execution of judgment upon Gog and his allies. Some may think that supernatural agencies alone are employed to accomplish the defeat of the invading army, and draw this inference from Chapter xxxviii. v. 22, which reads, I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him and upon all his bands, and upon the many peoples that are with him, an overflowing rain, (shower R. V.) and great hailstones, fire and brimstone. I would not wholly exclude the supernatural, yet the description as here given accords very well with a description, given by a fluent press correspondent, of a modern battle. It looks no more supernatural than the Revelator's description of the Turkish horsemen, under the sixth trumpet, with their breast-plates of fire, of jacinth and brimstone; from the mouths of whose horses issued fire and smoke and brimstone; bringing these war-scenes down to the era of the use of gunpowder. See Rev. ix. 17. In Ezekiel's description the sword is used by figure of speech to denote implements of war, whatever their nature, whether small arms or gatling guns. When that conflict comes the whole engiory of war will be brought into use, including some deadly weapons yet to be invented by the prolific brain of modern ingenuity and skill. Will the destruction of the great army that Russia musters into the field involve the destruction of the whole population of the countries engaged in this conflict? Surely not. The raising of an army by modern nations does not call into action one-fifth of the population, however formidable the foe to be met. Whatever proportion of soldiers may be demanded in the event of this war it may be safely concluded that a numerous population will be left at home engaged in the civil pursuits of life. These will not be in this executive judgment of Gog's army of invaders. Nations will be left to witness the result of Gog's overthrow; for it is written "I will set my glory among the nations, and all the nations shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid upon them. Chapter xxxix. v. 21. The nations shall know at that time the reason of Israel's captivity, and why God hid his face from them, and why they all fell by the sword. vs. 23, 24. And Israel will also know some things—have a practical knowledge of the fact that the Lord is their God from that day forward, v. 22. During their captivity God's face was hid from them, but following this judgment on Gog the prophet affirms that God will hide his face no more, v. 29. This showing favor to Israel is final God has something in reserve for Israel after the flesh. He still watches over them for good.

The Story of a Happy Christian Life.—No. 1.

OBITUARY.

Died—At Huddonfield, New Jersey, at the home of her son, Dr. Rowland Willard, March 11, 1907, Elizabeth Smyres (Borland) Willard, aged 92 years, 4 months, 2 days.

Miss E. S. Borland, was born of pious parents, in or near Cincinnati, Aug. 9, 1815,—the year that Napoleon was defeated in the battle of Waterloo. She began attending Mr. and Mrs. Truesdell's Female Seminary in that city at the age of thirteen, taking a three years course, "piety and purity being the vitalizing elements, which gave life, power, and stability to the Institution."

The motto given to her class on the close of the term was:—

"Science may conduct thee to eminence. Piety alone can guide to Felicity."

Thus was piety exalted in her mind as the super-excellence of all attainment, and peace and praise made her constant guests throughout her long, and radiantly beautiful Christian life. For it was while in this school that she found Jesus. She was listening one day to the sermon of a Mr. Gallaher. He was speaking of a class harder to reach than another.

Those who belonged to it, he said, had never done any thing very wrong; they did not lie, nor cheat nor steal, nor swear, nor break the Sabbath, so they could not see what they had to repent of. Miss Borland thought to herself, "This is my case. I obey my parents, I try to be good at school, I do not do any thing very bad; therefore I do not know what I have done that calls for repentance." But when Mr. Gallaher went on to say, Do not such people know that every hour they neglect to give their hearts to God they are sinning against him? her eyes were opened, her whole life rose up before her to her condemnation, and overwhelmed with the forbearance and mercy of God, she resolved at once, if her life was spared to seek his grace and favor, as she did from that time onward.

There after, of all the bright scenes in Mr. and Mrs. Truesdell's school, "the brightest and most indelible to her mind was to be the worship." Every morning the whole school, numbering sometimes two hundred were assembled in the hall, where the Principal would read a portion from the blessed Bible, and all having risen, prayed in low, clear voice, she wished not to loose a word, but thus to learn, herself, to pray.

What a commentary on the influence of the Bible, the life of Mrs. Willard has been!

It is well as Tupper says:—

"To "Hold the little hands in prayer, teach the weak knees their kneeling;

Let him see thee speak to thy God, he will not forget it afterward.

For the seeds of first instruction are dropped into the deepest furrows."

Miss Borland's first experience in spiritual life was very joyful: it far exceeded her pleasure in the acquisition of science, though she at this time, did not of course understand the truth, being under the pastorate of of Dr. Wilson, of the Presbyterian church.

In the summer of 1832, she was married to Dr. Rowland Willard, senior, who had but recently returned from Mexico with large wealth, amassed in that country in the practice of his profession. She, but 17 years of age at the time, while the Dr. was 37.

The question of baptism now became to her quite a perplexing one, but after listening to and reading all that her pastor could bring forward on the subject, she was convinced that "the sprinkling to which she had been subjected when about twelve years of age, was not the baptism of the Bible. "God's Word is a revelation of his will." She could know his will by going to that word for she had it in her own language. She must know or be guilty for the means were before her; examining every passage in the New Testament, where baptism is mentioned, she saw that immersion is the mode, and that believers and no others, are the subjects of the ordinance.

With the security that others felt, in having submitted to sprinkling she had nothing to do; her business was with her God, and his word, whereof it is gravely affirmed—"The word that I have spoken it shall judge him in the last day." She and her husband were therefore baptized by Elder J. B. Cook in the Ohio River.

About this time her mother died and her father gave over to her keeping a boy of seven years that he had taken from The Commercial Hospital. She had already accepted the charge of a little motherless girl of eight years, and also that of her husband's nephew, a lad of fifteen from Vermont. She was young and inexperienced but most anxious to do her duty. So every day a few moments were spent after breakfast and dinner with these children, in reading short passages of Scripture and in praying with them. She had been doing this for sometime before Samuel from the nature of his duties in his uncle's drug-store had an opportunity of being drawn into the circle, though of course he had been present at the family worship when her husband led. But when he was about to enter school he was left at the house, and Auntie Willard, as we will now call her, did not know what to do, she was afraid to pray before Samuel, and yet she dare not give up, though for a moment her courage failed her and she started to leave the room. But the eyes of the little boy and girl were gazing at her in questioning wonder, and happening to look at a desk that stood by the door there lay a Testament, and picking it up she opened it. What lesson do you suppose she saw? The parable of the vineyard let out to unfaithful husbandmen! These children, were her vineyard, she would yield the fruit to God and secure his blessing.

Turning, she frankly told Samuel, what her custom had been and invited him to take part in the simple exercises. He burst into tears, as did also the little ones, and with tears rolling down her cheeks she read the parable, and after explaining it knelt in prayer, her fear all gone. Every young Christian, must fight just such a battle, and the issue of it will determine the complexion of all his after life, just as the issue of this battle did that of Auntie Willard's. Decide for God in every case like this. You will soon see how this victory, won at home, strengthened her to win other victories elsewhere.

She had heretofore dreaded the weekly prayer-meeting and had even refused to closed the meeting with prayer when asked to do so by Mrs. J. B. Cook, the wife of her pastor, not because she had no delight in prayer but because she feared to pray before the sisters.

But on the very afternoon after the little prayer-meeting at home with the children, she felt in a hurry to go and could hardly wait until the hour came round.

The room was filled, Sr. Cook talked very discouragingly. She said she had so often called upon each member present to open the meetings with prayer and had been refused that she thought it best to give them up altogether, but,—just at this moment she paused, and turning to Auntie Willard, said "Will you pray?"

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAR. 27, 1907.

BROTHER Robison has just held a successful Bible school at Springfield, Ohio, report of which will be given next week. The announcement is in for the Bible school in connection with the Illinois State Conference in August, and the Committee in charge of the Torch Lake Bible school are at work arranging for their meeting. This shows an earnest desire and determination to study and become familiar with God's Word, and can result in nothing but good. We bespeak for all of these enterprises the good will and support of those interested in the different localities, and trust a good measure of valuable results will follow.

THE Church at Plymouth had a treat on last Sunday. Sister Woodward was with us, and preached two excellent sermons, such as are calculated to build and cheer us up. We are glad to be able to announce that the arrangements have been made for Sister Woodward to visit us regularly once each month this year. When it was known that Sister Woodward would come if desired, the enthusiasm with which the brethren and friends came forward and pledged the necessary support, shows that not withstanding some discouraging conditions that exist—many being sick, and others moving away—showed plainly that the Plymouth Church is still alive and ready to do all possible to present the truth to the people.

A Brief Statement-Resurrection.

"Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." This language is addressed to those who heed and obey the Lord's instruction. The language not only promises a reward, but specifies a particular resurrection, (viz) at the resurrection of the just. Suppose he had said to the same person; "Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the unjust. What would have been the query in their minds? Such language would have strongly implied that they would receive the recompense of the unjust. No such incongruity of expression can be found. Since it is granted that, There shall be a resurrection both of the just and the unjust, and also admitted that there will be a first resurrection of blessed and holy ones who are Christ's at his coming. ("Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection on such the second death hath no power.") It devolves upon those who contend for a promiscuous resurrection at the coming of the Lord to produce at least one text that surely implies the doctrine. The Savior declares, "The hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall come forth. They that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." This text is regarded as very near affirming the doctrine, since it leaves no class out. But had the Lord said, The time is coming in which all that are in their graves shall come forth, it would have sustained the argument just as well, and would have been as definite as to time. But this bears no weight when thrown in the balance against those Scriptures that were written for the express purpose of setting forth the order of the resurrection. While the Savior's language there declared a general resurrection to come; these specify the manner in which it will take place. Which class will rise first, the righteous or the wicked? The just or the unjust? In answering these questions we will first notice the one great event. The coming and presence of the Lord. Let Paul speak. If you believe that Jesus died and rose again, you must believe also that they who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him; For I say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (go before) them who are asleep. For the trumpet shall sound and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order, Christ the first-fruits; afterward [illegible] Christ's at his coming." Now we introduce Paul's mystery; uncovered to show the rapidity of the events transpiring in this first resurrection. Behold I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep, (die) but we shall all be changed in a moment in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this mortal shall put on immortality, and this corruptible must put on incorruption. Now we submit there is nothing in these testimonies that conflict with the declaration of a resurrection of all the dead. These testimonies refer exclusively to the first resurrection; and cannot be made to apply in any particular to the unjust, nor the wicked. All herein specified are in Christ. All are blessed. All are changed in a moment from mortality. All caught away to meet the Lord in the air. All are to be forever with the Lord. Blessed and holy is he that hath power in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power. In concluding this brief article I would congratulate all who are walking in the narrow way, in that they have the blessed Christ as their sin-covering, and he will never uncover their sins, nor sit in judgment on them if they are faithful unto death. But he will give unto them eternal life, and none are able to prevent him.

Throw Out the Life Line.

Mr. T. J. Golightly: Kind Sir:

Reading your lesson in the Clipper of Feb. 23, 1907, "God's Covenant with Abraham," which you failed to explain according to "Thus saith the Lord," the fulfillment of which is future. If you were standing on the bank of a stream, with a life-line in your hand and a man coming down the stream bound to drown without help and you could throw the life-line to him and did not do it, and he went a little below you and you had seen him go down and rise no more, how would you feel if you let a life be lost that you might have saved, but neglected your duty, and the men has gone beyond your reach, lost forever, so far as your rescue is concerned? So judging from your explanation of the lesson, you are wide from the mark of one of the greatest questions that ever came before the children of men. You seem to stand where the Ephesian brethren did before their conversion, Eph. ii. 11-12. Notice carefully the 12th verse. What worse shape could we be in, as Gentiles, who are to become citizens of the commonwealth of Israel. This 12th verse is mighty strong language, to us Gentiles, strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. Bad, floating down the stream of time in this condition. Who would not want some one on the shore to throw us the life line?

In the 19th verse Paul says, "Now, therefore, ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints and of the household of God." Read on to the end of chapter.

How did they get to be of the household of God? Turn with me to Gal. iii. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, (then what?) and heirs, according to the promise." We Gentiles become Abraham's seed by adoption, and without that we stand as those described in Gal. ii. 12.

Paul, in Rom. xi. describes this adoption as a grafting process, taking out of a wild olive tree and grafted into the same. Read this chapter carefully. Notice that Paul is talking to both Jew and Gentile. The Gentiles are the wild branches. In the 15th verse Paul says of the Jews, "What shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead." Turn to Ezek. xxxvii. and you will see how God will receive them from the dead.

Now, my friend Golighty, I throw out the life line to you in these few remarks I have made, hoping it may land you on the shore of the river of the water of life on either side of which grows the tree of life, and that you and I may be among those that shall come from the east, west, north and south, and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God. Then Abraham and his seed, with Christ their Head will receive that promised land. Then they will sing the new song as recorded in Rev. v. 9, 10, yes, shall reign on the earth, reign a thousand years. Rev. xx. 6, in that beautiful city that will come down from God out of heaven in which God will dwell with men, Rev. xxi. 2, 3, and the nations and kings of the earth will bring their glory into it. Verse 24. As to t[illegible] Abraham, the Jews, [illegible] at that time, (after the city comes) is described in Ezek. xlviii. Notice from verse 30 to the end of the chapter. Now turn to Rev. xxi. 12, 13. They will be heirs of the promise. Theirs will be a national blessing. The seed of the covenant will be immortalized and dwell in the city.

Written in love of the truth and the best regards to my fellowman, I am waiting for Christ.

JESSE HAMMOND.

Dear Brother Huggins:

In answer to the question, Is it right for believers of the truth to identify themselves with an orthodox church for the sake of having a "church home?" I answer briefly, It is not right, it cannot be right. For years I have—in my mind—made a distinction between a believer, and a faithful one. If one is simply a believer, he or she, may put their light under a bushel, keep quiet, they cannot say or do right—join any thing that has a religious appearance, but a faithful to God, to Christ, to the covenant, and to themselves, they cannot, they are illuminated with the marvellous light of the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and no "orthodox" church will either receive such or harbor them. It is not therefore a matter of right, but light.

The Charm of Speech.

There are certain speakers who seem to have an indefinable charm; and who, when they commence to speak, immediately arrest the attention of people, and hold it to the end. Sometimes it is the melody of the voice, the purity of the tones, the distinctness of the articulation, but these will not hold the attention unless there is sense as well as sound. There must not only be distinctness of speech, but clearness of thought. Frequently those persons on whose words the people hang with the intensest interest, are persons whose writings are read with the same attention. The charm in such cases is not in vocal sounds, but it is more frequently in the clearness of thought, and the apt expressiveness of the words employed to convey thought to the minds of the people. There are persons whose words conceal ideas, whose explanations need explanation; whose terms and phrases are indefinite, misty, obscure. There are others whose words are clear as crystal,—who not only make themselves understood, but cannot make themselves misunderstood. They say what they have to say in such a way that there is no possible chance to misunderstand them unless persons wilfully misconstrue their words.

If in speaking the sense of every other sentence is broken in two by some obscure or unusual word, of course the continuity of thought is at an end, and the attention is diverted from the thoughts to the words, and instead of thinking about what the man says, we are querying in our mind what in the world he is trying to say.

The great and popular speakers of the day who have a hold upon the people, are men whose words do not admit of two interpretations, and do not need a dictionary to explain them. Such speakers plant their ideas directly in the minds and thoughts of the hearers, and there they remain, undisturbed by any convulsive efforts to extract sense from obscure, mysterious sentences. Words thus spoken are like nails in a sure place fastened by the masters of assemblies. How many preachers are there who are really "Masters of Assemblies?" How many can really master them?—Common People.

Speaking to One Another in Psalms.

Aside from offering praise to God, one object of sacred song is to speak "to one another, in Psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs." If we are thus to speak to each other, it must be because we have something to say, something which needs saying, and something which others need to hear. Our speaking to each other may be for purposes of instruction, encouragement, admonition, entreaty, warning and invitation. We may by such speaking in song, comfort the sad, strengthen the weak, inspire the fainting, admonish the unwary, and warn the unruly. "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another."

If we are to speak to each other in song, we should speak the truth, and we should speak it in fitting words, for "words fitly spoken are like apples of gold in baskets of silver." Hence our songs should be based upon the Word of God, and saturated with divine thoughts. Thus the ancient Psalmist on the throne of Israel, bore witness to the truth, warning men against evil, and testifying to the goodness of God, rehearsing the wonders which God had wrought among his people and on their behalf.

If our songs are to be addressed to each other in this way, they should be filled with solemn and undeniable truth, that they will come home to the hearts of men, and remain like nails fastened in sure places. Mere sentimental imaginations, popular traditions and misconceptions, and hence, erroneous or unscriptural ideas have no place in such an exercise of sacred song.

"Speaking and admonishing one another," implies a need of admonition; and admonition is an earnest matter. It is not amusement; it is not trifling; it is a necessary reminding others of obligations which they seem to forget, or of duties which they leave undone, dangers which they should guard against, and of truths which they have overlooked.

Such admonitions in song are exceedingly important and have been exceedingly useful, and many such words have brought conviction to the hearts of sinners and inspiration to the minds of saints. Hymns of this description are far more needful than many strains which may sometimes foster hopes of joys without any adequate foundation.

Let us sing something which has sense, which has fact, which has Scripture at the bottom of it; let us sing it with voice and soul and understanding; let us sing with grace in our hearts unto the Lord; and then our songs will be profitable as well as pleasing, and will honor the Lord and benefit our fellow men.—Christian.

How Shall We Study the Old Testament?

The popular study of the Old Testament has within the present years, among the English-speaking peoples, assumed a character different from that which it before possessed. This is due to the popularizing, within that period, of the literature of what may be called the new tradition concerning the Old Testament. Certain opinions concerning the origin and the historicity of the Scriptures, formerly regarded as heretical, have in the last fifty years attained to traditional standing among Jews and Christians, along with the older traditional opinion.

Most persons who take sides in a conflict between a new and an old tradition do so, necessarily, not on the basis of thorough investigation, but that of general probabilities. In these Old Testament questions, men who were not experts formerly said, "The old opinions are those commonly held by serious students, and are probably correct;" now many are saying, "The new opinions are presumably the product of scientific methods, and are probably correct." When in 1901, the Sunday schools last began the study of the Old Testament, the English-speaking world was being flooded with introductions, Bible dictionaries, manuals, articles in teachers' Bibles, and other popular works, advocating and practically applying the teachings of the new tradition; and the flood has continued.

These things are not here mentioned for the purpose of either attacking or defending the teachings referred to, but in order to show that the existing situation emphasizes the importance of three particular habits in our study of the Old Testament. They are habits the mention of which is very trite, but the need of them will be especially imperative during the study of the International Lessons for the current year. They are,

First, the habit of studying the Bible itself.

Second, the habit of studying the Bible as it exists.

Third, the habit of rejecting unproved charges of falsehood or immorality as made against the Bible.

First, the studying of the Bible itself in distinction from the things that somebody says about the Bible. Every one affirms the correctness of the principle; yet four-fifths of the persons who use helps give most of their time to reading what some one has said, in order that they may repeat parts of it to some one else. Such will now find themselves, more than ever before, the hapless victims of contradictory statements made by the advocates of the two opposing views. It is to be hoped that some of them may be driven to study the Bible itself, in order to find out which of the contradictory statements are true.

Second, the study of the books of the Bible as they stand, in distinction from the studying of the known or conjectured sources of the books. One of the great problems of the new tradition is the resolving of the books of the Old and New Testaments into the sources whence their final authors copied or otherwise drew them. The problem is a legitimate one, but it should not be permitted to obscure other problems. Suppose we could become perfectly sure, for example, as to the written sources which the author of Genesis put together to form that book, that would not justify us in substituting the sources for the present book. It would still be true that we possess only these fragments of the sources which he copied, while he possessed the sources in more complete form. He had also other information which we lack. His judgments is expressed in the way in which he has combined his sources, giving the book its present form. We cannot afford to neglect his judgment in these matters in which he was better informed than we. He was not an ignoramus whose opinions are worthless, for he has combined his materials into a literary work that has been one of the world's classics for from twenty-three to thirty-three centuries. But, further, it is not certain that we have reached a final analysis of the sources. There is no way of knowing the sources save by inferring them from the book as it stands, and all analyses heretofore made have been based on insufficient study of the book as it stands.—Sunday School Times.

What Must We Do To Be Saved?

1. What is the Bible sense of the word "saved?" Peter said, "Lord, save!" Matt. xiv. 30. Jesus "saved others; himself he cannot save." Matt. xxvii. 42. Saved life. Luke vi. 9. A soul is to be saved from death. James v. 20.

2. Jesus Christ came to save sinners. 1 Tim. i. 15. How does he do this?

(a). As the Father has life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself. John v. 26; Psa. xxi. 1-7; Rev. i. 18.

(b). He has the power to give eternal life to as many as the Father hath given him. John xvii. 1, 2.

3. Upon what conditions will the Son give this life to men?

(a). Believe on the Son. John vi. 39, 40; xx. 31. This means not to believe ourselves; that the life is in us. But faith without works is dead. Jas. ii. 14, xvii. 20. Obedience to the faith is required. Acts vi. 7, Rom. i. 5; vi. 16, 17. They that gladly received his word were baptized. Acts ii. 38, 41.

(b). Repent. What is it to repent? Repentance has reference to "sin." Acts iii. 19. Follows sorrow for sin. 2 Cor. vii. 8-11. Is toward God. Acts xx. 21. The motive for repentance: God's goodness. Rom. ii. 4. Repentance is "unto life." Acts xi. 8. Who is to repent? "All men." Acts xvii. 31. Works meet for repentance. Restitution. Acts xxvi. 20.

(c). Be baptized. What is baptism?

Jesus was baptized in the river Jordan. Mark i. 5, 9, 10. There was a certain water. Acts ix. 36-40. The baptism was in the water. "Buried in baptism." Rom. vi. 1-5; Col. ii. 12, 13. Baptism is "the like figure unto the death of Christ." 1 Peter iii. 18-21. Baptism is "for the remission of sins." Acts ii. 38. Having forgiven you all trespasses. Col. ii. 13. Having remitted the sin itself, the penalty is also remitted, and the person has hope of life. He that believeth in me, though he die, yet shall he live. John xi. 25.

(d). This is to be followed by walking in newness of life; by a life of faith in the Son of God. Gal. ii. 20.

The end of such faith is the salvation of the soul from death. 1 Peter i. 4, 5, 9.

A New Tract.

The Great Divine Healer vs Latter-Day Healers, by Uncle John Foors.

A Tract for the last days. Should be read by every thinking Christian.

Paul 2 Tim. iii. 13. "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Matt. vii. 21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Brethren, these tracts have gone into many families, both to brethren and people of other denominations, a few infidels, and one Christian Scientist, and all seem to be well pleased with it; but only a few of the brethren have sent to me any help in the way of paying for the tracts, and tracts are very expensive. We are anxious to have more published on different subjects. Please help to send these Pearls out among the people.

Poetry.

The Wierd of the Morrow.

You'd be sorry to-morrow, sorry
For the harsh words said to-day,
You will wish you had waited a little,
Till the mood had passed away.
You will grieve for the friend you wounded,
But you'll grieve till your heart is sore
For the strife and sin that entered in
When anger set with the door.

You'll be sorry to-morrow, sorry
That an old fire quivered and broke,
As if a blow had struck it,
At the hasty words you spoke.
You'll be low in your mind, to-morrow,
That a fit the child with dread
At the glance of your eyes went harrying by,
With downcast, drooping head.

You'll be sorry to-morrow, sorry
That you played the cowardly part,
That you hid in a mask of silence
And the hypocrite's baleful art;
For silence is sometimes shameful,
And born of the worst degree,
As it creeps away at the end of the day
To look where the worst things be.

Sorry to-morrow? Truly
'Twere better to be contrite,
And have no ill to atone for,
No willful sins to repent—
The mind, the look, the action,
By the help of God may wear
That light of heaven, forever given
In the hush of the answered prayer.

Address Delivered at Funeral of Ebenezer Helms, Harris, Ind., Mar. 14, 1907.

This afternoon under the influence of this sad event, our minds naturally revert to those Scriptures which tell us that man is mortal, is subject to death and does die.

In the very beginning of the Bible we are told of the introduction into this world of sin and death. We read in the account of the creation of this earth, the creation also of man, and that in the sight of God. this creation, man included, was very good. But, as Ecclesiastes records, Although God made man upright he has sought out many inventions. After making the man, the record tells us, Gen ii 15, 16,17, And the Lord God took the man and put him in the Garden of Eden, to dress it and to keep it. And the Lord God commanded the man saying, Of every tree of the Garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.

We are familiar with the fact that Adam chose to disobey God and did eat of this tree, and brought upon himself the sentence that God had passed, that he should surely die. And we see in the following verses the steps which God took to carry out this sentence.

Gen iii 19, In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground, for out of it wast thou taken, for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return. Gen iii 22, And the Lord God said, Behold the man is become as one of us to know good and evil, and now lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever. Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken. So he drove out the man.

Gen v 5 fittingly states, And all the days that Adam lived were 930 years and he died. He died, not a part parts of him, but all of him.

The apostle Paul plainly explains in Rom v 12, The effect of this transgression of Adam upon mankind, Rom v 12, Wherefore as by one man sin entered into the world and death by sin and so death passed upon all men for that all have sinned.

We sometimes find people who do not have a correct understanding of what God means by the word sin. Let us therefore go to James for an explanation.

Jas i 14-15, But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin, and sin when it is finished, bringeth forth death.

Thus it was Adam's desire to eat of the tree, this desire created a longing, a tempting, this tempting being listened to, produced, or brought forth, or conceived, an act of disobedience or sin. The punishment for disobedience was death. Rom vi 23, The wages of sin is death. The violation of the law was voluntary, the punishment was just. And we do not wonder that James exclaims, Blessed is the man that endureth temptation.....He shall receive a crown of life.

We have many Scriptures which tell us that death has passed upon all men. Psa civ 15, As for man his days are as grass. Psa cxlvi 4, His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish. Eccl. iii 19-20. For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts. Even one thing befalleth them, as the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea, they have all one breath, so that a man hath no preeminence over a beast, for all is vanity, all go unto one place, all are of the dust and all turn to dust again. Eccl ix 5-6, For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten, also their love, their hatred, their envy, is now perished.

Thus we see that man's utter extinction, physically, mentally and morally is complete; and as we see our dear Brother Helms lying here cold in death, unable to talk, or advise, or suggest, or to enter in any way into our life, we realize the truth of these Scriptures.

But we also find in the Bible Paul's statement to Timothy that the Holy Scriptures are able to make us wise unto salvation, and Jesus says, John v 39, Search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me. And this gives us a hope that there may in some way be an escape from the sentence of death.

What do we search? 2 Pet iii 9, The Lord is not slack concerning his promise as some men count slackness, but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

And then the promise in John iii 16, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life. What a splendid promise, "That whosoever believeth on the Son might not perish. What has the Son said? John xi, 25, I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me though he were dead yet shall he live. John vi. 40, And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son and believeth on him may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day.

Thus we see our hope centers in a resurrection. It is true we do die, but if believing in and obedient to Jesus, we know we shall be raised. The apostle Paul gives us further satisfaction on this point as follows:

1 Cor xv 50, Behold I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. 1 Thes. iv 16, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord, Wherefore comfort one another with these words." And what a comfort it is to know that the trumpet shall sound, no doubt about it.

Then shall be brought to pass the saying, Oh death, where is thy sting, Oh grave, where is thy victory? Death has a temporary sting; grave has a temporary victory. But let us thank God that he has put a limit to their existence.

Num. xiv. 21, Tells us that all the earth shall be filled with the glory of God. This will be done, we are told, by the righteous reign on earth of Jesus Christ. Acts ii. 36, Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye crucified, both Lord and Christ. John in Revelations tells us he will be Lord of lords and King of kings, and Psalm ii. that the heathen will be his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth his possession.

1 Cor xv 25, 26, For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet, and the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. This is a blessed assurance, that our enemy death will some day be destroyed. It brings to our mind that beautiful picture painted in Rev xxi 34, And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men and he shall dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. How beautiful!

Oh how thankful we ought to be that our Creator, God, so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish but have everlasting life. But note the words, "Whosoever believeth in him." It is true that God gave his Son to be the propitiation for our sins, that we might not perish, but expects us to do our part. Absolute faith in, and implicit obedience to Jesus and his commands is required from us.

Although we sorrow at the loss of our dear brother's companionship, we rejoice that "he believed." He had a hope of a glorious resurrection out from among the dead. He could exclaim with Paul. "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith," 2 Tim iv 8, Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearing.

God's law demanded the sacrifice of a victim without spot or blemish, and Jesus although tempted in all points like as we are, was yet without sin, and could satisfy this demand, and his sacrifice was therefore an atonement for our sin. Being born of a woman, made under the law, it was necessary for him to die. Equally necessary was his resurrection, for of what use would be a dead Savior.

Now then we, by crucifying the flesh, Rom vi 6; Gal v 24, called the old man in Ephesians, and burying him, the old man, in the likeness of Christ's death by baptism, do rise from the grave, represented by water, to walk in a new life, Rom vi., and have been baptized into Christ, Gal iii 27, and according to Rom viii 1, There is now therefore no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

Accordingly when we pay the physical debt of nature we only "sleep in Jesus." Acts vii 60 records, "Philip fell asleep." 2 Pet iii 4 records that "The fathers fell asleep."

1 Cor xv 20, But now is Christ risen from the dead and became the first fruits of them that slept. 1 Thes iv 13, But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as those who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him.

Bro. Ebenezer Helms was born in Jefferson Co., Ind., July 31, 1828, died near Harris station, Marshall Co., Mar. 13, 1907, age 80 years, 7 months and 13 days, at the home of his daughter. Leaving six children.

He was a pioneer of the Church of God uniting with the household of faith about 1857. He was a regular attendant of the North Salem Church since 1882 until too deaf to hear, faithfully performing his duties as Elder and Sunday school superintendent.

I did not know Brother Helms personally but was pleased to learn he had a good report from those without. That he loved and earnestly contended for the faith once delivered to the saints. He thought nothing of walking five miles to meeting to be with those that loved the Lord. The Bible and THE RESTITUTION were his great friends and comfort. When taken sick he was reading from James. The fruit of the Spirit was shown in his life of honesty, kindness and patience.

I am told he had not an enemy in the County. Oh what a beautiful record to leave, to live 80 years amongst family, brethren, friends, neighbors and fellow citizens and not have an enemy. Children liked him, he was kind to them. Children are innocent and are quick to appreciate kindness in adults. His life, we are sure, must have been, and is, a consolation to his family. He was faithful and if they are they will meet with him in the kingdom of God. And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the Book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness. And the inhabitant shall not say I am sick, and the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree. They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. They shall mount up with wings as eagles. They shall run and not be weary, and they shall walk and not faint. (the prophet Isaiah).

Oh may we stop! in the midst of a busy world of desires, ambitions and plans, and think! soberly! of our frailty, our destiny; think of God's mercy and love, of his promises. Think of the blessings in store for the faithful. Our Father, again we petition thee for wisdom to know thy will and understand thy plan of salvation, for courage to do thy will, for strength and grace to bear our sorrows and burdens, and to thee do we give all honor and glory. Amen.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY APRIL 7.

Jacob's vision and God's promise. Gen. xxviii. 1-5, 10-22.

Golden Text—Behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest. Gen. xxviii. 15.

In the lesson for today the story of Jacob is again taken up. At the close of the lesson for 31 reb 17, Esau had threatened to kill Jacob, and his mother was urging him to flee for his life.

Lesson text, verse 1, Jacob's father blessed him. The Canaanites were descendants of Ham, whom God cursed through or by Noah. Gen. ix. 25-27.

2. Padan aram, northeast from Beersheba about 250 miles.

Jacob was to marry a cousin. Gen. xxix. 19.

3. The Almighty bless thee, Gen. xlii. 15.

4. The blessing of Abraham. Gen. xxii. 17, 18.

5 and 10 Jacob leaves Beersheba, the home, for Haran in Padan-aram.

11. At night he took stones for a pillow, and lay down to sleep. There was nothing unusual about that, especially in that country. He was now about 40 or 50 miles from home, most any resting place would be soft and downy.
